EXODUS 1:1-14 (BITTERNESS AND BONDAGE IN THE LAND OF EGYPT)

Introduction: As we enter into Exodus, we should look back and see the contrast between what is coming and where we have been. The book of Genesis showed us a snapshot of creation. Exodus will show us a snapshot of redemption. In the book of Genesis, we traveled through approximately 2370 years of human history. Exodus will take us through about 80.

In Genesis we saw three separate dispensations - Innocence, Conscience, and Government. In Exodus, the fourth dispensation will be introduced - Law. This one dispensation will remain through the next 42 books of the Bible. Only at the end of each gospel will the next dispensation, that of Grace, be introduced.

Genesis began with a single line of people, carefully selected to lead to a single united family called Israel. Exodus will begin with Israel and they will continue to be the focus of God's redemptive plans all the way through the Bible. Even during the church age, Israel is still considered a part of God's plans, though temporarily taken out of the highlights and placed on the sidelines.

In Genesis, we have the beginnings of all things which come from the eternal Father. In the garden there was freedom and fraternity between God and man. In Exodus we begin with oppression and bondage leading to deliverance, picturing the work of the Son, the Deliverer of His people.

Genesis focused on many great individuals as God used them to picture portions of future history. In Exodus, God will almost exclusively use Moses for this purpose. We could go on for hours discussing what is coming in the book, but we will be looking into it in detail until we finish it, and so there's no need to go too deep.

Let it suffice to say that because this is a part of God's word, it should be handled carefully, researched completely, and cherished with delight. God chose the details of the book of Exodus to reveal to us the coming Redeemer, Jesus. If we keep reminding ourselves of that, we should find it an absolute delight to our senses.

Text Verse: "Israel also came into Egypt,
And Jacob dwelt in the land of Ham.
24 He increased His people greatly,
And made them stronger than their enemies.
25 He turned their heart to hate His people,
To deal craftily with His servants." Psalm 105:23-25

God directed Israel to go to Egypt and to Egypt he went. There they prospered and grew into a vast multitude. But, they remained united as a people and they did not assimilate into Egypt. This caused tension between them and the ruler of Egypt. And so they were brought into bondage and servitude to the Egyptians.

At the same time, their bondage was not undeserved. The people of Israel failed to honor the Lord and so He was not unjust in allowing them to suffer for a time. God is never unfair nor does He cause misery or trial to occur without a reason. This is a lesson we should continually remind ourselves as we face our own trials.

The good news though is that if we have called on Christ, then a time is coming when all of these things will be behind us. We are the redeemed of the Lord and so He will never leave us nor forsake us. This is a constant theme of God's superior word and so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Sons of Israel (verses 1-5)

1 Now these are the names of the children of Israel who came to Egypt;

Like many of the other books in the Old Testament, the book of Exodus actually begins with the word "and." The words are v'elleh shemot bene yisrael - "And these are the name of the children of Israel." This word "and" begins 13 of the books of the Old Testament and it shows that the writers instinctively felt that they were writing words that belonged to a greater book with a unified message.

The first five books of the Bible, known as the Torah or the Pentateuch, are all ascribed to Moses and so the "and" may seem less unusual, and yet it is a completely separate book from Genesis and so the "and" at the beginning really is no less notable.

This reason we know this is an entirely separate and distinct book from Genesis is because the first verse begins with the exact same words as Genesis 46:8. This was immediately followed with a list of all of the family who went to Egypt with Jacob. Now, a recapitulation of that is going to be made. This then is given to show a definite starting point for an entirely new narrative.

Like at other times, the Hebrew name of the book comes from the first words. And so it is called v'elleh shemot or simply shemot - "names." The name we use in English, "Exodus," is from the Greek which means "going out." The going out of Egypt by the Israelites is one of the great highlights of the book and so it was given that name.

Here in the first verse, we can deduce that the book is going to center on the nation of Israel just as Genesis ended with them as well. God's funnel of chosen people finally settled on this one family and it is through them that redemptive history will continue for the next 1570 +/- years, until the coming of the Messiah.

Genesis ended with the death of Joseph. He was born right around the year 2260 Anno Mundi. He lived 110 years and so his death came at approximately 2370AM. After the death of Joseph, not another word about the time which the Israelites remained in Egypt was given until now, sometime around the birth of Moses.

This was a period of about 64 years and so it is somewhere around the year 2434AM, but the date isn't specific. However, the dating of the Bible will become specific again at key points during the book.

1 (con't) each man and his household came with Jacob:

The listing of Jacob and his descendants included 70 names who went to Egypt. However, this was not all who went to Egypt with him. The verse here says, ish ubetow - "man and his household." This word for "household" includes everyone under the authority of the house - wives, children, grandchildren, servants, etc. It is an all-inclusive statement and was used this way in Genesis 14:14 -

"Now when Abram heard that his brother was taken captive, he armed his three hundred and eighteen trained servants who were born in his own house, and went in pursuit as far as Dan." Genesis 14:14

Abraham's household included many people, possibly in the thousands. If he had 318 fighting men, plus women, children, old people, etc., the final number was very large. Isaac inherited this and built upon it. Jacob had a large company even prior to inheriting Isaac's household. And then the family would have continued to grow in number after that time.

In all, there were certainly many, many thousands of people who went to Egypt with Jacob. Though not literal descendants of Jacob, they are included under the umbrella of Israel and it easily explains the immense number of people who will depart at the Exodus, a number recorded at 603,550 men who are 20 and older. In all, the number will probably be well above 1.5 million people.

This is important to remember for several reasons. The time Israel is actually in Egypt is only 215 total years. If it were only the 70 recorded, it would seem incredulous to have such a large number going out. And many dismiss the record entirely because of this.

Secondly, it shows that the people of Israel, united at Mount Sinai, included a vast number of people who were not actually of natural descent. In fact, the vast majority of them probably aren't. And yet, they will all be counted within the numbers of individual tribes and a part of the collective whole. We will see this validated in several ways during the next few books of the Bible.

2 Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah;

These four names begin the list of the sons of Israel who traveled to Egypt with him. The sons here are listed in birth order and are all sons of Leah who was Jacob's first wife. In 1 Chronicles 5:1, 2 we read this -

"Now the sons of Reuben the firstborn of Israel—he was indeed the firstborn, but because he defiled his father's bed, his birthright was given to the sons of Joseph, the son of Israel, so that the genealogy is not listed according to the birthright; 2 yet Judah prevailed over his brothers, and from him came a ruler, although the birthright was Joseph's."

The birthright, instead of going to Reuben, was given to Joseph. However, from Judah will come the Ruler, the Messiah.

3 Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin;

These next three are still in birth order by Jacob's wives Leah and Rachel. Issachar and Zebulun were born to Leah, and Benjamin was born to Rachel. Joseph is left out because he was already in Egypt at the time and is excluded from the list of those who travelled with Jacob.

4 Dan, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

These four sons were born to the maidservants - Bilhah and Zilpah. The first two were born to Rachel's maidservant Bilhah, and the second two were born to Leah's maidservant Zilpah. And so there is an intentional order and harmony to the listing of these names. First, those born to the legitimate wives, in order by Leah and then Rachel, and then those born to the maidservants, in order of birth.

Only the males are listed here in Exodus, but at the counting in Genesis, two women were named, Dinah and Serah. Despite them being named in Genesis, Jacob could have, and certainly did have, many other daughters. However, only these two were counted at that time because only they were relevant to the account.

The family name travels through the male and so unless there is an additional reason for mentioning a female, they are simply not listed. This doesn't diminish the role of women, but it keeps the records straight according to the line of descent.

5 All those who were descendants of Jacob were seventy persons

It might seem arbitrary or unnecessary to begin the book with something that has already been said at the end of Genesis, but it isn't. This listing of seventy persons was given with purpose. There is nothing random or illogical about it. Rather, it was given to again show us a snapshot of redemptive history.

The importance of the number 70 is to reveal that Israel is God's instrument for His redemptive works among humanity leading up to the Messiah. All of humanity is derived from the 70 names which are listed in the Table of Nations recorded in Genesis 10.

Those 70 names in Genesis 10, which correspond to everyone on earth, are to be given the oracles of God through the 70 names recorded in this listing which comprises the covenant people of Israel. This is alluded to in Deuteronomy 32:8, which says -

"When the Most High divided their inheritance to the nations,
When He separated the sons of Adam,
He set the boundaries of the peoples
According to the number of the children of Israel." Deuteronomy 32:8

Seven is the number of spiritual perfection. It is the sum of 3, the divine number, and 4, the number for creation. Ten is the number for completeness. Thus, in those who are noted as Jacob's descendants and who have gone to Egypt, God's divine plans (3) are being worked out in His created world (4) in their fullness (10) through these 70 people.

The list in Genesis wasn't an arbitrary list of names and numbers. Rather it was a prophetic plan and symbolic structure of what God would do in the history of man's redemption. We are being reminded of this now at the beginning of Exodus, the book which will introduce the fourth dispensation of God's redemptive plans.

God bestowed grace on Adam after the fall, and kept a select line of people through the years until Noah, who again received grace in the eyes of the Lord. After the flood, God gave an overall structure of redemption as laid out in the Bible in the account of Noah. This is an outline of humanity in the seventy named people-groups in the Table of Nations.

Following that, He called Abraham and made a covenant of grace to the world, declaring him righteous by faith. Through the chosen line of Abraham's seed, He has refined what He will do in the future, giving us pictures of everything that is coming. This now continues in the second book of the Bible. This is one of the reasons for this recapitulation of the list now.

Another reason for reminding us of the number is to show that even though they started out small, there will be an immense change in the numbers. This will cause a sequence of events which will demonstrate God's sovereignty, His ability to keep His promises, and the continuance of His redemptive plan for the people of the world. What seems arbitrary isn't.

5 (con't) (for Joseph was in Egypt already).

This explains why Joseph's name was left out of the record of the sons of Israel which were given in these first few verses.

Remember the days of old here in the new Consider the generations long since past
Ask your father and he will tell you
Your elders, and they will explain how the plan was cast

When the Most High gave the nations their inheritance
When he divided all mankind as His word does tell
He set up boundaries for the peoples, not by chance
But according to the number of the sons of Israel

For the Lord's portion is His people, you see
Jacob his allotted inheritance throughout redemptive history

II. The Fruitfulness of Israel (verses 6 & 7)

6 And Joseph died, all his brothers, and all that generation.

Of the twelve sons of Israel, Joseph's death is the only one with any full record in the Bible. The rest of them are merely mentioned in this cumulative statement here. We do know that from Exodus 6:16 that Levi lived to be 137 years old. That was 27 years longer than Joseph, but he was also a little bit older than him.

Regardless of this though, they were all dead by the time of the events we see here. And so, during this period of about 64 years, nothing else is recorded. Of the many weddings, births, family vacations, heartaches, joys, and other memorable times of the individual lives, God's word remains silent.

His word is here to tell us details about history, not a complete detail of history. When the two line up, He uses them for His purposes. When they don't, time eventually swallows up even the memories of what was once the news of the day.

7 But the children of Israel were fruitful and increased abundantly, multiplied and grew exceedingly mighty; and the land was filled with them.

Despite the deaths of the early generation that travelled to Egypt, the growth of Israel was immense. One could ask how this was possible if the statement from Genesis 46 was true. There it said this -

"So it shall be, when Pharaoh calls you and says, 'What is your occupation?' 34 that you shall say, 'Your servants' occupation has been with livestock from our youth even till now, both we and also our fathers,' that you may dwell in the land of Goshen; for every shepherd is an abomination to the Egyptians." Genesis 46:33, 34

If the Egyptians deplored the Hebrews because they were shepherds, and if they were kept in Goshen, separately from the multitudes, then how could they multiply in this way? Again, this takes us back to the number of people who would have travelled with Jacob. Only seventy were mentioned, but that was for a reason.

Within each son's household would have been a large number of people. They would have married and intermarried. The vast number of people who would have grown from them in that 215-year period from Jacob's arrival to the Exodus, along with the mixed multitude who left with them, could easily reach the numbers the Bible mentions.

Just because it is a period of only 64 years from the death of Joseph until the time of the birth of Moses, it is a full 215-year period from Jacob's arrival until the Exodus, which occurs when Moses is about 80 years old. During all this time, the Israelites multiplied.

And so the Bible gives us this verse to confirm this. The NKJV doesn't really give the sense of how they are described. Young's Literal Translation reads it in this manner -

"...and the sons of Israel have been fruitful, and they teem, and multiply, and are very very mighty, and the land is filled with them." YLT

*They were fruitful. In Hebrew, paru, meaning that they brought forth children like a tree brings forth fruit. *They teemed - in Hebrew, yishretsu. This word gives the idea of teeming like fish, which is the sense that it is given in Genesis 1:20 when God said that the waters should abound with living creatures.

*They multiplied - in Hebrew yirbu. This is a separate term, not an adverb as so many translations make it. *And they grew exceedingly mighty. In Hebrew v'yaatsmu bimod meod. It is a way of saying that their numbers were truly astounding as indicated by the double superlative bimod meod.

With the Lord's favor and His blessing great things occur

Even the weak can say "I am strong"

He is the Rock where our footing will be sure

In Him is safety and nothing goes wrong

As the people of Israel grew into a great multitude

So God will increase you when your trust in Him is sound

So keep your faith and remember your gratitude

When He blesses you with blessings which astound

He is great and has done all great things for us

He is our God, our Lord, our precious Jesus

III. Bitter Lives and Hard Bondage (verses 8-14)

8 Now there arose a new king over Egypt, who did not know Joseph.

Albert Barnes notes that -

"The expressions in this verse are special and emphatic. 'A new king' is a phrase not found elsewhere. It is understood by most commentators to imply that he did not succeed his predecessor in the natural order of descent and inheritance. He 'arose up over Egypt,' occupying the land, as it would seem, on different terms from the king whose place he took, either by usurpation or conquest."

It needs to be remembered from Genesis, that Joseph pictured Christ and Pharaoh pictured God's rule from heaven. The 430-year period from Abraham until the Exodus is divided into two equal parts of 215 years each. This time in Egypt is then reflective of the tribulation in the book of Revelation which is also divided into two equal parts.

If this is a "new king" who doesn't know Joseph, then his dynasty is a picture of the coming anti-Christ. The pattern is given so that we can see in Israel's redemption other pictures of history. We can see our own redemption from sin and being brought into the kingdom of Christ. But we can also see the end times where Christ will deliver Israel from the anti-Christ.

Who this king of Egypt is can't be known for certain and scholars argue over the dating and the person. But if his name were important, it would have been given. It wasn't and so it really doesn't matter. What does matter is who he pictures and how he treats God's chosen people, Israel.

For him to not know Joseph in such a short period isn't at all unusual either. First, we don't remember the great works of our past leaders even a generation later. Some ignore the great leaders within a few years after they're gone.

Secondly, if he came in by conquest, then he would not be aware of the history of the previous rulers. This is not at all an improbable verse and it reflects what could be said about the anti-Christ quite well. A description of the coming anti-Christ from the book of Daniel reflects this idea perfectly -

"Then the king shall do according to his own will: he shall exalt and magnify himself above every god, shall speak blasphemies against the God of gods, and shall prosper till the wrath has been accomplished; for what has been determined shall be done. 37 He shall regard neither the God of his fathers nor the desire of women, nor regard any god; for he shall exalt himself above them all." Daniel 11:36, 37

9 And he said to his people,

The term "his people" is being used in an antithetical manner to the term "the children of Israel." The king's people doesn't necessarily mean all of Egypt, but rather those who are aligned with him. As we will see, there will be people in Egypt who support Israel and are favorable to them.

We see this in our own government where the leader may despise a portion of the people and yet the general populace may not feel the same way about them.

9 (con't) "Look, the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we;

The adjectives of this verse, "more" and "mightier", are given as a parallel to the terms "multiply" and "mighty" in verse 7. First the Bible notes their great multiplication and then the new king of the land acknowledges it.

Whether his statement is true in the absolute sense or not, it is certainly true that Israel had flourished in an exceedingly great way. This is true in both numbers of people and in livestock and wealth as well. This was seen already being the case many years earlier while Joseph was still alive. In Genesis 47:27, it said -

"So Israel dwelt in the land of Egypt, in the country of Goshen; and they had possessions there and grew and multiplied exceedingly."

God had promised Abraham that he would bless him and He did. This blessing passed on to Isaac and then to Jacob. From Jacob, that same blessing rested upon the entire family who came from him. There is no doubt that the wealth and power of Israel was great in the land by the time of this new king.

10 come, let us deal shrewdly with them,

The word "shrewdly" is khakam. Literally it means "wisely." There was a problem which the king perceived as dangerous and it would require wisdom to handle it. What does one do with a group of people who are great in number, living on the borders of the land, and not allied with you?

The Israelites had retained their own identity and had not become a part of the greater Egyptian culture and now it seemed as though they were a threat to the empire. It is a scene which has been repeated countless times throughout Israel's history. They are a people set apart and who inevitably find themselves to be considered a threat to the nation in which they dwell.

10 (con't) lest they multiply, and it happen, in the event of war, that they also join our enemies and fight against us, and so go up out of the land."

Because they were between Canaan and Egypt, and because that is where the threat of invaders into Egypt was the most prevalent, it was more than a small concern that an invading army might benefit from the presence of Israel. If they hadn't mingled with the Egyptians, then there may have been a reason he didn't understand.

He may think that they were allied with people who already were opposed to him. If this were so, not only would they join them in any battle, but they may also retreat with them when they left. Again, this is the same mindset that has been seen throughout Israel's history as people have interacted with them.

This is a people who are content where they live and in the surroundings they find themselves. In general they are productive members of the society, but their productivity benefits them and their people to the point that both loathing and jealousy result.

11 Therefore they set taskmasters over them to afflict them with their burdens.

Because of Pharaoh's fears of the Israelites, he set taskmasters over them. The word taskmasters comes from two words, sa-re missim. A comparable translation would be "chief of tributes." These taskmasters then would extract tribute from the people in labor, but most probably also in heavy collections that we might call taxes.

Like any oppressive government, they would steal both the people's wealth and their health. In the case of the Israelites, they were afflicted with heavy burdens using a Hebrew word, siblah, which is only found six times in the Old Testament and all six are in the first six chapters of Exodus.

It comes from another word which indicates a heavy load. It is as if the burden is being highlighted as a more unusual affliction than any suffered elsewhere in their history. It is unique to the time of Israel's bondage in Egypt.

11 (con't) And they built for Pharaoh supply cities, Pithom and Raamses.

Some translations call these "treasure cities." But "supply cities" is certainly a better choice. In 1 Kings 9, Solomon built cities using the same Hebrew word which are described this way -

"And Solomon built Gezer, Lower Beth Horon, 18 Baalath, and Tadmor in the wilderness, in the land of Judah, 19 all the storage cities that Solomon had, cities for his chariots and cities for his cavalry, and whatever Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, in Lebanon, and in all the land of his dominion." 1 Kings 9:17-19

These cities, built with the effort of the Israelites, were in the general area of Goshen and would have been filled with supplies for any warfare that would be conducted there. The name Pithom means "House of Atum." Atum is the sun-god, and thus "House of the Sun." Raamses means "Child of the Sun"

12 But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew.

This is how it works in the world. The more depressed and downtrodden a group becomes, the more they multiply. The more affluent and at ease a culture is, the less they multiply. The very affliction that was levied upon the Israelites is what caused them to multiply even more.

The word from which "grew" comes is sometimes translated as "spread out." They simply expanded in all directions. The same word was used in Genesis 30 to describe the increase of Laban's wealth after the arrival of Jacob. There it says -

"You know how I have served you and how your livestock has been with me. 30 For what you had before I came was little, and it has increased to a great amount; the Lord has blessed you since my coming." Genesis 30:29, 30

12 (con't) And they were in dread of the children of Israel.

The word "dread" is appropriate. One scholar, Kalisch, says that "They had a horror of the children of Israel." It is an attitude which has been repeated again and again in history against Israel. It is the same attitude which is seen in the world today and which will result in the coming tribulation period which is being pictured by the very verses which we are looking at.

13 So the Egyptians made the children of Israel serve with rigor.

The word for "rigor" is a rare and unusual word - bepharek. It's used just six times in the Old Testament and it is always used in connection with being unusually harsh to someone as they work under another.

The Aramaic root of the word indicates to break in pieces or to crush. This was the harshness of the taskmaster who ruled over the Israelites. One might ask though, "Why would God allow His own people to suffer in this way." The answer, though not palatable to most, is that they had forgotten the Lord their God. Two passages from elsewhere in the Old Testament confirm this -

“Say to them, ‘Thus says the Lord God: “On the day when I chose Israel and raised My hand in an oath to the descendants of the house of Jacob, and made Myself known to them in the land of Egypt, I raised My hand in an oath to them, saying, ‘I am the Lord your God.’ 6 On that day I raised My hand in an oath to them, to bring them out of the land of Egypt into a land that I had searched out for them, ‘flowing with milk and honey,’ the glory of all lands. 7 Then I said to them, ‘Each of you, throw away the abominations which are before his eyes, and do not defile yourselves with the idols of Egypt. I am the Lord your God.’ 8 But they rebelled against Me and would not obey Me. They did not all cast away the abominations which were before their eyes, nor did they forsake the idols of Egypt. Ezekiel 20:5-8

In their move to Egypt, they may not have assimilated with the people, but they did assimilate into their pagan practices. If that doesn't represent Israel of today, I'm not sure what does. Though they are a united and uniform group, their allegiances to one another do not necessarily follow through to Lord.

Again, the picture we are seeing here is a picture of the tribulation period. The people of Israel will suffer greatly until the time they call on the Lord as they should.

14 And they made their lives bitter with hard bondage—in mortar, in brick,

In their desire to subjugate Israel, the hard service they demanded of them was the making of bricks and then using brick and mortar to build the store cities and whatever other edifices they mandated. The last time that these words, mortar and brick, were used in the Bible was at the building of the Tower of Babel.

Interestingly, they were also both used in the same verse, Genesis 11:3, just as they are here in Exodus 1:14. At the Tower of Babel, they were used to oppose God by defying His mandate to spread out and fill the earth. Instead, they attempted to unite and build a tower to heaven; a picture of works-based salvation.

They were also working in disbelief of His promise to never flood the world again by building a tower taller than the flood waters. It was an attempt by man to have control over creation; a perfect picture of those who profess to "global warming" and our need to solve the world's flood problems, which actually don't exist.

In this account, they are using the brick and mortar to oppose God by harming His chosen people and it is an attempt to thus thwart His purposes in the plan of redemption. If they can destroy the people of God, then God's promises and His plans will have failed. This is also then a picture of the coming tribulation and the one world government and religion - Mystery Babylon.

It will be a complete opposition to God, just as both testaments of the Bible bear out. In both instances however, God's plans will prevail because He is God.

The word for "brick" is levenah. It is used to indicate a brick which is made by man for man. It is temporary and without true substance. In contrast to this is stone or rock which is made by God and which indicates permanence and that which doesn't yield. In both of these accounts, there is a contrast.

There is the using of bricks to work against God (Babel), and then there is the using of bricks to work against God's people (Egypt). They contrast, and yet they confirm the thought that man's efforts are futile against the works and plans of God. The Bible is showing us this.

14 (con't) and in all manner of service in the field.

Not only were the people subjected to the physical labors of brick work, but "to all manner of service in the field." The Israelite's started out as shepherds, but they also moved into agriculture. Deuteronomy 11:10 shows us that. But this is probably not the full extent of their work.

They were probably used to dig canals for irrigation. And so the mud they dug would have been used for the clay which made the brick and mortar. In all, the work would have been tedious, tiring, and oppressive in the heat of Egypt's boiling sun. The life of the Israelites could surely have been described as misery.

14 (fin) All their service in which they made them serve was with rigor.

Again the term for rigor, bepharek, is used. The taskmaster would have been cruel and relentless. Like the treatment of the slaves of the south in America, the Israelites would have been beaten at will and treated as mere animals of burden. Again, it has to be remembered that the Lord's people suffered because they had forsaken the Lord. Ezekiel makes this clear.

His people are not immune from His punishments when they are needed for correction, but God will never leave nor forsake those He has called. Despite all of their rejections, both in Egypt and many times afterward throughout their history, God has promised to keep and save Israel.

He told them in advance of all the horrors that would come upon them and He implied that they would be exiled twice as well. But He also showed them, in advance, when they would be returned and what He would do for them after they did. If nothing else, God's faithfulness to unfaithful Israel should show us that His promises to us are true as well.

In Christ Jesus, we have the surest foundation of all. We have the greatest hope and the most wonderful future ahead of us. Whatever things we're suffering through now may be our own fault or they may merely be His grace by allowing us to be in a valley before He takes us again to a high mountaintop.

So don't be overly frustrated. Israel got through their hardships and you will as well. But this assumes that you belong to God. This can only be true if you have called on Jesus Christ as Lord. If you have, then you are God's child through adoption. If not, you are still God's enemy because of sin. Let me explain to you how you can be free from sin and be reckoned as a child of God...

Closing Verse: Behold, I have refined you, but not as silver;
I have tested you in the furnace of affliction.
11 For My own sake, for My own sake, I will do it;
For how should My name be profaned?
And I will not give My glory to another. Isaiah 48:10, 11

Next Week: Exodus 1:15-22 (Obeying God Rather Than Men) (2nd Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him, and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Bitterness and Bondage in the Land of Egypt

Now these are the names of the children of Israel
Who came to Egypt; each man and his household
Came with Jacob, as the Bible does tell

Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah too
Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin
Dan, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher are who
The sons who are descended from him

All those who were descendants of Jacob we see
Were seventy persons (for Joseph was in Egypt already)

And Joseph died, all his brothers

And all that generation

All the fathers and mothers

But the children of Israel were fruitful

And increased abundantly, like ground properly tilled

And multiplied and grew exceedingly mighty

And the land with them was filled

Now there over Egypt a new king arose

Who did not know Joseph, and to his people he said

“Look how the people of the children of Israel quickly grows

They are more and mightier than we, look how they have bred

Come, let us deal shrewdly with them, alright?

Lest they multiply, and it happen, in the event of war

That they also join our enemies and against us fight

And so go up out of the land, and we have them no more

Therefore they set taskmasters over them

With their burdens to them afflict

And they built for Pharaoh supply cities

Pithom and Raamses, they were demanding and strict

But the more they afflicted them, it is true
As the word to us does tell
The more they multiplied and grew
And they were in dread of the children of Israel

So the Egyptians made the children of Israel
Serve with rigor, such painful toil
And they made their lives bitter
With hard bondage, there on Egypt's soil

In mortar, in brick they worked we observe
And in all manner of service in the field
All their service in which they made them serve
Was with rigor, in order to make Israel yield

Israel suffered through long years of pain and toil
But eventually God sent them a deliverer
Because God is ever faithful and loyal
To His promises, they are certain and sure

And God has sent a Deliverer to us as well
He has brought us out of our life of sin-earned chains
By sending His Son to deliver us from the grasp of hell
And to be granted a heavenly seat where Jesus reigns

Such is the marvelous workings of God!

So let us praise Him all our days as in this life we trod

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 1:15-22 (OBEYING GOD RATHER THAN MEN)

Introduction: Chapter 1 of Exodus has four major parts to it. The first part is the recapitulation of the names of those who went down to Egypt with Israel and a note that there they had multiplied abundantly. This was seen in verses 1-7. It was an introductory section and a transition from Genesis to Exodus.

After this there are three sections which deal with measures to control and subjugate Israel. The first of them is the transition from Joseph who was the previous person to picture Christ. There, it begins with, "Now there arose a new king over Egypt, who did not know Joseph." The last of the three is a transition to the story of Moses, the next person who will picture Christ.

In these three sections dealing with controlling Israel, the first is verses 8-14. It is seven verses which describe the fear of the new Pharaoh at the vast number of the sons of Israel and the way that he treated them in order to subjugate them in hopes of reducing their numbers. It is the first measure of control.

The next section also comprises seven verses, from 15-21. Instead of dealing with the sons of Israel, it deals with the Hebrew's midwives and the children they delivered. It is the second measure of control.

The final portion is verse 22 which deals with the expected treatment of the children born to Israel and is addressed to all the people of Egypt. It is the third measure of control.

The first and second sets, which are each seven verses long, have some nifty patterns. In the first, the term "Israel" is used three times. In the next, the term "Hebrew" is used three times instead of Israel. In the first, God is not mentioned, but in the second, God is mentioned three times.

And in the first, it merely notes there is a new king over Egypt, but in the second it calls him the king of Egypt three times. In each of the three sets of judgment, the term "Pharaoh" is mentioned once. In all of these sets then, there is intentional structure that I had never noticed before.

Our eight verses today center on the final two sets of measures used to control the Israelites. Of these two, the first comprises most of what we will look at. The last is only one verse and is a lead-in to chapter 2 and the life of Moses, the man of God.

In the first seven verses, there are some interesting contrasts. There is the command of Pharaoh which is in contrast to the fear of God in the midwives. There is a contrast in what they are told to do - they are to kill the males but spare the females. There is a contrast made between the Hebrew women and the Egyptian women.

There is the hope of reducing Israel's numbers, and there is the contrasting statement that they multiplied and grew very mighty. There is also a contrast in the lives of the two midwives. It is implied that they started with no households, and it is explicitly stated that they were granted households because of their obedience to God.

Like I said, there is intentional order and structure in this first chapter. In the end, these patterns show logic, order, and harmony. They show intent and purpose and are certainly not random. You might ask of what importance this is, but it is patterns such as these which help show us why the Lord does certain things in the course of history.

By seeing these patterns of the Bible, we can see and be reminded that He is always in control. But even without the patterns, the story is one which is intended to direct us towards the unfolding events of time and the promised redemption of Israel that was spoken to Abraham about 400 years earlier.

In addition, it shows a pattern which reveals the steadily degenerating morals of a society which is not unlike how our own society has progressed in recent years. Without exercising our conscience towards God, there can only be ungodliness.

Without the fear of the Lord, there will only be enmity towards the people of the Lord. And without respect for human life in all of its aspects, there is the certain truth that the lives of those around us will become of less and less value until only self-centeredness remains.

Text Verse: "He has shown you, O man, what is good;

And what does the Lord require of you

But to do justly,

To love mercy,

And to walk humbly with your God?" Micah 6:8

The Lord redeemed Israel and gave them His laws to guide them. They were laws which didn't merely require mechanical obedience, but they were laws which required a heart for Him. In the end, they failed to adhere to this aspect of their instruction.

Eventually, there was religion without relationship, and a culture of God without caring for God. Because of this they were judged for their failures. Even without the Law of Moses, there is a conscience granted to each person so that we should instinctively know right from wrong.

Being obedient to our conscience isn't sufficient to save us, but it shows us that God is a moral Being and that we are obligated to Him because He has bestowed upon us His moral nature.

The midwives to the Hebrews had a conscience, but they also had commands that were given to them by Pharaoh which were in direct conflict with their conscience and with the law given to Noah many generations earlier. How would they respond when faced with this moral dilemma?

Each of us will, from time to time, also face moral dilemmas. How we handle them, especially as Christians, defines who we are as individuals. What course of action should we take, and why?

These are things that are explained to us in God's superior word for our learning and our growth. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Shiphrah and Puah (verses 15 & 16)

15 Then the king of Egypt spoke to the Hebrew midwives,

Our verses today start off with an immediate problem and one which divides scholars right down the middle. Does the Hebrew say that the king of Egypt spoke to the Hebrew midwives, or to the midwives of the Hebrews? Most translations assume they are Hebrew midwives, but the translation could be either.

Flavius Josephus, the great compiler of Jewish history, says they were Egyptians.

15 (con't) of whom the name of one was Shiphrah and the name of the other Puah;

The names of the women don't help with the first problem as much as one might think. Many scholars find their names to be Hebrew, but others find Arabic roots for them. Each name is mentioned only once in the Bible and no other person has an identical name. There is a third possibility that no one else mentions, but which makes sense. That is that one is an Egyptian and one is a Hebrew.

Whatever is correct, there were certainly many midwives both in Egypt and among the Hebrew people, and yet only these two are mentioned, and they are mentioned by name. The reason for mentioning their names is not given and only in the context of the events of chapter 2 does it make any sense at all as to why their names are even provided.

But once we arrive there, we will come to understand exactly why they are mentioned at all and exactly why their specific names are given. But for now, if for no other reason than because they feared God and worked to save His people, they have been remembered in His word.

The name Shiphrah comes from the word shaphar, which means to be pleasing. The derived feminine noun is shiphra which means fairness. And so her name is translated as Beauty.

The name Puah is believed by some to come from the word yapa, which means to shine or be beautiful and so the name is given to be either Splendid or Light. However, it may also come from another word, pa'ah, found in Isaiah 42:12 which says -

"I have held My peace a long time,
I have been still and restrained Myself.
Now I will cry like a woman in labor,
I will pant and gasp at once." Isaiah 42:14

Because of this, her name would mean "one who cries out." What is more likely is that the name Puah is a pun on both words. Together they give us an insight into the person of Moses and his nativity story. We're being told something through the names along with the moral lessons which the Bible is showing us through the story itself.

As only these two midwives are mentioned, it could be that they were the chief of the midwives. They may have actually reported directly to Pharaoh concerning the number of births and other statistical information that any working society would collect.

Because of this, believing that one is an Egyptian, over all the births in Egypt, and the other is a Hebrew, over all those born to the Hebrews, takes on an interesting possibility. None of the three options for this are given in the Bible, but the logic of this is convincing to me.

16 and he said, "When you do the duties of a midwife for the Hebrew women,

Here the Hebrews are singled out. The orders from Pharaoh are in regards to one group of people and none other. It calls to mind the German holocaust, the Russian pogroms, and other times in history when the Jews have been singled out. At times, like during the holocaust, many other groups were targeted as well, but the emphasis has been on the extermination of God's people.

Satan's reason for this prior to Christ was to thwart God's plans leading to His ultimate redemption of the people of the world as was promised right at the beginning, just after the fall. If the Hebrews were destroyed, then there would be no line for Christ to have come through.

Satan's reason for this since Christ is to thwart God's plans for His return to Israel. If Israel is destroyed, then Jesus' words that He spoke to them will have failed. There would then be no millennial reign of Christ among His people and thus God's word would be a failure. However, God has continuously used these attempts to actually realize His purposes.

16 (con't) and see them on the birthstools,

This is a curious set of words. It reads ur-re-iten al ha'abenayim - literally, it means "and see on them on the stones." Because it is so unusual, some translations, like Young's, drop a letter which changes the word from stones to children. And so it will read -

"When ye cause the Hebrew women to bear, and have looked on the children..."

However, this requires changing the wording as it is written. The only other time that this term, "the stones," is used in this way in the Bible is in Jeremiah 18:3 -

"Then I went down to the potter's house, and there he was, making something at the wheel." (literally, on the stones)

In Jeremiah, it indicates two horizontal stones which are attached to a vertical pole, just the way modern potter's wheels are made. There are differing views on what "the stones" here mean. Some think it is merely a way of identifying a type of chair made specifically for giving birth; hence birthstools.

Others think that the stones formed a type of bathtub that would receive the child and wash it at the same time. It's a very curious term, but it is not so impossible as to require changing what has been written.

16 (con't) if it is a son, then you shall kill him; but if it is a daughter, then she shall live.”

Throughout the Bible, it is the male father who defines heritage and inclusion into the chosen people. In Leviticus 24:10, a person is charged with blasphemy and he is identified as the son of an Israelite woman and an Egyptian man.

In 1 Kings 7:14, a person is hired for temple work by Solomon and he is identified as the son of a widow from Naphtali whose father was a man of Tyre. They are singled out in this regard to show that they are not included in the males' genealogy. They could be assimilated into Israel, but their ancestry would be so noted.

By killing off the males, the intent was that the culture would diminish twice as fast. There would be no men to continue the line and the women would be forced to marry outside of the society and thus end their ties to the Hebrew culture.

If the hard bondage that was levied upon the men didn't work, it was hoped that this avenue would. Satan would work through human agency in an attempt to destroy the people of God. As Matthew Henry says this about these words -

"The enmity that is in the seed of the serpent, against the Seed of the woman, makes men forget all pity."

Do not keep silent, O God!
Please, do not hold Your peace,
And do not be still, O God!
Let Your hand of protection never cease

For behold, Your enemies make a tumult
And those who hate You have lifted up their head
They have taken crafty counsel against Your people
Be not silent, O God, take away our dread

They have consulted together against Your sheltered ones
They have said, "Come, and let us cut them off from being a nation
That the name of Israel may be remembered no more
Lord, let our name not end with this generation

II. Obeying God Rather Than Men (verses 17-19)

17 But the midwives feared God,

Of the 20 versions of the Bible I look at for sermons, none of them translate these words as they are written. And of the many commentaries I read, none of them explained what is lacking. The title in Hebrew is ha'elohim - And thus it would say "But the midwives feared 'the' God." A definite article is in front of "God."

This makes a big difference. There were many "gods" in Egypt and even Pharaoh was considered a god, but there is one true God. The term ha'elohim is given for a reason. In Genesis 9:1, God spoke to Noah. At that time, it was understood that there was only one God for all people because only Noah and his family were alive on the earth. Thus, there were no false gods known to man.

When speaking to Noah, God gave him these words of instruction -

“Whoever sheds man’s blood,
By man his blood shall be shed;
For in the image of God
He made man.
7 And as for you, be fruitful and multiply;
Bring forth abundantly in the earth
And multiply in it.” Genesis 9:6, 7

The time of this account in Exodus is around the year 2434AM. It is only a bit more than 750 years after the flood and there is still a knowledge of the true God and of His words to Noah. This is what is implied in the term "the God."

It is a gigantic tragedy that translators fail to accurately put forth the words of Scripture as they have been given. Without this one word "the" in front of God, a polytheist could pick up the Bible and come to a wrong conclusion concerning the word elohim.

In this, translators assume that everyone reading the Bible knows what they are thinking. But that is a bad assumption, especially when folks like the Mormons believe in many gods and that they will someday be their own little god in charge of their own little universe.

These two women were women of faith, properly directed faith, towards the unseen God who spoke to their forefather Noah and gave them a warning concerning murder.

17 (con't) and did not do as the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the male children alive.

Francine Klagsbrun, the Jewish author, notes that this act here "may be the first known incident of civil disobedience in history." In order to save the Hebrew children alive, these two women willingly disobeyed the edict of the king. This precept, that following God's laws first at the expense of man's laws which are contrary to His laws, follows throughout the Bible.

Civil disobedience is mandatory when an edict would violate the higher rule and authority of God. In the book of Acts, the high priest who is the supposed representative for God in Israel, gave a command to the apostles which was contrary to the truth of God. The exchange is recorded as follows -

"Did we not strictly command you not to teach in this name? And look, you have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and intend to bring this Man's blood on us!"

29 But Peter and the other apostles answered and said: "We ought to obey God rather than men." Acts 5:28, 29

And so it is to be with us. When we are faced with a choice such as this, we must be disobedient to the government if what they ask us to do would cause us to violate our allegiance to God. These two midwives understood this and they set an early example which is not only correct, but which was recorded as worthy of blessing by the God whom they honored.

In their civil disobedience, they upheld the higher authority of God, spoken many centuries earlier to their forefather Noah.

18 So the king of Egypt called for the midwives and said to them, “Why have you done this thing, and saved the male children alive?”

The verse shows the obvious nature of their disobedience. The reports coming back to the king would have included the live childbirths along with all of the other statistical information of his kingdom. And it was probably the midwives that provided it.

It's unlikely that Pharaoh went to Goshen to look around, and it is unlikely that anyone would have made a report about live births if it wasn't their job. Instead, the information probably came to him right from these two women. The old expression, "It's better to ask forgiveness rather than permission" parallels this.

Eventually, if the king found out of all of the live births through someone else, they would have a poorer argument concerning the matter. But if it were their reports, the confusion of the king would be awaiting their response for a clear defense, something they would be prepared for in advance. And they were...

19 And the midwives said to Pharaoh, “Because the Hebrew women are not like the Egyptian women; for they are lively and give birth before the midwives come to them.”

This report by the midwives has no need to be disbelieved, either by Pharaoh then or by us now. Throughout cultures where the women work hard, they tend to bear children with much less effort than those who don't.

Eskimo women in past times worked right up until the time of childbirth and then would get back to work in a short amount of time. As the people were living under hard bondage and unusually difficult working conditions, the women would have carried many responsibilities the men were kept from.

In all, they would have been just like any other group in such circumstances. And this is certainly so because if it weren't, then Pharaoh would have had a many avenues open to him to find out if it were false. In their words, they are turning the hard bondage back on Pharaoh and using it as an excuse. Adam Clarke, speaking as if one of the midwives, says it this way -

"The very oppression under which, through thy cruelty, the Israelites groan, their God has turned to their advantage; they are not only fruitful, but they bring forth with comparatively no trouble; we have scarcely any employment among them."
Clarke

Despite the actions of Shiphrah and Puah, believe it or not, some scholars still chide them for lying. Without thinking this through, they have come to the conclusion that their lying is not justifiable. The Geneva Bible's comment on this verse says -

"Their disobedience in this was lawful, but their deception is evil." Geneva
Either way, whether they told the truth, or whether they didn't, that is a bad analysis. The law of God at that time for all people was the preservation of life. The Ten Commandments had not yet been instituted and therefore, they were fulfilling the higher calling apart from the law. Their actions are justified and they are noted as such.

We ought to obey God rather than men

Certainly this is our highest duty to uphold

Gods favor is the sweetest reward, I say again
His favor is worth more than the most precious gold

What can man do to me, I ask?
In whom shall I place my fear?
Being faithful and true to God is my solemn task
All the days that the Lord keeps me here

To Christ I will be faithful as long as I live
As I await that final heavenly call
When in that day to me eternal rewards He shall give Because in this life Jesus has been my All in all

III. That Which Has Been Will Be (verses 20-22)

20 Therefore God dealt well with the midwives,

With bold determination, even in the face of probable danger and possibly death, the actions of these two women speak for themselves as evidenced by God's treatment of them. He was pleased with their actions and the Bible notes that for their faithfulness, He dealt well with them.

Interestingly in this verse, the term elohim, not ha'elohim is used. They feared "the" God and God (who is "the" God) responded with favor. Because it is understood that this favor is from "the" God, there was no need for the definite article.

20 (con't) and the people multiplied and grew very mighty.

In verse 7, it said, "But the children of Israel were fruitful and increased abundantly, multiplied and grew exceedingly mighty; and the land was filled with them." The same words, multiplied and grew very mighty" are repeated to show that the effect of both of Pharaoh's attempts to diminish the people of Israel were instead turned around to increase them.

This type of irony is seen numerous times in the Bible. When Joseph's brothers meant him harm, God turned it around for good. In the book of Esther, when Haman tried to destroy God's people, we're told that the wicked plot he devised against the Jews was returned on his own head.

In the greatest of such moments, the people of Israel plotted to kill the Lord. But in His case, the old saying, "You can't keep a good man down" rang true. What they did by taking His life led to the greatest multiplication of life in human history. The spiritually dead have been quickened into such a great multitude that the apostle John says it can't be numbered.

The use of such descriptive terms shows the magnificence of God's accomplishments in contradistinction to the futility of the plans and schemes of man.

21 And so it was, because the midwives feared God, that He provided households for them.

Again in this verse, the translation is lacking. It says once again ha'elohim - because the midwives feared "the" God. Again, He is set in contradistinction to the false gods of Egypt and those of Pharaoh. What was implicit and understood in the previous verse allowed for no definite article.

But in this verse, we are being shown an explicit distinction between the gods of Egypt and the true God. Thus there is a need once again for the definite article. Pharaoh himself was considered a living god and so the article makes the verse more poignant. The words of the 56th Psalm are prefigured in the actions of these two women -

"In God I have put my trust;

I will not be afraid.

What can man do to me?" Psalm 56:11

In their fear of the true God, we are told that He looked with favor upon them and that "He provided households for them." In the Hebrew, the word "them" is masculine, not feminine. And so some people claim that it is referring to the people of Israel and not the midwives, but the term "households" is a proverbial expression. It means that they married and became mothers in Israel.

This is similar to what is seen at the end of the book of Ruth where the people blessed the union between Boaz and Ruth. There after Boaz accepted the right to marry Ruth, it said -

"The Lord make the woman who is coming to your house like Rachel and Leah, the two who built the house of Israel; and may you prosper in Ephrathah and be famous in Bethlehem. 12 May your house be like the house of Perez, whom Tamar bore to Judah, because of the offspring which the Lord will give you from this young woman." Ruth 4:11, 12

In this section of Ruth, the masculine word is speaking of the whole household. Through their fear of the true God, they were built up into a house of their own. Though they aren't ever mentioned again in Scripture outside of this passage, they are included among the faithful none-the-less.

22 So Pharaoh commanded all his people, saying, "Every son who is born you shall cast into the river, and every daughter you shall save alive."

The Geneva Bible says this, "When tyrants cannot prevail by deceit, they burst into open rage."

Let none of us deem that this is either an untrue verse because of its horrible considerations, nor should we even for a moment think that this is either unusual in our own nation, or something that is unlikely to occur in our own lifetime. In fact, it is the anticipation of a large portion of our own society today.

In the logical progression of wickedness which permeates the world in which we live, we see an edict which mirrors the thought process of our own leadership in America. First, Pharaoh tried to work the people into a decrease in numbers.

When the women were over-taxed, he figured they would abort their babies. It didn't happen. Instead, they multiplied. And so the next logical course of action was partial-birth abortion. Kill them as they are being born. Something desired by the left in the United States and a procedure often argued for by them as necessary.

When the midwives realized the immensely grotesque nature of this, they upheld the law of God and refused to be a part of it. And so now Pharaoh demands that any male child born alive is to be taken to the river and cast in as if it were a rotten tomato or a spoiled piece of beef.

In recorded hearings on the issue of terminating lives of babies outside of the womb, our current president, while still a senator in Illinois, can be heard calling these babies "fetuses" and that they had not yet reached the age of viability. In other words, they are not worthy of constitutional protection. These are right on You Tube and can be listened to anytime you wish.

His voting record on this issue shows three separate occasions where he voted to keep infanticide legal. Since the passing of Obamacare, his supporters can be seen on a video published on You Tube signing petitions to make it legal to kill children up to 3 years old in order to "relieve the burden to deal with the children themselves" or to "help keep the population down."

One of the signers was actually holding his own child while signing the petition which was intended to "support infanticide for small children." Although this is a sermon concerning Pharaoh's actions towards Israel, the passage itself is an indictment on the sheer depravity and wickedness of those who are willing to attack God's image bearers because of their hatred of God.

This is Pharaoh, and the memory of his wicked actions are recorded to remind us of our own obligations concerning the sanctity of human life. In order to destroy an entire population of people and end a culture which was given to bring restoration between God and man, Pharaoh demanded the lives of the males and the destruction of the female's inheritance among their people.

Having seen this, before we finish, I want to show you an interesting parallel which is found in Numbers. This exodus account is just before the coming of Moses. In Numbers, just before Moses' death, an account occurs which is almost parallel to what we have seen today. Let me read it to you -

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying: 2 "Take vengeance on the Midianites for the children of Israel. Afterward you shall be gathered to your people."

3 So Moses spoke to the people, saying, "Arm some of yourselves for war, and let them go against the Midianites to take vengeance for the Lord on Midian. 4 A thousand from each tribe of all the tribes of Israel you shall send to the war.”

5 So there were recruited from the divisions of Israel one thousand from each tribe, twelve thousand armed for war. 6 Then Moses sent them to the war, one thousand from each tribe; he sent them to the war with Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, with the holy articles and the signal trumpets in his hand. 7 And they warred against the Midianites, just as the Lord commanded Moses, and they killed all the males. 8 They killed the kings of Midian with the rest of those who were killed—Evi, Rekem, Zur, Hur, and Reba, the five kings of Midian. Balaam the son of Beor they also killed with the sword.

9 And the children of Israel took the women of Midian captive, with their little ones, and took as spoil all their cattle, all their flocks, and all their goods. 10 They also burned with fire all the cities where they dwelt, and all their forts. 11 And they took all the spoil and all the booty—of man and beast.

12 Then they brought the captives, the booty, and the spoil to Moses, to Eleazar the priest, and to the congregation of the children of Israel, to the camp in the plains of Moab by the Jordan, across from Jericho. 13 And Moses, Eleazar the priest, and all the leaders of the congregation, went to meet them outside the camp. 14 But Moses was angry with the officers of the army, with the captains over thousands and captains over hundreds, who had come from the battle.

15 And Moses said to them: “Have you kept all the women alive? 16 Look, these women caused the children of Israel, through the counsel of Balaam, to trespass against the Lord in the incident of Peor, and there was a plague among the congregation of the Lord. 17 Now therefore, kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman who has known a man intimately. 18 But keep alive for yourselves all the young girls who have not known a man intimately. Numbers 31:1-18

After giving this instruction, the Bible records that there were 32,000 women who had not known a man intimately. What does this mean? Assuming there were an equal number of boys as there were girls, Israel exterminated at least 32,000 boys and all of the grown women. In all, probably more than 100,000 people died that day.

An entire population was destroyed in this manner and the virgin women were assimilated into Israel. One must question why this was acceptable and yet the same wasn't concerning Pharaoh's actions toward Israel. The answer comes down to a simple precept, obedience to God. The two midwives understood this. They served "the" God. Midian however was ripe for judgment for having rejected Him.

In our nation, we are following the same path and we are set for the same judgment. The deaths of more than 50,000,000 innocent lives will not go unpunished by this same God who watches over the affairs of men. It is a lesson that must not go unheeded, lest we perish.

On this seemingly depressing note, we will close for today, but in reality, there is nothing depressing about God's word, nor His love for us. It is we who turn our backs on Him, as He continually reaches out His hands in love to us. Even in our lies, our abortions, or drunkenness, or our drug addictions, He is willing to forgive all and forget all if we will simply turn to Him.

And so not knowing whether you have actually called on the Lord or not, I'd like you to allow me a moment to tell you how you can come to know Him by sharing with you the good news of Jesus Christ...

Closing Verse: Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that You are the Lord God, and that You have turned their hearts back to You again." 1 Kings 18:37

Next Week: Exodus 2:1-10 (This is One of the Hebrew's Children) (3rd Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him, and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Obeying God Rather Than Men

Then the king of Egypt spoke

To the Hebrew midwives, words of shame

Of whom the name of one was Shiphrah

And of the other, Puah was her name

And he said, "When you do the duties of a midwife

For the Hebrew women, as I instruct you

And see them on the birthstools

There is something I want you to do

If it is a son, then you shall kill him, no mercy give

But if it is a daughter, then she shall be allowed to live

But the midwives feared God and took a stand

And did not do what he said to them

As the king of Egypt did command

But saved alive the male children

So the king of Egypt called
For the midwives and said to them
“Why have you done this thing
And saved alive the male children?

And the midwives to Pharaoh said
“Because the Hebrew women as we say
Are not like the Egyptian women, but instead
They are lively and give birth right away

Before the midwives come to them
And so they have already had their children

Therefore God dealt well with the midwives, it is true
And the people multiplied and very mightily grew

And so it was, because the midwives feared God
That He provided households for them
A reward for the faithful walk in which they trod

So Pharaoh commanded all his people, saying
“Every son who is born you shall into the river cast
And every daughter you shall save alive
And we will be free of these Hebrews at last

Such is the nature of man's enmity with God
How we fight against his plans and purposes for us!
On a wicked path we would gladly trod
And turn our backs to His Gift of love, His own Son Jesus

But until our last breath, He continues to call
Because of His great and undying love for us
And in one act He can in us reverse the fall
Just by receiving that great Gift of love, His own Son Jesus

Thank You for patiently waiting, even for me, O Lord
Thank You for patiently waiting for each one of us
Until the day when someone showed us in Your word
About the most marvelous Gift of love, Your own Son Jesus

Praises to You for this our matchless King!
For all eternity our souls to You will sing

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 2:1-10 (THIS IS ONE OF THE HEBREW'S CHILDREN)

Introduction: There's a common proverb we use which is firmly rooted in the Bible - "From small beginnings come great things." How many times do we see this theme repeated in Scripture? The life of Moses, like any human, was one which started out small. Other than Adam, we were all born as infants.

But the story of Moses takes on an additional likeness to the proverb simply because we have the record of his birth and then the most unusual of circumstances which surrounded his infancy. Today's account is a favorite of most people because it's so touching and human.

Throughout it, we can almost feel the emotion of the mother, the anticipation of the sister, and the heartfelt pity of Pharaoh's daughter. We see all of these emotions from time to time, but rarely are they combined into a single occurrence. But the story of Moses skillfully weaves them together so that they do.

Small beginnings don't always mean small endings. And it would be a mistake to think they do. And so Solomon gives us wisdom in Ecclesiastes concerning the work of our hands. There he says -

"In the morning sow your seed,
And in the evening do not withhold your hand;
For you do not know which will prosper,
Either this or that,
Or whether both alike will be good." Ecclesiastes 11:6

Seeds are small, but they may end in a great harvest. Picking up pennies along life's highway seems almost futile, but for each one saved, there will be a greater return when the piggy bank is finally opened. From small starts, great things can and do come about.

Text Verse: For who has despised the day of small things? Zechariah 4:10

Billy Graham started out his revival meetings in a circus tent in a parking lot, but eventually his crusades would go out to audiences of tens of thousands of people. His largest crusade was held in Seoul, South Korea where he preached to an estimated 3.2 million.

As South Korea at that time only had a population of 30 million people, he preached to more than 1/10 of the nation in person and many, many more by television. Whatever great thing you aspire to, let it be founded on a heart for the Lord and I'm sure He will use you in the perfect way to obtain the most perfect results.

He sure did it with Moses. The words of the man who spoke to the Lord face to face are still read, studied, and cherished 3500 years later. Not bad for a person who started as a baby seemingly destined to perish in the waters of the Nile River. This is the greatness of God - that He can take what the leaders of the world find below contempt and He can turn it into the greatest of stories.

The superb workings of this marvelous God are to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. A Beautiful Child and a Little Ark (verses 1-4)

1 And a man of the house of Levi went and took as wife a daughter of Levi.

Chapter two begins with an amazingly simply pronouncement which follows directly after the words of woe which ended chapter 1. There in the 22nd verse it said, "So Pharaoh commanded all his people, saying, 'Every son who is born you shall cast into the river, and every daughter you shall save alive.'"

This first verse of chapter 2 gives no names except of the line of descent from which they came. Both of these people are of the tribe of Levi. This thought then sets up the events which follow, and the tribe of Levi will continue to be highlighted all the way through the rest of the Bible.

Leaving out the names here is significant because it is intended to show us that a higher Power is working behind the scenes, apart from and yet in connection to, human activity. It is not the names of the people who are important, but that God is using the people and events to work out His plans.

Though we don't know it yet, their identification as Levites is intended to show that He has chosen this particular family to introduce the chosen family for the priesthood of Israel as well as to lead to their great lawgiver Moses. Reading verses like this throughout Scripture gives us an advanced notice that something is coming which will be connected to them.

And so the verse begins with "and." It shows a direct continuation of what was mandated by Pharaoh while also leading us in a new direction at the same time. Because the Hebrew language is deficient in tenses in comparison to English, it sounds like this verse is actually happening after Pharaoh's edict, but it's not.

Rather, he had gone some time before the edict to marry. From that time, they had already had two children. However, the narrative isn't given to tell us any of these things. It steps into the picture at this point to show that these two, who were already married, will now have to face the edict of Pharaoh.

In order to understand the times then, there is the need to know who the man is, who the wife is, and who the siblings are. The man's name is Amram, a son of Levi's son Kohath. The woman's name is Jochebed. Their details are mentioned in Exodus 6:20 -

"Now Amram took for himself Jochebed, his father's sister, as wife; and she bore him Aaron and Moses. And the years of the life of Amram were one hundred and thirty-seven." Exodus 6:20

She is actually Amram's aunt, the sister of his father. But even this needs to be further explained because in Numbers 26:59, it appears that Jochebed is actually a daughter of Levi. There it says -

"The name of Amram's wife was Jochebed the daughter of Levi, who was born to Levi in Egypt; and to Amram she bore Aaron and Moses and their sister Miriam." Numbers 26:59

The term "daughter of Levi" doesn't specifically mean she was his direct daughter, but a descendant of him. She is a daughter of his household. And from this verse, we can see the names of the whole family who have, with the exception of Moses, actually been excluded from the narrative in Exodus 2. The family is comprised of Amram, Jochebed, Miriam, Aaron, and Moses.

Miriam is the oldest of the three and was probably born not long after the marriage. Aaron was born about twelve years later and he is three years older than Moses (Exodus 7:7). And now, shortly after the Pharaoh's edict, a third child is born. The fate of this third child is now the focus of the biblical narrative.

2 So the woman conceived and bore a son.

Again, the Bible has skipped over all of the other details that we might think are necessary, but which are actually unneeded at this point. Those lacking details will be filled in at the right time, but the specific wording shows us that there is precise purpose and intent to establish the rest of the account.

The lack of the woman's name is not unlike the account of Genesis 38. In the first paragraph there, eight people or places are named and yet the one person you would expect to be named isn't. She is the daughter of one named person, the wife of another, and the mother of three more, and yet her name isn't given.

In this, we are provided just what we need to not be distracted from what God is revealing, because through concealment, there is actually often marvelous disclosure. It is a special note to consider that no sooner has the Pharaoh devised his cruelest of plans against the Hebrews than God determined to bring forth the deliverer of His people.

What the devil thinks will be his greatest victory is always turned around to be his most stunning defeat. In this case, out of the mouth of Pharaoh in his own edict literally comes the reason for the downfall of the kingdom of Egypt.

2 (con't) And when she saw that he was a beautiful child, she hid him three months.

This portion of verse two is so important to the Jewish tradition and culture, as well as to all of the people of God, that it is recorded twice in the New Testament. In Acts 7, Stephen refers to it in his speech to the high priest and his council. There it says -

"At this time Moses was born, and was well pleasing to God; and he was brought up in his father's house for three months." Acts 7:20

Later, in Hebrews 11, Moses' parents were rewarded for their faith in the record of those whom God singled out for their steadfast devotion to Him. There we read these words -

"By faith Moses, when he was born, was hidden three months by his parents, because they saw he was a beautiful child; and they were not afraid of the king's command." Hebrews 11:23

What's interesting is that the specific amount of time, three months, is mentioned and it is mentioned three times in the Bible. What is it about the three months that showed the parent's possessed proper faith? What if it were two months or four months?

According to EW Bullinger, the number three "stands for that which is solid, real, substantial, complete, and entire. All things that are specially complete are stamped with this number three."

There was a pre-appointed time for Moses to be hid for the events of this story to unfold as they should. In fact, the next verse will tell us that this time of three months met that time of completion, but it doesn't tell why. Only by understanding the meaning of individual numbers do the words come to make sense.

Otherwise, they seem rather arbitrary and random, even unnecessary. These three months were needed in order for history to unfold in a proper manner. The words used to describe Moses in this verse are ki tov hu, or literally, "and good he."

The beauty of the child must have only heightened the parents attention to the wickedness of Pharaoh's decree so that instead of obeying the king's command, like the Hebrew midwives Shiphrah and Puah they determined to disobey the edict and save their son.

And believe it or not, the reason for the giving of the names of these two women in the previous chapter is to alert us to incidents here in the second chapter and then to parallel them. As I said then, the name Shiphrah comes from the word shaphar, which means to be pleasing. The derived feminine noun is shiphra which means fairness. And so her name is translated as Beauty.

Thus her name is given to show us a parallel to the child Moses. The parents saw that their child was beautiful and so they spared him, showing the faith of Shiphrah, a woman whose name means "Beautiful" and whose example to the Hebrew people of sparing the children was enough to give them the same courage.

For all we know, the courage of those midwives may have been evident in the saving of Aaron who might have been one of the children saved by the midwives when they were told to kill the males at birth. That example could have been the impetus for the parents to follow in the same courageous fashion. The name of the second midwife will have a parallel as well in just a few verses.

3 But when she could no longer hide him,

This is parallel to what occurred in the previous chapter. There was a time where the Hebrew's midwives could no longer hide their actions and they were asked to explain them to Pharaoh. And their explanation is what led directly to the third measure taken to destroy the Hebrews.

Now during this time of that third measure, the actions of the mother are what lead us directly to the events of the story ahead. Every step is so precisely detailed to show the absolutely perfect plan of God in a fashion which drips with irony as He continuously frustrates the plots and schemes of man.

3 (con't) she took an ark of bulrushes for him,

The word for "ark" is the Hebrew word tevah. It indicates a box or a chest or even a basket. Some have attempted to tie the word in with a coffin, but there is no substantiation for this. Rather, its use in Scripture gives no indication of this at all.

The word is used 28 times in the Bible, but in only two stories - that of Noah and that of Moses. In the first, the ark was made of wood and it was intended to be used as God destroyed man through judgment, but to preserve mankind through grace. It was used to float over the entire world as the waters prevailed during that time, saving a man of righteousness who would usher in a new dispensation, that of Government.

In this account, it is made of bulrushes, a kind of papyrus. It is intended to float within the boundaries of the earth which is merely divided by a river. It was used to save a child who would go on to be God's instrument of redemption for His people while at the same time overseeing God's judgment on a different group of people. The person to be saved in this ark, Moses, will also usher in a new dispensation, that of Law.

And so we can see a contrast between the two accounts while at the same time they confirm God's sovereignty and His attentive care, both for and over the people of the world through the unfolding of His dispensational plan of the ages.

3 (con't) daubed it with asphalt and pitch,

The word for asphalt here is khemar and is used just three times. Once at the building of the tower of Babel in Genesis 11, once in Genesis 14 during a battle in the Valley of Siddim when Lot was taken captive, and once here. It is referring to a mineral pitch.

The other word for pitch is the Hebrew word zepheth. It's also used only three times, once here and twice in Isaiah 34:9. It is a vegetable pitch which was used in the embalming process. This tiny basket of rushes, is daubed with materials linked to death, but which are here intended to preserve life.

3 (con't) put the child in it, and laid it in the reeds by the river's bank.

Unlike how this story is often depicted, mom didn't plop the ark in the river and let it float away. Instead, she placed it in the reeds, probably hoping that they would keep it from floating away. The term for "the river's bank" in Hebrew is al sephat ha'yor - "at the lip of the river." It is an expressive way of showing the river is like a mouth with two lips.

The Geneva Bible says that she was "Committing him to the providence of God, whom she could not keep from the rage of the tyrant." There in the very river which the Pharaoh had purposed for the destruction of the Hebrew's male children, mom was purposing the safety of one of them, and God was purposing the deliverance of all of them.

4 And his sister stood afar off, to know what would be done to him.

This is Miriam who is the only recorded sister of Moses. After the exodus she will be called a prophetess as she sings of the Lord's deliverance from bondage. It is more than probable that while singing, she was reflecting on the day when she took her stand, and watched to see what would become of her little brother there in the reeds by the river.

Her song of deliverance at that time was with these words -

"Sing to the Lord,
For He has triumphed gloriously!
The horse and its rider
He has thrown into the sea!" Exodus 15:21

The Lord rescued Moses from the river through the house of Pharaoh and yet He later hurled Pharaoh's house into the sea. She was a witness to both magnanimous events. Matthew Henry sums up God's care of Moses there on the river in this eloquent fashion -

"Moses never had a stronger protection about him, no, not when all the Israelites were round his tent in the wilderness, than now, when he lay alone, a helpless babe upon the waves. No water, no Egyptian can hurt him. When we seem most neglected and forlorn, God is most present with us." Henry

God used an ark of reeds, Moses to save

And He used a boy named David to defeat the Philistine

With what may seem useless or weak, a grand road He can pave

And He can turn that which was once vile into something pristine

God has chosen the foolish things of the world

To put to shame those wise in their own sight

And He has chosen the weak things of the world

To put to shame the things which seem to have great might

And the base things of the world which seem rejected

And the things which are despised, objects of scorn

God has chosen these things, yes these He elected

Because through His Son, they have been reborn

II. Behold, the Baby Wept (verses 5 & 6)

5 Then the daughter of Pharaoh came down to bathe at the river.

* Who was the greatest female financier in the Bible? (Pharaoh's daughter. She went down to the bank of the Nile and drew out a little prophet.)

By the providence of God, the child was placed where the daughter of Pharaoh would come to and at the time that she would come. And even if it could be speculated that the mother knew of this as an ordinary custom or not, the Bible doesn't hint at it, thus showing us divine providence rather than human guidance.

The fact that the previous verse shows that the sister stood and watched to see what would come about shows that there was uncertainty as to how events would unfold. The word here for "bathe" is rakhats and means "to wash." Whether she was there to bathe, to have her servant bring water to wash her, or to be there as they washed their clothes isn't known. She simply came to wash.

5 (con't) And her maidens walked along the riverside;

This little section of verse appears to confirm that Pharaoh's daughter didn't actually go into the river. Maybe because of the possibility of a crocodile nibbling her up, or for some other reason, it appears that she remained further back and watched as her maidens either went and got water, or washed the clothes, or did whatever they were doing. While they were busy with that, the eyes of Pharaoh's daughter roamed the shoreline...

5 (con't) and when she saw the ark among the reeds, she sent her maid to get it.

The word for "maid" here, amah, is different than "maidens," or naar, that was just used. This would probably be her personal servant or slave while the others may have been friends of hers or household attendants.

Although there is nothing to indicate this, I would like to think this was a Hebrew. The imagery is too wonderful to not at least enjoy the thought. Whether a Hebrew or not, the one who would free the slaves of Egypt would himself be brought out of the waters by a slave.

6 And when she opened it, she saw the child, and behold, the baby wept.

Everything in God's good timing, even the tears of a baby in a basket. When the light shone into the once dark tomb of the ark, it caught the eyes of the child and stirred him to tears for the meal he was missing or the tender caress he desired. And nothing like a child's tender cry will rend the heart and soul of a young lady.

Hence the two possibilities for the midwife Puah's name from the first chapter are seen here. Her name, Puah, is believed by some to come from the word yapa, which means to shine or be beautiful, and so the name is given to be either Splendid or Light. However, it may also come from another word, pa'ah, found in Isaiah 42:12 which says -

“I have held My peace a long time,
I have been still and restrained Myself.
Now I will cry like a woman in labor,
I will pant and gasp at once. Isaiah 42:14

Because of this, her name would mean "one who cries out." There on the banks of the river, the light shined in and the child cried out. Thus we have a reason why the two midwives' names were included in the exodus story. Just as they were rewarded with their own households, so will the house of Amram be rewarded as well.

From him will come the household of the high priestly line of Aaron, and also the household of Moses, the great lawgiver.

6 (con't) So she had compassion on him, and said, "This is one of the Hebrews' children."

She would know for several reasons why this was a Hebrew child. The edict of casting the children into the river would make it obvious. Though not following the law directly, putting a baby in a basket and letting him go into the river would eventually have the same effect.

Another obvious way to tell he was a Hebrew would be to see the sign of circumcision. It was plainly evident to Pharaoh's daughter that the child was a Hebrew. But despite his ethnic origin, the Bible specifically mentions her feelings of compassion as an overriding reason to ignore her father's commands.

For a third time, the edict of Pharaoh has been overturned by events which stem from the edict itself. The irony is perfectly evident in each step of the process leading to the release of the captive people Israel.

In this story we see where Moses resembles Christ. Both were subject to death by a wicked ruler, Moses under Pharaoh and Jesus under Herod when he ordered all the male children to be killed in Bethlehem, but both were delivered in order to become deliverers.

Concerning the emotions of Pharaoh's daughter there on the banks of the Nile, the Pulpit commentary says, "One touch of nature makes the whole world kin." It is that common spark of humanity which has brought her to ignore her immediate family commands and to hold to the higher tie which binds.

The very place which should have been the final grave of Moses became the place which brought about the unfolding events of Israel's redemption. The same is true with Jesus. While the tomb should have been His final resting place, it turned out to be the very place by which we have a confirmation of our deliverance.

The little basket in which Moses was laid
Did its job and kept him safe from the water
Until the time when Pharaoh's daughter's maid
Took it from the river and gave it to Pharaoh's daughter

And when she opened it, the little baby did cry
And her heartstrings were tugged at the sight
She surely felt pity knowing the reason why
Such a beautiful baby was found in such a plight

But God knew what would happen on that day
And He watched over the baby until he was found
And so Moses' life would turn out in a marvelous way
This is the norm with God; His plan will always astound

III. He Who Draws Out (verses 7-10)

7 Then his sister said to Pharaoh's daughter, "Shall I go and call a nurse for you from the Hebrew women,

"Oh what an adorable baby! Did I hear you say it was a Hebrew child? Well aren't you an Egyptian? It's mother must have loved him very much to place him in a basket, and now she will never see him again. It's so sad! But if you'd like, I could find a Hebrew nurse for him and save you the trouble of finding someone else to nurse him. Would you like that? I'll do it. Poor, beautiful baby!"

Timing is everything and Miriam's timing was perfect. The baby is crying, the child needs milk, and Pharaoh's daughter's heartstrings have been tugged just enough to make any other option impossible.

7 (con't) that she may nurse the child for you?"

And the wording by the sister is perfectly calculated to endear the princess to the child even more. "I can go find a Hebrew to nurse the child for you. You're a mother now and your child needs attentive care. Look at it cry. Poor, beautiful baby."

She has successfully looked into the heart of the princess and then both anticipated her need and also shaped the outcome of the situation through her words. If Pharaoh's daughter was even a bit reticent to have the child, that was washed away like the sand in the Nile at the words of Moses' noble sister.

8 And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, "Go." So the maiden went and called the child's mother.

With her mind all made up, the suggestion is approved and the directive is given - leki, "Go." And so she went, straight back to her own mother, who by the way, is the child's own mother. No tale ever penned has exceeded the level of emotion or excitement which is seen in each character.

And no tale, true or imagined, has ever encompassed such ironic circumstances. Not only is the child rescued, but it is rescued back into the arms of the once mournful mother. And even more than that, there is an added bonus for the faithful actions she has displayed...

9 Then Pharaoh's daughter said to her, "Take this child away and nurse him for me, and I will give you your wages."

The natural mother will nurse her own child for his new adoptive mother. The added grace is that his new mother will be able to provide for him in a way that was almost beyond imagination. And even more, he will continue for a time to live in his own home of birth.

There he will begin to learn the culture and traditions of his family and his people. And even more than that, the home will be given wages for their efforts, which are really no efforts at all, but rather the greatest grace of God they could have ever imagined.

What Pharaoh intended for evil, God turn into good. And He did it in a manner that still leaves people of faith both smiling and praising Him for it 3500 years later.

9 (con't) So the woman took the child and nursed him.

Imagine the giggles around the dinner table. Imagine the joy of Miriam as she tickled her little brother, and imagine Aaron, just a few years old, enjoying his little brother and never realizing the amazing events which surrounded the home life he was a part of.

When all seems beyond hope, this is when God shows Himself the most marvelous to those who understand His acts of tender care. If we can remember this as we face even the most terrifying prospects of life, we will be able to handle them much more responsibly and with the faith that is most pleasing to Him.

These individual stories show us that He is never far away and that He is attentive to what is best at all times.

10 And the child grew, and she brought him to Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her son.

His age isn't given, but the boy eventually came to the age where it was time to enter into a new phase of life. It was probably between 2 and 3 years old. Whatever the age, he was old enough to know his own people and to have them firmly set in his heart and in his emotions. This will be seen as his life story continues to unfold.

At the appointed time, the mother once again gave up her son, but this time she did it knowing that he would live and prosper. The pain was certainly there, but no doubt there was also a sense of gratitude to God for being given the grace they had received towards their beautiful child.

10 (fin) So she called his name Moses, saying, "Because I drew him out of the water."

The name Moses is frustrating to scholars because it resembles both Egyptian and Hebrew words and they carry a variety of significations. The explanation for the name is given, and it at least provides a clue as to its meaning. "She called his name Moses" because she "drew him out of the water."

The phrase she uses is min ha'mayim meshitihu "out of the water I drew him." The Egyptian word for "son" is mesu, which sounds like "Moses," and she is claiming him as a son. However, the same word is derived from a verb which means to "produce" or to "draw forth."

And so in one sense, in her mind he is the son drawn forth from the water. This is the same meaning as the Hebrew word used in her exclamation which is mashah and means "to draw." But there is one more aspect to consider. The name Moses in Hebrew is mosheh and it is a masculine, singular, active participle, and so it means "He who draws out" instead of "He who was drawn out."

His name then isn't based on what she did so much as it is a play of words on what she did. Because she drew him out, he is the one who draws out. As an example, if a baby were born on a train, he might be nicknamed The Engineer. If a child was born while crossing a bridge, he might be called The Bridge Builder.

Moses is "He who draws out" and it is a perfect representation of the work he will do by bringing his people out of the bondage of Egypt. This same word, mashah, from which Moses is derived is used only two other times in the Bible. Both are from David in parallel psalms of praise.

In the 18th Psalm, speaking of the Lord, he uses the word which is a mirror reflection of the work of Moses, thus picturing the greater work of the Lord -

"He sent from above, He took me;
He drew me out of many waters.
17 He delivered me from my strong enemy,
From those who hated me,
For they were too strong for me.

18 They confronted me in the day of my calamity,
But the Lord was my support.

19 He also brought me out into a broad place;
He delivered me because He delighted in me." Psalm 18:16-19

From this point until many years later, nothing more is said of the life of Moses. Only in the New Testament do we get a taste of his upbringing while in the house of Pharaoh. In Acts 7:22, during Stephen's great speech to the high priest and the ruling council, he notes this about his great forefather -

"And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and deeds." Acts 7:22

The evidence of this education is found all over the writings of Moses. While all Scripture is inspired by God, He uses humans as the way conveying his word to us. The songs of Moses found in Exodus 15 and in Deuteronomy 32, as well as his blessing upon the tribes of Israel and the psalm he recorded, which is the 90th Psalm, all give insights into his knowledge of Egyptian literature.

In other portions of the Torah, his knowledge of particular weather conditions and locations indicate that he was versed in those aspects of Egyptian life as well. This marvelous beginning of the life of Moses will lead to a more marvelous life which is recorded in great detail.

He will come to be called a prophet of God, the most humble man who ever lived, Israel's human deliverer, and the man with whom the Lord spoke face to face. But it all had to start somewhere. The story of his birth shows us that great things can come out of the most trying of circumstances.

It also shows us that even out of the greatest of heartaches can come joy everlasting. God is in the business of doing the marvelous, but the display of His marvelous hand goes both ways. It can go towards us in grace, love, and fellowship, or it can go against us in wrath and judgment. The dividing line between the two is Jesus.

What we choose to do with Him will be the deciding factor in how God deals with us. And so, as I do each week, I'd like to ask for a moment to explain to you how you can become a friend of God and be the object of His affection and blessing because of the work of His Son, Jesus...

Closing Verse: The Lord is on my side;

I will not fear.

What can man do to me? Psalm 118:6

Next Week: Exodus 2:11-15 (Shunned By His Own) (4th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Moses

And a man of the house of Levi went by and by

And took as wife a daughter of Levi

So the woman conceived and a son she bore

And when she saw that he was a beautiful child

She hid him three months behind her door
Because Pharaoh's edict was cruel and wild

But when him she could no longer hide
She took an ark of bulrushes for him to fit
Daubed it with asphalt and pitch on the outside
And put the child inside of it

And laid it by the river's bank in the reeds
And his sister stood afar off
To know what would be done to him through these deeds

Then the daughter of Pharaoh came in stride
Down to bathe at the river, which is the Nile
And her maidens walked along the riverside
Where they had come to spend a while

And when she saw the ark among the reeds along the shore
She sent her maid to get it to see what was the score

And when she opened it, she saw the child
And behold, the baby wept just then
So she had compassion on him, her manner mild
And said, "This is one of the Hebrews' children

Then his sister to Pharaoh's daughter said
"Shall I go and call a nurse for you
From the Hebrew women that she may nurse instead
The child for you; shall this thing I do?

And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, "Go."
So the maiden went and called the child's mother as we know

Then Pharaoh's daughter said to her
"Take this child away and nurse him for me
And I will give you your wages for sure
So the woman took the child and nursed him tenderly

And the child grew, and she brought him
And he became the son of Pharaoh's daughter
So she called his name Moses, saying
"Because I drew him out of the water."

Sometimes the irony of the Bible story
Is so rich and wonderful to behold
God turns even the worst things out for His glory
And shows us treasures worth more than gold
When we see His mighty hand so displayed
We have a sure foundation on which to stand

Never should the faithful be fearful or dismayed
Because our God is glorious and His deeds are grand

Just when all seems lost and it's all out of control
That is the time when God's glory is most clearly seen
Away from us the troubles and trials He does roll
And He leads us into soft pastures, lush and green

O great God who does such marvelous things for us!
Precious Creator revealed in the pages of the word
You who came in flesh, our precious Lord Jesus
To You all praise is due, our wondrous, glorious Lord

To you we will praise and to you we will sing
Throughout all eternity, let our voices ring

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 2:11-15 (SHUNNED BY HIS OWN)

Introduction: Not everyone who is famous or wealthy was successful on their first attempt. History is replete with people who were rejected once or even many times before making their mark. One famous American of the 19th century went to war as a captain and returned home as a private - a rather sizable demotion.

After that, he failed as a businessman. He tried being a lawyer, but it's said that he was too impractical and temperamental to be successful at that. And so he did what many crummy lawyers do and he turned to politics where he was defeated in his first try for the legislature.

He was then defeated in his first attempt to be nominated for congress, defeated in his application to be commissioner of the General Land Office, defeated in the senatorial election of 1854, defeated in his efforts for the vice-presidency in 1856, and then defeated in the senatorial election of 1858.

At about that time, he wrote in a letter to a friend, "I am now the most miserable man living. If what I feel were equally distributed to the whole human family, there would not be one cheerful face on the earth." Such was the life of an obscure loser named Abraham Lincoln, until things turned the corner for him.

Each one of his steps ultimately led him, whether he knew it or not, one step closer to his eventual success. Being rejected then isn't the end of the story, nor does it indicate the fault is with the individual. Sometimes extenuating circumstances are involved.

This was the case with a man named Moses. He had a calling but he was rejected by those he was called to. And the rejection of Moses only pictures a greater rejection in human history. We're in church and there's a cross on the wall to remind us of that.

Text Verse: "He came to His own, and His own did not receive Him. 12 But as many as received Him, to them He gave the right to become children of God, to those who believe in His name: 13 who were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." 1 John 1:11-13

If you have faced, or if you are facing, rejection don't let it bring you down. Instead, look at it as an opportunity to do other things until you're recognized for the potential you possess. This is what Moses did, this is what Christ is doing, and this is what we should do as well.

In the end, it will all work out as it should. God has a plan and if you're in Christ, then you are a part of that plan. Be confident of this and stand firm on the promises which are given to You in His superior word. And let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. One of His Brethren (verses 11 & 12)

11 Now it came to pass in those days, when Moses was grown,

The preceding verse said, "And the child grew, and she brought him to Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her son. So she called his name Moses, saying, 'Because I drew him out of the water.'"

That was while Moses was still a young child, certainly no more than three and quite possibly even younger than that. In just one verse, the Bible has skipped over all of his adolescence and teenage years, stating that he is grown. And in fact, in the New Testament, Stephen, during his speech to the ruling council says that he was now 40 years old.

This means that a total of 37 years or more of the life of Moses are completely overlooked by the Bible. This is one of the many important clues found throughout Scripture that reminds us of the fact that God is not giving us a detailed record of history, but rather He is giving specific details recorded from history.

Time and time again, the focus is on specific occurrences which have been selected to reveal significant points in His redemptive plans. Because of the importance of people like Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, and so many others, one might think that detailed biographies about their lives would be appropriate.

But the Bible doesn't give them. Even in the life of Jesus, there is scant information about his childhood. Other than the time of His birth and very early childhood, there is only one recorded detail about His life at 12 years of age. After that, the next specific part of His life which is detailed came when He was about 30 years old.

By contemplating this, it makes the things that are recorded all the more special. The selected details show attentive care and call out to us to look over them carefully. Why God has so meticulously focused on the events then is what we should consider. What is it that He wants us to see, remember, and learn?

In the case of Moses, he is about to enter into a new part of life. He will go from the high position of being in Pharaoh's household to a life of considerable difficulty and uncertainty. Why he chose this path or why he didn't make his decision to take this avenue sooner isn't known, but it could be that the years of high life left a void in him which needed to be filled.

Solomon, writing in Ecclesiastes 2, spent many verses writing about all of the great things he accomplished through his skill and wisdom, but after this effort, he wrote these words -

"Then I looked on all the works that my hands had done
And on the labor in which I had toiled;
And indeed all was vanity and grasping for the wind.
There was no profit under the sun." Ecclesiastes 2:11

His conclusion concerning the vain existence we live under the sun is that life apart from God is useless and ultimately has no lasting point to it. It seems that Moses figured this out and desired to be a person of God and united with God's people. And this is what the author of Hebrews tell us -

"By faith Moses, when he became of age, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, 25 choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the passing pleasures of sin, 26 esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt; for he looked to the reward." Hebrews 11:24-26

In this time of learning and growth, Moses is not unlike Jesus. In Luke 2:52, before He revealed Himself to the people of Israel, it says this about Him -

"And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and men." Luke 2:52

Both had long periods of unrecorded life-events which molded them and shaped them for the work they would perform. And both of them were initially rejected by their own people. Eventually, Moses led his people out when they accepted his leadership. And someday Jesus will deliver Israel when they accept His.

And so to understand that precept, and what is about to occur in the coming passage, we should hear Stephen's word in Acts 7 that detail these same events. By seeing what he had to say about this portion of the life of Moses, we can then more properly comprehend what will transpire -

"And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and deeds.

23 "Now when he was forty years old, it came into his heart to visit his brethren, the children of Israel. 24 And seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended and avenged him who was oppressed, and struck down the Egyptian. 25 For he supposed that his brethren would have understood that God would deliver them by his hand, but they did not understand. 26 And the next day he appeared to two of them as they were fighting, and tried to reconcile them, saying, 'Men, you are brethren; why do you wrong one another?' 27 But he who did his neighbor wrong pushed him away, saying, 'Who made you a ruler and a judge over us? 28 Do you want to kill me as you did the Egyptian yesterday?' 29 Then, at this saying, Moses fled and became a dweller in the land of Midian, where he had two sons." Acts 7:22-29

As Stephen said, Moses was "mighty in words and deeds." It is an exacting comparison to Jesus. In Luke 24:19, while talking along the road to Emmaus, the men said that Jesus "was a Prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people." Despite this, both men were rejected by their nation.

Moses fled to Midian in order to continue being prepared for freeing his people, and Jesus ascended into heaven until the times of refreshing would come to pass. Knowing these things in advance, we can then more clearly sort out what lies ahead.

11 (con't) that he went out to his brethren and looked at their burdens.

Moses is a man of forty years who has dwelt the majority of his life in the grand halls of Pharaoh's courts, and yet he still has a heart for the people of his ethnic origin. Whether his adoptive mother openly shared his birth status with him or not, he had the short time with his true mother to instill in him who he was and who his people were.

He was with her until he was weaned and that would have been enough to ensure the bond needed to soften his heart towards his own people. As a wise person once said, "No throne in the universe is so potent as the mother's knee for good or evil." The knees on which he was dandled, and the milk that nurtured him as he developed, were permanently ingrained on his young mind.

And so ingrained with this indelible mark, it says "that he went out to his brethren and looked at their burdens." It is the first recorded sign of his affection for his people, but it was only an outward reflection of a reality that had been with him all along. Throughout the rest of his life, the bond would only grow stronger.

Even when they came to the point of the most absurd rebellion against their God, he would continue to speak for them and put himself in harm's way for their sake. At the time when they made a golden calf to worship, Moses stepped forward on their behalf and said this in Exodus 32:30-32 -

“You have committed a great sin. So now I will go up to the Lord; perhaps I can make atonement for your sin.” 31 Then Moses returned to the Lord and said, “Oh, these people have committed a great sin, and have made for themselves a god of gold! 32 Yet now, if You will forgive their sin—but if not, I pray, blot me out of Your book which You have written.”

Moses always held fast to his people, never forsaking them even when he was offered his own dynasty in their place. In this, he reflects Christ Jesus who loves His people Israel with an undying love, even despite their rebellion and rejection of Him.

Here in verse 11, the word siblah is used to describe their burdens. It is the second of only six times it will be used in Scripture. All are in the first six chapters of Exodus and it is the same word first used to describe their burdens in verse 1:11.

In other words, this unusual bondage and load placed upon the Hebrews has been on-going since more than forty years earlier. During all of that time, Moses has been free of the afflictions. Instead, he lived in Pharaoh's house, looking at his people from a distance. Now he has come to attend to their burdens.

In this, he again represents Christ who from eternity past dwelt in the Great House, heaven, and who left the riches and glories of that most noble abode to come and dwell among us. Because the duration is known from the New Testament, that of forty years, it is right to determine what the significance of the number forty is.

From his book, Number in Scripture, EW Bullinger says that forty is associated, "with a period of probation, trial, and chastisement." He further refines it to be a "chastisement of sons, and of a covenant people."

Understanding this, we can see that Moses' heart has been turned toward his people at this time in hopes of ending their time of chastisement. However, we will see as we continue that they will reject his advances and thus their probation will continue for another forty years. And so it was with Christ and Israel. And so they continue on to this day awaiting their final deliverance.

11 (con't) And he saw an Egyptian beating a Hebrew, one of his brethren.

Referring back to the speech of Stephen, we read his words about this account, "And seeing one of them suffer wrong," Acts 7:24

In other words, this beating wasn't justified, but rather it is was a malicious and spiteful beating. It is believed that the taskmasters' rods were made of a tough and yet pliant type of wood that was actually imported from Syria. It would have been a painful experience to be beaten with one.

And to further highlight Moses' reason for a response, we are again told that this was "one of his brethren." But even more, he is called "a Hebrew, one of his brethren." The bond is one which is deeply ingrained in him as a man. He is one of the people of God. The last time the term Hebrew was used was in the story of his nativity. There it was used twice. Here is what it said -

"Then the daughter of Pharaoh came down to bathe at the river. And her maidens walked along the riverside; and when she saw the ark among the reeds, she sent her maid to get it. 6 And when she opened it, she saw the child, and behold, the baby wept. So she had compassion on him, and said, 'This is one of the Hebrews' children.'

7 Then his sister said to Pharaoh's daughter, 'Shall I go and call a nurse for you from the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for you?'"
Exodus 2:5-7

He was identified with his people then, and he is identified with his people now. Why is it important to know this? The answer is that this term, Hebrew or ivri, is used only 34 times in the Old Testament and 14 of them are in the book of Exodus, more than any other book in the Bible. Only 1 Samuel comes close and that is with 8 occurrences.

Moses and the book of Exodus are being used to highlight the uniqueness of this group of people and the bond that should exist between them. The Hebrew people look to Abraham as their great father, they look to Jacob, who is Israel, as their family patriarch because all of the tribes descend from him. But they look to the exodus account and to Moses as their great redeemer and prophet.

It is for this reason that the uniting bond among them is that they are Hebrews, not just Israelites. They are people of God who have crossed over, as the term "Hebrew" implies.

12 So he looked this way and that way,

These words are given to show us that what will occur is not a heated rage or an impetuous act. Rather, Moses took thoughtful consideration to stop and review his surroundings in order to ensure that what he would do would be unnoticed.

12 (con't) and when he saw no one, he killed the Egyptian

After looking around, he took an action which is either glossed over by Jewish commentators, or is hailed by them as a heroic or even patriotic act. At the same time, most Christian commentators term it "impetuous," "wrongful," "undisciplined," and so on. With only a few exceptions, they find it to be unjustifiable.

And yet, from the context of Stephen's words to the ruling council in Acts 7, it appears to be an act of faith. There Stephen says -

"For he supposed that his brethren would have understood that God would deliver them by his hand, but they did not understand." Acts 7:25

Stephen seems to suggest that Moses knew he would be used of God to deliver the Hebrews from their bondage. He was a Hebrew raised in Pharaoh's palace and so if for no other reason, he could logically believe that he had been spared from the river and raised in the wisdom of Egypt for this very purpose.

In fact, just prior to the exodus, the Lord will say this to Pharaoh concerning his own position and status -

"But indeed for this purpose I have raised you up, that I may show My power in you, and that My name may be declared in all the earth."

Exodus 9:16

Moses understood that time, place, and position were gifts of God to be used for God's purposes, and which God uses in us for His own purposes. Because the Bible records that he took the time to look around first, it indicates his belief that he was doing the right thing in his attempt to rescue his Hebrew brother.

Regardless of this, it became an act which would involve the complete severance of his ties with Egypt and also a lengthy severance from His Hebrew people as well. And yet, the time would be used by God to further mold him in preparation for his coming role and it would also allow for the continuance of God's mercy upon the people of Canaan.

In Genesis 15, the Lord spoke these words to Abraham -

Then He said to Abram: "Know certainly that your descendants will be strangers in a land that is not theirs, and will serve them, and they will afflict them four hundred years. 14 And also the nation whom they serve I will judge; afterward they shall come out with great possessions. 15 Now as for you, you shall go to your fathers in peace; you shall be buried at a good old age. 16 But in the fourth generation they shall return here, for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet complete." Genesis 15:13-15

The Hebrews were not ready to be delivered, and God was not yet ready to judge the Amorites. Everything is timed according to God's plan and if we can remember this, then we can trust that all of the things we don't understand are still being handled exactly as they should be by Him.

The word for "sand" is khol. In the Bible, with a few exceptions, it is used as a simile which equates the sand with a great multitude of people, such as "like the sand of the seashore." The genuine nature of these words, "and hid him in the sand" show that Moses was certainly the author of this account.

If anyone else had written this, they would have said that he "buried him in the ground" or that he "dug a hole and placed him there." But the words "in the sand" show a personal knowledge of the area where it occurred, including the type of ground - that of sand. It's little details like this that show us the authenticity of what we are looking at.

I have come to rescue you from the bondage you face

Chosen by God, I will lead you out

No longer will you languish in this place
But you shall leave with a triumphant shout

I have stepped down from a great place to meet you here
And have joined Myself to you as your Hebrew Brother
Trust in Me and have no fear
We are of the same blood and are joined to one another

The time of your redemption is surely at hand
I will lead you out of this woe-filled land

II. Who Made You a Prince and a Judge Over Us (verses 13 & 14)

13 And when he went out the second day, behold, two Hebrew men were fighting,

The NKJV translated this just right when they said "the second day." Many translators simply say "the next day." But the term is b'yom ha'shnei "on day the second." What might seem rather unimportant actually isn't. The reason is that there is another term which can mean the same thing, mimakhorat - "on the morrow."

Moses uses both of them in his writings, even in Exodus, and so there must be a reason why he chooses them as he does. In this verse, right after saying "the second day" he next says that v'hinne shnei anashim ivrim nissim - "behold two men, Hebrews, disputed together."

There is in this the indication that we are to focus on the number two because it is listed twice in this specific manner. And so we go to Bullinger to see the meaning that we are asked to not miss -

Two affirms that there is a difference, there is another; while One affirms that there is not another! This difference may be for good or for evil. A thing may differ from evil, and be good; or it may differ from good, and be evil. Hence, the number Two takes a two-fold colouring, according to the context. It is the first number by which we can divide another, and therefore in all its uses we may trace this fundamental idea of division or difference. The two may be, though different in character, yet one as to testimony and friendship. The Second that comes in may be for help and deliverance. But, alas! where man is concerned, this number testifies of his fall, for it more often denotes that difference which implies opposition, enmity, and oppression.*

In what took a few words, Bullinger shows that concerning the number two, there is a contrast of things, and yet there is a confirmation between them. For example, there are two testaments in the Bible - the Old and the New. They contrast - law and grace, and yet they confirm the totality of the word of God.

There are two natures to Christ, they contrast - Man and God, and yet they confirm the incarnation. One day has daytime and nighttime. They contrast - darkness and light, and yet they confirm a day's duration. Moses is asking us to look at the two accounts and determine a contrast between them while still confirming the message. And so when the thought is finished, we will do that.

13 (con't) and he said to the one who did the wrong, "Why are you striking your companion?"

Instead of "the one who did the wrong" the Hebrew here actually says la'rasha - "the wicked one." Most translators use the Greek translation which says adikounti - "the one who did wrong." But the Hebrew is trying to show us the contrast through its choice of words. It is an evil act in Moses' eyes.

It is because of this evil act, one Hebrew fighting another, that he steps in and asks "Why are you striking your companion?" Moses is simply trying to get them to think the issue through properly and to contemplate the bonding principles of unity and justice.

In unity, he tells them that they are brethren. And in justice, he shows them that evil towards one another can only disrupt their unity. It is his first attempt to wake them up to the realization that these forces are needed in order to cast off the greater burden they suffer under Pharaoh.

And yet they take offense at what he says. He thought that his words would lead to their liberation, but in his zeal for his people Moses has left out the key and principle factor in their deliverance. He has left out the God whose name they bear.

In this entire chapter, the word "God" or "Lord" is never used until the very last paragraph and then it is used five times. Eventually, when he is ready to lead his people, it is the name of the Lord that he will give them to show that he has been chosen to bring them out of Egypt.

14 Then he said, "Who made you a prince and a judge over us?"

Moses resided in the Great House, that of Pharaoh. At the same time, the Hebrews suffered in bondage. Moses stepped down from his exalted position to come and teach them a better way. Further, he intended to bring them out of the bondage they were in, and yet they rejected his claim by asking "Who made you a prince and a judge over us?"

If we simply substitute a couple names and words in that paragraph, we can see the connection to Christ: "Jesus resided in the Great House, that of heaven. At the same time, Israel suffered in bondage. Jesus stepped down from his exalted position to come and teach them a better way. Further, he intended to bring them out of the bondage they were in, and yet they rejected His claim by asking "Who made you a prince and a judge over us?"

In this story, we're being asked to see the work of Christ.

14 (con't) Do you intend to kill me as you killed the Egyptian?"

If Moses is the picture of Christ, and the Hebrews in Egypt picture the nation of Israel, then Egypt must picture the work of the devil - sin in a world of sin. In each person who comes to Christ, the devil is defeated. The individual Egyptian was killed by Moses for an individual Hebrew, but now the word has gotten out by the person who was saved that Moses is the one who saved him.

However, instead of seeing the deliverance from the Egyptian, they see a ruler whose authority they don't recognize. Again, it is a picture of the work of Christ. And thus, in the book of Revelation, Jesus uses these words concerning those Jews who rejected His authority during the church age -

"I know your works, tribulation, and poverty (but you are rich); and I know the blasphemy of those who say they are Jews and are not, but are a synagogue of Satan." Revelation 2:9

The Hebrews chose continued bondage in Egypt over freedom at Moses' hand. The Jews of Jesus' time chose continued bondage in sin over freedom at the work of Christ.

14 (con't) So Moses feared and said, "Surely this thing is known!"

In order to set up a continuing parallel between the work of Christ and the life of Moses, we are shown why Moses will flee from His people and from the land of Egypt. His good deed towards his fellow Hebrews has been taken in an ill light. And not only that, it has become generally known as well.

The Hebrews weren't ready to accept Moses as their leader and Israel at Christ's first advent was not yet ready to receive Jesus either. But the thing that Moses did was known and couldn't be hidden. Likewise, what Christ did was known. It was something that couldn't be hidden.

Now that we're finished with this second section, we need to take a moment and see the contrast between the accounts in the first two sections. In the first, an Egyptian is beating a Hebrew and Moses took action necessary to save him. He slew the enemy and rescued his fellow countryman. It was a positive action towards one of God's chosen people.

And it had to be received as such because the matter became known. The Bible says that Moses looked this way and that which means that nobody else knew what occurred, and yet the saved person told the good news of his deliverance. It is reflective, for example, of the deaf mute who was healed in Mark 7:36 -

"Then He commanded them that they should tell no one; but the more He commanded them, the more widely they proclaimed it." Mark 7:36

On the second day, two Hebrews were fighting and the offender is described as la'rasha - the wicked one. But instead of being received favorably, the wicked offender turns on him. It is reflective those Jews of Jesus' time who laid burdens on their own people and afflicted them and yet turned and questioned Jesus' authority, which was clearly evident by his actions.

The two contrast in what occurs and yet they confirm that Moses' actions were intended for good towards his countrymen. What has occurred is an excellent picture of the work of Christ towards His people, and yet also the hostility displayed towards Him by the wicked of the people, just as the gospels record.

I have come to set the captive free
And yet you fight among each other?
Look to My example and come, follow Me
Do not be oppressive towards your brother

Who made You a prince and a judge over us?
We don't recognize Your authority at all
Who do You think You are Mr. Jesus?
We are God's people and only to Him will we call
Surely if God were your Father
You would listen to Me, for Me He sent
But there are others who will listen
If you don't want Me, then to them I will be sent

III. The Place of Judgment (verse 15)

15 When Pharaoh heard of this matter, he sought to kill Moses.

It has to be remembered that what Pharaoh pictures here isn't the same as what Pharaoh pictured during Joseph's reign. In chapter 1, it said this about the new dynasty of Pharaoh, "Now there arose a new king over Egypt, who did not know Joseph" (Exodus 1:8). This Pharaoh then is set in contrast to the Pharaoh of Joseph's time.

Jesus came from heaven and he was raised by His Hebrew family, but He was also raised in this fallen world. The king of this world at Jesus' coming was Satan. That is confirmed in Luke 4 where it says -

"All this authority I will give You, and their glory; for this has been delivered to me, and I give it to whomever I wish." Luke 4:6

Upon Jesus' rejection by His people they sought out to kill Him and they accomplished that. But death couldn't hold Him. And so the pattern still rings true. The ruler of this world did seek to kill Jesus, just as Pharaoh sought out to kill Moses.

There is the historical record of Moses' life, and there is the pattern that it is showing us in the work of Christ. It's exciting to see these things. It allows us to know that the plan is still being worked out.

15 (con't) But Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh and dwelt in the land of Midian;

As all Scripture is God-breathed and because complimentary passages may show things from a slightly different perspective, we should go back and see Stephen's words about this verse. There in Acts 7 he states it this way -

"But he who did his neighbor wrong pushed him away, saying, 'Who made you a ruler and a judge over us? 28 Do you want to kill me as you did the Egyptian yesterday?' 29 Then, at this saying, Moses fled and became a dweller in the land of Midian..." Acts 7:27-29

In Stephen's words, it shows that Moses fled "at this saying," meaning at what the Hebrews said to Him. In this then, the integrity of the picture of Christ is upheld. He was rejected by His own and thus the kingdom was not ushered in at that time, something that would have otherwise happened.

In other words, both accounts, though stated a bit differently, confirm the work of Christ beautifully. But Christ didn't actually flee from anything in the sense of fearing. The word used by Moses for "fled" is barakh, a verb which carries the "basic meaning of 'going through'" (HAW).

The same word in Greek used by Stephen means to flee, but its use can include fleeing by "shunning something," such as in "fleeing from idolatry." And the Greek of this verse in the Old Testament apo, is simply the word "from." In other words, there is nothing here that would speak against picturing the work of Christ and everything to speak for it.

In his move from Egypt, Moses is said to have dwelt in the land of Midian. The term for "dwelt" is v'yeshev or "and sat." It is an idiom which means the place where one dwells. The name Midian means "Place of Judgment" and thus it is an exact picture of the work of Christ who departed from His kinsman of the flesh, meaning the Jews, and went to preside over the Gentiles where He sits in His place of judgment.

This is perfectly summed up in the words of Hebrews 10 -

"But this Man, after He had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down at the right hand of God, 13 from that time waiting till His enemies are made His footstool." Hebrews 10:12

Moses' life was sought by those who hated him and he passed through to a Gentile location called the Place of Judgment until he would be called to subdue his enemies in the years ahead.

In like fashion, Christ's life was sought by those who hated Him, but He passed through from the Hebrews to the Gentiles and is now at the right hand of God, the place of judgment, until His enemies are made His footstool.

And to finish out our verses today, we see one more short thought which seems almost curious to be affixed to the verse as it is. And yet it completes the picture of Christ's work in this passage...

15 (fin) and he sat down by a well.

Unfortunately, out of the 20 versions of the Bible that I checked for this sermon, only two were correct. The Hebrew says that he sat down by "the well" ha'beer, not "a well." A third version at least said a "certain" well to show more than just any well. The definite pronoun is not a mistake. It is given to show us something specific.

And again it says "and sat." Moses "sat" or "dwelt" by the well. Each time a well was introduced throughout the book of Genesis, it generally pictured an outpouring of the Spirit. The pattern follows here. It is the Gentile-led church of which Christ is the Head, which has received His Spirit during this dispensation.

Moses dwelt, or sat down, by "the well" making an exact picture of Christ. We are granted His Spirit because His work is complete for us. The fact that Stephen used this entire account in his speech shows that he was equating it directly with the work of Christ whom He was speaking of as he addressed Israel's leaders. But they couldn't see what your eyes are being opened to.

Moses was rewarded several times with accounts from his life being recorded in Hebrews 11, the Hall of Fame of Faith. This passage today is one of them. And the reason why is because he so perfectly mirrored the faithful work of Christ. Here is what Hebrews says -

"By faith Moses, when he became of age, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, 25 choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the passing pleasures of sin, 26 esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt; for he looked to the reward." Hebrews 11:24-26

Satan tempted Christ and He refused to be called into that unholy house. Instead, He chose to suffer affliction with and for the people of God rather than to fall into the same trap that Adam fell into. Christ esteemed the greater riches of heaven and the honoring of His Father more than all of the world's riches. Just like Moses, Christ looked to the reward.

Now we have a chance and a choice. We can look to the reward and we can receive the crown of life because of the work of Christ. He prevailed over the devil and He alone can lead us out of the bondage of Egypt, the world of sin, and bring us to the holy Promised Land.

I would hope that you have called on Him and received Him as Lord. If you have, you are eternally saved by His work. You have been redeemed from the land of bondage and are God's child by adoption. However, if you haven't yet called on Christ, please let me tell you how you can...

Closing Verse: Repent therefore and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, so that times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord, 20 and that He may send Jesus Christ, who was preached to you before, 21 whom heaven must receive until the times of restoration of all things, which God has spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began. Acts 3:19-21

Next Week: Exodus 2:16-25 (Seven Daughters Drawing Water From the Well) (5th Exodus Sermon)

Having travelled to all 50 state capitols, I can tell you that the man who was continually shown to be a failure in his earlier years, Abraham Lincoln, is honored in statues and paintings more than any other president in our history. Even if you've faced continual failure in your own life, there is still the possibility for you to become great. Trust the Lord and let Him use you for such greatness.

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Shunned by His Own

Now it came to pass in those days
When Moses was grown
That he went out to his brethren
And looked at their burdens, to his eyes they were shown

And he saw an Egyptian beating a Hebrew
One of his brethren as he knew

So he looked this way and that way
And when he saw no one
The Egyptian he did slay
And hid him in the sand, covering what he had done

And when he went out the second day
Behold, two Hebrew men were fighting
And to the one who did the wrong he did say “Why are you your companion striking?

Then he asked inquisitively
“Who made you over us a prince and a judge?
Do you intend to kill me
As you killed the Egyptian? Do you bear me a grudge?

So Moses feared and said
"Surely this thing is known!
This thing about the dead

When Pharaoh of this matter heard
He sought to kill Moses in that place
But as we are told in the word
Moses fled from Pharaoh's face

And dwelt in Midian's land
And he sat down by a well as we understand

Like many great men before Him recorded in the word
Moses is now used as the Bible's central figure
In order to give us portraits of Jesus the Lord
And the great works He wrought are seen in each picture

And as we see in this story once again
There are those who fight against what God has planned
They reject His authority and against Him complain
And yet He still reaches out His loving hand

Let us not reject His kind offer of grace
But instead let us accept what is recorded in His word

He offers us a new home in a heavenly place

If we will just call out to Jesus as Lord

And so let us receive Jesus Christ and be reconciled to God

So that for all eternity in His glorious presence we will trod

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 2:16-25

(SEVEN DAUGHTERS DRAWING WATER FROM THE WELL)

Introduction: Curious stories seem to pop up among other curious stories. Today's verses show one of them, don't they. In a period which spans forty years of Moses' life, just seven verses are given. After that, three more verses are provided to take us right back to the plight of the Israelites in the land of Egypt - ten verses in all.

One has to ask, "What is so important about these seven verses in comparison to all of the other things that must have happened during those forty years?" Why is this single event recorded? The answer is, as always, because God wants us to see pictures of other things in redemptive history and to understand that His plan is precise and preplanned.

To me, that's the most comforting thing about knowing the Lord. If He has everything already planned as to how it will come out, then He must know how things will turn out for me as well. And if His word says that because of Jesus, I'm included in the good things to come, then what an absolutely satisfying feeling that is.

If we see our name is listed in the will of a rich family member, it gives us something to look forward to with anticipation. Not anticipation that the person will die. But rather that death is inevitable, that they are old and will inevitably die, and that we have an inheritance which will come from that inevitable situation.

Paul tells us in Ephesians 1 that in Christ we have an eternal inheritance in store for us. He goes on to say that we even have a guarantee of that inheritance, which is the sealing of the Holy Spirit. It is the surest guarantee that could ever be given.

Unlike an earthly inheritance which could be lost before we receive it, or which may never come to us because we get run over by a car first, nothing in heaven or on earth can separate us from the inheritance we have coming because of our faith in Christ.

These stories which show us pictures of God's plan are especially wonderful to understand because they remind us that the future is set. We have a sure path to glory and it is all because of the work of Jesus Christ. What a great feeling that should leave us with.

Text Verse: "Whoever drinks of this water will thirst again, 14 but whoever drinks of the water that I shall give him will never thirst. But the water that I shall give him will become in him a fountain of water springing up into everlasting life."
John 4:13, 14

Everlasting life. We can't even imagine what that will be like. Now, we get tired and we grow old. Things are temporary and more often than not, they bring us as much pain as they do pleasure. We might enjoy our pets, but when they die, we suffer through the loss.

We might have a car that we are crazy about, but when it gets a spot of rust or a dent, we tend to lose heart and get frustrated over it. Everything wears out, runs down, or fades in the bright sun. But Jesus promises us a fountain of water that will refresh us for all eternity. This is offered to those who call on Him.

It is He who waters His flock. A small picture of that is seen in today's verses. It's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Father's Flock (verses 16 & 17)

In the last short account, Moses set out to join with his Hebrew brethren and to deliver them from bondage, going so far as killing an Egyptian in order to rescue one of them. However, when he came to two others fighting the next day, they rejected his attempt to reconcile them and they rejected his authority over them.

Because of this, and because the word had gotten out that he killed the Egyptian, he fled from the face of Pharaoh. The last verse looked at said, "But Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh and dwelt in the land of Midian; and he sat down by a well."

We saw that it all pointed to the first advent of Christ and His appearing to His own people, but He was rejected by them. From there He went to the Gentiles. And this is where we start today...

16 Now the priest of Midian had seven daughters.

The "Priest of Midian" is the term kohen midyan. As we saw last week, Midian means "Place of Judgment." The term kohen actually has two meanings. It means "priest" but it also means "prince." And thus, this person is probably a man similar to Melchizedek who was seen in Genesis 14.

He would then fulfill the dual role of prince and priest. However, most translators simply call him a "priest" because he, or one of his descendants, is noted as performing priestly functions later in Exodus 18 where it says he "took a burnt offering and other sacrifices to offer to God." (v. 12)

This person is likely a descendant of Abraham, born to his ancestor Midian who was born to Abraham's concubine Keturah. This is recorded in Genesis 25:1, 2 -

"Abraham again took a wife, and her name was Keturah. 2 And she bore him Zimran, Jokshan, Medan, Midian, Ishbak, and Shuah." Genesis 25:1, 2

As a descendant of Abraham, he may have carried on the traditions of his father and been a priest and worshipper of the true God. There is no reason to think otherwise, especially because of his prominence in the life of Moses.

God directed Moses' feet to this particular well where a seemingly chance encounter would take place which is actually not at all by chance. This priest of Midian is said to have seven daughters. Saying that may seem like an unnecessary addition unless it is trying to show us a picture of something else.

If not, it could have left the number seven out and not changed anything. Why are the seven daughters mentioned so specifically and right at his introduction, even before his own name is given?

16 (con't) And they came and drew water,

The seven daughters are all out together, thus setting up the story in a specific direction. They have stuck together and have come to the well together. The word for "drew" is dalah. It's used only five times in the Bible and 3 are in this chapter. Also it's used once in the Psalms and once in Proverbs.

It means "to dangle" which then leads to the thought of letting down a bucket which would be for drawing out water. And so figuratively it would mean to "deliver." This is the use of it in the 30th Psalm where it says -

"I will extol You, O Lord, for You have lifted me up,
And have not let my foes rejoice over me." Psalm 30:1

The only other time it's used is in Proverbs 20:5 -

"Counsel in the heart of man is like deep water,
But a man of understanding will draw it out." Proverbs 20:5

These girls have come to draw water from the well. It is a scene wholly reminiscent of the accounts of Rebekah and of Rachel, both of whom came to wells to draw water at the time of chance meetings which brought them to their future husbands. And yet, neither was chance and both were used to picture the work of Christ, just as this passage will as well.

16 (con't) and they filled the troughs to water their father's flock.

After drawing, they use the water to fill the troughs of their father's flocks. Another interesting word to look at is the word for "troughs." It is rahat. It was used twice in Genesis 30 when Jacob peeled rods of trees and placed them in watering troughs for the flocks to mate in front of.

All of that account pictured the work of Christ. The word is used again here and only one other time, in the Song of Solomon -

"Your head crowns you like Mount Carmel,
And the hair of your head is like purple;
A king is held captive by your tresses." Song of Solomon 7:5

It might seem unusual to say that locks of hair are like a gutter used for watering animals, but the idea is that the beloved's hair was flowing down like water, even like ringlets. And who doesn't love the look of flowing hair on a beautiful young lady!

There is nothing to suggest that this account isn't true. Rachel tended Laban's flocks and even into modern times, a man named Burckhardt notes that the unmarried daughters of Bedouins have been the ones to tend to the flocks of the family. In this case, they are tending to the flocks of their father.

17 Then the shepherds came and drove them away;

Adam Clarke notes that the verb used here for "drove them" is the word yegareshum which is in the masculine gender and it therefore implies that the shepherds drove away the flocks of the daughters, not the daughters themselves.

This is certainly the case. The daughters took the time to fill the troughs and once the work was done, the worthless shepherds proceeded to drive away the animals in order to benefit from the hard work of those who came before them. What is this telling us?

First, it tells us that the priesthood of their father was not held in any esteem by them. If it were, they would have been considerate to them. Secondly, it showed a desire to profit off the work of another and to use it for their own benefit by directing it towards their personal flocks.

And finally, we will see that this was not uncommon. In the coming verse, their father will be surprised at their early return which means that this was a common occurrence which they had simply put up with and kept silent about in the past.

17 (con't) but Moses stood up and helped them, and watered their flock.

The last time Moses was mentioned was in the last sermon. It said in verse 15 that "he sat down by a well." Now it says he "stood up." The account is showing action on behalf of the daughters and thus for the flock.

But again, we need to ask why. Why the descriptive words when it could have simply said "but Moses helped them." A picture is being given and we are being asked to reflect on what it is. Moses personally intervened and "watered their flock."

The story is so remarkably similar to what happened in Genesis 29 that it cannot go without note. That is the account of when Jacob met Rachel. At that time Jacob pictured Christ, now Moses fills that role. Moses is watering the flock of the priest of Midian, a man who is an upright Gentile seeking the one true God.

It should be noted that when Moses lived in Egypt, he lived as a royal in the royal and Great House of Pharaoh. He left that position and went to dwell among his own, but his own did not receive him. And so he instead went to the land of the Gentiles. He has found an opportunity now to be a servant and he has prevailed in that task. Does this sound like any other figure you may be aware of?

The father has seven daughters

Who tend to his flock, watching over His sheep

They are to pass to them the well's healing waters

And to bring out for them the Bible's mysteries deep

But there are other shepherds who would chase the sheep away

And disturb their peaceful lives, leading them astray

Yet the Lord is there to watch with tender care
And will carefully water the flock, all who are His own
And when He sees any danger there
To the false shepherds His anger will be shown

II. In Drawing He Drew (verses 18 & 19)

18 When they came to Reuel their father,

The father's name is finally given, Reuel, which means "Friend of God." As a connection back to Abraham, we read this in James -

"And the Scripture was fulfilled which says, 'Abraham believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness.' And he was called the friend of God." James 2:23

The name Reuel, or Friend of God, ties him back to his great ancestor, Abraham. And he, like Abraham, is living in faith towards this true God, seeking to be His friend. As an added squiggle for your brain, the fantasy author JRR Tolkien is partially named after this guy. His full name is John Ronald Reuel Tolkien.

18 (con't) he said, "How is it that you have come so soon today?"

In this statement of surprise, we can see that the actions of the unruly shepherds were common. But we can also see that the daughters kept the matter quiet, not troubling their father with it in the past. They simply allowed others to push them out of the way and then they watered their flocks and headed back home.

19 And they said, “An Egyptian delivered us from the hand of the shepherds,

The daughters probably thought he was an Egyptian either by his clothes or his speech and so the shepherds would have seen this as well. The fact that Moses records their words is a sound indication that he is the true author. Someone else would have just called him a stranger or a foreigner.

There could be several reasons why he was able to overcome more than one shepherd. The first is that he wouldn't be expected to be alone. It would seem improbable that an Egyptian would have travelled all this way by himself.

Another reason is because of the mere boldness in his demeanor, they may have been wary of him. Moses certainly had physical training in his years in Egypt and probably carried himself in a manner which reflected that. Whether for one of these reasons or another, he prevailed and was able to run off the offenders until the flocks were fully tended to.

19 (con't) and he also drew enough water for us and watered the flock.”

This is another hint that Moses is certainly the author of the account. The fact that he tells that he drew more water shows that the other flocks had already been moved in and had started drinking the water that wasn't for them.

In this, the final two uses of the word for "drew" in this chapter are used. In Hebrew it says v'gam daloh dalah lanu - "and also in drawing he drew for us." It is an expression which shows that he drew abundantly and zealously for them.

It's interesting that the man named Moses, which means "He who draws out," is shown to do so in the story and to do so in a manner of diligently drawing. The flocks were given an abundance, right from the hand of Moses. All of this allowed them to return home earlier than normal.

20 So he said to his daughters, "And where is he?"

Reuel here asks what would be an obvious question, "And where is he?" In modern language, it would surely have been preceded by the elongated "Hellooooooo. This guy has put himself out for you and you have done nothing in return!"

Having heard the story that one man defended against a number of shepherds, he knew him to be trustworthy. If he wasn't, what would he have done? He would have chased off the shepherds and then gone about violating the girls. Because they came home unscathed, he knew he was dealing with a man of integrity.

20 (con't) Why is it that you have left the man?

And if a man of integrity, then a man who was not to be left unwelcomed into his own home. As he could figure this out, he was curious as to why the daughters, all seven of them, couldn't. Why would someone be practically at the door and not welcomed into it. His words show that what is right and proper is to open the door and allow him in.

20 (con't) Call him, that he may eat bread."

The term "that he may eat bread" means more than just bread. The intent is that he be brought in to be entertained and have a meal. We would say, "so that he can dine with us." The word "bread" is substituted for the entire process of dining. He defended them, so now he instructs them to call out for him.

Where is the Man who defends the daughters?

Why haven't you brought Him home with You?

He has passed out the life-healing waters

Surely this one is Faithful and True

Bring Him into your home, don't leave Him outside the door

Because when you invite Him in, He will protect you forevermore

And then tell others of the great things He's done

Don't keep it a secret or hide the word away

Be sure to let the world know of God's glorious Son

That He has saved and will come again for us someday

III. A Bride and a Son (verses 21 & 22)

21 Then Moses was content to live with the man,

It's obvious that Reuel found Moses to be a decent guy, just as he expected after hearing his daughters' words. At some point he welcomed him into his home on a permanent basis. From this, it appears that Israel's deliverer was set on a new and permanent course that led away from them.

Would he be the deliverer of these seven daughters only? At this point in time, it must have seemed like it to Israel. It will be a full forty years until he will be ready to return and deliver them. Until that time, he will live among the gentiles and come to have a gentile wife...

21 (con't) and he gave Zipporah his daughter to Moses.

It should not go unnoticed that none of the other daughters are mentioned by name. Thus, Zipporah represents all of the daughters who were rescued by Moses. She is given to Moses as a wife. Her name means "bird" which is from the word tsippor.

It's a word used to describe birds throughout the Old Testament, even in the Genesis creation account. But in a great parallel to Zipporah becoming Moses' wife and what it pictures, the 84th psalm shows that the bird can find a home where the Lord dwells -

"Even the sparrow has found a home,
And the swallow a nest for herself,
Where she may lay her young—
Even Your altars, O Lord of hosts,
My King and my God." Psalm 84:3

And this isn't unique to the Old Testament. Jesus gives the same basic idea in the New –

"Then He said, "What is the kingdom of God like? And to what shall I compare it? 19 It is like a mustard seed, which a man took and put in his garden; and it grew and became a large tree, and the birds of the air nested in its branches." Luke 13:18, 19

The giving of Zipporah to Moses is certainly reminiscent of Laban giving his own daughters to Jacob many years earlier. He stayed and labored, thus receiving his wives. Moses is staying and has certainly come into Reuel's family as a helping hand as well. Thus in return, he receives a bride.

A final point about this verse is that in marrying his daughter, Moses is symbolically adopted into the tribe of Reuel. We see this later in Exodus 4 when Moses receives his call to return to rescue Israel. At that time, he actually asks for permission to fulfill his calling. There in Exodus 4:18, it says -

"So Moses went and returned to Jethro his father-in-law, and said to him, 'Please let me go and return to my brethren who are in Egypt, and see whether they are still alive.'" Exodus 4:18

22 And she bore him a son. He called his name Gershom, for he said, "I have been a stranger in a foreign land."

Time and again, when a child is born in the book of Genesis, he was given as a picture of something in redemptive history or even as a picture of Christ himself. Such is the case here. The name Gershom indicates being a stranger in a foreign land.

The first half of the word, ger, means "stranger." The second half shom, comes from either sham, "there" or shem, "name." And so his name means "Stranger There" or "Stranger is His Name." However, Abrarim notes that the verse -

"... merely says that the boy was named such-and-such because his father was a so-and-so. There is no law that demands that the such-and-such should be etymologically akin the so-and-so. For all we know Moses might have been expressing his gladness for having finally settled, or grief for having been expelled from his familiar homeland. A verb that may have been on Moses' mind is גרש (garash), meaning to drive or cast out."

Thus his name may also mean "Exile."

While the Lord is building the church, a beautiful bride

He has a son who is gone into exile

And someday soon the church will be at His side

And once again on the firstborn son God will smile

The story is given to show us of God's faithful and tender care

To His people, those who call on Him, at all times and everywhere

See the marvelous things that God has done for all of us!

For any and all who will call out to Him through Jesus

IV. So God Heard Their Groaning (verses 23-25)

A sudden, even dramatic shift now takes place in the story. In the first 22 verses of the chapter, God was never mentioned. In these last three verses, he will be mentioned 5 times. Where the focus has been on Moses, it will now be on Israel.

As Stephen shows us in Acts 7:30, about forty years have passed with complete silence. And yet the details of this next year will be overflowing in the biblical account. As seen in the last sermon the number forty is associated "with a period of probation, trial, and chastisement." And more specifically a "chastisement of sons, and of a covenant people."

Understanding this, we can see that Moses' heart was turned toward his people when he was forty, but they rejected his advances and thus their probation continued for another forty years. That time is drawing to a close and Moses' heart will again be turned towards his people.

23 Now it happened in the process of time that the king of Egypt died.

The Hebrew says, v'hi bayyammin ha'rabbim ha'hem - "And it came to pass in time much the same." It is a superlative way of saying that a whole bunch of time passed and things remained unchanged. But suddenly, there was a change which matters to the redemptive narrative. The king of Egypt died.

Notice that it doesn't say Pharaoh, but the king of Egypt. The position remains, but the ruler changes. Certainly at a time like this, the people would look for a change in their fortunes as well. Maybe a new policy towards the people would be enacted and there would be an acceptance of them instead of the years of bondage they had thus-far faced.

23 (con't) Then the children of Israel groaned because of the bondage, and they cried out;

The bondage didn't change, the slavery continued, and the people groaned in their agony. When they looked for a lessening of their anguish, they were rewarded with only more of the same. And so they cried out.

While Moses was dwelling among the Gentiles, the Hebrews toiled in the land of double distress. While he was in the open fields tending sheep, their lives were filled with the narrow confines of slavery and bondage. He was free to enjoy contentment of life while they faced nothing more than oppression and trial.

But when they cry out to Him, there is good news for God's people. He is the covenant keeping God and His ears will not forever be shut to the sound of His people's trials...

23 (con't) and their cry came up to God because of the bondage.

Once again, out of twenty versions of the Bible that I check for each sermon, and out of the multitudes of commentaries I researched for this passage, not even one seized upon the importance of these words. It says v'taal shavatam el ha'elohim - "and came up their cry unto 'the' God."

It presupposes that their cries of the past 40 years had not been to "the" God. Rather, if they cried out it was to a god or maybe between one another, but "the" God had been left out of the picture. Now He is petitioned once again. How translators can skip such an important definite article is beyond imagination. A point is being made which is completely lost in the translation.

God will allow His people to go their own way and to face their own difficulties until they are prepared to call out to Him. Such is the wonder of how He deals with His children. When they are ready to reach out to Him, He will hear and He will respond. As the Geneva Bible succinctly states it -

"God humbles his by afflictions, that they should cry to him, and receive the fruit of his promise." Geneva

24 So God heard their groaning, and God remembered His covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob.

Here in verse 24, and verse 25 to come, God will be mentioned four more times. All four times, it will simply say elohim; God. With the matter of the true God being restored to the hearts of His people, God, meaning that same true God, hears and responds.

Their groanings have come to His ears and in turn He is said to have remembered His covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob. He never forgot as we tend to think of such a term. But rather, in the Bible when something is forgotten it is simply pushed out of the mind.

When something is remembered, it is called back to the center of attention. As you can see, the remembrance was based on His faithfulness to the covenant and to His covenant people. When God makes a promise, it will never fail. God promised to the patriarchs and when their descendants returned to Him, He has determined to return to them.

It is the fulfillment of the words He first spoke to Abraham in Genesis 15 -

“Know certainly that your descendants will be strangers in a land that is not theirs, and will serve them, and they will afflict them four hundred years. 14 And also the nation whom they serve I will judge; afterward they shall come out with great possessions. 15 Now as for you, you shall go to your fathers in peace; you shall be buried at a good old age. 16 But in the fourth generation they shall return here, for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet complete.” Genesis 15:13-16

The four hundred years are ending, the iniquity of the Amorites has now reached its fullness, and the people of Israel have at the same time returned to the God, the true God. It is a confluence of events in redemptive history that seems beyond astonishing. And yet it is a confluence of events which has been repeated in history and which will again be repeated, maybe in the span of our own lives.

25 And God looked upon the children of Israel, and God acknowledged them.

Albert Barnes notes that, "The whole history of Israel is foreshadowed in these words: God heard, remembered, looked upon, and knew them. It evidently indicates the beginning of a crisis marked by a personal intervention of God."

The many times that the word "God" is mentioned in these three verses hints to us that something great is to be expected in the pages ahead. And so it will be. Great things are just around the corner for Moses and for the suffering Hebrew people. God heard, remembered, looked upon, and knew His people once again.

If you depart from God, not calling on His name
He will let you wander off though you may suffer harm
But if you return to Him, He will do the same
And restore you to His favor by His mighty right arm

He will never leave you nor forsake you
But He will allow you to set your own trail
So choose to follow Him in all you say and do
And He will guide You, His word will never fail

Stand firm then upon that precious word
And fix your eyes resolutely on the Lord

V. Wonderful Pictures

Now that we've looked at the surface of the story, the historical and cultural aspects of what happened, we need to ask ourselves, "Why is this story here? What is it that God wants us to see? The answer is, as always - Jesus." Here is the Light -

Time and again, the Bible focuses on receiving a Gentile bride by the man who is the main focus of the narrative. At the same time, the Bible never departs from the concept that God's covenant people Israel are still on His mind. Even if they have rejected Him.

Last week we saw Moses' rejection by his own and His departure from them while they remained in bondage. It pictures Christ who came to Israel and they rejected Him. And so He went to the Gentile people. As Moses went to Midian, the Place of Judgment, so went Christ to the Place of Judgment on heaven's throne.

Moses sat by a well where water comes forth; Jesus sits at heaven's throne from whence the Spirit issues. Along came the seven daughters of the Priest of Midian. These seven daughters represent the seven churches of the church age mentioned in Revelation. In fact, the term "church" in Revelation is a feminine noun.

The daughters come and draw water from the well, picturing the churches drawing from the Spirit during the church age. The word used to describe their effort was dalah. It figuratively means to deliver. This water is used for the flocks which in the Bible consistently picture individual groups of people under a shepherd.

The water is brought out and put into the troughs for the flocks, just as the Spirit is intended for the people of the church. The same word for "troughs" was used in the story of Jacob watering the flock and there it carried the same pictorial connotation, a source for the people of the church to drink from.

However, there was a problem. Other shepherds came and drove the flocks away. It is the false shepherds of the church age, the heretics, the money-grubbers, the cult leaders and those who care nothing for God or the people of God. But rather, they care only for themselves and the flocks who they have already led astray.

But there was good news. Moses was there and stood up for the daughters. Likewise, Jesus is there and He is ready to stand up for those churches who are faithful to Him and His word. Though He is there by the well in the Place of Judgment, He is not idle.

In Revelation 2:1, which is a record of the church age, it says, "To the angel of the church of Ephesus write, 'These things says He who holds the seven stars in His right hand, who walks in the midst of the seven golden lampstands.'" There He is, even now, walking among the seven churches, the seven golden lampstands, tending to the flocks of His faithful churches.

It's not coincidence that the daughters then tell their father that the man who rescued them was an Egyptian. Though Moses is actually a Hebrew, this was all but hidden from them. And it is the same with the church. For 2000 years, the fact that Jesus is a Hebrew and a Jew has been almost completely overlooked, both by the Jews and by the church as well.

He has almost carried the appearance of a Gentile in the minds of the people, but His true nature didn't change because of that. It is a misperception that will be corrected in the story of Moses and it is a misconception that is being corrected more and more each day in the minds of the church and in the eyes of the Israeli people. The Christ of the nations is the Messiah of the Jews and He is a Jew.

After this, Reuel asks, "Why is it that you have left the man? Call him, that he may eat bread." The Lord doesn't force himself into the seven churches, rather he awaits his invitation, only then will He come and dine with us. In Revelation 3:20, it says this -

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If anyone hears My voice and opens the door, I will come in to him and dine with him, and he with Me."

After this, the next words said were, "Then Moses was content to live with the man." This is exactly what Paul says would occur in the Gentile church -

"I will dwell in them

And walk among them.

I will be their God,

And they shall be My people." 2 Corinthians 6:16

And of course, like many of the major figures used in these pictures of redemptive history, a Gentile bride is received. Isaac received Rebekah, Jacob received his beloved Rachel, Joseph received Asenath, and now Moses receives one. As only one daughter's name is given she is representative of all of them.

It is the continuing theme of the Bible. While Israel is in exile for disobedience, God is taking a different course of action, not frittering away the hours, but using them wisely until Israel is finally ready to call out to their Messiah.

If you go back and read the two quotes about the birds that I read from the 84th Psalm and from Luke 13, you will see how Zipporah, the little bird, pictures those in the church who have found a home among the Lord's temple and in His kingdom.

Along with Zipporah though, there is a son. His name is Gershom. Curiously, Moses has another son, Eliezer, whose birth isn't recorded and he won't even be mentioned until Exodus 18:4, kind of as an afterthought. The Bible is focusing on this one son, the firstborn. He is a picture of Israel.

In Exodus 4:22 it will say, "Thus says the Lord: 'Israel is My son, My firstborn.'" At the time of his birth, his name is given as Gershom. During the time of Jesus' reign over the church, the son named Exile, the Stranger There, is in exactly that state. His name is Stranger; he is a stranger there; and he is in exile.

If you can see it around us, we must be close to the end of the church age now. The story of Moses' time in Midian, until the time that God hears the cries of Israel, is almost completely empty with the exception of a few verses and names.

The time of calm is coming to an end, Israel is back in the land, and God's focus is even now being redirected to the end times, all of which will be prefigured in the coming chapters of Exodus - filled with plagues and the glory of God being revealed.

As the Hebrew of verse 23 said, v'hi bayyammin ha'rabbim ha'hem - "And it came to pass in time much the same." The years have gone by and things have remained unchanged. The Church Age has had many ups and downs, but it has been the Church Age. Things have remained much the same.

But all of a sudden, the ancient prophecies have been coming to pass, even before our eyes. The time is at hand. When Israel's groanings are finally directed to "the God" the true God, meaning the Lord Jesus, He will hear and He will reveal Himself to them. We saw it clearly in the Joseph sermons and we will see it in the coming chapters of Exodus as well.

This is the marvel and this is the beauty of the age in which we live. But this age will end. The church will be taken to glory in the twinkling of an eye and the great plagues of Egypt will come on a global scale. There will be horror and dread and terrifying choices to make.

The Bible says, "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation." If you have never come to know the salvation which is found in Jesus Christ, I would ask you to not wait another day. The Bible gave us these ancient stories to show us of what is coming and how to avoid it.

It is coming individually in each of our deaths, and it is coming collectively upon an unrepentant world. But God sent His Son in order to bring us back to Himself before one or both occur. Let me tell you what you need to know to be a part of His great work of salvation...

Closing Verse: "In my distress I called upon the Lord,

And cried out to my God;

He heard my voice from His temple,

And my cry came before Him, even to His ears." Psalm 18:6

Next Week: Exodus 3:1-6 (Standing On Holy Ground) (6th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Watering the Father's Flock

Now the priest of Midian had seven daughters
And they came and drew from the well's waters

And they filled the troughs for their livestock
Yes, they filled them to water their father's flock

Then the shepherds came
And drove them away
But Moses stood up and helped them all the same
And watered their flock that day

When they came to Reuel their father, he said
"How is it that you have come so soon today?"
And they said, "An Egyptian delivered us instead
From the hand of the shepherds who treated us in a bad way

And he also enough water for us drew
And watered the flock until they were through

So he said to his daughters, yes to them he pled
And where is he? Why is it that you have left the man?
Call him, that he may come and with us eat bread

Then Moses was content with the man to live
And to Moses, his daughter Zipporah he did give

And she bore him a son we understand
He called his name Gershom, for he said
“I have been a stranger in a foreign land
And not been among the people from whom I am bred

Now it happened in the process of time
That the king of Egypt died
Then the children of Israel groaned
Because of the bondage, and out they cried

And their cry came up to God because of the bondage
So God their groaning He heard
And God remembered His covenant
With Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob, yes His spoken word

And God looked upon the children of Israel
And God acknowledged them as the Bible does tell

Surely it is better at all times to remember God
Never departing from His love and grace
Than to forget Him while in this life we trod
Until we come to a difficult or an unhappy place

If we can keep our eyes always focused on Jesus
Then whether things are good or difficult it will be the same
We will know that He is always attentive to us
Because we have held fast to Him and His wondrous name

In this there will be great rewards when we are ushered into glory
And we stand in front of our great and awesome Lord
So let us always hold close to the Bible and the gospel story
Keeping hidden in our heart God's precious saving word

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 3:1-6 (STANDING ON HOLY GROUND)

Introduction: There are times when I struggle to fill up an evaluation of a passage to make an entire sermon. You know I'm not one to add a lot of fluff. Rather I want to give you insights into what God is telling us and let you add the fluff in later with your own thoughts.

But then there are times when I have to cut so much from what I want to say that I cringe. Today's six verses are that way. There simply isn't enough space in a single sermon to cover it all and even then we'll be a little long.

I started to accumulate the material last year on September 10th when my Israeli friend Sergio sent me an email about these verses. I saved it and it is a part of what we'll look into. I hope you love the details, because today is a sermon of details. No.fluff.for.you.

Text Verse: "In Him we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of His grace..." Ephesians 1:7

Paul, writing to the Gentile church, says that we have redemption through the blood of Christ. If Paul is the Apostle to the Gentiles, then what about the Jews. Are they included in this only individually, never to be considered as a united group again? Or is this period of the Gentiles temporary until God again sets His attention on Israel?

Does the Bible give us hints into these things as to which is correct and why? The answer is an obvious "Yes." The Bible is replete with both pictures of what is coming, as well as explicit prophetic references to it. All we have to do research what He is telling us and it will all come out as He intends.

Today's verses show us yet another picture of a period of time which is future to us even now when God will return His attention to His wayward people, Israel. It's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Tending to the Flock (verse 1)

1 Now Moses was tending the flock of Jethro his father-in-law, the priest of Midian.

We've seen beautiful patterns of history so far revealed in the first two chapters of Exodus. There was the time of Israel's rejection of Christ, just as Moses was rejected by his people. We saw the Church Age after that in the seven daughters of Reuel.

Now we are seeing the time when God is getting ready to redeem Israel and bring them out of their place of hardship and bondage, leading them into the kingdom age. Matthew Henry clued into this pattern in part when he said the following -

"The years of Moses's life are remarkably divided into three forties; the first forty he spent as a prince in Pharaoh's court, the second a shepherd in Midian, the third a king in Jeshurun." Matthew Henry

Israel has not been forgotten by Him and their period of trial and testing after exile will come to an end. It is pictured in Moses' next portion of life in which the call to that life begins to be seen in today's passage.

Christ is at this time in redemptive history our Good Shepherd, leading the flocks of the church from the Place of Judgment, pictured by Moses tending to flocks in Midian, which means exactly that. Here is Moses, tending to the flocks, but immediately we have a new name - Jethro.

He is identified as Moses' father-in-law and the priest of Midian. However, scholars debate as to whether this is the same man as Reuel or not. The term for "father-in-law" is also used to describe other marital relations, such as son-in-law, brother-in-law, etc.

Some argue that if Reuel was older when Moses married his daughter 40 years earlier, then this may be his son or nephew who has become the priest in his place. Without getting bogged down in that, what the account asks us to do is determine the meaning of his name, not really how he is now related to Moses.

Reuel means "Friend of God" and he was used to picture the corporate body of people from whom the collective church is derived. As the seven churches are the friends of God, they willingly invited Jesus into their abode, just as Reuel willingly called Moses into his.

Now we have a new figure - or at least a new name, Jethro. This comes from the word yatar which means "to remain over," or "to be at rest." The HAW Theological Wordbook submits, "It refers to one portion of a quantity which has been divided. Generally it is the smaller part and sometimes it is the part of least quality."

Therefore, Abarim translates the name Jethro as "remnant." If Reuel was there to picture the time of the church age, then Jethro must be introduced for another reason. If the church age is ending and God is ready to restore Israel to its inherited place in redemptive history, then this name must be tied to that.

This word yatar, from which Jethro is derived, is used in Ruth 2:18 concerning the food which Ruth had kept back for her mother-in-law Naomi. There it said, "So she brought out and gave to her what she had kept back after she had been satisfied."

That was a transfer of food from a Gentile to her Jewish mother-in-law. That story, if you know it's meaning, showed Naomi as picturing Israel in captivity awaiting their restoration, which came at the end of the story. This word yatar, is also used in this set of verses from Ezekiel 39 -

"When I have brought them back from the peoples and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, and I am hallowed in them in the sight of many nations, 28 then they shall know that I am the Lord their God, who sent them into captivity among the nations, but also brought them back to their land, and left none of them captive any longer. 29 And I will not hide My face from them anymore; for I shall have poured out My Spirit on the house of Israel,' says the Lord God." Ezekiel 39:27-29

A study on this word time and again gives hidden clues of the return of Israel to the land and to its exalted place as chief among the nations in the end times. It is fitting then that the name Jethro is introduced after Reuel.

There is the church age and then there is the restoration of the remnant of God's people, Israel - pictured by Jethro. Seemingly unimportant names actually bear directly on what is about to transpire and what will continue to occur, even thousands of years later. Every detail fits like a God-manufactured glove, perfectly aligning with His redemptive plan.

1 (con't) And he led the flock to the back of the desert,

It is here in this portion of verse 1 that my friend Sergio emailed me with questions concerning the passage. The words "to the back of the desert" are akhar ha'midbar. Akhar means "behind," or "the following part." It is also translated as "west" and this is how some translate it. The second word, ha'midbar, means "the desert."

In the Hebrew way of dividing the points of the compass, if the east is before a person, the west then is behind him. The south would then be right and the north would be to the left. The east is a place of exile. When Adam was kicked out of the garden, it was to the east that the cherub was placed to guard against entry.

When the tabernacle was erected, cherubim were woven into the veil which then pointed east, symbolizing restricted entry into the Holy of Holies. When Moses died, he was buried east of Canaan as punishment for his transgression. And when Israel was exiled to Babylon, it was east. The east wind is used many times in Scripture as a harsh and destroying concept. This is seen for example in Jeremiah 18:17 -

"I will scatter them as with an east wind before the enemy;
I will show them the back and not the face
In the day of their calamity."

And so more than a year before typing this sermon, in September 2013, Sergio emailed me with this comment -

"Interesting verse: there is a pattern in the bible of 'going east' is usually judgment and exile (east of Eden, east of Israel to Babylon, east wind...) but in this verse, right before Moses is called to lead the nation of Israel out of 'exile' he led his flock to the west to the mountain of God..."

He was specifically asking about what this was picturing. I was too busy with life to get to it, but now a year later, here we are. Understanding the pictures which have been drawn out from the preceding passages, what do you think it's picturing? I have an idea and will share it at the end of the verse.

1 (con't) and came to Horeb,

Horeb is the same area as Sinai. The names are used to indicate the same place, but the words are selected to be used for different reasons when they are, in fact, used. Horeb means "Arid" or "Desert" which, interestingly, is similar to Zion, the mountain of God, which in one sense means "Dry Place."

1 (con't) the mountain of God.

Once again, every single translation I read failed to properly note what this says. In Hebrew, it says el har ha'elohim - "to mountain 'the' God." The definite article is before "God" not "mountain." This is showing us something and it is specific and particular.

If it was the mountain of God, it would have said har elohim, such as in Psalm 68:15. Rather, it is the mountain of "the" God. It is intended to show us that the flock is being taken to a specific location to worship the One true God.

Later, in chapter 4, we will be told that Moses returns to Jethro, but the flock is not mentioned. This is the first and last time it is referred to. What is that picturing? Before I explain this and we go on, I'd like to continue with Sergio's thoughts from a year ago -

Charlie - The translations are a bit off.. quite a bit actually. you are correct: Ahar means 'after/behind' (time / location), together with the following word it forms "after desert" (ahar ha-midbar). So location wise if he was east of mt Horeb and it's desert then he would be going west. But here's another interesting point (most likely way overstretched...) -> the sentence in hebrew goes like this: Ve-inhag et ha-tson ahar ha-midbar ve-yavo el har-elohim horba what's interesting is that the word "midbar" means word/mouth - for example "dabar elohim" (God's word). so the sentence could be read like this: And [he] drove the herd [of sheep] according to the words and [he] came to the mountain of God, Horeb

And then Sergio finished with the thought, "probably changes nothing..." Sergio, it changes everything. The dual meaning of the verse is showing us a picture of something. Sergio's thoughts are confirmed by another translator concerning "word" instead of "desert" and so I have all the confidence in the world that this isn't stretching a thing. Abarim states the following concerning the root words of the word dabar -

"These two root-verbs are really quite adjacent in Hebrew thought. Note that the word מדבר (midbar) means wilderness (or desert), and the related verb דבר (dabar) means to speak. When Paul augments Isaiah's spiritual armor, he adds the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God ... Words commonly protrude from one's mouth, and the mouth is typically a wet place, not a dry place. But it should be noted that the Meribah incident occurred at Horeb (Exodus 17:6), "Behold, I will stand before you there on the rock at Horeb, and you shall strike the rock, and water will come out of it, that the people may drink."

This may sound like way too much information, but let's look it over. The pictures have shown that Israel is in exile and it is now the church age. Suddenly, with almost no information in 40 years of his life being given to us, we suddenly come to the end of the 40 years. And Moses is heading west with his flocks.

If east is exile and from whence comes destruction, and the flocks are being led west, then it is to a place of safety and from whence comes life. Horeb means "Arid" or "Desert," just as Zion means "Dry Place." It seems curious that the mountain of "the" God would be defined this way, but what is it that gives life? Water.

The word proceeds from the wet place, the mouth, and the Word of God is where the water of life issues from. Horeb, as Abraim noted, is where the water from the rock came from. Paul in the New Testament say this about that account -

"...all ate the same spiritual food, 4 and all drank the same spiritual drink. For they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ." 1 Corinthians 10:3, 4

So is anyone seeing it yet? In the New Jerusalem, the heavenly Mount Zion (remember Zion means "Dry Place") where does the water proceed from? From the throne of God and the Lamb. Anyone seeing it yet? Here is Sergio's translation again - "And [he] drove the herd [of sheep] according to the words and [he] came to the mountain of God, Horeb."

Who does Moses picture? Christ Jesus. "And Christ drove the herd according to the word and came to the mountain of the God, even to Horeb." Have you got it? What is the passage showing us? It is the transition from the Church Age to the time where Israel will be redeemed from Egypt.

What does it say in 1 Thessalonians 4 concerning the end of the church age? Here is the passage -

"For this we say to you by the word of the Lord, that we who are alive and remain until the coming of the Lord will by no means precede those who are asleep. 16 For the Lord Himself will descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of an archangel, and with the trumpet of God. And the dead in Christ will rise first. 17 Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. And thus we shall always be with the Lord." 1 Thessalonians 4:15-17

This transition verse is given, and I am completely convinced of this, to show us the end of the church age at the rapture; at the word of the Lord. Without abusing either the text, the Hebrew, or the concepts which permeate Scripture concerning Israel and the dispensational model, we can paraphrase the words, "And (Christ) drove the flock (the church) according to the word, and (they) came to the mountain of THE God, even Horeb."

O God, we wait for You to send Your Son for us

To guide us safely home to His side

And forever we will be with Jesus

As we walk in heaven's expanse so wide

Thank You for this wondrous and sure promise, O God

We praise You for You have done such marvelous things for us

And as we praise You now, ever shall we when in heaven we tread

Glorifying You for our precious Lamb, our beloved Lord Jesus

II. The Burning Bush (verse 2 & 3)

2 And the Angel of the Lord appeared to him in a flame of fire

From this point on, the Church Age is over. A new direction takes place and the coming passage is given in preparation for the great workings of God ahead as He delivers Israel from their bondage. The Lord will now reveal Himself to Moses in one of the most famous passages in all of Scripture. Stephen refers to this incident in his speech to the elders of Israel in Acts 7. Here are his words to them -

“And when forty years had passed, an Angel of the Lord appeared to him in a flame of fire in a bush, in the wilderness of Mount Sinai. 31 When Moses saw it, he marveled at the sight; and as he drew near to observe, the voice of the Lord came to him, 32 saying, ‘I am the God of your fathers—the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.’ Acts 7:30-32

From his words, we know that forty full years have passed. Again, we should review the meaning of the number forty so that we understand why this period of Moses' life was chosen. In his book, Number in Scripture, EW Bullinger says that forty is associated, "with a period of probation, trial, and chastisement." He further refines it to be a "chastisement of sons, and of a covenant people."

The second period of 40 years has ended and the second time of probation, trial, and chastisement is now over. This is specifically referred to by Isaiah where he wrote this -

“Comfort, yes, comfort My people!”

Says your God.

“Speak comfort to Jerusalem, and cry out to her,

That her warfare is ended,
That her iniquity is pardoned;
For she has received from the Lord's hand
Double for all her sins." Isaiah 40:1, 2

Now is the time for the captives to be released. Now is the time for Israel to be exalted. In this verse there is no definite article in front of the word "Angel" but it is not necessary. There is only one Jehovah who will call out to Moses from this bush, and so translators rightly call Him "the Angel of the Lord."

And so the Angel of the Lord appears to Moses in a flame of fire. The word for "flame" here is labbah and is used only this once in the Bible. However, it comes from the word lehabah which is a common word for flame, but it also means "blade."

To us, flames of fire appear like the blades of a sword and so the two concepts merge into one. The voice of the Lord is equated to flames of fire in the 29th Psalm, and the tongue is equated to a sword in Revelation 19. And so the two concepts unite in this bush.

2 (con't) from the midst of a bush.

There are lots of bushes in the world, and there were certainly lots of bushes around Moses, and yet there is a definite article in front of the word "bush." Only Young's Literal Translation got this correct by stating "the" bush. It is specifically designating a specific bush and so it does it dishonor to say "a" bush.

This word for "bush" in Hebrew is seneh and it is only used six times in the Bible. It means "thorny." Five of those times are right here in Exodus 3 and the final time is in Deuteronomy 33 when referring to the Lord who dwelt in this bush.

The New Testament refers to it four times, twice by Jesus and twice by Stephen. It is the word from which Sinai is derived which means "Bush of the Lord." Although there are no commentaries on this and it is my speculation, the seneh or thorny bush, which is the basis for the name Sinai, Bush of the Lord, may be the very type of bush that was used for a crown of thorns on Christ's head.

The six times it is used in the Old Testament may be tied to the meaning of the number six, the number which relates to man. And therefore it is pointing to the Person of Jesus in His Manhood. As the Lord dwelt in the Bush in the Old Testament, he wore it as a crown of thorns in the New. Just speculation, but possible.

2 (con't) So he looked, and behold, the bush was burning with fire,

This certainly caught Moses' attention. Any fire, particularly in a bush, would be visible from some distance. In the Bible, fire itself has a dual signification. First, it is something which destroys. It is often used as a symbol of judgment and wrath because of this.

However, fire also has the ability to purify, and it is often used this way as well in Scripture. In Malachi 3, it is used in this dual way. It is speaking of the coming of the Lord in judgment and yet at the same time to purify -

“But who can endure the day of His coming?

And who can stand when He appears?

For He is like a refiner's fire
And like launderers' soap.
3 He will sit as a refiner and a purifier of silver;
He will purify the sons of Levi,
And purge them as gold and silver,
That they may offer to the Lord
An offering in righteousness. Malachi 3:2, 3

Therefore, fire is a picture of the jealous desire of the Lord. He is Jealous. He is jealous in love for His people, and yet He is jealous for His holy name. The fire will purify people and yet it will destroy people as well. This is seen in the continuation of verse 2...

2 (con't) but the bush was not consumed.

The bush wasn't consumed in the fire and thus it is not something set in contrast to the Lord, but rather it is a representation of the work of Lord Himself. Israel is being prepared for purification and yet as a whole, they will not be consumed. Likewise, God's divine judgment on Egypt will be poured out at the same time.

In the same way, Israel of the future is prophetically being pictured just as Malachi and the other prophets show us. They will be purified and yet not totally consumed. At the same time, God's judgment and wrath will come upon the world.

3 Then Moses said, "I will now turn aside and see this great sight,

Here we're given another indication that Moses is the true author of the account. Rather than it being in his immediate area, whether on the path he was on or whether right where he was standing, he says he will "turn aside" in order to see the great sight. And great it must have seemed, and for good reason...

3 (con't) why the bush does not burn."

If you're in a dry and aired land, a bush that caught on fire may still be unusual, but a bush that was on fire and didn't jump into a large blaze and almost as quickly die down would be astonishing. Things in such a place are dry and brittle and would be consumed in a moment; in a flash.

But this bush continued to burn after it's expected time was over. There in the bush, the Lord patiently waited for Moses' curiosity to take over, and eventually it did. But even more amazing things will happen in regards to this bush - life changing things; world-changing things.

The fire of the Lord will go out in splendor

It will purify the people who bear His holy name

But on the unrepentant, judgment and wrath it will render

Two purposes are accomplished with His burning flame

Great and awesome is the marvelous sight

Of the work of the Lord, both His judgment and His grace

What a marvelous display of His infinite might

Blessed is the Lord in His throne's holy place
It is a wonderful blessing to behold the works of the Lord
Which are written for us in His superior word

III. Standing On Holy Ground (verses 4-6)

There is a form of Bible scholarship, a very confused and theologically inept form of Bible scholarship, known as the Documentary Hypothesis. It suggests that the first five books of the Bible, known as the Torah or the Pentateuch, was actually derived from four independent sources, not from one.

It has become the standard in most liberal circles in order to try to reconcile, as they say, "perceived inconsistencies in the biblical text." In other words, these scholars see only contradiction, confusion, and error in the Bible. And so instead of researching how to resolve the difficulties from a biblical perspective, they do so from a man-centered perspective.

They divide the books of Moses into four separate authors - J or Jehovahist, E or Elohist, D or Deuteronomist, and P for Priestly. Line by line, they cut up the Bible claiming this person wrote this line and this person added in this line. However, verse 4 of Exodus 3, along with many other evidences, shows how utterly ridiculous this type of theology is.

4 So when the Lord saw that he turned aside to look, God called to him from the midst of the bush

In one verse it says, "the Lord" meaning Jehovah, and God or elohim." One cannot ascribe this verse to J, nor can they ascribe it to E. If they used the same term in both places originally, then anyone who revised it would have revised both.

Liberal theology is both ungodly and perverse, and it is also about as stupid as one can get. We are given an insight into the nature of God in this verse, not an insanely convoluted look into the work of some crazy Jews who lived many hundreds of years later.

Jehovah saw and God called. The Lord is God. As the Lord, He is the monitor of the covenant within Creation, and as God, He is the one "over there" who controls all of creation. Interestingly, I checked for fun and found that the Lord is mentioned 7 times in this chapter, God 21, and the combined term Lord God 3.

Thus you have 3, 7, and 21 which is a multiple of 7×3 . The stamp of divine perfection permeates the words recorded here, not a confused grouping of irrelevant words. God calling to Moses from the bush shows that an objective reality, not a mere vision, is being described. The Lord is visibly and audibly present with Moses.

4 (con't) and said, "Moses, Moses!"

Calling out a name or a word twice is a way of showing emphasis. When Jesus wanted to emphasize his words, He would say "Amen. Amen," or as we often say it "Verily, Verily." When the Jews wanted Jesus done away with, they shouted "Crucify! Crucify!"

When God calls out to one of His people for a matter of the utmost importance, He will call out their name twice. This happens to be the third time in Scripture that God has fondly and purposefully called out to a man in this fashion. The first time was in Genesis 22 when the Angel of the Lord called to the man of faith -

"But the Angel of the Lord called to him from heaven and said, 'Abraham, Abraham!'" Genesis 22:11

The second time was in Genesis 46 when God called out to the man of family -

"Then God spoke to Israel in the visions of the night, and said, 'Jacob, Jacob!'" Genesis 46:2

And now, in the same climatic and emphatic fashion, God calls out the name of the man of the flock, "Mosheh, Mosheh."

4 (con't)And he said, "Here I am."

When the Angel of the Lord called out to Abraham with emphatic purpose, Abraham's immediate (and much relieved) response was "Here I am." When God called out to Jacob in His emphatic and comforting way, Jacob's response was "Here I am."

Now, the same powerful voice with the same emphatic call goes out unto Moses' ears and his immediate response is "Here I am." When the Lord calls to you, be it audibly or deep within the recesses of your soul, make sure to respond as these great men of God did - "Here I am."

Moses didn't see anyone around with a box of matches. There was no one standing around him to produce the call of his name, and there was no motion except the continuously burning flames which didn't harm the bush. Moses knew this was a divine visitation and his response reflected it - "Here I am."

5 Then He said, "Do not draw near this place.

Moses was probably curious about the fire that didn't consume, wanting to see if it was really fire or not. And the welcoming voice which called to him certainly seemed to be no threat. It knew him personally and so it must be a friend at hand.

And so in a manner of curiosity and feeling welcomed, he stepped forward, not realizing that a distance was demanded between him and the great sight before him which he beheld.

5 (con't) Take your sandals off your feet,

Not only was a distance required, but he was further instructed to remove his sandals. There is much to learn about shoes, their use, and their removal in the Bible. And this is true even though they are only mentioned about 35 times.

In this command, and it is a command, God is instructing Moses from One who is greater to one who is lesser. In essence, "Resign yourself to me." He is the possessor of, and in authority over, the land. Moses' shoes, whether made by him or by someone else, were the work of man's hands. The footprints of Moses were created by God, implying God's mastery over him.

There is then a uniting of the created foot with the dust from which it was created. Nothing of human origin would be considered acceptable in the presence of such a place of holiness. This is seen later in Exodus 20 which says –

"And if you make Me an altar of stone, you shall not build it of hewn stone; for if you use your tool on it, you have profaned it." Exodus 20:25

God made the stones, not man. If man's efforts are placed along with God's holiness, only defilement can take place. God calls, God sanctifies, and God glorifies. The process of holiness is "of and by God and God alone."

Only twice in the Bible is someone told to take off their shoes because the ground is holy. This is the first and the second is in Joshua. To understand this better, that account needs to also be given -

"And it came to pass, when Joshua was by Jericho, that he lifted his eyes and looked, and behold, a Man stood opposite him with His sword drawn in His hand. And Joshua went to Him and said to Him, 'Are You for us or for our adversaries?'

14 So He said, 'No, but as Commander of the army of the Lord I have now come.'

And Joshua fell on his face to the earth and worshiped, and said to Him, 'What does my Lord say to His servant?'

15 Then the Commander of the Lord's army said to Joshua, 'Take your sandal off your foot, for the place where you stand is holy.' And Joshua did so." Joshua 5:13-15

When two things, or two similar occurrences, are noted in the Bible, there is a reason for it. There will be a contrast of the two and yet they will confirm something. In the case of these two accounts, one is before Israel is delivered from bondage; one is after they have been safely led into the land of promise. He is the covenant keeping Lord.

One is outside of Canaan, one is in Canaan. The Lord is God over the whole earth - over both Jew and Gentile. In one there is the Lord unseen and the voice of God from "over there." In the other, there is the Lord visible, tangible, and in human form. The Lord is the incarnate Word of God; He is Jesus.

In one, He is the Lord who will give the Law - the Angel or Messenger of it; in the other He is the Lord who defends the Law which is given - the Commander of the Lord's army. He is the Lord of the Law; it's herald and upholder. For these, and certainly other reasons, we are given these two accounts to compare and ponder.

5 (con't) for the place where you stand is holy ground."

The word for "holy" here is qodesh. This is the very first time it is used in the Bible. So far, over 2500 years of human history have been recorded, and yet this is the first mention of anything connected to God's holiness since the creation.

A parallel word to qodesh is qadash which means to sanctify. That has been used just once in the Bible thus far, in the creation account in Genesis 2:3 where it says "God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it." From this point on, the two terms will cumulatively be used about 640 times in the Old Testament.

The holiness of God is being introduced now because this man of God and son of Levi will become the human mediator of God's law for His chosen people. He is being taught right now a lesson of God's holiness which he will carry with him all the days of his life.

He will even see on many occasions what it means to step over the bounds of propriety concerning that state of holiness in His Creator and Lord. This will be seen in others, both within the covenant community and without, and it will be seen in himself as well.

His final resting place will be outside of the Land of Promise because he will fail to take it to heart during a brief moment of anger. The account is found in Numbers 20 -

"And Moses and Aaron gathered the assembly together before the rock; and he said to them, 'Hear now, you rebels! Must we bring water for you out of this rock?' 11 Then Moses lifted his hand and struck the rock twice with his rod; and water came out abundantly, and the congregation and their animals drank.

12 Then the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, 'Because you did not believe Me, to hallow Me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore you shall not bring this assembly into the land which I have given them.'

13 This was the water of Meribah, because the children of Israel contended with the Lord, and He was hallowed among them." Numbers 20:10-13

Here though, Moses now stands on holy ground, or literally "ground of holiness" for the first time. It is ground which has been rendered holy by the presence of God upon it. Let us remember this ourselves as we conduct our affairs in His presence.

6 Moreover He said, "I am the God of your father—the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob."

The word "father" here is singular, not plural. This then indicates first that he is identifying himself with the same God of Amram, Moses' father, but whom was also worshipped by the patriarchs before him.

However, in Acts 7, Stephen says it in the plural. He focused on the combined patriarchs for the benefit of the council. Why would this be? It is because Stephen was addressing the Jews. But there is more than the Jews in God's plans. Abraham was the father of Isaac and Ishmael.

Isaac was the father of Jacob and Esau. Jacob was the father of the twelve patriarchs as well as the adoptive father of Ephraim and Manasseh. Ephraim would become the "fullness of the Gentiles" as Jacob prophesied. And therefore, the entire scope of humanity is included in the words to Moses now.

Paul explains this in Galatians 3 when he says that we become sons of Abraham by faith. Yes, He is the God of the Hebrews, but He is God of all creation and over all mankind, be they from Ishmael, Esau, Ephraim, or any other group of people. If they call on Christ, they become sons of Abraham by faith and sons of God through adoption.

6 (con't)And Moses hid his face,

Two commands were given to Moses - "Do not draw near this place," and "Take your sandals off your feet." Now, in an expression of over-awed dread, Moses adds in a third aspect of man in the holy God's presence. He hides his face from His glory.

He suddenly has an insight into God that he had never before contemplated, one which Jesus later explained to the leaders of Israel when He said -

"But even Moses showed in the burning bush passage that the dead are raised, when he called the Lord 'the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.' 38 For He is not the God of the dead but of the living, for all live to Him." Luke 20:37,38

The expression, "the God of Abraham" enlightened Moses to the fact that his fathers, even to Abraham, continued to exist. God can only be the God of that which exists, not of things which don't exist. And therefore He is the God over time and outside of time, eternal and unchanging.

When God reveals Himself in such wondrous ways, the only thing one can do is hide his face. Elijah found this out on this same mountain many years later when he wrapped his face in a mantle at the call of God.

Even the Seraphim of God, the burning ones, are said to hide their face before His presence. When one truly comprehends the holiness of God, it is so far above the five senses that the only reaction to seeing it is that of fear...

6 (fin) for he was afraid to look upon God.

Again, the translation is lacking. It says yare mehabbit ha'elohim - "He was afraid to look at 'the' God." The definite article shows the sudden and overwhelming realization of Moses that he is in the presence of "the" God; the one, true, and only God.

He had left the land of many gods, Egypt. Then for many years he lived in Midian, but now he is suddenly found to be in the presence of "the" God and he is in fear to look upon Him. In the future, he will talk face to face with Him, and the glory will be such that it will continue to reflect off his own face.

He will have to veil it from the people because of their own fear at the glory which they will see radiating off of him. Such is the splendor and the glory of the God who rules over time, space, and matter. His glory is infinite and He is holy.

Someday all flesh will come before Him for judgment. On that day, those who are not covered in the righteousness of Christ will be consumed by what their eyes will behold. With that memory forever in their mind, they will be cast from His presence for all eternity. There they will suffer the pain of what their eyes had beheld in relation to their fallen state. It will eternally consume them, it will infinitely destroy them.

But God gives us hope and He gives us a choice. He graciously grants us terms of peace and purification from the sins we bear. It is found in the giving of His Son, Jesus. Through Christ, we can be restored to a propitiously perfect peace with God, covered by His blood and reckoned pure and holy because of it. Let me explain to you how this can happen for you...

Closing Verse: "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts;
The whole earth is full of His glory!" Isaiah 6:3

Next Week: Exodus 3:7-12 (The Call of Moses) (7th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Standing on Holy Ground

Now Moses was tending the flock of Jethro
His father-in-law, the priest of Midian, you know

And he led the flock
To the back of the desert he did trod
And came to Horeb
To the mountain of God

And the Angel of the Lord

Appeared to him in a flame
Of fire from the midst of a bush
To his eyes this wondrous sight came

So he looked, and behold
The bush was burning with fire
But the bush was not consumed
It certainly made his mind inquire

Then Moses said, "I will now
Turn aside and see this great sight
Why the bush does not burn somehow
And yet it gives off the fire's light

So when the Lord saw
That he turned aside to see
God called to him from the midst of the bush
And said, "Moses, Moses!" And "Here I am" said he

Then He said, "Do not draw near this place
Take your sandals off your feet
For the place where you stand is holy ground
Where you and I now meet

Moreover He said, "I am the God of your father
The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob too
And Moses hid his face for he was afraid
To look upon God and so He kept Him from his view

How do we treat God, as a friend? Yes it is so
And yet He is also our Lord to whom honor is due
We can be friendly with God because of Jesus, you know
But we should do so with His holiness in view

Let us honor Him and thus grant to Him glory
And to Him let respect and praise come from each of us
As we hail the Lamb who is the center of the gospel story
With resounding shouts of praise to our magnificent Lord, Jesus

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 3:7-12 (THE CALL OF MOSES A SIGN OF PROMISE)

Introduction: As we go through today's verses, it will seem like God is doing something for Israel that was previously unplanned. It kind of sounds that way as you read them, doesn't it? Israel is in Egypt, Israel is in distress, and because of that, God is going to deliver Israel. We can leave it at that, can't we?

But that isn't at all the whole story. The promise of being brought out of Egypt preceded their journey into Egypt. And the promise of possessing Canaan preceded even that. The reason for Israel's deliverance from Egypt is based on several things which have now all come to pass at the same time.

In other words, it is the perfect time for it to come about based on those things which were already promised and also which are in accord with the very nature of God. Now why is this relevant to us? The answer is that the exact same thing has happened in our own lifetime and it is still on-going.

God said, in advance, that Israel would be returned to the land. Like when He spoke to Abraham about the exodus from Egypt, He in advance also gave the exact time that they would be returned. Further, He has made more promises to them which are future to us right now.

We can read the words spoken to Abraham and say, "Sure it came about just as expected. God said it would and it did." And so we can feel good about how nifty it was and how sure God's word is because of it. But do we have the same confidence in that same word about the issues which surround us today?

Apparently not! Most of the Christian world either rejects the notion of predictive prophecy, or they say it only applies to the church now, not to Israel. There is actually an immense lack of faith in the surety of God's word when it deals with things that we either disagree with or purposely misunderstand.

Let's not have that attitude. If we aren't sure of an issue, we should research it and then accept or dismiss it, not dismiss it first. I can tell you with all confidence that the surety of God's word is tied up in how God deals with Israel which exists in the world right now.

Text Verse: "I am the Lord, that is My name;

And My glory I will not give to another,

Nor My praise to carved images.

9 Behold, the former things have come to pass,

And new things I declare;

Before they spring forth I tell you of them." Isaiah 42:8, 9

I'm not the biggest fan of Israel as a people, but I am the biggest fan of Israel as God's people. This is why I support them. And I know this because this is what the Bible shows us. And that same word has made many wonderful promises to us as well. The promises are a sign to us that they will come about.

If we have faith in the sign, then the journey getting to that sign is guaranteed and nothing can hinder us in the process. The down and outs that we face are simply a part of us getting there. That should be a wonderful reassurance, especially because the down and outs can really, really stink.

But if the sign is true, then what really stinks will pass and the good, pleasant, and aromatic promises which are ahead are a great hope and anchor for our soul. Moses will be given a sign today to give him hope and help him through something he won't want to do. Let's cherish the signs we have been given because they offer us the same hope and help.

It's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Deliverance is Promised (verses 7 & 8)

7 And the Lord said:

Because we take sermons in small bite-sized nuggets, we need to remember what it said in verse 4 of our previous sermon -

"So when the Lord saw that he turned aside to look, God called to him from the midst of the bush and said, 'Moses, Moses!'" Exodus 3:4

It said then that the Lord saw and that God called. Now it says that "the LORD said." It is Jehovah, the establisher and keeper of the covenant who is speaking. He is God. Though they are being used interchangeably, they are also used to form distinctions in our minds. If it were not so, either only "God" or "Lord" would be used. Because both are, we're asked to reflect on the role of each.

7 (con't) "I have surely seen the oppression of My people who are in Egypt,

There is a lot in these few words. First, the Hebrew says raoh raiti - "seeing I have seen." This phrase isn't saying that all of a sudden He noticed the oppression, but rather that He had continually seen the oppression. His eyes had not be inattentive to their plight, but the fullness of time had not arrived.

God told Abraham a definite amount of time that the people would be afflicted, he told him that those who afflicted them would be judged, and he also gave the reason for what would occur. All of that is found in Genesis 15:13-16 -

“Know certainly that your descendants will be strangers in a land that is not theirs, and will serve them, and they will afflict them four hundred years. 14 And also the nation whom they serve I will judge; afterward they shall come out with great possessions. 15 Now as for you, you shall go to your fathers in peace; you shall be buried at a good old age. 16 But in the fourth generation they shall return here, for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet complete.” Genesis 15:13-16

As a display of grace and mercy upon another group of people called the Amorites, the affliction of the covenant people was allowed to continue. But we did see in a previous passage that the affliction was not wholly undeserved. Israel followed after other gods while in Egypt and they suffered for their actions.

However, they finally called out to "the" God, the true God in their plight, and so the attentive ears of the Lord had heard. As this verse says, "I have surely seen the oppression of My people." They are His people, He had called them, and He would never leave them nor forsake them.

Here, in the last moments of the allotted time which was spoken to Abraham 430 years earlier, the Lord calls out to Moses from the burning bush. The moment of Israel's deliverance is drawing near.

7 (con't) and have heard their cry because of their taskmasters,

The word for "taskmasters" is not the same as was used previously. Before it was sare missim, or the "chief of tributes." These would have extracted tribute from the people in labor, but most probably also in heavy collections that we might call taxes.

This word is nagas, which comes from a word meaning to drive like an animal, a workman, a debtor, or an army. The implication is to tax, harass, and tyrannize someone. The people were constantly afflicted and were never given rest from it.

It sounds a lot like what Israel faces today with all of their enemies around them, constantly needling them. But it is a state which can only be expected to get worse, not better, until they call out to the Lord for His deliverance.

This concept of the people crying out for deliverance is not an unusual thing in the Bible. In fact, Scripture is replete with examples of it. The people turn from God, they suffer, the people call out to God, and He responds.

No sooner does He respond, then the people turn back to their old ways, forgetting the Lord. Because of this they once again face oppression. In turn, they call out to Him, and He responds. It is a repetitive cycle of arrogance, followed by immense disobedience, followed by humility, followed by torn heart-strings which result in the bestowing of mercy.

In one of the most memorable examples of this, we can go to the book of Judges. The pattern had repeated itself four previous times in that one book. The people turned from the Lord, the Lord let them have their own way, they didn't like how it turned out, and so they cried out to Him. In response, He delivered them. However, in Judges 10, it appeared that they had gone too far -

"So the Lord said to the children of Israel, 'Did I not deliver you from the Egyptians and from the Amorites and from the people of Ammon and from the Philistines? 12 Also the Sidonians and Amalekites and Maonites oppressed you; and you cried out to Me, and I delivered you from their hand. 13 Yet you have forsaken Me and served other gods. Therefore I will deliver you no more. 14 Go and cry out to the gods which you have chosen; let them deliver you in your time of distress.'" Judges 10:11-14

But, the people continued to acknowledge their guilt and in the next verses we read this -

"And the children of Israel said to the Lord, 'We have sinned! Do to us whatever seems best to You; only deliver us this day, we pray.' 16 So they put away the foreign gods from among them and served the Lord. And His soul could no longer endure the misery of Israel." Judges 10:15, 16

Although America is not Israel, we have followed this same pattern several times. When things have gotten bad, we've turned to the Lord and He has heard. I'm afraid though that we may be past our time of final restoration. We have gone from arrogance to complete wickedness. Without a true change, I believe we may be at the end of our story.

7 (con't) for I know their sorrows.

The expression, "I know their sorrows" implies understanding and comprehension which must then include feeling, compassion, and even a tender desire to help. As Adam Clarke words this -

"I have considered their sorrows, and my eye affects my heart." Clarke

In this one verse, we have seen four distinct attributes of the Lord. First, it said "the Lord said." Next the Lord saw. Third, the Lord heard. Finally, the Lord knew. To speak implies a mouth, to see implies eyes, to hear implies ears, and to know implies a mind.

The question is, "Are these physical attributes or not?" In the case of God, the answer is, "Surely not." God doesn't have parts. In the case of the Lord, He has appeared in the garden, he appeared to Abraham, He wrestled with Jacob, and He will continue to appear throughout the Old Testament. Finally, He will come in the Person of Jesus Christ in the New.

How do we interpret the attributes of the Lord, Jehovah, of the Old Testament? It is perplexing and difficult to grasp, but I believe in the eternal Christ, not a pre-incarnate Christ. The Lord of the Old Testament is the same Lord in the New.

8 So I have come down

The Lord descending, or coming down, is something seen again and again in the Bible. He is in heaven, we are on earth. At times, He comes down in judgment upon the earth, such as when He came down to see and attend to Sodom and Gomorrah.

At other times, He comes down to help the downtrodden and the afflicted. In His grace and mercy, He condescends to come down to view our miserable plight and attend to it. In the case of what will happen in Egypt, both will actually apply. He has come down in pity upon Israel which will in turn result in coming down to judge Egypt.

8 (con't) to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians,

Because of the circumstances which surround His people, the Lord tells Moses why he has come down. It is specifically to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians. Forty years earlier, Moses thought he would be their deliverer, but they rejected him. His time hadn't come. Now, the Lord is there to tell him that it has.

But we don't want to lose sight of the bigger picture. In the greatest sense of all, deliverance from the bondage of Egypt pictures deliverance from the bondage of sin. While looking at the true story of Israel's deliverance from Egypt, as well as the pictures this story is making concerning Israel's deliverance during the tribulation period, we need to remember this above all else.

The work of Christ on our behalf is what should come to our minds. Jesus makes this explicitly clear in John 8 -

Then Jesus said to those Jews who believed Him, "If you abide in My word, you are My disciples indeed. 32 And you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

33 They answered Him, "We are Abraham's descendants, and have never been in bondage to anyone. How can You say, 'You will be made free'?"

34 Jesus answered them, "Most assuredly, I say to you, whoever commits sin is a slave of sin. 35 And a slave does not abide in the house forever, but a son abides forever. 36 Therefore if the Son makes you free, you shall be free indeed. John 8:31-36

The apostles refer to this several times in the epistles as well. Man is in bondage. When man tires of that bondage, He calls out to the Lord and the Lord rescues him. If we can keep this thought in our mind - that the mercy upon the Israelites is reflective of the Lord's mercy upon us, it makes the story all that much more relevant to our own lives and circumstances.

Just as the Lord came down in pity towards Israel and in judgment upon Egypt, the Lord Jesus came down in pity upon humanity and in judgment upon sin which separates us from the Father.

8 (con't) and to bring them up from that land

In Exodus 1:7, it said that Israel filled the land. They had outgrown Goshen and at the same time they had caused the Egyptians to fear. Now the Lord is ready to make good on his promise to Abraham which He made 430 years earlier. At that time, he said to him -

“I am the Lord, who brought you out of Ur of the Chaldeans, to give you this land to inherit it.” Genesis 15:7

The Land was promised to Abraham, and then to Isaac, and then to Jacob. Just before entering Egypt, 215 years after speaking to Abraham, and 215 years before now speaking to Moses, the Lord said this to Jacob -

“I am God, the God of your father; do not fear to go down to Egypt, for I will make of you a great nation there. 4 I will go down with you to Egypt, and I will also surely bring you up again; and Joseph will put his hand on your eyes.” Genesis 46:3, 4

8 (con't) to a good and large land,

The actual size of the land promised to Abraham is much larger than they possessed for most of their history. Only for a very brief time did they possess the entire land of promise. It includes all of where Israel is today, Gaza, the Golan Heights, through Syria, and all the way up to the Euphrates. Deuteronomy 11:24 gives a good outline of it.

In all, it is about 450 miles long and it varies from 60 to 120 miles wide and it comprises about 50,000 square miles of land. Surely it is to be considered "a good and large land." The spiritual picture we are given is similar.

We live in the narrow confines of a sin-filled world, but the Lord has promised to deliver us to the broad spaces of the infinite realm of heaven. We live in the narrow confines of time which eventually consumes us at our death, but the Lord has promised to deliver us unto eternal life. The 118th Psalm gives us a hint of this

"I called on the Lord in distress;

The Lord answered me and set me in a broad place." Psalm 118:5

Interestingly though, the only way to reach this place of infinite broadness and eternal duration is through a very narrow gate. As Jesus said -

"Enter by the narrow gate; for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leads to destruction, and there are many who go in by it. 14 Because narrow is the gate and difficult is the way which leads to life, and there are few who find it." Matthew 7:13, 14

The contrast couldn't be clearer - a narrow path to an infinitely wide and unrestricted paradise, or a broad path to the narrowest confines of hell itself. Choose wisely.

8 (con't) to a land flowing with milk and honey,

This is the first of 20 times that this expression will be used in the Bible. The last time will be in Ezekiel 20 where it is also called "the glory of all lands." A land flowing with milk and honey implies richness and fertility.

Milk comes from cows and so it means there will be abundant pasture lands. Honey comes from bees which pollinate flowers and so it implies all sorts of fruit trees, herbs, and flowers. Deuteronomy 8:7-10 gives a beautiful picture of the land -

"For the Lord your God is bringing you into a good land, a land of brooks of water, of fountains and springs, that flow out of valleys and hills; 8 a land of wheat and barley, of vines and fig trees and pomegranates, a land of olive oil and honey; 9 a land in which you will eat bread without scarcity, in which you will lack nothing; a land whose stones are iron and out of whose hills you can dig copper. 10 When you have eaten and are full, then you shall bless the Lord your God for the good land which He has given you."

I should note because I have been there that the land of Israel today is once again like that. It is a land overflowing with abundance. And yet, scholars of the not-too-distant past described it as a desolate land lacking people or produce. Adam Clark who lived in the early 19th century says about the land of Israel -

"...cultivation is now almost entirely neglected in this land, because of the badness of the government and the scantiness of the inhabitants."

I bring this up to highlight the lie that there never was any sizeable portion of "Palestinians" residing in the land before Israel returned and brought it back to usefulness. It was a wasteland, devoid of people and unfit for any type of productive use.

And one more point about the term "a land flowing with milk and honey." It isn't just speaking of the physical abundance of the land, but also of the spiritual abundance. It is the land of God's word and the people through whom that word has come. The word of God is said to be sweeter than honey. It is also equated with milk which nourishes. Thus, this is a reference to that as well.

8 (con't) to the place of the Canaanites and the Hittites and the Amorites and the Perizzites and the Hivites and the Jebusites.

Six groups of people are mentioned here. At other times, five or seven or eight are mentioned. At Abraham's time, ten people groups were mentioned. It isn't certain why the names are stated sometimes and overlooked at other times, but God has His reasons, even if they aren't plainly evident.

It is to the place where these people dwell that Lord promises to deliver the people of His inheritance.

I have seen the oppression of My people
And the great miseries they have had to endure
But I will deliver every true heart under the church steeple
My promise to them is eternal and sure

Not forever will I remain silent

I will not wait too long to receive them unto Me
Someday the time will have been sufficiently spent
And the trumpet will sound out jubilantly

I have a plan and it is being worked out
And at the right moment I will rise to receive My bride
There will be a loud, resounding shout
And My people will forever be by My side

II. I Will Send You to Pharaoh (verses 9 & 10)

9 Now therefore, behold, the cry of the children of Israel has come to Me,

This verse is stated in the opposite order of verse 7. That verse began by saying He had seen their oppression and then that He had heard their cry. This verse begins with hearing their cry first. The reason goes back to the previous chapter where it said -

"Then the children of Israel groaned because of the bondage, and they cried out; and their cry came up to God because of the bondage." Exodus 2:23

At that time, a definite article preceded the word God - "the" God, implying that they had decided to call on the true God. Their oppression had gone on since Moses left 40 years earlier, but only when they called out to the true God would He respond. The same is true with Israel today.

They have been under punishment since Christ left, but only when they call out to the true God will He hear and respond. This was all exactly pictured in our Joseph sermons.

9 (con't) and I have also seen the oppression with which the Egyptians oppress them.

Because of their cry, He acknowledges their oppression. It is a repetition and yet a rewording of verse 7 in preparation for His response and remedy which is to be found in the next verse. Israel is oppressed, the Egyptians have been the oppressors, and the people have cried out to the God. Now the God, the Lord, will respond.

10 Come now, therefore, and I will send you to Pharaoh

In Genesis 12, the Lord called Abraham with these words -

“Get out of your country,
From your family
And from your father’s house,
To a land that I will show you.
2 I will make you a great nation;
I will bless you
And make your name great;
And you shall be a blessing.
3 I will bless those who bless you,

And I will curse him who curses you;

And in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed.” Genesis 12:1-3

In what is not a dissimilar occurrence, the Lord now calls Moses. He has been in Midian for 40 years. He has a family, flocks, and a life which has been at best routine and uneventful. But like Abraham, he is now called to put that aside and to place his faith and trust in the Lord's direction.

For Moses, that direction is to go to Pharaoh, to the house that he was raised in, and to a family that would still have the remembrance of him and what he had done and which caused him to leave in the first place.

He had departed 40 years earlier after killing an Egyptian in an attempt to save one of his brothers. But he was rejected by the people whom he had hoped would recognize him as their deliverer.

10 (con't) that you may bring My people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt.”

This is the second time the Lord has identified Himself directly with Israel. They are called "My people." As Moses is an Israelite, then he is identified with them too. The Lord isn't going outside of His people to find a deliverer, but to one from within His people.

Others have received similar calls throughout Scripture. Amos, like Moses, was one who tended the flocks. His call came to prophesy to Israel and he responded to the call. When he was told by the king to stop prophesying, he basically said, "You must be kidding." His answer to him was -

"Then Amos answered, and said to Amaziah:
"I was no prophet,
Nor was I a son of a prophet,
But I was a sheepbreeder
And a tender of sycamore fruit.
15 Then the Lord took me as I followed the flock,
And the Lord said to me,
'Go, prophesy to My people Israel.'"" Amos 7:14, 15

After that, he went on to pronounce words of judgment on the king. Many years later, a group of men were fetched off of fishing boats and asked to speak out to the people, becoming fishers of men. The call is made and the one called is expected to respond.

However, there is, at times a note of rebellion before the call is actually accepted. Moses will fit this category. Probably the most famous such rebellion is that of Jonah, but both he and Moses eventually came through. They were men of Israel, called to minister to Israel.

Likewise, God didn't call an angel to deliver humanity, He called a Human to deliver them. Hebrews 1 explains this in detail. In order to redeem us, God chose to send His Son into the world, uniting with humanity. In Him, there was no hint of rebellion or reticence. Rather, the Bible says He was called and He responded -

"Then I said, 'Behold, I have come—
In the volume of the book it is written of Me—
To do Your will, O God.'" Hebrews 10:7

And He will send Him again, Jesus - both Human and of Israel, to deliver Israel in the future. It is amazing to think on these things and to ponder them.

I am calling you to do My will o man
Your commission is there, in My word
Go and tell all the people you can
That God's love is found in Jesus the Lord

Go forth! Tell the message while there is time
I am with you and will be your guide
There is a hope in Christ, wonderfully sublime
There is joy everlasting there by His side

Don't wait! Don't put it off another day
Now is the time of God's favor, today is the day of salvation
Let the world know that Jesus is the way
He is the hope for every person in every nation

III. You Shall Serve God on This Mountain (verses 11 & 12)

11 But Moses said to God, "Who am I that I should go to Pharaoh, and that I should bring the children of Israel out of Egypt?"

Again, there is a definite article in front of God. It says v'yomer Mosheh el ha'elohim - "And said Moses to 'the' God." It is as if Moses, remembering the conversation as he wrote the account, was also remembering the utter folly of his words. The Lord, who is the God, has called and he has questioned.

He's standing in front of a burning bush that isn't consumed. There is a voice, but no form. He's identified Himself as the One who was there for Abraham, for Isaac, and for Jacob. He is the initiator and monitor of the covenant for the covenant people, and he has made a choice concerning them which involves Moses. And yet Moses questions the choice.

But more than questioning the choice, he repeats the words just as he received them. The Lord said, "I will send you to Pharaoh that you may bring My people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt." Moses responds, "Who am I that I should go to Pharaoh, and that I should bring the children of Israel out of Egypt?"

If you take this to its logical conclusion, every time we question the word of "the" God, we are in the same position as Moses. We can spend all day talking about how silly Moses was, but the point is that we then are far more silly when we do the same.

The words are carefully selected and recorded to ask us to consider them in the light of which they are intended. The words of Buddha, Krishna, and Muhammed are recorded but they have no power because they are not from the God. But the words of the Bible are, and they are to be accepted and acted upon.

Moses questioned after he knew the truth concerning Who was talking to him. We can question until we know the truth, but afterwards, we simply need to obey. He is the God and we are man. What He speaks is to be obeyed without question.

A perfect example of this is found in 1 Timothy 2:12. The word of the God says, "And I do not permit a woman to teach or to have authority over a man, but to be in silence." However, all over the world, the response is, "Who am I that I am not permitted to teach or have authority over a man." The Anglican church just took this stand one week ago, departing from the word of "the" God.

And so in open rebellion to the word of "the" God, women preach and teach with men present, completely ignoring the instruction which is as weighty as the words which issued to Moses' ears from the flames of the burning bush.

12 So He said, "I will certainly be with you.

The Hebrew says, "Since I will be with you." The answer is in response to what Moses meant, not particularly the statement that was made. He implied that he wasn't capable of the challenge set before Him, but the Lord's answer says, "You are because I am with you."

It is the same idea that we see in the words of Paul. He had an infirmity which he felt was a limiting factor in his life and in his ministry which he tells us about in 2 Corinthians -

"Concerning this thing I pleaded with the Lord three times that it might depart from me. 9 And He said to me, 'My grace is sufficient for you, for My strength is made perfect in weakness.'" 2 Corinthians 12:8, 9

Moses looked at the challenge from his human perspective, knowing that he was incapable of rising to it, but the Lord, not he, was the decisive factor which would ensure the outcome.

12 (con't) And this shall be a sign to you that I have sent you:

The words here are v'zeh lekha ha'ot - "and this to you the sign." The words "shall be" are inserted by the translators. They also add a colon at the end of the thought to show that the sign is to be announced. However, some argue that the sign is the burning bush. In essence, the sign has been given, it is not what is coming.

That is incorrect. The sign is forthcoming. The words "shall be" and the colon at the end of the thought are correct. It is the standard working of God to give a sign which is future as a testimony of the truth revealed in the present. The sign is an appeal to faith, not to sight. As Albert Barnes says about this -

"The word means a declaration or promise of God, which rests absolutely on His word, and demands faith. The promise that God would have the people serve Him in that place was an assurance, if fully believed, that all intervening obstacles would be removed by His power." Barnes

This same giving of a future sign is seen several times later in the Bible. One was given to Eli, the High Priest of Israel in 1 Samuel 1, another was given to King Hezekiah in 2 Kings 19. One of the most famous of such signs was given by the Lord to the house of David in Isaiah 7 which says -

"Therefore the Lord Himself will give you a sign: Behold, the virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and shall call His name Immanuel." Isaiah 7:14

Like these other signs given to God's people, the Lord has a sign for Moses if he is willing to accept what the sign implies...

12 (fin) When you have brought the people out of Egypt, you shall serve God on this mountain."

The sign is given. It is stated as an accomplished fact. "When you have brought out the people" implies a deed which is past, even though it is still future. When it is performed, the sign will be confirmed. But once again there is a definite article in front of "God." You shall serve "the" God on this mountain.

Not only is the sign given, but it is given in anticipation of serving "the God," not "a god." The Lord who has called is the Lord who will be served. The call ensures His presence; His presence ensures the outcome; the outcome is anticipated in the sign; and the sign gives credit to the God in the service of Him.

Such a sign always appeals to faith. In that faith it then provides every assurance necessary of the outcome. The end implies the means. If Moses looked forward and said, "Yes, I believe that this sign is true," then he would know that nothing could thwart its outcome.

Understanding this in our own day and age, we can ask ourselves a simple question, "Do we have a sign which is comparable to the one Moses was given here?" Anyone? Is there something that we have been provided which follows the exact same pattern of what we have seen today? Anyone?

The answer is, "Yes." Moses was given the word of the Lord, from the Lord. That's all He was given. But it came from a bush which wasn't consumed, so he had something extra that we didn't have didn't he? No. He had nothing extra. The bush wasn't the sign, the bush was confirmation of the Giver of the sign.

We have the Bush. Moses saw a bush which wasn't consumed. That is beyond the norm. The bush spoke to him, something also beyond the norm. The voice identified Himself and gave instruction for Moses to follow, and it gave a token of the truthfulness of what was spoken.

What we have is no less miraculous. We have the Bible which is the testament to the same Lord who spoke from the Bush. It is the voice and the word of the Lord. It has been through the fire of time and yet it has never been consumed. Christ went through the fire of our judgment and He wasn't consumed. And finally, we have a group of people, Israel, who have been preserved and not consumed by times ravaging fire.

And He has given us direction to follow, just as Moses was given. And with the direction we have been given a sign. If we truly believe the giving of that sign, then the outcome must be assured for us, just as it was for Moses. Either that, or we're just wasting our time. Who would put faith in a sign that has no meaning?

Our sign is the hope of the resurrection. Our sign is the promise of eternal life. Our sign is to serve God on His holy mountain. The sign has been given and it must surely come to pass. The last page of the Bible says so -

"And there shall be no more curse, but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it, and His servants shall serve Him." Revelation 22:3

The reason why we are here is because of faith in the sign. However, one cannot receive what the sign implies without faith. There is nothing else we can do to be granted eternal life because the sign is based solely on faith. And so I would ask you to consider that. People want what the sign implies without the responsibilities expected by the Giver of the sign.

The Bible says there is a heaven and that only some will be headed there. The reason for this is that there is only one path which leads to it, and that is through the shed blood of Jesus Christ. God asks us to have faith in what His word says - all of His word. And so God asks us to have faith in the work of His Son which is detailed in that word.

And so please give me just another moment to explain to you about what He did and how you to can receive it and be granted eternal life in His glorious paradise...

Closing Verse: "O Zion,

You who bring good tidings,

Get up into the high mountain;

O Jerusalem,

You who bring good tidings,

Lift up your voice with strength,

Lift it up, be not afraid;

Say to the cities of Judah, "Behold your God!" Isaiah 40:9

Next Week: Exodus 3:13-15 (I AM THAT I AM) (8th Genesis Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

You Shall Serve God on This Mountain

And the Lord said:

"I have surely seen the oppression

Of My people who are in Egypt
And have heard their cry of affliction

Because of their taskmasters they have woes
For I know and am aware of their sorrows

So I have come down, them to deliver
Out of the Egyptian's hand
And to bring them from there in this matter
To a good and large land

To a land flowing with milk and honey
To the place of the Canaanites and the Hittites too
And the Amorites and the Perizzites and the Hivites
And also the Jebusites, a land which your fathers knew

Now therefore, behold, the cry in affliction
Of the children of Israel has come to Me
And I have also seen the oppression
With which the Egyptians oppress them constantly

Come now, therefore, and I will send you
To Pharaoh that you may bring
My people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt

I am calling you to do this thing
But Moses said to God, "Who am I that I should go
To Pharaoh, and that I should bring
The children of Israel out of Egypt as You have instructed so?
How can I possibly do this thing?"

So He said, "I will certainly be with you
And this shall be a sign to you that you I have sent
When you have brought the people out of Egypt too
You shall serve God on this mountain, so be confident

Moses was given a sign, a token of guarantee
That the word would surely come about
Thus he could conduct his affairs confidently
For him there would be no reason for doubt

And the same holds true for each of us
We can be wholly sure and confident as we go
When we call out to the Lord Jesus
Our future hope is guaranteed, in this we can know

Is there a great and mighty mountain that stands in our way?
It is less than nothing when on our side is God
He can make the trials melt away

And gives us a smooth path on which to trod

So, let's put all our confidence in the Lord

Because we have eternal assurances from Him in His word

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 3:13-15 (I AM THAT I AM)

Introduction: Exodus is loved for several marvelous stories. There is the story of the baby in the ark floating on the Nile who was tenderly received by Pharaoh's daughter. We have the burning bush that speaks to Moses. There are the great plagues which fall on Pharaoh and Egypt.

The parting of the Red Sea is so significant that we get the name Exodus from that account. And then there is the marvelous display of God's splendor as He speaks out the words of the Ten Commandments to the people of Israel as they stand at the base of Mount Sinai.

No sooner do they behold this sight than they famously turn from Him and make a golden calf to worship. These are but of few of the highlights which comprise this precious book. But of all of the great stories, probably the most famous single line in the book of Exodus is found in today's verses as Moses' continues his discourse with God from the bush.

It is so well remembered by God's people that it is probably in the top five of all memorized words found in Scripture. Just five simple words in the English and a mere three in Hebrew. And yet they are so significant in their meaning, that we will never fully understand all that they imply.

For all eternity, the true meaning of the words ehyeh asher ehyeh will be ceaselessly revealed to us. Other than the naming of Israel by the Jabbok River in Genesis 32, I have not felt such a profound sense of unworthiness in attempting to explain the importance of the words we will look at today.

Text Verse: "For I proclaim the name of the Lord:
Ascribe greatness to our God.

4 He is the Rock, His work is perfect;
For all His ways are justice,
A God of truth and without injustice;
Righteous and upright is He." Deuteronomy 32:3, 4

To proclaim the name of the Lord is to proclaim what is beyond human comprehension. Like trying to understand the very moment of the Incarnation of Jesus Christ, we cannot fully grasp the immensity of what the name Yehovah implies. All we can do is place words around the name to help form an image of who He is.

He is the Rock. All He does is perfect. His ways are just. He embodies truth in its fullest sense. He is righteous and in Him there is no unrighteousness. But in the end, they are only finite words failingly attempting to explain what is infinite - Yehovah, the Lord God.

Thankfully, God gave us more than mere words to help us understand Him. He gave us the Word, He gave us Jesus, the One in whom all the fullness of the Godhead dwells bodily. When we see Jesus, we see the Father. Thank God for Jesus who reveals to us the infinite in a form we can grasp! It's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. I AM THAT I AM

13 Then Moses said to God,

Again, as we have seen several times already, the term "God" here has a definite article. "Then Moses said to "the God." Pen that in for your future studies as it helps solidify what is being relayed. Moses has comprehended that this is "the" God. To confirm this, just as in verse 11, it says that Moses said to "the" God.

13 (con't) "Indeed, when I come to the children of Israel and say to them, 'The God of your fathers has sent me to you,' and they say to me, 'What is His name?' what shall I say to them?"

At first, this might seem like an inordinately unusual question to ask, especially because these are the covenant people. God has already identified Himself as the God of their fathers. It would seem that this would suffice. Wouldn't they know who He is?

But there is a difference between a description and a name. In Genesis, many descriptive titles have been used. There is the general title El or Elohim which would be the God of creation; He is the Lofty One. There is the title Shaddai, the Powerful One and the One who provides blessing and fruitfulness.

There is also Yehovah, the Existent One. These are descriptive titles that have been used more as designations so far. But are they actually His name? And so what is being asked here is, "Which is the name that I use when I tell them that the promises to our fathers will now be confirmed?"

Because each title represents a particular manifestation of His abilities and attributes, He wanted to know which ability would describe the One who fulfills the covenant. If the name is tied into the covenant, then the accomplishment of the covenant is assured in the name.

To understand this, think of the pantheon of Greek gods. They had lots of gods - Apollo, Athena, Dionysius, Hermes, Poseidon, Zeus and so on. If one were to go to sea, they would ask for Poseidon's help. Moses comprehends that there is but one God. However, He has revealed Himself in various ways. Which of these is the one that is proper and fitting to rest in based on His covenant promise?

This is particularly important because, of these marvelous descriptions, some had been ascribed to idols. For example, the title elohim was a general name which went beyond the people of Israel. And even Israel itself had called out to pagan idols, calling them their elohim. To properly identify God was therefore most important.

Moses' understanding of God has identified Him as the One, true, covenant God of Israel. And so, he is asking what name would be appropriate when calling out to Him? This is certainly the case, because the name he will be given in the next verse is a name which has already been used many times in the book of Genesis - Yehovah. However, in Exodus 6, the Lord will say this to Moses -

"And God spoke to Moses and said to him: 'I am the Lord. 3 I appeared to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, as God Almighty, but by My name Lord I was not known to them.'" Exodus 6:2, 3

The title of "Lord" or "Yehovah" was known to them and it was used often. But it was used as a descriptor, not as His name. From this point on, to His people it is His name. And it will be used over 6000 times in the Old Testament. The name is what is tied to His being and it is what allows the human apprehension of Him, limited as that may be.

14 And God said to Moses,

There is no definite article in front of the word God here. It is understood from the text that there is one God and that this one God is who is speaking to Moses.

Again, following the definite article when it is used and when it is not used in Scripture gives a much clearer picture of what is being relayed.

It's a shame that translations don't include it. Even though the definite article is used quite often in Genesis and Exodus, it is left out in large part from many other books. And yet, it is used many times in others.

For example, the books of 1 & 2 Chronicles use the definite article nearly 100 times, or a full quarter of the times it is used in the Old Testament. Why would that be? The reason is that they detail the history of the kings, both good and bad kings, along with their interactions with the surrounding nations with their false gods.

The word of God is being specific when necessary because from specificity comes understanding. In this case, no definite article is necessary because it is already understood that He is the only God. Here we are, looking at the very words of God as He attempts to reveal Himself to us and yet we may miss important details.

If so, then our understanding of Him will be less than what it should be. What a shame to come to worship Him and learn about Him and then quickly pass through His word without the most careful consideration of it.

The chances are that you will never go through any given passage of Scripture in detail more than once or twice in your life. With that as a probable truth, then to attempt to search out every detail with zeal will certainly be a source of rewards when you stand before the Lord on that great day of judgment.

And who is this Lord to whom we are accountable?...

14 (con't) "I AM WHO I AM."

ehyeh asher ehyeh - I AM WHO I AM. What God speaks to Moses in these words reveals the very nature of God. And yet, more is left unknown than we could ever know. Described in Revelation 4 are four living creatures which are at the very throne of God. They see Him continually and yet they never cease in glorifying Him. Here is the passage -

"Before the throne there was a sea of glass, like crystal. And in the midst of the throne, and around the throne, were four living creatures full of eyes in front and in back. 7 The first living creature was like a lion, the second living creature like a calf, the third living creature had a face like a man, and the fourth living creature was like a flying eagle. 8 The four living creatures, each having six wings, were full of eyes around and within. And they do not rest day or night, saying:

'Holy, holy, holy,
Lord God Almighty,
Who was and is and is to come!'" Revelation 4:6-8

These four creatures, full of eyes in front and back, never rest day and night as they proclaim words of astonishment - "Holy, holy, holy." He is the Lord God Almighty, the self-existent One who was and who is and who is to come."

From moment to moment and for all eternity, something new is revealed from Him to their eyes. In their utter astonishment at the ceaseless, endless glory which emanates from Him, they can do nothing but proclaim His surpassing greatness.

What do the words, I AM WHO I AM mean? Or, is that even the best translation of the words ehyeh asher ehyeh? The Pulpit Commentary says that in I AM THAT I AM "No better translation can be given of the Hebrew words." I agree.

When someone asks why we do something particular, how often do we say, "Oh, I am who I am." It leaves us with the impression that we are the way we are simply because of who we are. There is nothing to imply that we are self-existent. In fact, it can be inferred that we were created to be who we are. "Oh, I am who I am... because that's the way I was made."

But I AM THAT I AM, implies self-existence. There is being in and of Himself, no beginning, no end. Thus, it implies eternity, and immutability. There is what could be considered a more literal rendering though. A scholar named Geddes translates the words "I will be that I will be." If you have an NIV, they even footnote it this way.

However, despite being more literal, it is less idiomatic because it lacks the simplicity of the Hebrew. In other words, just because something is more literal, it doesn't always convey the idea in the way that is intended by the Hebrew itself.

I AM denotes existence in and of oneself, "I will be" doesn't necessarily convey that idea. In that case, it is as if Jehovah is ever-ready to be, but not necessarily that He is. The simplest conveyance of His nature isn't that He will be, but that He is.

Once its understood who He is, then who He will be follows naturally from that thought. If "He is that He is," then from there we know who He will be - always - because He never changes. But in not changing, that takes us back to the proclamation of the four creatures before the throne.

If they are forever proclaiming His holiness and yet He is unchanging, then His holiness is beyond what the finite mind can grasp or understand. No matter how long we behold the Lord, there will always be more of who He is which can be revealed.

No matter how much we see of Him and no matter how much we learn of Him, even forever and forever, it will still be infinitely less than what we will be able to learn about Him. Thus I AM THAT I AM is a term given for our benefit, but not our ability to comprehend.

Another scholar, Boothroyd, translates these words as "I am because I am." But the word asher which he translates as "because" is being used as a relative pronoun, not a subordinating conjunction. God isn't who He is because of anything. He is the First Cause of all things; He Himself is without a cause.

He is a Necessary Being. If He was caused, then He could have simply not been. If He could have not been, then there was a point when He wasn't. And if this were true, then He would still not exist because anything that once didn't exist would only begin to exist through something which exists already.

But if He is God, then there would be nothing before Him to bring Him into existence and there would then be no God. If there were no God, then there would be no thing. But there Moses is, standing in front of the burning bush being told that the voice from the bush is That which is without a cause and thus He is the cause of all other things, including the bush, including the fire, and including Moses.

The Hebrew is translated in its best sense into the English words I AM THAT I AM. The Greek translation of the Old Testament translates this as Ego eimi o' on - I am the existing Being. This explains the Hebrew more than it translates it, but it gives a good sense of the words.

As an exciting highlight to the passage, there is a pattern found here which is centered on this very verse. During a Bible study some years ago, we were going through this passage and my mother happened to be the one reading the verses that day as I explained them.

After talking about a verse, she started reading again and then said "Oh, I've read that already." I said, "No that's where you should be, but that tells you that there is probably a pattern which is hidden in the text." Anytime you have a repetition, it is there to reveal something.

And so we went through the passage and out came a chiasm, centered right on the proclamation I AM WHO I AM. In itself, the pattern shows the covenant keeping nature of God towards His people as is revealed in the very name that He speaks.

Exodus 3:8 – 3:17 – I AM WHO I AM

a 3:8(a) a land flowing with milk and honey

b 3:8(b) to the place of the Canaanites and the Hittites and the Amorites and the Perizzites and the Hivites and the Jebusites.

c 3:9(a) the cry of the children of Israel has come to Me

d 3:9(b) I have also seen the oppression with which the Egyptians oppress them.

e 3:10 I will send you to Pharaoh

f 3:12 this shall be a sign to you that I have sent you

g 3:13(a) The God of your fathers has sent me to you,

i 3:13(b) What is His name?

j 3:13(c) What shall I say to them

x 3:14 And God said to Moses, "I AM WHO I AM."

j 3:14(b) Thus you shall say to the children of Israel,

b 3:17(b) to the land of the Canaanites and the Hittites and the Amorites and the

Perizzites and the Hivites and the Jebusites

a 3:17(c) a land flowing with milk and honey

So... as you're reading the Bible, if you come across something which seems repetitive, make note of it and take the time to see if you can bring out a pattern. There are literally thousands of these and other types of patterns in the Bible.

Each helps us to understand the passage more clearly and to grasp what the intended meaning of that passage actually is.

14 (con't) And He said, "Thus you shall say to the children of Israel, 'I AM has sent me to you.'"

It is I AM who has commissioned and directed Moses to the children of Israel. The name is the assurance and thus the assurance lies in the name. It is a sign and a token to the people that Moses is the selected one and that Yehovah is the Source of the selection. The name will also ensure the outcome.

The name Yehovah, or Yahweh, which we translate as LORD is derived from a form of ehyeh which is used in this verse. It means to fall out, to come to pass, to become, or to be. And so with these words, God has confirmed that He is to be known to His people by the name Yehovah specifically.

This name, Yehovah, carries that same meaning - Being, He Is, or He Will Cause To Be. According to Abraim, to a Hebrew audience the name Yehovah may have looked very much like "He Who Causes 'That Which Is' To Be." As He is uncaused, then all things that exist were caused by Him.

He then is the First Cause of all things; the unmoved Mover; and the Giver of existence. It is this same Giver of existence who is described in multiple ways in the New Testament. Paul's words of Colossians 1 show us that he understood Yehovah of the bush to be the Lord Jesus -

"For by Him all things were created that are in heaven and that are on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions or principalities or powers. All things were created through Him and for Him. 17 And He is before all things, and in Him all things consist. 18 And He is the head of the body, the church, who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead, that in all things He may have the preeminence." Colossians 1:16-18

In that He is self-existent and that all things come from Him, then that means that all things are actually encompassed by Him. There is no place where we are, or could be, outside of His Being. David in the Old Testament understood this -

"Where can I go from Your Spirit?
Or where can I flee from Your presence?
8 If I ascend into heaven, You are there;
If I make my bed in hell, behold, You are there.
9 If I take the wings of the morning,
And dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea,
10 Even there Your hand shall lead me,
And Your right hand shall hold me." Psalm 139:7-10

Paul in the New Testament used this same argument to convince those in Athens of this truth. While standing in the Areopagus, he cited one of their own poets, Aratus, to show that this is actually a universally understood concept; something that anyone can grasp -

"And He has made from one blood every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth, and has determined their preappointed times and the boundaries of their dwellings, 27 so that they should seek the Lord, in the hope that they might grope for Him and find Him, though He is not far from each one of us; 28 for in Him we live and move and have our being, as also some of your own poets have said, 'For we are also His offspring.'" Acts 17:26-28

The name I AM, or its form Yehovah, implies an absolute uniqueness. If He is the Giver of existence, then there is none other that gives existence and therefore none other like Him. Isaiah's words show this to be true -

"I am the Lord, and there is no other;
There is no God besides Me.
I will gird you, though you have not known Me,
6 That they may know from the rising of the sun to its setting
That there is none besides Me.
I am the Lord, and there is no other;
7 I form the light and create darkness,
I make peace and create calamity;
I, the Lord, do all these things." Isaiah 45:5-7

The name also implies eternity. He is outside of time, having created it, and therefore though He interacts with it, it has no effect on Him, rather it is affected by Him. This is seen in Jesus' word of John 8 to the leaders of Israel -

Your father Abraham rejoiced to see My day, and he saw it and was glad."
57 Then the Jews said to Him, "You are not yet fifty years old, and have You seen Abraham?"
58 Jesus said to them, "Most assuredly, I say to you, before Abraham was, I AM." John 8:56-58

This is also confirmed in the letter to the Hebrews. Despite the divine Jesus interacting with time, He is outside of time and thus unchanging in His being -

Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever. Hebrews 13:8

Again though, it is appropriate to connect Yehovah of the Old Testament to Jesus of the New. As Jesus is the same yesterday, today, and forever, so it is with Yehovah. Malachi 3:6 tells us with the words, "For I am the Lord, I do not change."

There can be no escaping what the Bible proclaims. If Yehovah is the self-existent, eternal, and unchanging God, and yet Jesus is self-existent, eternal, and unchanging, then He must be God incarnate. The obvious nature of the words of the Bible can only mean this.

Though many attempt to diminish the implications of what the Bible teaches, they only do it to their own detriment. John made this perfectly clear when He wrote the opening words to his gospel account -

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. 2 He was in the beginning with God. 3 All things were made through Him, and without Him nothing was made that was made. 4 In Him was life, and the life was the light of men. 5 And the light shines in the darkness, and the darkness did not comprehend it." John 1:1-5

The existence of Christ is independent of creation, it is without conditions, and it is an existence from which everything else is derived and on which all else is dependent. The enormity of the words spoken concerning Jesus are equally as vast, awesome, and terrifying as those spoken to Moses from the bush at Sinai.

And yet, there is more to the name. The name I AM THAT I AM explains who Yehovah is in His ability to speak prophecy and then to fulfill prophecy. If He is the Creator of all that exists, and if He is outside of that created existence, then He can see all of that existence simultaneously - past, present, and future.

Throughout the Bible, God speaks of the future and then fulfills that which He spoke. In Genesis 15, He said this to Abraham -

"Know certainly that your descendants will be strangers in a land that is not theirs, and will serve them, and they will afflict them four hundred years. 14 And also the nation whom they serve I will judge; afterward they shall come out with great possessions." Genesis 15:13, 14

When the promise was made, it was sure to be fulfilled. Nothing could thwart it and nothing could change it. That time has now come to pass for Moses and He will fulfill what He has spoken. Israel will be brought out. And to this same group of people, another promise was made about 2600 years ago. Through Ezekiel, He said these words -

"Thus says the Lord God: 'Behold, O My people, I will open your graves and cause you to come up from your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel. 13 Then you shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O My people, and brought you up from your graves. 14 I will put My Spirit in you, and you shall live, and I will place you in your own land. Then you shall know that I, the Lord, have spoken it and performed it,' says the Lord." Ezekiel 37:12-14

Sure enough, in our own lifetime, this promise which was made to Israel during their first exile, long before they had been dispersed the second time has now come to pass. He can speak the future because to Him the future isn't the future. It's merely a part of what is laid out before Him.

And so that brings out yet another aspect of what I AM THAT I AM implies. As the words of the Lord through Ezekiel note, "I, the Lord, have spoken it and performed it." Because His words are guaranteed to come about, they can then be relied on.

In other words, He is faithful and true to each and every word that He has spoken and every promise that He has made. It can be no other way. Not only does He speak, but that which He speaks is a covenant in and of itself. His word cannot fail to occur. It is an inviolable word; a guarantee; and an unbreakable commitment.

Isaiah says that His faithfulness is like the belt on His waist, and John calls Him Faithful and True. All of this is tied up in the name Yehovah. These things are because they cannot be any other way. And still one more aspect of the name comes forth.

Because He is and because He is "He Who Causes 'That Which Is' To Be," then He is the source of all blessing and all that blesses. He is an inexhaustible, ceaseless, endless fountain of joy. We try to imagine what heaven will be like, but no matter how much we imagine, it will always fall short of what we can imagine.

When we behold the Lord, we will behold the very Source of all that has been or ever will be, including heaven. To see the face of the Lord then is to see the fullness of any expectation that we have had, have now, or ever will have. From Him will flow joys and delights that will never end. Thus David rightly said -

"One thing I have desired of the Lord,
That will I seek:
That I may dwell in the house of the Lord
All the days of my life,
To behold the beauty of the Lord,
And to inquire in His temple." Psalm 27:4

What more could one truly seek or desire than to behold the beauty of the Lord; the One from which all beauty is derived; the One from which all wisdom is attained; the One from which all joy streams forth; and the One who has eternity in His grasp and offers it to those whom He favors?

15 Moreover God said to Moses, "Thus you shall say to the children of Israel:

Again, there is no definite article in front of God. It is understood that this is the one God and the only God and so there is no need to identify Him as "the" God. And so elohim said to Moses, "Thus you shall say to the children of Israel." The words are intended for the covenant people as a covenant sign.

The words which He speaks are words of covenant surety.

15 (con't) 'The Lord God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, has sent me to you.

The term, "The Lord God" is Yehovah elohe. The word ehyeh or "I AM" spoken in the preceding verse is modified here into Yehovah. This is done by substituting the third person for the first person, but the meaning remains unchanged. Connected to this is the extended thought that He is the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.

The line is defined through them. The line of Abraham may include the son Ishmael, but it isn't of the line of Ishmael. The line of Isaac may include the son Esau, but it is not of the line of Esau. They may be included in their father if they belong to the Lord God of their father, but the line is not through them.

15(con't)This is My name forever, and this is My memorial to all generations.'

The name is Yehovah elohe, the Lord God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob. It is given for all generations. But this might bring us to ask why this name isn't given in the New Testament. The reason is that the Greek translation of the Old Testament renders Yehovah as kurios. This is then translated as Lord. In the Old Testament, it is generally spelled with all capital letters, signifying Yehovah.

In the New Testament, the Greek word kurios continues to be used when speaking of Jesus as Lord. But the thought of the One who Is, or the Existent One also continues in several ways in the New Testament. Jesus is called the Word of God, implying that He is the Existent One.

Also in Revelation, the term "Him who is and who was and who is to come" is used when speaking of Jesus on several occasions. And so the title continues in Him in this way and thus it is "His memorial to all generations." In Hebrew, the term is l'dor dor or "to generations generations."

Adam Clarke's thoughts on this verse are worthy of being quoted -

"While human generations continue he shall be called the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob; but when time shall be no more, he shall be Jehovah Elohim. Hence the first expression refers to his eternal existence, the latter to the discovery he should make of himself as long as time should last."

I am the One who created all things

And by Me all things are held together

My works are that of which the angel sings

Stretching out the heavens, they go on forever

I am the Lord who called Abraham so long ago
I am the One who renamed Jacob Israel
I spoke from the burning bush to Moses, you know
And of Me David in the Psalms does tell
I am the Word of God, who was and is and is to come
And I offer the water of life; be pleased to partake of some

II. I AM Implies I Will

Concerning behavior as a way of identifying things, Abraim says -

"In Hebrew Scriptures ... entities are reckoned solely after their behavior and not after their appearance. An entity is a behavior, not that which executes the behavior."

To understand this, just think of how we use our own language. If we see a picture of a pig, we would say, "That's a pig." The appearance of the animal is how we reckon the thing. However, if we see someone gorging himself on food, the common expression we would use is, "That's a pig."

And so we see the pig in this isn't the actual appearance, but rather the behavior. This is how things are named and identified in the Hebrew mind. It is a dynamic language of action in order to identify. Here's a question, "If you have a horse, a cow, and a swallow, which two of them are the most alike?"

In our language and way of thinking, we would say that the horse and the cow are certainly more alike. We do this because the appearance defines the thing.

However, the Hebrew word for horse and the Hebrew word for swallow are the same. It is the word sus.

The reason goes back to the behavior of the two. The verb sus denotes being swift or to flash by. A cow is an inactive fellow who chews on grass, plods along in the field, and then stops to chew on his cud. Rather dull and mundane is the cow.

But a horse, like a swallow, flits about. It darts to the left and it darts to the right. They both act with an unbridled freedom and an attitude that marks them as anything but mundane. In fact, Job describes the horse in this way -

“Have you given the horse strength?
Have you clothed his neck with thunder?
20 Can you frighten him like a locust?
His majestic snorting strikes terror.
21 He paws in the valley, and rejoices in his strength;
He gallops into the clash of arms.
22 He mocks at fear, and is not frightened;
Nor does he turn back from the sword.
23 The quiver rattles against him,
The glittering spear and javelin.
24 He devours the distance with fierceness and rage;
Nor does he come to a halt because the trumpet has sounded.
25 At the blast of the trumpet he says, ‘Aha!’
He smells the battle from afar,
The thunder of captains and shouting. Job 39:19-25

If the word sus implies swiftness, then we know that the horse and the swallow will be swift. The word kelev means dog, but the word is used to describe the behavior of people who act like dogs in the Bible - treacherous people, male cult prostitutes, and so on.

So what does this have to do with the great I AM? In understanding the name, we can more fully understand the behavior from which the name is assigned. In Deuteronomy, Moses reminded the people of Israel about what they saw on Mount Sinai. There he said this -

"And the Lord spoke to you out of the midst of the fire. You heard the sound of the words, but saw no form; you only heard a voice."

Deuteronomy 4:12

Just like He spoke to Moses out of the fire in the bush which wasn't consumed, He also spoke to the people of Israel out of the fire on the mountain. He went on to explain to them that because they saw no form, it tells them that Yehovah is not like anything in creation and therefore no created thing could represent Him.

The name Yehovah then defines His character. It is not an appearance, but a behavior. If behavior is what defines, then we can better perceive who Yehovah is. His name is I AM THAT I AM, and so it implies that He will.

I don't know how much this helps you yet, but just think on it. Reflect on the name, reflect on the things Yehovah has spoken, and reflect on the Person He revealed Himself as - Jesus. And then reflect on those things He has spoken directly to you.

If He is then anything He says must be - even if it hasn't happened yet. Jeremiah told the people of Israel that their captivity would last 70 years. The fact that the Lord revealed this to them was an absolute guarantee that the exile would end after 70 years, even if it hadn't happened yet.

Daniel understood this completely, and so he didn't pray to the Lord that it was time to return the people to the land after 57 years. Rather, he petitioned the Lord when the 70 years were completed. EW Bullinger, reading the Bible almost 80 years before the reestablishment of Israel, knew that they would be reestablished as a nation after 2520 years and it came to pass just as he surmised.

The point of this is that if I AM has spoken, He will. If Jesus is I AM, and He is, then He will. And so your commission today when we get done, is to take time to read the last page of the Bible. It won't take five minutes of your time.

And when you're reading it, don't look at it as a "future maybe" but as an absolute certainty. The voice from the burning bush, the voice from the burning mountaintop at Sinai, and the voice of the Lord who called out "It is finished" from the cross of Calvary are one and the same voice.

It is His voice that spoke out the words of the Bible and so those words reflect not appearance, but behavior. They are faithful, they are true, and they are inviolable. Nothing can thwart them, nothing can change them, and if they pertain to you because of your faith in Jesus Christ, then they are an absolute guarantee.

Have faith in this, look beyond the pains, the trials, the heartaches, and the times of depression. Lift your eyes to the hills from whence cometh your help - even to the heavenly Mount Zion to which we are headed.

Finally today I'd like you to consider your position with the Lord. Are you one hundred percent sure that the Lord of Creation, the self-existent, unchanging, and eternally glorious Lord will receive You according to the promises He has made to His children?

You can be sure by a simple act of faith in Jesus Christ. If you have never made such a commitment, please let me tell you what you need to know so that you have the blessed assurance of eternal life in His promised paradise...

Closing Verse: The name of the Lord is a strong tower;
The righteous run to it and are safe. Proverbs 18:10

Next Week: Exodus 3:16-22 (Expected Resistance; Assured Deliverance) (9th Exodus sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

I AM

Then Moses said to God

“Indeed, when I come to the children

Of Israel after to Egypt I trod

And say to them then

‘The God of your fathers has sent me to you

And they say to me in this way

‘What is His name? How do we know its true?

What shall I to them say?

And God said to Moses, in this way

"I AM WHO I AM, this I tell

And He said, “Thus you shall say

To the children of Israel

I AM has sent me to you
Be certain that these words then are true
Moreover God to Moses did tell
Thus you shall say to the children of Israel

The Lord God of your fathers is who
The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac
And the God of Jacob, has sent me to you

This is My name forever for acclamations
And this is My memorial to all generations
The name of the Lord is the surest guarantee
That what is proclaimed will certainly come about
As we read the Bible, we can the future see
All things He proclaims, and in them have no doubt

And so through trials or troubles let us not be downhearted
Rather, let us lift our eyes to God's holy hill
The raging ocean will surely be parted
And the path through it will be peaceful and still
We have this hope because of the Lord Jesus
Who has done all things marvelously for us

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 3:16-22 (EXPECTED RESISTANCE; ASSURED DELIVERANCE)

Introduction: Early on the morning of 6 June 1944 as the troops prepared to cross the English Channel for the D-Day invasion, there were probably two main thoughts on the minds of most of the people. 1) This isn't going to be easy, and 2) we will be victorious.

The Allied invasion force was comprised of 3 million men, 13,000 aircraft, 1,200 warships, 2,700 merchant ships, and 2,500 landing craft. Nobody in their right mind would commit such a sizeable force to certain suicide, nor would they commit such a force without a reasonable expectation of victory.

The crushing weight of an overwhelming force of men and material began to arrive in Normandy at fifteen minutes after midnight when paratroopers jumped in behind enemy lines. Then, just before dawn the Allied ships began to bomb the French coast.

At daybreak 135,000 Allied troops came forward like a tidal surge onto Normandy's shore, filling five landing sites. During the next five days, the forces moved forward in all sectors despite the fierce resistance of the enemy. Finally, on June 11th, the five landing groups met up and Operation Overlord proceeded as planned.

Text Verse: Though a sinner does evil a hundred times, and his days are prolonged, yet I surely know that it will be well with those who fear God, who fear before Him. Ecclesiastes 8:12

Moses has already been told that the Israelites will be delivered. That promise will be reiterated today, but he is also told that there will be expected resistance before the job is complete. Pharaoh will be determined to stand against the God he either doesn't believe in, or who he believes he can defeat.

But Moses is told that not only will the Lord prevail, the Hebrews will actually plunder the Egyptians on the way out of town. The greatest military power on the planet will be defeated by the wonders which the Lord will display in their presence.

This same God, the eternal and ever-watchful God who monitors the affairs of men, is in the business of deliverance. But even more, He tells in advance what will happen, when it will happen, and what the outcome will be. If He did this for Israel, and He did it for us when He gave His Son, then He will continue to be faithful right through to the end.

We have an absolute assurance of the good things to come because of the fulfilled promises of the past. Let's trust this and even cling to it during those times when the enemy seems so strong and capable. He's not. God is on our side. It is a certain truth to be found in His superior word. So let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Visiting I have Visited You (verses 16 & 17)

16 Go and gather the elders of Israel together,

Moses had asked the name of God who spoke from the bush and he received his awesome answer. His name is Yehovah. It is this name that he has been told to speak to the children of Israel as a memorial to all generations.

Now Moses is given his first true set of instructions. What was said before was merely in response to his question. In verses 9 and 10, he was given his call and the intent of that call when the Lord said these words to him -

"Now therefore, behold, the cry of the children of Israel has come to Me, and I have also seen the oppression with which the Egyptians oppress them. 10 Come now, therefore, and I will send you to Pharaoh that you may bring My people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt."

However, this verse is his first true instruction based on the preceding conversation. And if you think on them, you will see that His words immediately place Moses as the leader of Israel. Not only is he commissioned for a specific task, but he is to be considered as their leader in that task.

This is because he is asked to go and gather the elders of Israel together. The elders isn't speaking of the oldest people, but rather the leaders of the individual tribes. There certainly was and there has obviously continued to be a set hierarchy within the tribes. Moses is asked to gather those leaders together.

Based on the instructions which follow, it is granted to Moses to be the leader of those elders. Jacob was the true first leader of the 12 tribes and that leadership implicitly fell to Joseph because of his rule over Egypt, but there is no record of a continued leader.

Rather, the term "the elders" shows an informal coalition of the heads of the tribes. That will now change and an order and structure will come about which will continue on with Joshua and then into the time of the judges of Israel.

16 (con't) and say to them, 'The Lord God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared to me,

The same name and title he was just told in the preceding verse is repeated in this one. But rather than the way this is translated, some other translations make more sense. Instead of "The Lord God of your fathers." It should be "The Lord, God of your fathers." Or more specifically, "Yehovah, God of your fathers."

The word "God" instead of being tied to Yehovah, should be tied to the fathers. The reason for this is that in verse 14, He identified Himself as Yehovah. Therefore, it is a proper noun. The words translated as "I AM" and "Yehovah" are equivalent.

Therefore, the name itself is sufficient to fill all of the necessary requirements Moses had looked for. It was Yehovah who fulfilled past needs, and it is Yehovah who will continue to meet future ones as well. This is important because with the coming of Christ, we don't say "Jesus God, of our salvation." Instead we say, "Jesus, God of our salvation." Jesus is the name, God of is what He does.

The name Yehovah here identifies who God is, and "God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob" specifies the existing relationship. What might seem trivial or hair splitting is actually an important distinction.

16 (con't) saying, "I have surely visited you and seen what is done to you in Egypt;

In Genesis 50, these final words of the life of Joseph were recorded and which closed out the book -

"Then Joseph took an oath from the children of Israel, saying, "God will surely visit you, and you shall carry up my bones from here." 26 So Joseph died, being one hundred and ten years old; and they embalmed him, and he was put in a coffin in Egypt." Genesis 50:25, 26

It has been approximately 144 years since those words were spoken by Joseph which means that it is now about the year 2514AM. To get a mental picture for us to grab onto, 144 years ago would have been 1870.

In that year, among other things, construction began on the Brooklyn Bridge, the first motion picture was seen by an audience, the last states of the Union which had seceded in the Civil War were readmitted to the union, and the Florida Territorial Government was formed.

What seems amazingly distant to us is but a breath to God. And so in exact fulfillment of those words, Yehovah repeats them now in the ears of Moses. Joseph said "visiting will visit you." True to that promise, His words to Moses are paqod paqadti etkhem - "visiting I have visited you."

The many years of trial and hardship were not overlooked or ignored. Instead, they were awaiting their fulfillment. Yehovah promises and Yehovah fulfills. Nothing spoken in promise will ever be ignored or delayed. What a relief that we serve such a faithful and attentive God.

Joseph's words had probably become a known and repeated phrase by the Israelites and so hearing them spoken by Moses to them would bring the extra assurance of a fulfilled prophecy. Thus they would be words they could rely on and trust in.

And we have an identical New Testament promise that we repeat frequently as we await its fulfillment as well. The words of Jesus ring often in our ears and in our hearts, especially when times get a little tough. But because they were spoken by the same great God, we have the absolute surety that they will be fulfilled -

"Let not your heart be troubled; you believe in God, believe also in Me. 2 In My Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. 3 And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you to Myself; that where I am, there you may be also." John 14:1, 2

Doesn't hearing those words inspire you to persevere, even through the darkest times? And knowing that so much prophecy has been fulfilled, we can be even more confident in the absolute surety of what lies yet ahead.

17 and I have said I will bring you up out of the affliction of Egypt

Verse 17 repeats the words of the 8th verse of this chapter. Thus, they confirm those words, but they also confirm the words spoken by Joseph. And they also confirm two other specific promises as well. The first was to Jacob when he was just about to leave Canaan for the last time. There in Genesis 46 it said -

"So He said, 'I am God, the God of your father; do not fear to go down to Egypt, for I will make of you a great nation there. 4 I will go down with you to Egypt, and I will also surely bring you up again.'" Genesis 46:3, 4

And a full 215 years before that, a similar promise was made to Abraham in Genesis 15 -

“Know certainly that your descendants will be strangers in a land that is not theirs, and will serve them, and they will afflict them four hundred years. 14 And also the nation whom they serve I will judge; afterward they shall come out with great possessions. 15 Now as for you, you shall go to your fathers in peace; you shall be buried at a good old age. 16 But in the fourth generation they shall return here, for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet complete.” Genesis 15:13-16

There has been a continuous succession of words spoken by God to the covenant line to show them why He was doing certain things, how long those times would last, and to reassure them that even if individuals would die along the way, and even if afflictions were certain to come, God was still there to tend to each subsequent generation until the times reached their fullness.

17 (con't) to the land of the Canaanites and the Hittites and the Amorites and the Perizzites and the Hivites and the Jebusites,

With the exception of one word, this portion of the verse is an exact quote from Exodus 3:8. Instead of "the land" there it said "the place." There is a reasonable explanation for this change. If you heard the previous sermon, you know that there is a chiasm which spans the entire section which goes from verse 8 to verse 17.

In this chiasm, the order of verses 8 and 17 are reversed to complete the chiasm. In verse 8, it first said "a land flowing with milk and honey," and then it identified that it was the place of the people groups. In this verse, it identifies the people groups and then that it is a land of milk and honey.

The chiasm explains the change. It shows intentional purpose, order, logic, and harmony. It also allows us to probe into the mind of God and see what is important to Him as His word unfolds. What an absolute treasure this word is.

What a gift and what a joy!

It is to the land of these six people groups that God will lead the Israelites after their time in Egypt is finally realized. And it is to a wondrous land as the description of His words to Moses continues...

17 (con't) to a land flowing with milk and honey.”

This is now the 2nd of 20 times that the expression "a land flowing with milk and honey" will be used in the Bible. It is to this glorious land which is still beloved by the people of the world today, which is fought over and prophesied over, that the Israelites will be taken.

The expression involves both physical and spiritual connotations. The physical implication is that it will be abundant in livestock and grain. The spiritual implication is that it will be abundant in the word of God and in the instruction of that word. It will be the land of the people of God and the land of the word of God.

Praise the Lord from whom comes all good things

He provides His people with food and also with His word

It is to Him that my soul joyously sings

For He is the great, gracious, and glorious Lord

Praise the Lord for the food that we eat

Praise Him for stomachs filled with delight

The table is filled as we come take our seat
We are strong in the day and sleep contentedly at night

Praise the Lord for His wondrous word
Praise Him for the history and the stories it tells
When we read it, we can peer into the mind of the Lord
And for Him and His glory, the heart surely swells

II. Expected Resistance; Assured Deliverance (verses 18 & 19)

18 Then they will heed your voice;

Verse 18 is chock full of information. The chiasm which spanned the previous verses is ended and so there is no repetition in this verse. Instead, it takes on a new direction in the narrative. First, the Lord notes that the elders of Israel will, in fact, heed Moses' words.

Although Moses will be wary of taking on this responsibility and will need signs to confirm his commission, the implication here is that the name Yehovah along with the words that He has visited His people, should be sufficient to convince them of Moses' words and thus to heed what he says.

18 (con't) and you shall come, you and the elders of Israel, to the king of Egypt;

This is either a prophecy or it is a command. If it is a prophecy, it means that Moses will surely come with the elders to the king of Egypt. However, if it is a command, it means that Moses, must surely come before the king of Egypt with the elders of Israel.

There is no indication in chapter 5 that the elders did come before the king with Moses, but that could mean that either they accepted Moses' authority and granted him authority to represent them, or that they did go with Moses and are simply not noted as being present. Either way, there is nothing lacking if it was a prophecy, and there was no disobedience if it is a command.

18 (con't) and you shall say to him, 'The Lord God of the Hebrews has met with us;

The understanding one gets from the Bible is that different lands, different people groups, and different governments often believed that they were guided by a particular god. Some had many gods, but even these normally fell under the authority of a particular god for that land, people, or government.

As the Hebrews were a distinct people group, there would be nothing unusual with them claiming obedience to Yehovah, who is a particular named God. The king of Egypt would have had a main god whose will he would seek and whom he believed he would receive guidance from.

This is seen throughout the Bible and it is even noted that the true God would speak to those outside of the Hebrew people in various ways. Among others, He spoke to Pharaoh through Moses, He spoke to Balaam the prophet from Mesopotamia in dreams, visions, and by a donkey; He spoke to Cyrus, king of Persia through His word; and He spoke to the King of Nineveh through the prophet Jonah.

The Bible even implies that God spoke to a later Pharaoh about a matter which involved Josiah, king of Israel -

"After all this, when Josiah had prepared the temple, Necho king of Egypt came up to fight against Carchemish by the Euphrates; and Josiah went out against him. 21 But he sent messengers to him, saying, 'What have I to do with you, king of Judah? I have not come against you this day, but against the house with which I have war; for God commanded me to make haste. Refrain from meddling with God, who is with me, lest He destroy you.'" 2 Chronicles 35

In fact, Josiah didn't heed the word and he ended by dying from wounds suffered in that battle. Because of the beliefs of the people, there is no need to assume that Pharaoh didn't believe them. The only real question is, "Would he accept the word of Yehovah or would he reject it by figuring he and his gods were stronger?"

In this verse, it is now the 8th of 14 times that the term "Hebrew" will be used in Exodus, more than any other book of the Bible. In fact, the term is only used 34 times in the Old Testament and so the peculiar designation is used to specifically make a distinction between the Egyptians and the people of God.

Their plight is shown to be a parallel to the people of God in the end times where a similar distinction will be seen and where a similar display of God's power on behalf of His people will be realized.

18 (con't) and now, please, let us go three days' journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to the Lord our God.'

Why is this request specifically given? Some scholars suggest that it is because Sinai would have been a three-day journey on the most direct route. In verse 12,

God told Moses that the sign to him of the truth of His word was that they would worship Him on that same mountain and so they say it was a three-day journey.

However, in this same verse, we are told that the king of Egypt would deny the request and that he would have to see the hand of God before they would be let go. Therefore, the sign wasn't that they would go to Sinai and worship at their first request from Pharaoh. Rather the sign was that they would worship at Sinai after being freed.

Instead, the three-day journey probably had a two-fold reason. The first was to be away from the open idolatry of Egypt, of which even the Israelites had participated. In the wilderness there would be purity of worship. The second reason is found later in Exodus -

"Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, 'Go, sacrifice to your God in the land.' (meaning the land of Egypt, not the wilderness)

26 And Moses said, 'It is not right to do so, for we would be sacrificing the abomination of the Egyptians to the Lord our God. If we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, then will they not stone us?
27 We will go three days' journey into the wilderness and sacrifice to the Lord our God as He will command us.'" Exodus 8:25-27

These are the reasons for the requested-three day separation. The fact that God knew that Pharaoh would deny the request doesn't then indicate any deceit in either God or Moses because the plan was to actually leave Egypt. Rather, it was an offering that involved Pharaoh's free-will choice.

Just because God knows our choices, it doesn't mean that we don't have free-will in making them, nor does it mean that we will not suffer the consequences of them. Instead, what we choose stands as a testimony for our rewards or punishments by Him.

Pharaoh could have granted the request without any loss to his kingdom or any damage which will eventually result. But instead, he chose to harden his heart and put up a wall between him and God through disobedience to Yehovah, the God of the Hebrews.

19 But I am sure that the king of Egypt will not let you go,

"I am sure" found here and in the King James Version lacks the force of the statement. God isn't just sure, as if it is a feeling in His bones. Rather, He knows with absolute certainty. The words v'ani yadati should rightfully be translated "and I know."

But despite of this, was it wrong to make the request seeing as how He knew that the request would be denied? Well, let's look at it logically and ask comparable questions - Is it wrong that Jesus died for John, or Jane, or Tom even though God knew that they would turn down that great and noble sacrifice?

Is it wrong that God says in His word that He does not permit people to commit adultery, even though He knew that the world would be full of adulterers? What about where his word says that women were not to be ordained as pastors, elders, and bishops even though He knew they would arrogantly defy His word?

No, none of the things requested, offered, or commanded by God are wrong. He establishes the parameters and we are expected to respond according to those parameters. Full judgment will be executed on those who fail to do so. And every mouth will be stopped before it speaks in His presence. He is God; we are man. He is the Creator; we are the created. He is Potter; we are the clay.

19 (con't) no, not even by a mighty hand.

The words in Hebrew are v'lo b'yad hazaqah - "and no by hand mighty." One probably wouldn't think such simple words would be confusing, but they can be. The record stands that eventually by a mighty hand Pharaoh did let them go. And so "and no" is possibly better rendered as Becke's Bible of 1549, translates it -

"I am sure that the kyng of Egypt wyl not let you go, Except wyth a mighty hand."
Beck's Bible

Other translations agree with this as well. However, even after letting the people go, Pharaoh changed his mind, chased after Israel, and was destroyed in the waters of the Red Sea. And so, it could be literally intended that "no, not even by a mighty hand" is the final truth of the matter. Thus the waters covered over the very, very obstinate, and very hard-hearted man.

20 So I will stretch out My hand and strike Egypt with all My wonders which I will do in its midst;

The word translated as "so I will stretch out" is v'selakhti which carries a double signification here. In one sense, it is given as a sign of helping and saving assurance towards Israel. At the same time, it carries the sense of fighting against Egypt.

In Exodus 23:28, the same word is used as a promise of leading the Israelites while attacking the inhabitants of Canaan by sending out hornets against them. In Exodus 33:2, the word is used again in the same way by sending out the Angel before them.

All three times in Exodus the Lord sends out protection while sending out destruction. In the case of Egypt it would be with, as He says, "all my wonders." When we think of that which is terrifying to one side and yet wonderful to the other, we can get a glimpse of what lies ahead.

A volcano is certainly terrifying to those who are close enough to be engulfed in it. And yet from a safe distance, it is a wonder to behold. The same is true with any natural disaster or miraculous event. What God does against His enemies can only be viewed as terrible, but the same action will inevitably be viewed as marvelous in the eyes of those He is working for.

20 (con't) and after that he will let you go.

As a confirmation that what God intends will come about, Moses is given this absolute assurance. When the wonders have been stretched out upon Pharaoh by the hand of God, he will finally relent and release the Hebrew people. The word is spoken and it will come about.

The hand of the Lord is mighty to save
And the people of the Lord are in His hand
Thus in confidence of a blessed assurance let us behave
For His promised end will come and it will be grand

The enemies of God will be scattered in defeat
And yet His people will be rescued, each and every one
And at His great heavenly table, the redeemed shall eat
For the people of the Lord, it shall be done

Death is swallowed up in victory, it is true
Because Jesus has defeated the grave
He has done this for His people, for me and for you
Truly the hand of the Lord is mighty to save

III. Assured Deliverance and a Blessing (verses 21 & 22)

21 And I will give this people favor in the sight of the Egyptians;

There are certainly several ways in which this could come about. The first is that the Egyptians, after suffering the hand of the Lord, would be favorable towards the Hebrews, lest they suffer even more. It would be like a slave who would gladly bless his master if the beatings would but cease.

The second is that those Egyptians, if any, who were told of the events of the Passover and how to avoid the certain death of their firstborn, would be abundantly grateful at the sparing of their own children. This is more than probable, because at the exodus, it says that a mixed multitude went up from Egypt with them.

Assuming these were some of those who were told about how to avoid the deaths of the Passover, then we could also assume that there were others who were equally grateful but chose to remain in their homes in Egypt.

A third reason, though not mentioned specifically, but which is realized later, was the need for what is requested to make the implements of the tabernacle - the ark, the lampstand, the table of showbread, the altar of incense, and all of the other furniture of the tabernacle, along with the tabernacle itself.

If their God asked for such things and it was this God who had stretched out His hand for both protection and for destruction, then who wouldn't be favorably disposed to giving what was needed to erect the implements necessary for His worship?

A forth reason could simply be human pity. The people were beaten to dust for as long as anyone could remember and they had been plundered of their livelihood and their lives. To send them off without a blessing would only be adding insult to the injury which brought the Lord's judgment upon them in the first place.

There is no need to assume that this verse isn't just probable, but rather it is likely. And in it, there would have been nothing duplicitous or deceitful. Instead, the favor is to be perfectly understood from the context of the times.

21 (con't) and it shall be, when you go, that you shall not go empty-handed.

This is something that was explicitly promised 430 years earlier to Abraham when he was told, "And also the nation whom they serve I will judge; afterward they shall come out with great possessions" (Genesis 15:14). God who knows the future had promised Abraham and now the promise is reiterated to Moses.

22 But every woman shall ask of her neighbor, namely, of her who dwells near her house,

One of the most unfortunate translations in the history of the universe is that of the King James Version and it is for this verse. They, blindly following along from the Geneva Bible as they often did, translated this as "borrow" instead of "ask."

Borrowing implies returning, and it is perfectly understood from the situation that returning was not a consideration. And if it were, there would have been no need for the Lord to have given the Hebrews favor in their sight. We will lend to people we don't even like as long as we know they will return the thing.

The plundering of the Egyptians has brought a lot of criticism on the Bible over the years. People have used terms like "fraud," "theft," "deception," and the like to describe what occurred here. Surely comparisons to this and to modern Jews have been made, implying that it is a trait that permeates their society.

But what can one expect when a word and a context which surely means "to ask" is mistranslated as "borrow?" Rather, every woman was instructed to ask of her neighbor for the articles they would need and to which they had a 215-year right.

But, in these same words, the New King James Version also departs from what is correct. They say "But every woman shall ask of her neighbor, namely, of her who dwells near her house." Nobody else translates these words this way; it is incorrect.

Instead, it should read, "But every woman shall ask of her neighbor and the woman who lives in her house." Two categories are intended, not one who is being mentioned twice.

22 (con't) articles of silver, articles of gold, and clothing;

"Articles" can mean a whole host of things from weapons to utensils, and from cups to plates. Articles of silver and gold are specifically requested, not to enrich the Israelites, but for what the Israelites will do with them in the wilderness.

They are being prepared for an organized mode of worship which will continue on until the coming of Christ. And all of what they construct will picture Him... every detail of it. God is plundering the Egyptians in order to form worship for His people.

In Christ, God took from humanity in order to build His greater and eternal Temple. He did it in that Christ came from the stream of humanity to be the true Ark of that temple. And He has done it from His people who have become living stones in His temple.

There is nothing untoward or inappropriate in this verse. Instead, there is purpose and design as God prepares that which is holy from sources which are not so. But all things are from God and so all things can be purified by God. Even a miserable wreck like Charlie Garrett.

And in its ultimate sense, this request is actually a picture of Christ, coming from the unholy stream of humanity and yet perfectly pure in His being, purer than the finest gold which has gone through the refiner's fire.

22 (con't) and you shall put them on your sons and on your daughters.

It troubles me when I come to words like this and there is no immediate reason for why they're included. The verse has been very specific. After asking for the articles, it says they are to put them on their sons and daughters. Why was this even included? Comments on these words are short in coming, but I have a few suggestions.

Assuming that it is jewelry, one could guess that they wanted the youngest Hebrews adorned with the wealth of Egypt as a sign of opulence. If the children could be so adorned, then one would consider the wealth of the parents even greater.

A second reason would be to show that the youngest and weakest of the Hebrews was adorned with what the strongest of the enemy dare not attempt to steal. Who would adorn a mere child in this way unless there was the surety that the child was well protected?

Thirdly, it is to show that as Israel came to Egypt from Canaan during a time of deprivation, Israel would be returning to Canaan from Egypt with great wealth. Even wealth that overflowed to the youngest who could walk out of the land.

And lastly, it again pictures Christ who came from those sons and daughters. That which was of the greatest value of all came through them as they bore His lineage in their redeemed bodies.

22 (fin) So you shall plunder the Egyptians.

For 215 years Israel dwelt in Egypt. They came, and then during their stay Egypt blossomed and flourished under the authority of Joseph. Israel also grew mighty and prosperous. But eventually, they were robbed into poverty and crushed into submission.

What was there to show for Joseph's leadership and wisdom which literally saved the kingdom? Nothing. The plundering of the Egyptians was, in fact, a just reward for Israel's time and labor. The same word is used in 1 Samuel 30:22 to indicate stolen property that was recovered by its rightful owner.

This plundering of Egypt is then a just and proper transfer to Israel. When it actually occurs at the exodus, it will be as a picture of the final plundering of the nations of the world after the tribulation. It is exactly prophesied at the end of the book of Zechariah -

"Judah also will fight at Jerusalem.

And the wealth of all the surrounding nations

Shall be gathered together:

Gold, silver, and apparel in great abundance." Zechariah 14:14

In this, there is a truth which often escapes us because of the times we are afflicted and the many times we are on the losing end of the stick. But we can be certain that the Lord's people will always find gain in the end when striving against the powers of the world. The plundering of the Egyptians is nothing short of people receiving their just due. As the Pulpit Commentary says -

"Egypt, 'glad at their departing,' was to build them a bridge of gold to expedite their flight, and to despoil herself in order to enrich her quondam slaves, of whom she was, under the circumstances, delighted to be rid."

But there is one more picture to consider before we close. The plundering of the Egyptians pictures Christ's plundering of the devil. He gained control over humanity and to him, all humans belonged. However, Christ came to correct that.

Not only did He defeat the devil, just as Yehovah defeated Pharaoh, but He also plundered the devil of his most precious possessions - the souls of mankind. Thus the victory of Christ is prefigured in these words to Moses there at the bush on Sinai.

If you have found yourself in a situation which you think is unending and hopeless, don't forget that the end of the book is written. The final word is "Amen." And so we have the surety that God's word is truth and that it will come to pass.

God has built us our own bridge, finer than the purest gold, in order to expedite our own flight from this world of chaos and disorder, and to receive us on the welcome shores of a heavenly home. It is there and awaiting our reception.

If you want the faithful assurance that heaven is your own final destination, let me explain to you what is needed for you to take hold of it. Give me just another moment to tell you about God's love for you in His Son, Christ Jesus...

Closing Verse: Establish Your word to Your servant,
Who is devoted to fearing You. Psalm 119:38

Next Week: Exodus 4:1-9 (Three Signs to His People) (10th Exodus sermon)

By the way - that Allied invasion force which crossed the English channel... they won the war. Yes, there was expected resistance and it was most costly, but in the end, Europe was delivered. There was a strong and powerful force ready to take the victory. In your battle, you have a far, far more powerful hand stretched out for your deliverance. Don't be concerned; the outcome is assured.

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Expected Resistance; Assured Deliverance

Go and gather the elders of Israel

Together, and say to them

The Lord God of your fathers, known as well

As the God of Abraham

Of Isaac, and of Jacob too

Appeared to me, and his words so dripped

“I have surely visited you

And seen what is done to you in Egypt

And I have said I will bring you up

Out of the affliction of Egypt, thus it is true

To the land of the Canaanites and the Hittites and the Amorites

And the Perizzites and the Hivites and the Jebusites too

To a land flowing with milk and honey

To a place where the shekel will be your money

Then they will heed your voice

And you shall come, you and the elders of Israel

To the king of Egypt as one voice

And to him this you shall tell

The Lord God of the Hebrews has met with us
And now, please, let us go on a path to trod
Three days' journey into the wilderness
That we may sacrifice to the Lord our God

But I am sure that the king of Egypt will not let you go
No, not even by a mighty hand, thus it is so

So I will stretch out My hand
And strike Egypt with all My wonders
Which I will do in the midst of its land
And he will let you go, after my mighty thunders

And I will give this people favor
In the Egyptians' sight
And it shall be, when you go for sure
That you shall not go empty-handed, alright

But every woman shall ask of her neighbor
Namely, of her who dwells near her house
Articles of silver, articles of gold, and clothing
Be they a lovely shawl or a nice bright blouse

And you shall put them on your sons

And on your daughters also
So you shall plunder the Egyptians
When out of Egypt you go

There may be many years of lack in your life
Times of turmoil or anguish or strife

But in the end the child of the Lord
Will be brought out to abundance galore
We have this promise in His holy word
That there is eternal blessing; joy forevermore

Let us trust through the years of trial
And stand firmly grounded each of us
For inside heaven's gate is an ever-lasting smile
As we behold the beauty of our Lord Jesus
Thanking You, O God, receive our praise!
As we look forward to Your presence for eternal days

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 4:1-9 (THREE SIGNS TO HIS PEOPLE)

Introduction: In our society, we need to not be foolish about taking people at face value, especially with matters of great importance. Although it's nice to want believe people are honest, we eventually learn that it often isn't the case, even with "friends."

If we're in the military, how can we be sure an order is valid? Well, there are ways of ensuring it is. Many of them are written in prescribed manuals or are policies within the chain of command. Precautions are taken to make sure that traitors or impersonators don't step in and do harm to the unit.

And likewise there are penalties for not making sure of the authority of an order before following through with it. For example, the My Lai incident in Vietnam showed us that.

If we get a call on the phone about an overdue bill or unpaid taxes, before committing our credit card number to the person, we should check with the source of who is allegedly making the claim. The IRS doesn't make telephone calls about unpaid taxes. Instead they show up at your door with the proper credentials or contact you through the mail on official letterhead.

If someone came to your door and said he was with the IRS and that you owed them money, you'd be smart to ask for those credentials before continuing the conversation. If this is so for matters such as this, then how much more should we look for proofs in the most important matter of all, that of issues dealing with God.

And yet, the majority of people simply trust without any substantiation at all for their faith. If someone came to me today and said he talked to a burning bush and a voice from the bush told him he was the self-existent God and that he wanted me to follow this guy, I'd tell him he needed a bit more proof.

Joseph Smith who founded the Mormons claims that the Book of Mormon was translated from golden plates that he obtained from the angel Moroni. Eventually he says he gave them back to him. Is this something we should believe at face value? If so then the words of the Book of Mormon would be the testimony left behind.

But if that testimony contained faults, then it couldn't be what Smith claimed. Anyone who is simply willing to check the witness of the supposed sign of the golden plates will quickly realize that the Book of Mormon isn't just a false book containing errors, but that it is specifically argued against by the Apostle Paul.

And yet people blindly follow along with Mormonism and thus they condemn themselves to an eternity far different than the one offered by Christ. The same is true with many cults and a variety of other false religions, and even denominations in Christianity which have now departed from the faith.

Text Verse: "I marvel that you are turning away so soon from Him who called you in the grace of Christ, to a different gospel, 7 which is not another; but there are some who trouble you and want to pervert the gospel of Christ. 8 But even if we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel to you than what we have preached to you, let him be accursed. 9 As we have said before, so now I say again, if anyone preaches any other gospel to you than what you have received, let him be accursed." Galatians 1:6-9

Moses was given three signs to show to the people of Israel in order to confirm to them that his words were true. Those signs are recorded in the Bible and it now witnesses to us of what those signs intended. We can accept that it is true or we can reject it as a fairy tale.

If those signs are true, then they will be in accord with all of the rest of the word of God, they will contain the power of God, and they will point us to Jesus Christ. Is this the case? Do they do these things? If so, then we can believe them just as if we saw them with our own eyes.

This is the power of the word of God and the gospel message for all who believe. It is the power of God unto salvation. And it is power which is found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Rod of God (verses 1-5)

1 Then Moses answered and said,

Twice in chapter 3 Moses questioned God concerning His selection of him to accomplish the task set before him. First, in self doubt, he asked in verse 11 -

"But Moses said to God, 'Who am I that I should go to Pharaoh, and that I should bring the children of Israel out of Egypt?'"

Then after assuring him that He would be with him and confirm His spoken word to him, Moses next asked for a name that he could give to the people to prove he was selected for this purpose. We saw that in verse 13 -

"Then Moses said to God, 'Indeed, when I come to the children of Israel and say to them, 'The God of your fathers has sent me to you,' and they say to me, 'What is His name?' what shall I say to them?'"

After that, the Lord spent 9 verses explaining His name and what would transpire as the task was accomplished. All of the detail necessary was given to provide a broad panorama of the coming exodus of the people from Israel. However, after this detail, Moses' first response is one which lacks faith in what was presented.

1 (con't) "But suppose they will not believe me or listen to my voice; suppose they say, 'The Lord has not appeared to you.'"

Rather than a question, Moses' words are a statement of fact. Instead of "But suppose they will not believe me" is certainly "Behold, they will not believe me." The words were not a question but are an emphatic and preemptory statement.

In this then is a contradiction by Moses of the assurance he was given in chapter 3 where the Lord said they would heed his voice. There are several reasons why Moses would feel this way. The first is that he had already been shunned by the people once 40 years earlier. Despite the years, the rejection would have still stung.

A second reason is that the last time the Bible records the Lord appearing to anyone directly was when Jacob was just about to depart Canaan for the last time. This was 215 years earlier. Why would the Israelites assume that the Lord appeared to Moses who didn't even live among them?

And third, if the Lord appeared to him and told him that he would lead Israel out in a miraculous manner and by great wonders, then wouldn't he have proof that such great wonders were possible? Who would want to believe a person's claims when facing certain punishment from the people whom they served?

Despite the Lord's previous assurance, his lack of faith isn't unnatural. The same word of the Lord which came from the bush is recorded in the pages of the Bible. Many of His words apply directly to us - 100% sure and reliable. And yet we lack the same faith almost daily as things pop up and block the path we're on.

Moses was now expected to convince the people that his words were true. They had already rejected him once and now he was claiming both their leadership and requesting their implicit trust. If we lose heart and faith over small matters of our daily spiritual life, how much more Moses over the great challenge ahead!

He felt sure that if there was only a name, and a promise from that name, that they would not believe him even though the name was proclaimed from a bush which was burning right in front of his eyes. He saw it, they didn't. He was sure it wasn't sufficient to present to them this story. And apparently the Lord agreed...

2 So the Lord said to him, "What is that in your hand?"

This doesn't mean the Lord didn't somehow know what he was holding; it was obvious. Instead, it is a response to, and a preparation for, answering Moses' lack of faith in the outcome of what he has been told to do. This is the same thing that is seen other times elsewhere in the Bible.

In Genesis 32, while wrestling with Jacob by the Jabbok river, Jacob said to the Lord, "I will not let You go unless You bless me!" (vs. 26) Instead of simply blessing him, the Bible records -

"So He said to him, 'What is your name?'

He said, 'Jacob.'" Genesis 32:27

The Lord already knew his name. The question was actually the beginning of the response. And the same is true here. By asking Moses what is in his hand, he is really beginning his response.

2 (con't) He said, "A rod."

In reply, Moses answers with the Hebrew word matteh. It's a word used just over 250 times in the Bible and means a type of rod, shaft, or staff. But it also means "tribe" such as in the "tribe of Levi." In other words, the staff is emblematic of the tribe.

If Levi has a staff, it is his symbol of authority. The tribe which branches out from Levi would be represented by the staff of Levi. In essence, it is comparable to a coat of arms. This rod will reflect the power of the one to whom the staff belongs.

As Moses has now been selected as God's representative for delivering the Israelites, his staff will be representative of the power of God. Because of this, the rod will actually be called "the rod of God" in verse 20 of this chapter.

3 And He said, "Cast it on the ground."

Moses had been shepherding flocks until this point - a picture of the church age during the time of Israel's rejection of Christ. After the rapture of the church which was pictured in the first verses of chapter 3, the Lord will take on a new role in redemptive history.

The attention is once again on Israel and the name of the selected leader, Moses - "He who draws out," is given to show us that Jesus will be the one who draws out His people in the end times. His role will be more than a shepherd and so the symbolism is given here - "Cast it on the ground."

In ending the period of shepherding his flock, the rod will take on a new connotation. This is true for both Moses and for Jesus.

3 (con't) So he cast it on the ground, and it became a serpent;

The shepherd's staff becomes a serpent. In Hebrew, the word is nakhash. It is a general word for a snake or serpent rather than a specific type. This is the seventh time the word is used in the Bible, but five of those times were in Genesis 3 when speaking of the serpent who deceived the woman.

This rod literally turns into a snake for Moses. There are probably three specific reasons for this particular sign to have been given. The first is that God knew that the Egyptians, through magic, could do the same thing with their rods, making it appear that they had turned into snakes.

In order to discredit their tricks as false, the rod of Aaron, which will carry the same ability as Moses' rod, will swallow the snakes of the Egyptians. In their attempt to discredit Moses, Moses will turn and discredit them.

The second reason is because the cobra was the royal symbol of Pharaoh. It is what adorned his headdress and thus reflected his supposedly divine power. The conversion of the shepherd's rod to a snake, was then a sign. As Albert Barnes notes, "at once a pledge and representation of victory over the king and gods of Egypt!"

The third reason is because of who this Pharaoh pictures and from whom his power is derived. He pictures the antichrist and his power comes from the serpent who deceived the woman and who has continued to deceive the world throughout the ages. The devil is shown to be ultimately under the authority of the Lord.

And so this is not only a pledge and a representation of victory over the king and gods of Egypt, but it pictures the greater pledge of Jesus' victory over the devil and his antichrist.

3 (con't) and Moses fled from it.

The verse says literally v'yanas mosheh mippanav, "and fled Moses from its face." Being a shepherd, he would have known a poisonous snake from a harmless one. This was a poisonous snake, one harmful in the extreme. But equally as concerning to Moses is the fact that his rod had actually changed.

Rather than remembering that the Lord had told him to do this, his instinctive reactions took over. This then is an object lesson for Moses to learn to trust the Lord, regardless of what else occurred around him, no matter how remarkable.

The giving up of his shepherding duties for the trial ahead would continuously expose him to dangers. By learning now that these dangers couldn't hurt him, he would know that there was no reason to flee before them.

This is also a good verse to show us that Moses is the true author of the account. Anyone else would have certainly skipped this portion of the verse entirely. It is a nice confirmation that Moses is the human author.

4 Then the Lord said to Moses, “Reach out your hand and take it by the tail”

This is set in contrast to what it just said. Moses fled from its face, and he is told to take it by the tail. Anyone who deals with snakes knows that the best place to grab them is behind the head. If you grab a snake by the tail, there is a good chance of it turning around and biting you.

This instruction is one of faith-building. It is, in short, a picture of the Bible. The Lord said to Moses; the Lord says to us. There are things in the Bible we are asked to do that often seem contrary to what would normally be expected and yet when we do them, we find that things turn out just fine.

Paul tells us in 1 Thessalonians 5 to give thanks in everything. No matter what our situation or level of hardship, we are asked to be thankful for it. This certainly seems contrary to the norm, but it is an exercise in faith-building. This is what Moses is asked to do here - grab the snake by the tail and trust that it will be ok.

Interestingly, the word for "tail" is the word zanav. It is used 11 times in the Bible. In Isaiah 9:15, the prophet in Israel who teaches lies is said to be the tail, or zanav. As the devil is the father of lies (John 8:44), this makes a picture of Christ's power over the devil.

4 (con't) (and he reached out his hand and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand),

By faith in the Lord's word, Moses reached out and caught the snake which once again became a rod in his hand. This rod of God, which is the symbol of the power of God, is a picture of Christ. He first was the power of God from eternity past.

However, he abased Himself and came as a Man, he was cast to the ground and then crucified, becoming a representation of the snake just as He said in John 3. There He made a reference to the bronze snake which Moses carried in the wilderness saying that just as that snake was lifted up, so He too would be lifted up. In that passage, it uses the same word for "snake" as it does here.

But through the power of the resurrection, He once again became the power of God for all eternity. First he fled from the temptations of the devil just as we are told to flee from the face of sin. Then He defeated the devil and returned to His position of power.

5 “that they may believe that the Lord God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, has appeared to you.”

This is what is known as an imperfect, or unfinished, sentence. The sign was given and without saying it completely, Moses is told "that they may believe." Our thoughts have to insert the finishing words which would be, "Do what I have just shown you before the elders of Israel... that they may believe."

This sign is given then, not for Moses to believe, but for the elders to believe that the Yehovah appeared to Moses, that he had been appointed as their leader, and that he would deliver them out of the bondage of Egypt. And finally, that Yehovah is, in fact, the God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.

How can we be sure that Your word is true?

What sign will You give us so that we can know?

Why should we believe in and trust You?

We look for a sign, a miracle, or a heavenly show

I have given You a sign, the devil I defeated
All who come to Me are freed from the power of sin
There on the cross all men I entreated
Heaven's gates I opened wide for any to come in

The work that I have done is recorded for you
So that you can believe that I am the holy One
I am the Lord, always faithful and true
For so long you missed that I am God's only begotten Son

II. The Leprous Hand (verses 6-8)

6 Furthermore the Lord said to him, "Now put your hand in your bosom."

Although most people will instinctively get what is being commanded here, the NIV does a good job of putting in words that anyone can grasp. Though not a literal translation, it conveys the idea that's presented. They say - "Then the LORD said, "Put your hand inside your cloak."

In essence, he is to take his hand and hide it under his garment next to his breast.

6 (con't) And he put his hand in his bosom, and when he took it out, behold, his hand was leprous, like snow.

In following the word of the Lord, his hand became leprous, like snow. The type of disease described here always started with a blemish and progressively grew. The instant change from healthy to leprous would be contrary to any such known experience, and the fact that it was only on the hand which had been hidden would make it all the more remarkable.

Further, it was absolutely incurable. Thus only the hand of God could be involved in what had occurred. In Numbers 12, Aaron and Miriam will speak against Moses and the result of God's judgment will be most notable. There it says -

"So the anger of the Lord was aroused against them, and He departed.
10 And when the cloud departed from above the tabernacle, suddenly Miriam became leprous, as white as snow." Numbers 12:9. 10

The rod showed the vocation and implied the power of the individual. However, the hand holds the rod and wields the power. The leprosy then implies a type of judgment as much as anything else. And so we continue...

7 And He said, "Put your hand in your bosom again."

Moses was probably more than pleased to respond to this command.

7 (con't) So he put his hand in his bosom again, and drew it out of his bosom, and behold, it was restored like his other flesh.

If the change from healthy to leprous was amazing, the sudden cure back to healthy would be astonishing. Whereas the changing of the rod was a sign of divine power which credited Moses with authority, the changing of the hand was both a warning and a lesson for obedience to the appointed leader.

As we saw, Aaron and Miriam failed to heed that and Miriam received judgment. The granting of this sign to Moses was intended to show the dangers of resisting the Lord's command, but also it was a sign of assured deliverance for those who obey it.

This second sign then also once again pictures Christ. The hand is a sign of power, particularly the right hand. Jesus from eternity past has been the one to wield the power of God. However, for a term, He came to dwell among us and took on our nature.

If the leprosy was a picture of sin and sin's resulting judgment, then we can more clearly see His work. In the book of 2 Corinthians, Paul writes these words -

"Now then, we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God were pleading through us: we implore you on Christ's behalf, be reconciled to God. 21 For He made Him who knew no sin to be sin for us, that we might become the righteousness of God in Him." 2 Corinthians 5:20, 21

Just as Moses' leprous hand was a sign and a warning to the Israelites, even a plea through him, that they be reconciled to God, so was the work of Christ. He took on our human nature and died on a cross, becoming sin for us that we, through Him, might be reconciled to God.

After His work, He ascended to heaven, once again restored to His rightful position of wielding the power of God. It is a position for all eternity to come. In Christ, man is cleansed when he is obedient to His call. However, his sin and judgment remains when he fails to heed it. This is all pictured in the sign given to Moses.

8 "Then it will be, if they do not believe you, nor heed the message of the first sign, that they may believe the message of the latter sign.

The word "message" here is actually "voice." And so this verse more appropriately would say -

"It will happen, if they will neither believe you nor listen to the voice of the first sign, that they will believe the voice of the latter sign." World English Translation

Throughout the pages of the Bible it is noted that we can learn from God and we can learn from creation. And so these things are said to have their own voice. This is seen for example in the memorable words of David found in the 19th Psalm -

"The heavens declare the glory of God;
And the firmament shows His handiwork.

2 Day unto day utters speech,
And night unto night reveals knowledge.

3 There is no speech nor language
Where their voice is not heard." Psalm 19:1-3

The day, the night, the heavens above us, the beasts of the field, and even the stones themselves all have a voice which cries out. This is what the Lord means in these words to Moses. The signs, not Moses, will first proclaim their voice to the people.

The rod itself is actually shown to have a voice of its own elsewhere in Scripture. In Micah 6, the same word for rod, matteh, is said to speak to the people -

The Lord's voice cries to the city—

Wisdom shall see Your name:

“Hear the rod!

Who has appointed it? Micah 6:9

As these signs have pictured the work of the Lord, they are a voice calling out for us to understand, believe, and accept His work - all which is pictured by this encounter between the Lord and Moses. He has been called to be the leader of the people. As the Lord's messenger, he has been endowed with the power necessary to accomplish his calling. It is a perfect description of Christ.

The just will live by their faith, it is true

It must be believed that the signs are from the Lord

The Person, the work, the Life given for you

It is all recorded in God's precious word

The cross is our payment for sin

Because on the cross Christ became sin for us

And thus over the devil the victory He did win

Such is the marvel of the work of Jesus

How can it be that such love can be found?

Love to amaze, dazzle, and astound

III. Water and Blood (verse 9)

9 And it shall be, if they do not believe even these two signs,

There is no record that they either accepted or rejected the first two signs. All it will say when Moses meets with them is the following from the end of chapter 4 -

"Then Moses and Aaron went and gathered together all the elders of the children of Israel. 30 And Aaron spoke all the words which the Lord had spoken to Moses. Then he did the signs in the sight of the people. 31 So the people believed; and when they heard that the Lord had visited the children of Israel and that He had looked on their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshiped." Exodus 4:29-31

As the Lord is all-knowing and so would know whether the first two signs would be believed or not, then there must be a reason He says this now and why He will say His coming words of the rest of the verse.

There is nothing which is uncertain in God, only pure knowledge and specific reasoning. Such is the case with His word. It is given in a detailed way to show us more than just an old story of how Israel left Egypt, but a continuing story of how the future will also unfold.

9 (con't) or listen to your voice,

The first two signs that were given had their own voice. They were fully capable of speaking the intent of the Lord to the people. However, Moses himself could add to that. One person can look up in the sky and see blue and hear God speaking to them of beauty.

Another person can look up in the sky and see blue and hear God speaking to them of nice weather. Another may hear that its a good day to paint the house. All of these are the same voice from God's creation speaking to individuals in various ways.

However, there are other people who understand the reason for the blue. On a nice, clear, and cloudless day, the sky is blue because the molecules in the air take the blue light from the sun and scatter it more than they scatter the sun's red light.

Yes, the dust that we so dislike is what gives us our blue, blue skies during the day. At sunset, the red and orange is seen because the blue light has been scattered out, away from the line of sight. Like the blue of the sky, the people may hear the Lord's signs from Moses, but they may not understand them.

But Moses could then add his own voice to the signs, explaining them and relaying to them his own experience before the bush in order to convince the people of God's plan. However, they may also reject the first two signs and the voice of Moses as well. In this contingency, a third sign is to be given...

9 (con't) that you shall take water from the river and pour it on the dry land.

The river spoken of is the Nile. It is with all certainty, and even to this day, the source of Egypt's continued life. Should God stop up the waters, only death would be left throughout the land. The Nile then was a sort of deity to the Egyptians, the giver of life.

The dry ground or yabbashah in Hebrew is obvious. It is land which is without moisture. The word is used 14 times in the Bible and the first two are in the Genesis creation account where the dry ground is brought forth from the waters.

The dry ground is that which is in contradistinction to the waters then. Without the water, there is no life. This is seen clearly in Isaiah 44 when speaking of the reinvigoration of the Israelite people -

"Yet hear now, O Jacob My servant,
And Israel whom I have chosen.
2 Thus says the Lord who made you
And formed you from the womb, who will help you:
'Fear not, O Jacob My servant;
And you, Jeshurun, whom I have chosen.
3 For I will pour water on him who is thirsty,
And floods on the dry ground;
I will pour My Spirit on your descendants,
And My blessing on your offspring;" Isaiah 44:1-3

What should happen when water is poured on dry ground is obvious. What will happen is to be unexpected -

9 (fin) The water which you take from the river will become blood on the dry land."

What should give life instead will instead give judgment. The land cannot thrive on blood. Instead the land will remain dead. It is a picture of the Lord and His word once again. In Him is the water of life. Isaiah, John, and Revelation equate the water with life and with the Lord. However, in the Lord there is also judgment for all people.

The judgment will be found in Him for us, or in us from Him, but either way, there must be judgment for all who have sinned, and all have, in fact, sinned. For the third time, a sign is given which points to the Person and Work of Christ; His life and His cross.

To the Israelites, the first sign, the rod, was given for those already disposed to right religion and seeking out the work of God. The second sign, the leprous hand, would act upon the fears of those not yet convinced, but who became amenable to calling on God for safety's sake.

The third sign, that of the water and the blood, was a sign to the rest who looked to the Nile as a god but then realized that Yehovah, the God of Moses, was greater than this supposed giver of Egyptian life.

Again, the rod showed that a mere stick of wood could become a great power to destroy. The leprous hand, and the hand made whole, showed the ability to both punish and the ability to save. And the water and the blood showed that the world cannot count on all things continuing on without correction. Peace and prosperity without God can only end in judgment, suffering, and bloodshed - a picture of the tribulation period.

Finally, in these three signs are seen the three offices of Christ. The staff is emblematic of His prophetic office. He would come to proclaim the word of God and to destroy the serpent. The leprosy is emblematic of His priestly office. He would come to cleanse His people of sin.

And the third is a picture of His kingly office. He will judge the unrepentant world and their false gods through righteousness. Thus we see in the three signs Christ, our Prophet, Priest, and King.

According to EW Bullinger, "...the number three points us to what is real, essential, perfect, substantial, complete, and Divine." Surely this description perfectly matches the giving of these three signs. In them, we see the perfect, full, and Divine picture of the work of Christ for His people.

Because of this, Moses himself makes a splendid picture of one working for the Lord. He has been entrusted with the word of God, just as Jesus is the word of God. He has been granted the power of God, thus reflecting Christ who is the power of God. And he is a God-sent prophet, just as Christ is the ultimate embodiment of the Spirit of prophecy. He is our Lord; He is Jesus.

Once again, in just a mere nine verses, we've seen literally dozens of pictures of either the Person of Christ or the work that He accomplished. Sure enough as He told the people of Israel, all Scripture testifies of Him. It is all about Him and it is all intended to wake us up to our need for Him.

God knew before giving these three signs as to whether the people would believe the first two signs or not. And yet, he gave the third sign anyway, not because the first two may not have been believed, but because He wanted us to see the work of His Son confirmed and established through the three of them.

Obviously, if God gave such minute detail to these verses in order for us to see Jesus, then He really expects us to pay heed to them and to the message they convey. And so, as I do each week, I'd ask for another moment or two to tell you the simple path to salvation through the work of Jesus...

Closing Verse: "The voice of the Lord is over the waters;

The God of glory thunders;

The Lord is over many waters.

4 The voice of the Lord is powerful;

The voice of the Lord is full of majesty." Psalm 29:3, 4

If the voice of what is created is filled with wisdom and knowledge, how much more the voice of the Lord who did the creating. Surely His voice is full of majesty!

Next Week: Exodus 4:10-17 (Filling Life's Gaps) (11th Exodus sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Voice of the Signs

Then Moses answered and said

“But suppose they will not believe me

Or listen to my voice instead

Suppose they say

‘The Lord has not appeared to you.’”

And to this word no attention they pay

What then shall I do?

So the Lord said to him, “What is that in your hand?”

He said, “A rod I use when walking on the land”

And He said, “Cast it on the ground”

So on the ground it he cast

And it became a serpent, so not hanging around
Moses fled from it really fast
Then the Lord said to Moses, He did submit “Reach out your hand and take it by the tail”
And he reached out his hand and caught it
And it became a rod in his hand, no longer did it flail

That they may believe that the Lord
God of their fathers is who
The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac
And the God of Jacob has appeared to you
Furthermore to him said the Lord
“Now in your bosom put your hand
And he put his hand in his bosom at that word
In order to understand

And when he took it out, behold, what a show
His hand was leprous; white like snow
And He said, “Put again in your bosom your hand
So he put his hand in his bosom again
And drew it out of his bosom, and behold! we understand
It was restored like his other flesh, like that of normal men
Then it will be, by this design
If they do not believe you

Nor heed the message of the first sign
That they may believe the message of the latter sign that you do
And it shall be, if they do not believe the sign from its Giver
Even these two signs, or listen to your voice
That you shall take water from the river
And pour it on the dry land; another sign, another choice

The water which you take from the river
Will become blood on the dry land
So they know that of life I am the Giver
And that I am He who judges, this too they will understand
Three signs given for Israel to see and believe
And the signs testify to the work of the Lord Jesus
Let us refrain from lies intended to deceive
And hold fast to the word which God has given to us

Thank You, yes thank You, O great and awesome God
For the marvelous treasure, the superior word
It is a radiant light for the path on which we trod
And it leads us to the loving arms of Jesus our Lord

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 4:10-17 (FILLING LIFE'S GAPS)

Introduction: When the Lord sent out the disciples through the land of Israel, how did He send them? Anyone? In twos. Who did the Lord send to get the donkey for Him to ride on Palm Sunday? Two disciples. How many did He send to prepare for the Passover meal in the upper room? Two.

When the church at Antioch commissioned their missionaries, they did it at the Lord's command. What was that command? "Now separate to Me Barnabas and Saul for the work to which I have called them" (Acts 13:2). Two were selected for the work. After Paul and Barnabas split, Paul took a person named Silas with him and Barnabas took John Mark with him.

These and a host of other examples from the Bible give us a sure indication that two is certainly better than one when setting out on a task, journey, or ministry. God knew in advance that Moses would feel unqualified to fill the role he has been called to. And from the end of our passage today, we will see that God already knew Aaron would join Moses.

But instead of saying that at the outset, He took Moses through a methodical series of steps to allow himself to realize his own limitations and to understand where his strengths and weaknesses lay. Through this process, Moses is readied for the great challenges ahead.

Text Verse: "Two are better than one,
Because they have a good reward for their labor.
10 For if they fall, one will lift up his companion.
But woe to him who is alone when he falls,
For he has no one to help him up." Ecclesiastes 4:9, 10

Are you contemplating any major changes in your own life, or do you feel called to something in a great way? If so, from a biblical perspective, it would be wise to find someone to share in the challenge ahead and to work with you as you endeavor to meet the calling.

First, make sure you're compatible as people, especially that both are Christians who are willing to stand up for biblical principles that you are in agreement on. Then make sure that your goal is jointly agreed upon. After that, decide who will assume what role.

As you're going through this process, be sure to include the Lord in the matter. Bring it to Him and petition His blessing upon what you have set out to do. In this, you will have the highest probability of success. Setting the Lord first and seeking His will in any endeavor is what is recommended directly in His superior word. So let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. I Will Be (verses 10-12)

10 Then Moses said to the Lord, "O my Lord,

In beginning our look into this passage today, we see here words translated that aren't always clear to the reader of the Bible. If one reads the preface to their Bible, it will normally explain these things, but the preface is almost universally left unread. And so to ensure each of you is aware of the nuances of this first verse, I want to explain them to you.

If you look at the verse, you'll see it says "Moses said to the LORD" and the word "LORD" is all caps. That indicates the divine name, Yehovah or as some say Yahweh. In his response however, the word is "Lord" with only the first letter capitalized.

That is the word adonai. It is a way of speaking to Yehovah without saying His name. It is an honorific title which means "My Lord" when speaking of Yehovah specifically. As you read the Bible, you may also see the word "lord" with only lowercase letters. That would be the Hebrew word adon which means something like "master" or even "sir."

To see all three in one passage, you can go to Judges 6. In that, you will see where Gideon at first thinks he's talking to a man and so he says adoni, "my lord," human (small lord). But in a few verses, after finding out he is speaking to Yehovah, he calls Him adonai meaning my Lord, deity (Capital L, small ord).

Why is it important to know this? Because you want to know who is speaking to who... don't you? This phrase which Moses speaks to the Lord is bi adonai. It is filled with force. The same word, bi, is used at two critical times in Genesis and several other important times during the Old Testament.

His statement is somewhat disparaging, and yet somewhat supplicatory. In one way his is petitioning for release and at the same time he is showing disapproval of his selection to accomplish the task set before him as we see in the continuation of verse 10...

10 (con't) I am not eloquent,

In this, Moses presents his fourth difficulty concerning the Lord's selection of him. His words are lo ish devarim anokhi - "no man of words am I." Whatever words he intends to speak don't come to his tongue readily. Because of this, he lacks fluency as a speaker.

However, in the New Testament, Stephen - while speaking to the rulers of Israel, says that "Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and deeds." One might question how one can be "mighty in words and deeds" and yet be no man of words. Is this a contradiction? No.

Understanding Moses as a man dissolves the difficulty. He is the human author of the first five books of the Bible. It is a masterpiece of literature like none other ever penned. It shows the highest knowledge and intellect attainable.

His words have been studied continuously for over 3500 years and yet new insights are derived from them almost daily. Along with this, and included in his writings, are the accounts of his life and actions.

They show a man who was driven in his convictions, tireless in his duties, and abounding in his zeal for his people and his God. No statement less than "mighty in words and deeds" is fitting for the man Moses. And yet, despite this, his elocution was lacking in eloquence.

As a squiggle for your brain, the only other person in the Bible explicitly noted as being mighty in deed and word is Jesus. That is found in Luke 24:19.

Moses didn't understand how he could be used with such a vital defect, but it is no different than that of the apostles. In Acts 4, they are termed uneducated and untrained men, and yet they caused the Sanhedrin to marvel, noting that they had been with Jesus.

Because of the lack of eloquence by Moses and because of the lack of training in the apostles, it is God who thus receives the glory. Those he selects are instruments perfectly chosen for this reason.

10 (con't) neither before nor since You have spoken to Your servant;

Moses' words here are literally "neither yesterday, nor the day before, nor since You have spoken to Your servant." He is using an idiom to cover all time which has passed. His speaking has never been eloquent, and it hasn't improved even in the Lord's presence. He may even be curious as to why not.

His hand was leprous and his hand was healed, and yet his tongue has remained unhealed - "Oh my Lord, wherefore hast thou not healed my broken tongue?" He has misunderstood the purpose of his defect and has regarded it from a human, rather than a divine, perspective.

Rather than being a limiting factor for the task, it is a grace which will be realized in his continued dependency on the Lord, not on himself, for the completion of his calling.

10 (con't) but I am slow of speech and slow of tongue."

Ellicott notes that, "According to a Jewish tradition, he was unable to pronounce the labials, b, f, m, p, v." In other words, it is believed he had something of a lisfp. Whether it is that, or whether it was a st st st stutter, or whether it was simply an inability to stand and make an eeeffective ooooration because words came to him slooowly, it caused him to be "slow of mouth and slow of tongue."

This defect, or perceived defect, is not limited to Moses though. This man of God who would explain God's standards to the people, and who would set the tone for the entire dispensation of the law, is actually found to have the same limitation as the Apostle Paul.

It is Paul who would explain God's standards to the Gentile peoples, and whose letters set the tone for the entire Gentile-led church age. And yet, he confirms that he lacked in the same manner as his forefather Moses -

"For even if I should boast somewhat more about our authority, which the Lord gave us for edification and not for your destruction, I shall not be ashamed— 9 lest I seem to terrify you by letters. 10 'For his letters,' they say, 'are weighty and powerful, but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible.' 11 Let such a person consider this, that what we are in word by letters when we are absent, such we will also be in deed when we are present." 2 Corinthians 10:8-11

It is seen in the selection of both of these men that the power to speak well is not regarded as a necessary attribute for greatness. In fact, it can be deduced that both were chosen especially to avoid this perception so that the substance behind the words are to be considered above the delivery of them.

11 So the Lord said to him, "Who has made man's mouth?"

"So the Lord said to him..." It has to be remembered that the voice is issuing from a burning bush which isn't consumed. There is no discernable mouth by which the words are coming to the ears of Moses. That has to be a consideration in what is occurring.

Words come from somewhere and yet any physical source for the voice in his ears cannot be seen. And further, the voice says, mi sam peh la'adam - "Who made the mouth of Adam? In that Adam was the first man, and all subsequent men are from Adam, there is the revealed truth that the mouth of all men were made by the Lord when He created the first man, Adam.

As the Lord is the existent Being, then He is aware of the state of every mouth and has made his selection based on His foreknowledge. In essence, He is saying, "Wake up Moses. I know exactly what I am doing." The words are words of reproof.

11 (con't) Or who makes the mute, the deaf, the seeing, or the blind? Have not I, the Lord?

In this, four descriptions of man are given - the mute, the deaf, the seeing, and the blind. All four words are used for the first time in the Old Testament in this verse. Though similar descriptions have been seen in Genesis, such as that of Isaac's eyes being dim, these particular words have never been used.

Throughout the 1650 or so years before the Flood of Noah, and for the 850 or so since then, it wasn't until the manifestation of the Lord, the Existent One, in the bush that these conditions are noted as His work. This verse then is a part of what is known as progressive revelation.

Although it may have been understood that the Lord made the mute, not until this moment has that been explicitly revealed to be the case. It is a note of His sovereignty over all of the afflictions of man, both created and inherited, and that these come about for His purposes.

Every sense we possess and the perfection or imperfection associated with them are according to His will and good pleasure. It is also further implied that the remedy to the imperfections are according to His will as well - whether supernaturally, or whether we are selected to be born in a time when the cure is attainable through human effort. It is God who controls the entire process.

12 Now therefore, go, and I will be with your mouth and teach you what you shall say."

The commission is repeated, "Now therefore, go. You have no need to worry, nothing to be embarrassed about, and no limitations that you have will overcome you." Instead, the Lord promises v'anokhi ehyeh im pikha - "and I will be with your mouth."

In this is a portion of the divine proclamation ehyeh asher ehyeh - I AM THAT I AM. I am is speaking to Moses and He confirms that He will be with his mouth. If I Am is, then I Am "will." It is a complete and absolute assurance that cannot fail - in His presence He.will.teach.

This sentiment is perfectly represented in the Lord's words to the apostles in Matthew 10:18-20 -

"You will be brought before governors and kings for My sake, as a testimony to them and to the Gentiles. 19 But when they deliver you up, do not worry about how or what you should speak. For it will be given to you in that hour what you should speak; 20 for it is not you who speak, but the Spirit of your Father who speaks in you."

The word for "teach" in Hebrew is yarah, which properly means to flow as water, such as raining or pouring. Transitively, it means to throw or to shoot, such as an arrow. And figuratively it means to point out, as if one is pointing their finger.

One learns by experience and observance. In this, Moses has the assurance that I Am will be with him and that I Am will provide all that is necessary to accomplish the task set before him. There is only absolute assurance in what has been spoken will, in fact, come to pass. He will be directed like water or like an arrow.

This assurance is seen again in a young man of Israel who was destined to face many hardships as a prophet of God. His commission is seen at the beginning of the book which bears his name -

Then the word of the Lord came to me, saying:

5 "Before I formed you in the womb I knew you;
Before you were born I sanctified you;
I ordained you a prophet to the nations."

6 Then said I:

"Ah, Lord God!
Behold, I cannot speak, for I am a youth."

7 But the Lord said to me:

"Do not say, 'I am a youth,'
For you shall go to all to whom I send you,
And whatever I command you, you shall speak.

8 Do not be afraid of their faces,
For I am with you to deliver you," says the Lord. Jeremiah 1:4-8

It seemed that the lesson to Moses is a lesson which needs to be repeated time and again. It is, therefore, a lesson that all of us need to remember as well. We each have a commission and the Lord will both be with us in it, and fulfill it through us.

The Lord created man in His image and He did it well

And He still directs our state, even since we fell

He makes some men with eyes clear and bright

And He makes others' eyes dim, even as the darkest night

He makes one man the gentle breeze to easily hear
And others He makes so that even loud bells aren't clear

But in all states He can use us for His glory
Those who are lame can open their mouth and speak
And even the slow of speech can tell the gospel story
He can open deaf ears and strengthen hands so weak

II. Aaron the Levite (verses 13, 14)

13 But he said, "O my Lord, please send by the hand of whomever else You may send."

The exact meaning of these words is difficult to determine. Ellicott sees them as "A curt, impatient, and scarcely reverent speech. Moses means that he will undertake the task if God insists; but that God would do far better to send another."

Ellicott sees Moses as equivocating. In other words - "I will do it if necessary, but it isn't necessary because..." Another thought, which may be realized in Moses' words, is exceptional. He says, selah na beyad tislah - "send, I pray, by the hand you will send." Because of the future tense, it could actually be an inference to the Messiah.

"Oh Lord, I am not the Messiah. Send the Messiah." This very well may be the case, but Moses didn't realize that the Messiah would save more than the covenant people, Israel. And in order to do so, he himself would be used to picture this greater work of Christ.

Whatever Moses was actually thinking, the words have set an inappropriate tone because of the assurances which have already been given. He has been selected, the Name has been revealed, the signs have been given, and the assurances have been granted. Because of what has become an overly diffident attitude, the response of the Lord is more than understandable...

14 So the anger of the Lord was kindled against Moses,

This Hebrew expression can go from strong displeasure to being extremely angry. Whatever level of emotion, there would have been an accompanying change in the voice. We know this because it is Moses who penned the account for us to read.

For him to tell us that the anger of the Lord was kindled means that he could perceive that this was the case. We can look in surprise at the man who would speak to the Lord of Creation in the way that he has spoken, but we must surely also look in surprise that he honestly and openly recorded every detail of it.

The Spirit of God was upon him as he wrote, directing his words, but they are still his words as well. He faithfully recorded his own faults for us to see and learn from.

14 (con't) and He said: "Is not Aaron the Levite your brother?"

This the very first time Aaron is mentioned in the Bible. In all, he will be named 112 times in Exodus, more than in any other book. He is introduced now, which is at a time of need while Moses is struggling from self doubt.

The words here, "Is not Aaron the Levite your brother?" aren't intended as a question, but as an affirmative thought. It is rhetorical and it is a preparation for more information to come. But what is curious about this is the term "Levite." If he is Moses' brother, then the fact that he is a Levite is obvious. It appears unnecessary and even forced to include the distinction.

However, this inclusion follows the words of Exodus 2:1 which was the last time that the tribe of Levi was mentioned. There it said, "And a man of the house of Levi went and took as wife a daughter of Levi."

That was a preemptory statement to show that Levi would become the center of the biblical story. And sure enough, the entire story began to revolve around Moses, a son of Levi. What seemed unnecessary was a hint of the story to come. The same appears to be true with including the designation when introducing Aaron.

It very possibly may be a somewhat veiled confirmation of Moses' request to send the Messiah. Although preemptory in nature, the inclusion of the term "Levite" seems to be a hint that Israel would be given a law before the coming of the Messiah. If there will be a law, then there must be stewards of that law.

At this point in time, the Levites had not yet been chosen as the stewards of the law, but in God's mind they had. And if there was to be a law at the coming of the Messiah, then it showed that the law would be incapable of saving the people. Otherwise, there would be no need for the Messiah to come. This is explained in detail in Hebrews chapters 7-10.

In other words, the inclusion of the term "Levite" where it seems completely unnecessary is to show that God's plan has been meticulously constructed and is progressively being revealed with accompanying hints along the way as to what would happen, through whom it would occur, and how it would come about.

It, like all of the many pictures of redemptive history, gives us delightful tastes of the wisdom of God as it is ultimately revealed in the Person and work of Jesus Christ. What is veiled in these pictures is perfectly realized in Him.

14 (con't) I know that he can speak well.

The Hebrew literally reads yadati ki dabber y'dabber hu - "I know that in speaking will speak he." The word "well" used by translators is inserted. And the "he" is emphatic. Again - "I know that in speaking will speak he." It is an overall rebuke towards Moses.

"I know" - I am the Lord. I have all knowledge. What I know is known fully.

"That" - This particular point is what I know with certainty.

"In speaking will speak" - The words will come freely and they will come without reservation. They will pour out like water. There will be no withholding, but instead there will proclaiming.

"He" - He will speak. The job you have been unwilling to accept, he will do with zeal.

Moses has just been upbraided for his unwillingness to fully accept his commission. And yet, he has been given grace by receiving not just a spokesman, but his own brother. As Matthew Henry says about this union -

"The tongue of Aaron, with the head and heart of Moses, would make one completely fit for this errand. God promises, I will be with thy mouth, and with his mouth. Even Aaron, who could speak well, yet could not speak to purpose, unless God gave constant teaching and help; for without the constant aid of Divine grace, the best gifts will fail."

If nothing else comes to your ears from today's verses, the truth of free-will surely must. God, knowing in advance of the replies of Moses still allowed him to give the replies. And in His foreknowledge of Moses' perceived limitations, he graciously accommodated them rather than forcing His will upon him.

And even more, through the exercise of his free-will, and through God's fore-known accommodation of it, a team is organized that will accomplish all of God's purposes exactly as they were intended to come about, even before creation itself. Benson comments on this union -

"Moses excelled in wisdom and conduct, Aaron in eloquence. Such is the wise order of Providence. As in the human body each member has its different use and function, and all ministering to the good of the whole; so in the mystical body of Christ, God has dispensed different gifts to different members, and very seldom, if ever, gives all accomplishments to one; but to preserve a mutual dependance and relation, he distributes some to one and some to others." Joseph Benson

This is a necessary lesson to remember in our church life, our home life, and our business life as well. No one can carry out every task and God has given us one another in order to complement each other. Every person has something they can do without doing all of it.

So what is the role you're filling in the church? What is the role you fill in your family? And what is the role you fill at work? You should have one for each of them. If not, then you aren't working out your potential as you should.

14 (con't) And look, he is also coming out to meet you. When he sees you, he will be glad in his heart.

Aaron is the elder of the two. Without these words from the Lord, the meeting between the two brothers may have been awkward or even strained. Should Moses defer to Aaron as the elder even though he has received the commission? Should he mention that he will hold the superior office?

Will there be resentment or animosity? Will there be disbelief? The Lord has preempted such worries by showing once again his foreknowledge of the events which lie ahead. When the two meet, Aaron will be "glad in his heart."

To the Hebrew, the term b'libbow, or "in his heart," means more than emotional assent, but it is an assent of the mind as well. The heart is synonymous with the seat of understanding. Aaron won't just be pleased to see Moses, but he will make the mental assertion that Moses' selection as the principle in the task ahead is correct.

It is your choice, one I have given you

My word is written and its intent is clear

What path will you follow, what will you choose to do?

Will you turn away, or obediently will you hear?

All things are possible for one who has sound faith

But for he who lacks it, other's can join and help too

And together you can do what My word saith

Just work together and trust that My word is true

I will be with you until the very end
And all that I purpose will come about as planned
In times of need My grace I will extend
And to you I shall reach out My comforting, guiding hand

III. The Dynamic Duo (verses 15-17)

15 Now you shall speak to him and put the words in his mouth.

Moses is in the mediatory position between the Lord and man. When an oracle is received, it will be through him. From there the words will be his, but the choice of wording will be that of Aaron. The will of God, expressed in a concrete manner through His mediator, will be articulated with eloquence through His appointed orator.

I don't want to stretch the meaning or interpretation of this verse too far, but the process which is laid out is strikingly similar to that of the Trinity. The will of God the Father is expressed in a concrete manner through His Mediator Jesus. And this Mediator's duties will be articulated with eloquence through His orator, the Holy Spirit.

This process, exactly as noted, is laid out exactly in verses of the New Testament. In the case of Moses and Aaron now though, a man of ideas coupled with a man of eloquence, who are performing the will of God, will produce a most formidable team to contend with, and against which none shall prevail.

15 (con't) And I will be with your mouth and with his mouth, and I will teach you what you shall do.

Again, the word ehyeh, or "will be" is used. I Am will be. What greater guarantee is to be found in heaven or on earth? None. The surety of the words spoken now will carry Moses through another 40 years of life. With but a few prominently noted failings, Moses will trust I Am implicitly until his time of rest finally comes.

The Lord has given the guarantee that He will be with the mouth of Moses and with the mouth of Aaron for instruction in the imparting of His will for the good of the people of Israel. As Henry noted, "Without the constant aids of divine grace, the best gifts will fail." In the case of Moses and Aaron, the Lord's grace will be provided throughout the task set before them.

16 So he shall be your spokesman to the people.

The order here for Aaron will continue on during all the time of the Law, which is about 1500 years. Aaron will become Israel's first high priest and one his sons will follow him until the time of the destruction of the temple in AD70. The high priest would be the one to mediate between God and the people in priestly matters.

At the outset of his duties, the difference is that he would mediate between Moses and the people. It is a time of preparation for the priestly duties to come after the exodus from Egypt. However, as Moses is considered Israel's lawgiver, the role will actually continue on as is directed here until the ending of the law at the coming of Christ.

16 (con't) And he himself shall be as a mouth for you, and you shall be to him as God.

In what is a somewhat unusual rendering of words, the verb is repeated here for emphasis. It says, "And shall be he shall be to you a mouth." It is a way of saying with all certainty that Aaron will be the one to speak for Moses. And in turn, the Lord tells him that he would be to Aaron as God.

This doesn't mean Moses would be as God in actuality, but in divine inspiration. Because his words will be from the direct influence of the Lord, to Aaron they will carry that same weight and authority. This precept is actually comparable to the Bible itself.

Because the Bible is of divine origin, it carries the weight and authority of words issuing directly from the burning bush. This is the reason why it is the most important task of any man to properly handle, and rightly divide, the word of God. And it is the reason why James says this in his epistle -

"My brethren, let not many of you become teachers, knowing that we shall receive a stricter judgment." James 3:1

The authors of the constitution of the State of Tennessee understood this precept and entered the following into Article 9, that of "Disqualifications," to the Tennessee Constitution -

"Whereas ministers of the Gospel are by their profession, dedicated to God and the care of souls, and ought not to be diverted from the great duties of their functions; therefore, no minister of the Gospel, or priest of any denomination whatever, shall be eligible to a seat in either House of the Legislature."
Constitution of the State of Tennessee, Article 9, Disqualifications, Section 1.

In order to keep from having their attention distracted from their awesome duties before the Lord, they were prohibited from holding public office in the Legislature. The sacredness of Scripture is implied in these verses, spoken to Moses by the Lord. That which is of divine origin is to be spoken to the people on behalf of the Lord with eloquent care.

17 (fin) And you shall take this rod in your hand, with which you shall do the signs."

This section ends curiously, doesn't it? The importance of the rod is highlighted in its being mentioned once again. The rod itself is being tied into the signs to come. Only one sign was given earlier concerning the rod, that of the rod being turned into a snake. However, the rod is to be used for much more than that one sign.

And more, they are not just any signs as the King James Version implies. They translate this verse by saying, "...wherewith thou shalt do signs." But there is a definite article in front of "signs." It says ha'otot, "the signs." They are definite and they are multiple.

The signs which issue from the rod are highlighted at the end of this most important passage as a reminder that it is the work of the Lord which will accomplish all that occurs. In verse 20, this rod will be called "the rod of God." It is to be a continual reminder that the Lord is always there at Moses' right hand in power and for punishment.

In fact, in Numbers 20, Moses will forget this and he will use the rod in a manner contrary to the word of the Lord. As a result, he will be barred from entering into the Promised Land. Instead, he will die and be buried in the land of Moab.

The rod of God is a picture of Christ's power to rule and to effect His purposes among His people, for His people, and over His enemies. This rod and the associated miracles will now be used by Moses in this fashion and they will picture the greater work of the Lord in the end times.

This was prophesied by David in the 110th Psalm, where he uses the same word, matteh, or "rod" to show what is coming, maybe someday rather soon -

"The Lord said to my Lord,
'Sit at My right hand,
Till I make Your enemies Your footstool.'
2 The Lord shall send the rod of Your strength out of Zion.
Rule in the midst of Your enemies!" Psalm 110:1, 2

For Moses, the shepherd's rod has become the rod of God. And so it is with Christ our Shepherd and our God. It is to this all-powerful, all-knowing, and infinitely gracious Lord that our allegiance is due. With Him on our side, nothing in heaven or earth can separate us from God's love.

But without Him, nothing else can reconcile us to God and make us objects of His love. We must come to God through Christ. Jesus said that He alone is the way, the truth, and the life. If you have never committed to God through the shed blood of Christ's cross, please give me a moment to explain to you how you can...

Closing Verse: "Trust in the Lord with all your heart,
And lean not on your own understanding;
6 In all your ways acknowledge Him,
And He shall direct your paths." Proverbs 3:5, 6

Next Week: Exodus 4:18-23 (Israel is My Son, My Firstborn) (12th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Filling Life's Gaps

Then Moses said to the Lord

“O my Lord, I am not eloquent

Neither before nor since the word

You have spoken to Your servant

But I am slow of speech and slow of tongue

No one ever enjoyed a song that I have sung

So the Lord said to him a piece of His mind

“Who has made man’s mouth? Tell Me in a word!

Or who makes the mute, the deaf, the seeing, or the blind?

Have not I? Who else but I the Lord?

Now therefore, go, OK?

And I, with your mouth shall be

And will teach you what to say

It will be fine Moses, as you shall see

But he said, “O my Lord, please my word attend

Send by the hand of whomever else You may send

So the anger of the Lord was kindled

Against Moses, and He said:

“Is not Aaron the Levite your brother?

I know that he can speak well for you instead

And look, he is also coming out you to meet
When he sees you, he will be glad in his heart
The reunion will be sweet
Now you shall speak to him, so shall you do
And put the words in his mouth, as I instruct you
And I will be with your mouth and with his mouth too
And I will teach you what you shall do

So he shall be your spokesman to the people
And he himself shall be as a mouth for you
And you shall be to him as God
Everything will work out as it is supposed to
And you shall take this rod in your hand
With which you shall do the signs
By them all will come to understand
Of my purposes and my designs

Moses lacked faith in the plan given to him by the Lord
But the Lord knew this would be the case
And so the account is written in the word
To give us courage in the trials that we will face
We can know that we don't have to carry the load alone
Instead God has given us others to pick up the slack
We can send them an email, or call them on the phone

And know that with their help we will be on track
We are not left as orphans, and the Lord is there with us
And we have faithful family and friends to help out as well
Together we can redirect each other to the Lord Jesus
And of His sure promises, one another we can tell
Thank You for this great assurance in which we stroll
Thank You Lord, we know You have it all under control

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 4:18-23 (ISRAEL IS MY SON; MY FIRSTBORN)

Introduction: How many of you have heard some Bible teacher or preacher use the term "Slaying the giants in your life"? It's catchy isn't. Sure makes you feel good to know that just like David prevailing over Goliath, you too can prevail over your own giants. Hooray! Type in that phrase on You Tube and you'll have a list of sermons that goes on and on.

It's used as a motivational tool to tell you that you too can defeat any obstacle in your life, no matter how big, just like little David did. But there is a problem with looking at the Bible that way. This same young boy who defeated Goliath spent much of his life running away from other, often less formidable foes.

He ran from Saul, he ran from his son Absalom, and he even ran from God's word and into the arms of another man's wife. Elijah, the great prophet of Israel, defeated the 400 prophets of Baal and then.... ran from a woman named Jezebel.

The secret to strength isn't found in catchy phrases or clichés that people throw out in church on Sunday morning. The secret to strength which will defeat any foe is found in trusting the Lord. And this trust in the Lord doesn't mean that our business will be a success.

It doesn't mean that our home won't be foreclosed on. Nor does it mean that the cancer which affects our body has no right to be there. That is a really crummy way of interpreting the Lord's presence in our lives. What it means is that no matter what does happen to us, the promises of the Lord are greater than the afflictions we face.

Text Verse: The Lord is on my side;
I will not fear.
What can man do to me?
7 The Lord is for me among those who help me;
Therefore I shall see my desire on those who hate me.
8 It is better to trust in the Lord
Than to put confidence in man. Psalm 118:6-8

Moses was weak concerning confidence in himself. But eventually, the Lord got him straightened out and he is now ready to depart from Midian and head back to Egypt. He knows that the Lord is on his side and that He will be with him through whatever they face.

He also knows that as a token to him, he has the promise that he will return again to the mountain of God with the people that are delivered from Egypt. In this, he can place his confidence. And the same is true with us. Slaying the giants isn't about homes, finances, sicknesses, or bad marriages.

Slaying the giants is a transcendent thought. It says that no matter what I do face, God's word says that I am secure in Him despite those things. Jesus assured us that in this life we would have trouble, but He also promises to deliver us from this life to a new and better one someday.

It is the word which tells us these things and it is the word in which we can place our trust. Moses has his trust in the word of the Lord as he heads out and we should have our trust in the word as well. It was spoken by the Lord and so it is really the Lord that we are trusting when we trust the word. So let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Permission to Leave (verse 18)

18 So Moses went and returned to Jethro his father-in-law,

Moses took the flock to the west of Horeb where he saw the burning bush and had his encounter there with the Lord God. In verse 3:1, the flock was mentioned twice and yet it has not been mentioned again since then, nor will it be mentioned again. The focus went quickly from them to Israel and Moses' task of freeing them from the bondage of Egypt.

After the lengthy discussion with the Lord who spoke from the bush, the narrative abruptly ends and takes on a new direction. There was no recorded ending to the conversation as so often happens in the Bible. For example, when God departed from Abraham after their conversation in Genesis 17, it said -

"Then He finished talking with him, and God went up from Abraham." Genesis 17:22

Nothing like that is recorded here. Rather, we begin these verses with the need to insert our own thoughts about what may have happened. Did the bush just stop burning? Did the Lord excuse Moses and tell him everything would be ok? All we can do is speculate because all it says is "So Moses went and returned to Jethro his father-in-law."

But there is more than just a return here. The name Jethro isn't spelled the same as it was in Exodus 3:1 or even as it will be spelled later in this same verse. Rather, instead of yitro, it is spelled yetter.

The name yeter is spelled just the same as the word meaning "rest" or "remnant," as well as the word meaning "more" or "better." As we saw in Exodus 3:1-6, the rapture of the church was perfectly pictured. The rapture implies then that the church is gone and that anyone left will be on only one of two sides.

They will either be a remnant of people who are willing to forsake all for the hope of eternal life, or they will be of the innumerable people who will trade eternity for their temporary existence. The spelling of the name, yeter, is showing us this. Abarim says this about the notion of a remnant as found in the Bible -

"It seems that the most fundamental idea of the Biblical remnant is that a remnant is not simply an anonymous sample of the larger collective it's a remnant of, but rather a designated selection that kept the collective together in the first place. ... And it certainly indicates in what grave danger the world is, and how possible the events foreseen by rapture theology — which we here at Abarim Publications generally refute — might come to pass." Abarim Publications

It's worth note that Abarim wrote this, even though they refute the idea of a rapture. In other words, their words perfectly explain the picture of the rapture, and then a world divided by a remnant, and yet they don't believe in the rapture. They are completely unbiased in their analysis then, which fully supports what they refute, so they aren't making stuff up to fit their opinion about the rapture.

The different spelling of the name of Jethro to Jether is given to show us that the only thing that will save the complete annihilation of Egypt is the Hebrew people and the mixed multitude who stick with them. In picture, only the faithful Jews and Gentiles of the end times, who are willing to call out to Christ, will save humanity from complete annihilation.

I believe that one simple name, spelled differently, shows us all of this. The name Jether, representing the remnant, or the "better part" which is saved through trials of whatever type, means "Excellence." It is an excellent picture of those who are favored by the Lord who saves. Each name, Reuel, Jethro, and Jether, have been given to show us a relationship of people to Christ.

18 (con't) and said to him, "Please let me go and return to my brethren who are in Egypt, and see whether they are still alive."

Having been adopted into the family of Reuel by marriage to Zipporah, and having stayed for forty years in the land, Moses asks permission to depart from the clan. His reason is "to return to my brethren who are in Egypt."

The word translated as "brethren" can mean literal brothers, extended family, and also countrymen. He is asking to return to Egypt (meaning the land of double-distress) in order to return to his people. Though he doesn't tell Jether this, it is a return in order to deliver them.

Notice how Moses says nothing about the account from the bush. An entire chapter and a half are recorded concerning the talk between the Lord and Moses, and yet it is never mentioned when he returns to ask leave of Jether.

This is normally attributed by scholars to Moses' humility and not wanting to be a braggadocio about the great task on which he was being sent. However, Adam Clarke adds in an interesting concept which fits well with the next verse and also with what will occur during the tribulation period of the future. His words say -

"...if once imparted to the family of his father-in-law, the news might have reached Egypt before he could get thither, and a general alarm among the Egyptians would in all probability have been the consequence; as fame would not fail to represent Moses as coming to stir up sedition and rebellion, and the whole nation would have been armed against them. It was therefore essentially necessary that the business should be kept secret." Adam Clarke

Clarke's thinking is mostly correct. The plagues that are coming in Egypt will come upon an unsuspecting nation, and the plagues that are coming in the tribulation period will come upon an unsuspecting world. One must wonder how this could be possible when the Bible is written and it tells exactly what will occur.

But the Bible also tells us in 2 Thessalonians 2:9-12 that -

"The coming of the lawless one is according to the working of Satan, with all power, signs, and lying wonders, 10 and with all unrighteous deception among those who perish, because they did not receive the love of the truth, that they might be saved. 11 And for this reason God will send them strong delusion, that they should believe the lie, 12 that they all may be condemned who did not believe the truth but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

The plagues will be by the hand of God, but neither Pharaoh of the past, nor the anti-Christ of the future will accept that. Utter ruin will come upon those who have utterly rejected the Lord.

18 (con't) And Jethro said to Moses, "Go in peace."

His response to Moses is lek le'shalom which is exactly translated as "Go in peace." The approval is given and Moses has been granted his leave to return to Egypt, the land of double-distress. But now, at the end of the same verse that we have been looking at, the name changes to Jethro from Jether.

Though Jethro carries much the same meaning as Jether, the two names have been used to give us a clue concerning the end times. There will be a remnant and there will be a time when the remnant is ready to be delivered. Just as God knew the perfect time for Moses to return to Egypt, He will know the perfect time to accomplish His deliverance of the tribulation saints.

Someday Christ will resolve to return
Once again to His people Israel
To be with them, His heart does yearn
As the words of Scripture to us do tell
And when they call on Him in Spirit and in truth
He will be there to give them aid and strength
They will be like a man of vigor in his youth
When He returns to them in due length
May it be soon oh wayward Israel
That you call out to God to remove your heavy chains
He will return to you as when the tide on the shore does swell
When you cry out to Jesus, "Yes, our God reigns!"

II. The Rod of God (verses 19 & 20)

19 Now the Lord said to Moses in Midian,

Again, Yehovah is introduced into the narrative. He spoke to Moses at Horeb and gave him directions concerning the duties which lay ahead of him, but now he speaks once again to Moses in Midian the "Place of Judgment."

Each word is given to show pictures of Christ. If it weren't so, it would have said in the previous verse that Moses returned to Jethro his father-in-law in Midian. But it waited until now to mention Midian.

The order of the introduction of the names and places is perfectly selected to show an intricate set of steps is being followed. There is the church age which happened after Israel rejected Christ. Then the people of Israel cry out to "the God" and He in turn remembers His covenant with them.

After that, there is the rapture of the church. Then God purposes to deliver His people, and after that He sends forth the directive to deliver them. Step by step the order of this account of the past is given to show us the order of what will again come about.

19 (con't) "Go, return to Egypt; for all the men who sought your life are dead."

These words take us right back to Exodus 2:23 which said, "Now it happened in the process of time that the king of Egypt died. Then the children of Israel groaned because of the bondage, and they cried out; and their cry came up to God because of the bondage."

The narrative of the burning bush followed immediately after those words. But, it doesn't necessarily follow that the actual account of the bush followed after the words of Exodus 2:23. They could have happened before, simultaneously with, or afterwards. So when the king of Egypt died in chapter 2, it may be what the Lord is referring to here in chapter 4.

From this verse, it appears that the king of Egypt died after the account of the bush, but the order is given in Scripture to show a logical sequence of events which will come about in the greater picture of redemptive history, not necessarily a chronological account.

That's why it's important to look for phrases like, "after that time" or "on the next day." Those tell us that things are chronological. If they're missing, then it's possible they're not. In the New Testament, especially in the gospels, this is important so that we can tell what Jesus did and when.

God is looking for people to research His word. In return, He gives us all the assurance we need to feel that everything is under control. When people email you or call you about a question concerning a verse, it's because they have a need.

Sometimes it's a need to be reassured about God's goodness. Sometimes, people want to know if what they heard from the pastor is wrong. And sometimes, a person might need to be reassured that what they are reading isn't a contradiction of something else in the Bible.

If someone thinks there is an error or a contradiction, then the Bible no longer has the same value in their eyes that it once did. To know the details is to be sound in one's faith. All the squishy words in a sermon about how much God loves you really means nothing if the Bible has errors. If there are, then how do we know that one of them isn't the verse about God's love for us?

20 Then Moses took his wife and his sons and set them on a donkey, and he returned to the land of Egypt.

In contrast to the horse and the mule which are associated with kingly rule and periods of war, the donkey is associated with both humility and peace. Here

Moses is returning to deliver the people of Israel from the hand of Pharaoh, and yet he is coming to them after having placed his wife and sons on a donkey.

The contrast couldn't be more striking. He has abided by the words of Jethro to "Go in peace." Also, in the Hebrew it says "the donkey" rather than "a donkey." It is probable that it is worded this way to show that it is his personal donkey upon which he sets them. While they ride, he will lead them on foot.

Notice here too that it mentions both his wife and his "sons" in the plural. But so far only one son, Gershom, has been mentioned. It won't be for another 14 chapters that the name of the next son, Eliezer, is given.

The name Eliezer which means "God of help" is explained by Moses in chapter 18 when he says, "The God of my father was my help, and delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh." Unlike Gershom, despite him being alive, there is no record of his birth or name to this point.

It is things like this that show us that when a name is given, it is given for a reason and a picture of something else. There was no reason to mention either the birth or naming of Eliezer and so the Bible doesn't bother with it. Every word is selected to show us Christ or the plan of redemption. If something would interfere with that, it isn't mentioned.

This is why Jesus could say in John 5 to the leaders of Israel that the words of Scripture testify to Him. Because they do. Every word has been selected more carefully than the finest implements of the most precise watch or the most complex computer. The Bible is the most marvelous and precious treasure we could ever possess.

20 (con't) And Moses took the rod of God in his hand.

The phrasing here is precise. It says he "took the rod of the God in his hand." The Bible is specially pointing this out for emphasis. It is a set of words that would otherwise be completely unnecessary unless it is showing us something specific. When he gets to Egypt and does the miracles, he will use this rod. Therefore, it would be obvious he brought it along.

Saying this here is actually no different than saying that he took along his sandals, unless it is asking us to focus on the significance of the rod. The rod of "the" God is a picture of the power of the Lord. It will be the implement by which the wondrous works of God will be wrought.

But it isn't the mere rod which accomplishes the miracles. Rather it is the power of God of which the rod is emblematic. The definite article is intended to show us that this rod is set in contradistinction to the rods of the false gods of Egypt. This is the rod of "the" God.

Think of it! Moses is crossing the wilderness with a wife, and his children on his only donkey, and he is carrying a shepherd's rod in his hand. And yet, in this unlikely appearance is found the one person who will issue forth all the great miracles of God which have been discussed and analyzed for 3500 years.

And in this seemingly humble rod is found all of the power and authority to effect those great miracles. It is truly astonishing. As Keil says -

"Poor as his outward appearance is, yet he has in his hand the staff before which Pharaoh's pride and all his power must bow." Carl Friedrich Keil

The rod of God filled with power and might Imagine the terrors, and each awesome sight

The power of God is like a double-edged sword
It cuts to destroy in some, while others it does save
Great and terrible is the display of the Lord
And the judgment is rendered on how we behave

For those who are the redeemed, the wonders are great indeed
To see God's hand in such an awesome display of power
But for those who reject Him, He will finally proceed
To come after them with terrors in the final judgment hour

III. I will Harden His Heart (verses 21-23)

21 And the Lord said to Moses, "When you go back to Egypt, see that you do all those wonders before Pharaoh which I have put in your hand.

In chapter 3, Moses was given three signs to do for the elders of Israel. Those signs are not what the Lord is telling Moses about here. They were given for the purpose of validating his call before Israel, not to convince Pharaoh of anything. The wonders He speaks of here were mentioned later in chapter 3, in verse 20 -

"So I will stretch out My hand and strike Egypt with all My wonders which I will do in its midst; and after that he will let you go." Exodus 3:20

The word for "miracles" comes from the Hebrew word mopheth which speaks of something out of the ordinary course of nature. This corresponds to the Greek word terata which means portent. These portents would then be unusual phenomena, either natural or supernatural, which cry out for an explanation.

It is these which have been granted to Moses to accomplish, but the Lord says that they are wonders which He has "put in your hand." The hand holds the rod and the rod is emblematic of the power of God. Therefore, it is the granting of authority, symbolized by the rod in his hand.

21 (con't) But I will harden his heart,

"I will harden." What does that mean? It is one of the most controversial subjects to be found among scholars and its meaning will affect one's overall theology concerning the work of Christ in a person's life. Does God choose people for salvation apart from their will, or is free-will a consideration in one's salvation?

The I is emphatic, "I will harden his heart." But even that has to be considered against the effect of the wonders which are wrought. The hardening of Pharaoh's heart is ascribed in a variety of ways during the next six chapters. Sometimes, it says "The Lord" hardened Pharaoh's heart.

At other times it is ascribed to Pharaoh directly. And at other times it is ascribed to the action of the heart of Pharaoh itself. In this, the hardening of Pharaoh's heart is ascribed to Pharaoh himself ten times, and it is ascribed to the work of God ten times.

Therefore, this is telling us something about human nature in relation to the work of God. They are synonymous in the sense that they are one in the same operation being viewed from a different perspective. To understand this, we can think of the effects of heat on two different substances - say wax and clay.

When heat is applied to wax, it softens. When it is applied to clay, it hardens. The source of the heat may be the sun, a metaphor for God. The heat itself would then be a metaphor for the miracles that are performed. And the wax and the clay would be metaphors for either a receptive heart or a non-receptive one.

As will be seen in the coming account of the plagues, it is Pharaoh's self-determined will which has the priority throughout the wonders and therefore, the Lord's hardening influence presupposes the non-receptive, self-willed state of Pharaoh.

This is no different than a person in a union refusing to take out the garbage at work because its not in his job description, and yet willingly taking it out at home. He is married, and so whether it is in his job description or not doesn't matter. He'd do it for his sweetheart anyway.

But at work, the more pressure he receives from his boss, the more he hardens himself. In the end, and even though he is only harming himself towards his boss, he simply becomes more obdurate and more bullheaded.

The fact is, that the Lord doesn't come into humanity and zap a heart, making it hard. Rather, he allows us to follow our own perverse course and path, even if it harms us. Paul explains this exactly in Romans 1. First in verse 18, he shows how man willingly suppresses the truth -

"For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who suppress the truth in unrighteousness..."

Eventually because of a result of that, God gives them over to themselves fully as Paul notes in verse 28 -

"And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a debased mind, to do those things which are not fitting..."

As man sins, God withdraws the light of revelation from the mind because this is how we have been constructed. In the same way, when we withhold any natural affection, such as compassion, eventually that affections completely dies away. If something doesn't soften the heart, it will by default harden it.

And this is exactly what we see in Pharaoh. The first miracles are lesser miracles, even things that Pharaoh's magicians can do. By the time the greater miracles come, Pharaoh is so willingly hardened against the Lord, that it is said that the Lord hardens him. The reason is because the Lord continues to throw more at him in his already self-hardened state.

This same Hebrew word, which is khazaq, is used in a positive sense many times. A memorable one is from Joshua 10:25 -

Then Joshua said to them, "Do not be afraid, nor be dismayed; be strong and of good courage, for thus the Lord will do to all your enemies against whom you fight."

Nobody would even think that the Joshua is telling the people, "be hardened." Rather, he is saying, "be hardy" and he is telling them as an encouragement, not as an active action. The Lord isn't making them hardy. Rather, the Lord's words through Joshua are encouraging them to be hardy.

The hardening of Pharaoh's heart is a self-inflicted wound which was known would happen before it happened. As Clarke says, "God gave him up to judicial blindness, so that he rushed on stubbornly to his own destruction." And there is a reason why God chose to allow this...

21 (con't) so that he will not let the people go.

The hardening of Pharaoh's heart had a purpose, and that purpose was so that Pharaoh wouldn't let the people go. And by not letting the people go, there would be more glory revealed. And in that revelation, there would be yet more hardening which would bring about more glorious action. This is stated explicitly in Exodus 7:3 -

"And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply My signs and My wonders in the land of Egypt."

As all of this pictures judgment on the unrepentant world and false gods of the end times, all we need to do is look around the world now to see how deserved it is. The world is a cesspool of enmity towards Christ and towards the love of God found in Christ.

It is ripe for judgment and as judgment comes, the world will see His marvels displayed, but they won't repent. For each rejection, He will be seen all the more righteous in their final judgment and condemnation. This is exactly stated in Revelation 16:9 -

"And men were scorched with great heat, and they blasphemed the name of God who has power over these plagues; and they did not repent and give Him glory."

God will either receive glory actively from us in voluntarily worship, or He will receive it passively through the judgment of those who voluntarily refuse to worship Him. Either way, God will receive the glory He is justly due from His creatures.

22 Then you shall say to Pharaoh, 'Thus says the Lord: "Israel is My son, My firstborn.

This statement, which is being said to Pharaoh, would be perfectly and completely understood by him. The office of Pharaoh and the person who held that office was known as the "son of Ra," or the "son of the sun." To Pharaoh, the sun was a god and he believed he was the son of this god.

This alone would be enough to bring about an immediate hardening of Pharaoh's heart, and the Lord knew it. Thus, even though it is Pharaoh's choice, the Lord can say rightly, "I will harden his heart."

The son-ship of Israel is something that permeates the Bible. It is used literally as well as pictorially. In Hosea 11:1, it says -

"When Israel was a child, I loved him,
And out of Egypt I called My son." Hosea 11:1

This was literally fulfilled at the exodus and it is also cited by Matthew as a parallel and picture of Christ who was taken to Egypt after His birth to save Him from the wrath of Herod.

Too many scholars though say that the words "Israel is My son, My firstborn" means that Israel was as dear to the Lord as a son. But this isn't what it says. It says that "Israel is my son." It then designates Israel as His firstborn.

This is a divine son-ship which is spiritual in nature. However, it came about through a purchase. This is seen in Deuteronomy 32:6 where Moses tells the people that it is the Lord who bought them. It is a national purchase of a people to be His own special treasure, which is exactly what they are called in Deuteronomy 14.

But in these words is something else that is normally overlooked. By saying that Israel is the Lord's firstborn, it presupposes that more sons will come. This is dealt with in immense detail in the New Testament. As a people Israel was admitted into the work of Christ in advance of His coming. As a people we are admitted into the work of Christ after the completion of His work.

Each, whether from Israel or from the nations, is still saved individually by faith, but all fall under the right of admittance because of the work of Christ. When faith is exercised, then one becomes a child of God through adoption.

23 So I say to you, let My son go that he may serve Me.

A contrast to Israel's son-ship will now be made. But before it is made, a reason is given that Pharaoh should let him go. It is that Israel may serve the Lord. The word for "serve" has several meanings. It can mean to worship and so some translations say it that way. But it also means to work.

This is how it is used to describe the labors of the Israelites under the Egyptians in Exodus 1. And so a contrast is being made. In essence the Lord is saying, "You will let him go from his service under you so that he can come and serve Me."

But the service is a form of worship as we will see in the chapters ahead. And it is this which man was and is called to do. At the beginning, the Bible says that "the Lord God took the man and put him in the garden of Eden to tend and keep it."

However, based on the context, those words "tend and keep" have a more accurate meaning, which is to "serve and worship." This is the intent of Scripture.

It is to show how God has developed a plan to free man from bondage and to return him to the state he once was in when he was placed in the Garden of Eden.

On the last page of the Bible, this is realized. There in Revelation 22, it is noted that man will both serve and worship the Lord God for all eternity. This verse here is a stepping stone along that path. The Lord has a plan to deliver Israel for this purpose, and is using it as a greater picture of man's deliverance from the bondage of sin and the devil to once again serve and worship Him.

23 (con't) But if you refuse to let him go, indeed I will kill your son, your firstborn.'"

The contrast is now made. "If you refuse, your penalty will be commensurate with the request I have made. A son for a son is the offer." But this isn't recorded as having been spoken to Pharaoh until Exodus 11:5. By then Pharaoh's heart will be so hard, that he will refuse, even at the high cost which is stated.

Each plague was designed to build upon the next, further hardening Pharaoh's heart in order to lead to this final, terrible plague. But when the Lord accomplishes something, He makes sure that it is complete. If we can then equate this to the end times, the judgment upon the world will be absolute.

But, and this is personally important to each of us, if we harden our own hearts, we are the ones who will suffer because of it. Some of us are saved, but we allow a root of bitterness to enter into our walk with Christ.

When this happens, we lose heart, we lose joy, and we lose fellowship. And in the end, we will lose eternal rewards when we come before Him for judgment.

But some of us aren't saved. We haven't yet called out to Christ for His healing hand in our lives. We hear the call and we say, "Maybe later." Eventually, we just ignore the words completely. Our heart has become so calloused that the Spirit's wooing no longer stirs us.

Before that happens, I would hope that you would soften your heart and allow Christ to come in to you and save you. Please let me tell you what you need to do in order for this to happen...

Closing Verse: "Happy is the man who is always reverent,
But he who hardens his heart will fall into calamity." Proverbs 28:14

Next Week: Exodus 4:24-31 (A Husband of Blood and a Divine Visitation) (13th Exodus Sermon)

At the end of David's life, he faced a time of terrible trial. The Bible tells us that even when covered, he couldn't get warm; he was cold all the time. David didn't get up and slay the giant of his affliction. Instead, he trusted in the greater provisions of the Lord, the eternal promises of which he would someday partake.

Let's be sure to follow the examples of great men like Abraham, Moses, and David who kept their hearts soft and trusted the word of the Lord through affliction and through great difficulties which presented themselves before them.

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Israel is My Son, My Firstborn
So Moses went and returned to Jethro
His father-in-law, and to him said
“Please let me return, let me go
To my brethren who are in Egypt, among whom I was bred
And see whether they are alive still
And Jethro said to Moses, “Go in peace, as you will.”
Now the Lord to Moses in Midian said
“Go, return to Egypt
For all the men who sought your life are dead
Then Moses took his wife and his sons
And set them on a donkey, as we understand
And he returned to Egypt the land
And Moses took the rod of God in his hand

And the Lord said to Moses
“When you go back to Egypt the land
See that you do all those wonders before Pharaoh
Which I have put in your hand
But I will harden his heart as you know
So that he will not let the people go
Then you shall say to Pharaoh
"Thus says the Lord
Israel is My son, My firstborn

This is my spoken word
So I say to you, let My son go
That he may serve Me, I do warn
But if you refuse to let him go even so
Indeed I will kill your son, your firstborn
The Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart it is true
But it was done by Him in a passive way
When Pharaoh refused the Lord's word to do
His heart grew hard, and harder each day
Such is how sin affects our lives
It ruins the person that we should be
It affects our families, our children, our wives
And it also affects us each personally

And so don't let your heart grow hard towards the Lord
But rather draw near to Him and He will draw near to you Walk closely with Him and keep in His word
This is the thing that He wills for us to do
Such is the nature of our gracious God
That He will run to us when sin we do eschew
And we will be content and joyful on the road we trod
Because He is ever Faithful and True

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 4:24-31

(A BRIDEGROOM OF BLOOD AND A DIVINE VISITATION)

Introduction: In any relationship, there seems to be a dominant person and one who yields to the other. When I was young, my father was a realtor. He mentioned one time that there was always one person who was the ultimate decider of whether a house would be purchased or not by a couple. It was this one that the realtor would focus on.

However, he said it wasn't always easy to tell which it actually was. Sometimes the true leader was quieter than the other, and one might incorrectly assume that the other person was the one to target. When Paul and Barnabas were commissioned for their missionary work, they went out spreading the word.

At one time, while in Lystra, Paul healed a man crippled from birth. When the crowds saw it, they said that the gods had come down to them. In Acts 14:12 it says, "And Barnabas they called Zeus, and Paul, Hermes, because he was the chief speaker."

They thought that Barnabas was the lead god and that Paul was his chief speaker. In today's verses, we'll see Aaron speaking for Moses, but he is doing so to highlight Moses' ability to deliver the people of Israel from their bondage.

Together they will do great things in the sight of the people and eventually in the sight of Pharaoh, and Israel will be led out in a marvelous way. And like Paul and Barnabas, Moses and Aaron will have a time of disagreement as well, but in all they will make a marvelous duo as they lead and instruct the people of God.

Text Verse: You led Your people like a flock
By the hand of Moses and Aaron. Psalm 77:20

The flock of Israel will be led through some wondrous events in the chapters ahead. Together Moses and Aaron will be a fitting team for the task, and, at God's command, they will establish a religious system that has had an effect on the entire world.

After a brief look at three unusual verses of Exodus 4, these two great men will meet up and begin the work set before them. God has ordained each of us with certain gifts and certain abilities. Sometimes they work best when united directly with those of others. This is certainly true with Aaron and Moses.

If you find a person that you can accomplish great things for God with, then solidify that friendship and go forth in His strength. We have examples such as Moses and Aaron to remind us that with God, all things are possible. It's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. A Husband of Blood (verses 24-26)

24 And it came to pass on the way,

Moses has received his commission and his instructions. The last specific directions to him, and his compliance to them, began in verses 19 and 20 which said -

"Now the Lord said to Moses in Midian, 'Go, return to Egypt; for all the men who sought your life are dead.' 20 Then Moses took his wife and his sons and set them on a donkey, and he returned to the land of Egypt. And Moses took the rod of God in his hand."

After that, He was instructed about what to say to Pharaoh once he got there which comprised verses 21-23 -

"And the Lord said to Moses, 'When you go back to Egypt, see that you do all those wonders before Pharaoh which I have put in your hand. But I will harden his heart, so that he will not let the people go. 22 Then you shall say to Pharaoh, "Thus says the Lord: 'Israel is My son, My firstborn. 23 So I say to you, let My son go that he may serve Me. But if you refuse to let him go, indeed I will kill your son, your firstborn.'""

All of a sudden, this strange set of three verses is introduced. It seems to make little sense, but when taken in connection with those two previous sets of verses, it becomes clearer. The last thing it noted physically is that he "took the rod of God in his hand." He bears the symbol of the authority and power of God.

Because of this, he must be a suitable representative of Him and of His standards if he is to bear the responsibilities associated with those duties as His representative. Then, in his instructions of what he was to say to Pharaoh, there was a penalty noted for disobedience - the death of the firstborn.

The implication is that for obedience to God, there is no consequence, but for disobedience, there is a resulting penalty - death. The account here is given to show that this is the standard and that not only are the enemies of God's people subject to punishment, but so are God's people. Obedience is expected by all.

24 (con't) at the encampment,

The Hebrew says ba'malon. It basically means "at the inn." The word malon is a resting place, an inn, etc. However, where they are located, it would simply mean a stopping point for the night. Whether they set up a tent, slept in a cave, or if there was a standard caravan stopping point with a well and a palm tree, it would be rather rustic.

24 (con't) that the Lord met him

The Hebrew is specific, v'yipgeshehu Yehovah, "and met him Yehovah." What isn't specific is how Yehovah met him. Some see this as an anthropomorphic way of saying that Moses fell ill by unseen hand of the Lord, not an actual visitation. But the word pagash implies to meet or encounter someone.

The Lord has already visibly appeared to quite a few people in Genesis - Adam, Abraham, Lot, Jacob, etc. - and He will continue to do so at various points through the rest of the Old Testament, and so there is no reason to believe that this isn't a physical appearance of the incarnate Lord. He has appeared and he has specific intent in this appearance...

24 (con't) and sought to kill him.

The Hebrew is again clear in saying v'baqesh hamitow - and sought to kill him. But it isn't clear in who is intended to be put to death. Is it Moses or one of his sons? Not all, but most scholars side with it being Moses. He has been the center of the narrative, he has the commission, and he will continue to be the story's focus.

But it doesn't make sense to assume that the Lord would kill the person who has been given the sign of assurance, the signs of the commission, and the implement of authority for carrying out the task. Further, it doesn't fit the very pattern of the two previous sets of verses that we just looked at a moment ago.

Obedience to Yehovah is expected or the firstborn son will die by the hand of Yehovah. Therefore, the logical conclusion is that his son, not Moses, is who is intended here. In Genesis 17, these words were spoken to Abraham -

“As for you, you shall keep My covenant, you and your descendants after you throughout their generations. 10 This is My covenant which you shall keep, between Me and you and your descendants after you: Every male child among you shall be circumcised; 11 and you shall be circumcised in the flesh of your foreskins, and it shall be a sign of the covenant between Me and you. 12 He who is eight days old among you shall be circumcised, every male child in your generations, he who is born in your house or bought with money from any foreigner who is not your descendant. 13 He who is born in your house and he who is bought with your money must be circumcised, and My covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant. 14 And the uncircumcised male child, who is not circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin, that person shall be cut off from his people; he has broken My covenant.” Genesis 17:9-14

The child who is not circumcised was to be cut off from the people, not the father. Moses is returning to Egypt, and so the obedience, which fellowship with Israel entails, is required. How could a man lead the people without showing the same obedience to the law as they were expected to show?

As the New Testament tells us concerning this -

"...for if a man does not know how to rule his own house, how will he take care of the church of God?" 1 Timothy 3:5

The child is uncircumcised and therefore the situation must be remedied or the child will die. At the same time, Moses will learn another lesson in obedience to the call of God upon his life.

25 Then Zipporah took a sharp stone and cut off the foreskin of her son

Hearing the plight of her child who was to be killed, it is Zipporah who takes the sharp stone, probably a knife of flint, and cut off her son's foreskin. The word for "sharp stone" is tsor and it signifies a hard stone. As flint has been used for thousands of years for this and other purposes, it is certainly the most likely implement.

With this immensely sharp and effective tool, she performed the neglected rite of circumcision on her son. No reason is given why he was uncircumcised and there are a thousand speculations. That isn't really what matters though. It matters less whose fault it was or what the family was thinking. Rather, he simply wasn't circumcised according to the law of the Hebrews.

The most possible speculation which bears support from the few words we are given is that Zipporah was somehow involved in the neglect. This is because she is the one who now assumes the responsibility.

Perhaps she didn't want her son circumcised out of affection or because she didn't want him identified with Moses' people. But now the error of the decision is handled by her.

25 (con't) and cast it at Moses' feet, va'taga l'raglav - that's all it says. "And touched to feet." The name "Moses" has been inserted by the translators because they think he is the object of the action. But that is only an assumption. Also, the form of the verb should be taken as "touch" (qal) not "cast" (hiphil). It is a deliberate act of touching, not a careless act of tossing.

Whose feet are touched with the foreskin is not identified. There are three possible choices of those who are present. The Lord, Moses, or the child. Does it matter? Well, it matters to the Lord who gave us this word.

It also matters enough that no specific name has been given. In other words, it is asking us to consider what is going on without being told what is going on. The only One who has been explicitly mentioned and who will be implicitly mentioned again in the next verse is the Lord, not Moses.

In fact, in the first major section of this chapter, which went from verse 1 to verse 14, Moses was mentioned by name five times. In the next section, verse 18, he was mentioned twice, in the next, 19-23, he is mentioned four times, and in the last, which is 27-31, he is mentioned four times. But in this one section of three verses his name isn't mentioned at all. Curious yes... but a clue.

It appears that his name has been intentionally left out for us to focus on someone else, the Lord. If this is so, then it means that Zipporah has circumcised her son and then taken the foreskin and touched the feet of the Lord with it. It is a demonstration of fidelity to the ancient covenant and a request for mercy. As Matthew Henry says of her act -

"When God discovers to us what is amiss in our lives, we must give all diligence to amend it speedily." Matthew Henry

But why did she touch it to His feet? It seems like an irreverent act to do so, doesn't it? But in the Bible, the feet are somewhat of an exempt portion of the body concerning what is clean and what isn't. Having dirty feet doesn't necessarily mean defilement.

When someone came into a house to eat, they washed their feet, implying that the feet were unclean before washing them. They have trod upon the unclean world and yet they are not wholly unclean; the feet have been exempted. At the Last Supper, Jesus washed the feet of the disciples. In response to Peter's rash words about the matter, Jesus said -

“He who is bathed needs only to wash his feet, but is completely clean; and you are clean, but not all of you.” John 13:10

When Jesus rose from the dead according to the book of John, Mary went to hold Him there in the garden, but He told her to not cling to Him. However, when the women met Him on the road in Matthew, they were allowed to cling to His feet.

Even from the times prior to Moses, this concept of the exemption of the feet was known. When the Lord appeared to Abraham before destroying Sodom, Abraham, knowing it was the Lord, offered to wash His feet. This is found in Genesis 18 -

"Then the Lord appeared to him by the terebinth trees of Mamre, as he was sitting in the tent door in the heat of the day. 2 So he lifted his eyes and looked, and behold, three men were standing by him; and when he saw them, he ran from the tent door to meet them, and bowed himself to the ground, 3 and said, 'My Lord, if I have now found favor in Your sight, do not pass on by Your servant. 4 Please let a little water be brought, and wash your feet, and rest yourselves under the tree. 5 And I will bring a morsel of bread, that you may refresh your hearts. After that you may pass by, inasmuch as you have come to your servant.'" Genesis 18:1-5

These and other examples show us that what Zipporah did by touching the feet of the Lord with the foreskin of her son was not irreverent, but rather an understood petition for mercy from her.

In Revelation 1:15, Jesus feet are noted as being as fine brass, representing judgment. And even at the beginning of the Bible, in Genesis 3:15, it is the foot of the Lord which is indicated as crushing the head of the serpent.

In such examples and others, we can see that Zipporah's actions were not disrespectful, but rather they were in accord with custom concerning the feet. But why would she do this? The answer is found in the continuation of the verse...

25 (con't) and said, "Surely you are a husband of blood to me!"

ki khatan dammim atah li. In the Hebrew, the word blood is plural, "Surely husband of bloods you are to me." The sign of circumcision was the sign and the seal of the covenant community. Abraham was justified by faith in Genesis 15, and then came the sign of that faith many years later in Genesis 17.

Zipporah was acknowledging this faith through the circumcision of her son. The bloody ritual showed faith in what the ritual signified. Until then he was not considered a true part of the covenant people because the sign was lacking. If that was because of her petitioning Moses for the sake of not hurting her son, then she was now showing that the petition had been removed.

It is an acknowledgment that faith in the Lord's word, evidenced in the circumcision, is more important than anything else. The circumcision only points to the faith which required it. Without the faith, the circumcision would have been pointless. This is testified to through her touching His feet in a petition for mercy.

26 So He let him go.

The words are v'yirep mimennu. It means "and relaxed from him." It is implying that the action He was going to take has been "let go" or "cancelled;" He has ceased from His intent to carry out the execution of the sentence for covenant violation. The request for mercy has been made and now mercy has been granted.

26 (con't) Then she said, "You are a husband of blood!"—because of the circumcision.

khatan dammim la'mulot - "husband of bloods because of circumcisions." The word for circumcision here is used only this once in the Bible and it is in the plural form. Zipporah is making a pronouncement because of what occurred. The circumcision was accepted and the Lord restrained from His act.

Because of this, she is stating that through circumcision, one is accepted by Him. But this can't mean that the act of removing the foreskin is what ties a person to Him. If this were the case, then anyone who is circumcised in the foreskin is saved by a mere deed.

There are many cultures, even in Egypt, who circumcised in the foreskin. And yet, they are not a part of the covenant community. Rather, it is faith in the Lord and His word that brings them into covenant relationship. The circumcision is merely a sign of this. That is why Paul, in the New Testament says this -

"For he is not a Jew who is one outwardly, nor is circumcision that which is outward in the flesh; 29 but he is a Jew who is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the Spirit, not in the letter; whose praise is not from men but from God." Romans 2:28, 29

Paul speaks of "circumcision of the heart" regardless of the state of the flesh. And this concept of "circumcision of the heart" actually goes back to the Old Testament. Both Deuteronomy and Jeremiah show us that mere circumcision of the flesh is useless without also having the heart circumcised to the things of God.

Paul continues to explain the rite throughout his epistles, but a summary of his words is found in Galatians 5 -

"For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision nor uncircumcision avails anything, but faith working through love." Galatians 5:6

Zipporah exercised faith and her deed reflected that faith. What this asks us to consider then is what this means in her life. Moses had been called to go to Egypt and free the Hebrews. It appears that she must have felt that his task somehow left her out of the covenant promises and so she determined to go along with him.

Why would we suppose this? There are a few reasons. First, in the next verse, Aaron will come to meet Moses at Horeb. Moses had to have turned around after this and gone back to Horeb. Secondly, Zipporah and the sons are not mentioned again until Exodus 18. When they are mentioned, it will say this –

"And Jethro, the priest of Midian, Moses' father-in-law, heard of all that God had done for Moses and for Israel His people—that the Lord had brought Israel out of Egypt. 2 Then Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, took Zipporah, Moses' wife, after he had sent her back, 3 with her two sons, of whom the name of one was Gershom (for he said, 'I have been a stranger in a foreign land') 4 and the name of the other was Eliezer (for he said, 'The God of my father was my help, and delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh')."

It is apparent from this that Zipporah now understood that the redemption of Israel from Egypt meant that she was also included in the Lord's provision, regardless of whether she was actually there with Israel or not. The receiving of the Law at Sinai comes after her reunion with Moses, not before.

She will be there when the sign of promise which was given to Moses at the burning bush comes to pass. Together they will worship at the mountain of God. (NOTE: After more study, I am certain that Zipporah and the sons came to Sinai after the giving of the law. This is based on information from the Exodus 18:1-12 sermon). So the question is, "Why is this account, which has been termed "obscure, "unusual," and so on by so many scholars, even included?"

It seems like almost like an unnecessary insert between the call of Moses and the actual work which he has been called to. Even if it appears he was heading out in compliance to the call, it seems perplexing that this inserted detail is included. Couldn't the Lord just have said from the bush, "Moses, before you leave, your sons need to be circumcised?"

Wouldn't that have been a sufficient way of avoiding what is happening here? If so, and surely it is, then there must be a reason why the Lord allowed this to come to this point. There must be a reason why the specific details are given. And if there is, then the reason must both teach us a lesson and also picture something else later in history.

I believe these three verses are intended to show us that even though the church has been raptured out of the world, during the tribulation there is still hope for those who come to Christ. We saw at the beginning of Chapter 3 that the flock was taken to the west of Horeb, a picture of the rapture.

However, Zipporah and the children remained. As Zipporah is a picture of those in the church, and the children of Moses remained uncircumcised, then they picture those in the church who missed the rapture. They were never circumcised in their hearts. In other words, the child is a picture of those nominal Christians, or other people of the world, who never believed what they heard.

Those in this state are destined to death, just like all people on the earth during the tribulation. But there is mercy, even for those during this time if they call on Christ. It was thought that Zipporah had to go along with Moses and join with Israel to participate in what lay ahead, but this account taught them that this wasn't so.

Rather, they needed faith in the Lord to be right with the Lord. They needed circumcision - not specifically circumcision of the flesh, but a right-standing with God. This is why the term "husband of bloods because of circumcisions" was used. The words "bloods" and "circumcisions" are plural because there is circumcision of the flesh and there is circumcision of the heart.

Christ is the Redeemer of Israel, and He is the Redeemer of those of the church as well, even those left at the rapture. Christ is the Lord, they just needed to get that straight.

No matter where you are from or who you are

And regardless of anything you have done, no matter how wild

You can always make a new start, when you circumcise your heart

And you will be adopted as God's precious child

And a bridegroom of blood to you He will be

When you place your faith in the Lord

He will look upon your heart and there He will see
That You have believed in Him and in His superior word

Such is the nature of God's saving grace
And such is the wonder of His infinite mercy
Instead of His back, you will look upon His face
And in His eyes, for you... eternal love you will see

II. A Meeting at the Mountain of "the" God (verses 27 & 28)

27 And the Lord said to Aaron, "Go into the wilderness to meet Moses."

Instead of Moses traveling to Egypt with his family, and instead of him traveling alone to Egypt, the Lord now provides the proper format for those on a great mission to follow by initiating the effort. He directs Aaron to go to Moses.

As we noted a few sermons ago, when the Lord commissions someone for a task, the norm is that He will have two go together. Rather than Moses going alone to Egypt and finding Aaron, Aaron is directed to the wilderness to meet Moses. From there, the two will set out on the great mission of deliverance.

Moses has been freed from the burden of having a wife and children to deal with and has been given the additional freedom of a partner to help him through the difficult times ahead.

27 (con't) So he went and met him on the mountain of God,

In obedience to the word of the Lord, Aaron went into the wilderness. Whether they had met up before and Aaron knew the location or not isn't stated. All we have to go on is that it is Aaron who goes to Moses and it is to the mountain of "the" God.

Again as when this mountain was mentioned before, there is a definite article in front of it. It is har ha'elohim, "the mountain of 'the' God." There is particular attention being drawn to the significance of this mountain which is lost in the translation.

27 (con't) and kissed him.

Finally the verse ends with these words. Kisses are so rarely mentioned in the Bible that I always try to highlight them. Out of the jillions of kisses in human history, only about 37 are noted in the Old Testament and about 15 in the New.

In the book of Exodus, there will only be two. There is this one here between Moses and Aaron before the exodus, and there will be one between Moses and Jethro after the exodus. They are both between men, they are both signs of a bond of affection between family members, and they are both at times of reunions in greeting.

One is to a Hebrew, the other to a Gentile. There are contrasts between them, but there is also the confirmation of the bond in Christ regardless of national origin or location. There is harmony between peoples who belong to the Lord. It is a picture of the saved of the tribulation period - both Jew and Gentile.

To this point, Aaron has only been mentioned once and all we know of Aaron is that he speaks well. The Lord has selected him as Moses' mouthpiece before Pharaoh. Now he has been selected to journey to Moses and begin his great task, one he as yet knows nothing about. But that is about to change...

28 So Moses told Aaron all the words of the Lord who had sent him, and all the signs which He had commanded him.

What is obvious is that Aaron knew that Moses had been selected for a purpose. He was directed to go to Moses on the mountain of the God and meet with him. Now that he is here, Moses merely had to tell him of the words of the Lord and of the signs he was commanded to do.

It doesn't say that Moses showed him the signs, but that he told him of them. There would be no need to record that he did the signs for Aaron in order to prove his words. It was Aaron who was first directed by the Lord to go to Moses. Because he was, he wouldn't need to be swayed by the signs.

This doesn't mean Moses didn't do the signs for him. "Hey, watch this...!" But it is unnecessary for the Bible to show that Aaron needed convincing, because he didn't. The same, however, is not true with the leaders of Israel as will be seen in the verses ahead...

On the mountain of God, His people gather there
And rejoice in the reunion with those long departed
A kiss of joy for the cheek and arms raised in the air
A "Hallelujah" for a shout as the reunion is started

And in His presence, brothers will forever rejoice
Knowing that God brought them to His sacred mountain
Through believing His word, and making the choice
To drink from the waters of His overflowing fountain

Yes, what great things our God has done for us!
It is a gift to any and all who will but receive Jesus

III. So the People Believed (verses 29-31)

29 Then Moses and Aaron went and gathered together all the elders of the children of Israel.

Nothing more is recorded of the time of Moses' reunion, departing, travel, or arrival with Aaron. There are no recorded goodbye meals at the tent of Jethro, nor are there any stops along the journey recorded as in the previous verses.

Every word which is given has been carefully selected for a purpose. Nothing superfluous is added; nothing needed is lacking. Redemptive history has an amazingly detailed and precise record for humanity to read and consider.

Without any other words of record, we find Moses and Aaron in Egypt and together they have gone to gather Israel's elders. The implication is that there is a basic structure within the Israelite nation that already existed prior to the arrival of Moses.

The bond of brotherhood between this people has remained united in a unique and unbroken way for over 3500 years. And even when living within the confines of larger societies, they have remained distinct from them and they have had their own internal organizational structures.

The leaders of this set of organizations have been called for a very special meeting; a destiny changing meeting; a meeting with their new leader, and a reunion of fellowship with the Lord who established and called them as a people.

30 And Aaron spoke all the words which the Lord had spoken to Moses.

As the spokesperson for Moses, Aaron is the one who gave the presentation of the words to the sons of Israel. He would already have been known among the people and so rather than seeing a defect in Moses due to his slow speech, they would see the strength in Moses because of his known brother's support of him.

This account doesn't mean that Moses didn't speak, but that Aaron did. They may have asked Moses for words, but the words of the commission are what is presented by Aaron. The fact that Moses may have then answered questions is actually in accord with the directions Paul gives for the church in the New Testament -

"Let two or three prophets speak, and let the others judge."

1 Corinthians 14:29

What matters is what is said, Aaron passed on the words of confirmation concerning Moses' election by God to be the leader of the sons of Israel.

30 (con't) Then he did the signs in the sight of the people.

This seems to imply that Aaron not only spoke on Moses' behalf, but that he also performed the signs. Others disagree and insert Moses here as the Bible's unnamed sign-giver. Either is possible because later in Exodus, Aaron will perform signs in front of Pharaoh as well as Moses performing them.

I would think it is Moses who performed them though. What matters is not what is unstated, but what is stated. The words were spoken, the signs were given, and a result occurred...

31 So the people believed;

Faith comes by hearing and hearing by the word of God. Aaron spoke the word of God, the word was backed up by the power of God as testified to in the signs, each of which points to Christ, and the people believed the word they had been given. Again, as I have noted in the past, we have no less of a testimony than the people of Israel did.

We have the word and the sign. They are combined into one condensed whole now which is known as the Bible. It is both a word to the people, and it is a sign to the people. The unquenchable power of God is displayed in its pages and it is displayed in the lives of the people it has changed.

This same process is seen even here as the words of verse 31 and the 4th chapter of Exodus finish...

31 (con't) and when they heard that the Lord had visited the children of Israel and that He had looked on their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshiped.

Those gathered heard the good news, the word of the Lord. The miracles confirmed that good news to the people, and the people believed. The many years of affliction had not been overlooked by the Lord. Rather, the time of the Lord's divine visitation showed that He had never forgotten them.

They now realized that they had never left His mind. He was ever- attentive to their burdened state. The word for "visited" here is paqad. It is a word which has no comparable single word in English, and so it must rather be described.

One scholar, a guy named Speiser, says that, "There is probably no other Hebrew verb that has caused translators as much trouble as pqd." In the way it is used here, it "almost always has the sense, now largely obsolete, of 'making a visitation' and points to an action that produces a great change in the position of a subordinate either for good or for ill." HAW

It indicates "overseeing or looking into a matter and then attending to it." In other words, the Lord divinely looked into the affairs of Israel and attended to the misery they faced which had gone on for so long. In His visiting, he would grant them freedom from their captivity once again.

And what a comforting thought for us to end on. The people of Israel suffered under the weight of bondage, and much of that was due to a self-inflicted wound of having turned from the Lord and toward idols and false gods.

And yet, because they bore His name, He never left them and He never forsook them. He was ready to attend to them as soon as they called out to Him. When they did, the deliverer showed up at their doorsteps with the good news that they would be attended to.

If this is true for them, and it certainly is, then it is true for us too. God allows us to make our own bad mistakes and even to suffer the consequences of them. But for those who are His, He will never forsake them. Instead He simply waits for their heart to return to Him.

And for those who are faithful to Him and still suffer, there is always a reason for the trials. He is molding us and shaping us for His reasons. We are not left unattended to, even in our times of trial. He is always there with His ear listening to the sound of our heartfelt cries.

If you have never experienced the perfect peace and contentment which comes from a relationship with God through His Son Jesus, I hope you will allow me a moment to share this wonderful good news with you now...

Closing Verse: He sent Moses His servant,
And Aaron whom He had chosen.
27 They performed His signs among them,
And wonders in the land of Ham. Psalm 105:26, 27

Next Week: Exodus 5:1-9 (Thus Says the Lord God of Israel) (14th Genesis Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

A Bridegroom of Blood and a Divine Visitation

And it came to pass on the way
At the encampment where they did stay
That the Lord met him that day
And sought him to slay
Then Zipporah took a sharp stone
And cut off the foreskin of her son with alacrity
And cast it at Moses' feet as if to atone
And said, "Surely you are a husband of blood to me!"

So He let him go, having made the decision
Then she said, "You are a husband of blood!"
Because of the circumcision
And the Lord said to Aaron in a divine nod
"Go into the wilderness, Moses to meet
So he went and met him on the mountain of God
And kissed him in a reunion so sweet

So Moses told Aaron all the words
Everything, so that he would understand
Of the Lord who had sent him
And all the signs which He did command

Then Moses and Aaron went to tell
And gathered together all
The elders of the children of Israel
Together the assembly they did call
And Aaron told all the words
Which the Lord to Moses had spoken
Then he did the signs
In the sight of the people; they were given this token

So the people believed
And surely their hearts were relieved
And when they heard that the Lord
Had visited the children of Israel
And that He had looked on their affliction
Then they bowed their heads and worshiped for a spell

God never forgets His covenant nor His people
Though they may suffer, they are always on His mind
Whether in a dark prison or under a church steeple
Let us praise Him for His tender mercies so kind

For His promises are greater than any trial
His love is endless and His attentive care never ends
After the troubles and woes come the times we smile
As He gathers together His children, His friends

What an honor to be known as God's friend
And it came because of the Gift of love, our Lord Jesus
We shall hail the Lamb for years without end
For He has done such marvelous things for us

Yes praise You O God for the promises of Your precious word
We exalt You and praise You through Jesus our Lord

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 5:1-9 (THUS SAYS THE LORD GOD OF ISRAEL)

Introduction: Religion. The world is full of religion. It is full of types of religion, and it is full of people who follow religion. The source of a religion and the premise of each religion can tell us if the religion is true or not.

Understanding and comprehending the world around us, the morals we possess, and the nature of the scientific disciplines can all point us to the truth or false nature of religion as well. If we consider the source of, for example, Scientology, we can know the religion is false. A man made it up out of his own head with the explicit intent of making money, as he himself said.

If we consider the premise of Hinduism, we can know that it is false. Hinduism is polytheistic, it teaches that there are many gods. But through mere logical thinking, we can know that this is not possible. The same is true with Islam. It teaches that God is a monad, a single entity.

However, if this were true, there would be no creation because He would never go beyond himself; he could never go beyond himself. Love would be impossible for a monad god. We can know all of these things and so much more by simply thinking about them. But thinking is hard work and it isn't popular, even among great thinkers.

Sometimes great thinkers think greatly about what they want to think about, not about what needs to be considered. When this happens, the great thinking was a waste of thinking because it greatly missed what needed to be thought. Atheists usually follow this avenue of contemplation.

When we have presuppositions about the world around us, or about the nature of God, we will inevitably use them as a mark that we should work towards, even if the mark is wrong. However, if we get it right, if we have the right information, then we can properly direct our thoughts towards the truth concerning the nature of God.

When we do this, we can then exercise faith in that God and in what He has presented to His creatures. If you want to know more along those lines, you can go back and watch my Genesis 1:1 sermon. But be certain of this - there is one God who is the God presented in the Bible.

There are particular and special ways in which He has revealed Himself to us, and those ways are recorded in the pages of Scripture. If this is so, then it means that the Bible is God's word. It is complete, it is missing nothing, and nothing superfluous is added in. Every word and every verse is given for us to accept, believe, and obey in the context in which it is presented.

To call into question the word of the Lord when it is proven true is to call into question the integrity of God who gave it. Today, we will see a person begin down that path. He will call into question the word of the Lord. At this point, it may be acceptable. He doesn't know the Lord and there is really no reason to accept something without proof.

The problem with this numbskull is that even after he has been given full and sure evidences of the true nature of the God of Israel, he will continue to fight against Him - to his own detriment and destruction. That's a pretty horrifying thought, but he's not alone. People do it all the time.

Text Verse: The thoughts of the wicked are an abomination to the Lord,
But the words of the pure are pleasant. Proverbs 15:26

The words of Yehovah are pure and pleasant because they are the words of the Creator. If we pit our thoughts against His word, then we are actually making ourselves an abomination to Him. We are putting our puny fist in His face and saying, "I can do better."

Imagine the arrogance! And yet, are any of us in that position here today? What part of the Bible do you dismiss? The writings of Paul that tell us about the structure and nature of the church and the roles assigned to men and women? What about issue of divorce? Are we willing to ignore God and pursue that avenue because we're unhappy?

What about abortion or homosexuality? What precept do we dismiss from His word because it doesn't fit our personal mores? Do we know better than He knows? I think not. Today Pharaoh will begin his walk down a path of no return because today he will begin to ignore the word of the Lord.

His disobedience is given as a lesson to us concerning how we should act. Let's pay attention to what happens so that we can avoid the pitfalls of destruction. It's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Let My People Go (verses 1 & 2)

1 Afterward Moses and Aaron went in and told Pharaoh,

We begin chapter 5 with words of obedience to the command of the Lord. Together Moses and Aaron traveled to Egypt, met with the elders of the people, and convinced them that the Lord had visited them. In this is the implicit understanding that they had been appointed over the people to represent them before Pharaoh.

They have now come to that point and so together Moses and Aaron present themselves to Pharaoh in order to make their petition to him. According to Psalm 78, this royal court of Pharaoh is in an area known as Zoan, which is now known as Tanis.

1 (con't) "Thus says the Lord God of Israel:

This is the very first time that the term "the Lord God of Israel" is used in the Bible. In all, it will only be used 2 more times in the books of Moses. It literally reads Yehovah elohe Yisrael. The name Yehovah is a personal pronoun; it is His name. And so it more appropriately reads, "Thus says Yehovah, God of Israel."

Pharaoh would have understood it to be his proper name, just as his own gods had proper names like Ra, Ammon, etc. In Genesis 33, He was called the God of Israel, meaning Israel the person. In Exodus 3, he identified himself as "the Lord God of your fathers," which He then explained as Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

But now He is identified with the people of Israel. His name is on them and they are His people. This name has been given by God's divine direction as a means of placing honor upon the mistreated Hebrews under Pharaoh's rule. Despite their humiliation, the Lord has exalted them through His name.

It is a pattern which has continued now for 3500 years. The people of Israel bear His name even though they have rejected Him and even though they have been humiliated and crushed. They bear the name and thus they bear His attentive eye and caring affection.

1 (con't) 'Let My people go,

Yehovah's words are given, "Let my people go." They are His people, not Pharaoh's people. All independent nations were identified with their own god or gods. This is a continuous theme which runs throughout the Old Testament. The people of Israel have been identified with Yehovah and they are His people.

1 (con't) that they may hold a feast to Me in the wilderness.'"

When a people is identified with a particular god or gods, it was understood that they would present sacrifices and offerings to them. This is still the case in the world of false gods today. Buddhists offer all kinds of stuff to statues of Buddha - incense, bowls of rice, money, and so on.

Marian worshippers pray to Mary, offer her incense and loyalty, and bow in front of statues of her. Muslims offer prayers five times a day, they offer a month of fasting each year, they offer their children as tools of destruction by tying bombs to them and sending them off to kill their enemies in the name of their wicked "god."

The list of false gods, unholy sacrifices, and inappropriate worship is long, but it is a continued pattern which has existed since the fall of man. In such worship, there is also the celebration of festivals. For the Hebrews in the presence of the true God, they are known as khagag, which we translate as "feast."

The word kahgag is based on a word which indicates "to move in a circle" or specifically "to march in a sacred procession." From there you have the implication of being giddy; to celebrate, dance, and feast. It is to be a time of worship, celebration, and sacrifice.

It is based on the same root as the name of the prophet Haggai and it is also connected to the Arabic word for hajj, which is what the muslims perform when they make a trek to Mecca to worship their false god. If you look at photos of their hajj, you will see them going in a circle as they move towards the idol of their false god, a black stone called the al-Hajar al-Aswad; the Black Stone.

This is the general idea of the khagag, or feast - moving in a circle in a sacred procession; thus celebrating, dancing, and feasting. Because this was such a commonly understood form of service to a god, Pharaoh knew exactly what was intended.

Moses and Aaron said that they desired to hold such a feast to the Lord and that it is the Lord who has directed them to do so. In this feast, they have requested that it be held "in the wilderness." The reason for this isn't plainly evident here, but it will be explained in Exodus 8, which says -

"It is not right to do so, for we would be sacrificing the abomination of the Egyptians to the Lord our God. If we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, then will they not stone us? 27 We will go three days' journey into the wilderness and sacrifice to the Lord our God as He will command us." Exodus 8:26, 27

Pharaoh, although not having all the information yet, still knew that the God of Israel would have His own expectations for worship, and if He desired it to be in the wilderness, that should be enough of an explanation all by itself. Because the request is so obvious and reasonable, his coming denial shows that he had no fear at all of the God of Israel.

In a previous sermon, we looked at the hardening of Pharaoh's heart and whether it was a self-hardening, or one which came externally from the Lord. In this verse, we begin to see the evidence of the conclusion we made. It was certainly initiated by the Lord, but Pharaoh had a choice to obey the Lord or not.

Instead of starting with a hard lesson and a terrifying proof that He was capable of destroying Pharaoh, the Lord began with an uncomplicated appeal - "that they may hold a feast to me in the wilderness." Because of the simplicity of the request, Pharaoh easily fooled himself into believing that He could stand up to Yehovah.

And so the hardening was passively began by Yehovah, but it is an active decision of Pharaoh. Because he will actively disregard a mild demand of Yehovah, his heart will harden a bit. In the stubborn way of man, this hardening will continue even until Egypt is all but destroyed.

Too often, we as humans would rather face destruction than admit that we were wrong at the beginning. A classic example of this is found in cults all the time. The book of Mormon, for example, has been proven false in several ways.

Through DNA, archeology, and the like, claims in the book of Mormon have been shown inaccurate, but adherents would rather go down with the ship rather than admit they were wrong about where they had placed their faith. The same is true with adherents of any cult or religion which denies the obvious truth.

Even in secular life, people will deny the obvious if they first accepted a lie. Evolution has no basis in fact, and yet it is adhered to as if it were absolute truth. Global warming has been proven not only false, but even falsely presented; it is an outright lie. And yet people will hide from the obvious truth and still hold to this nonsense.

The human condition is one that allows pride to take over and replace the truth with any lie if it will simply mean that we can save face in the process. What a sad condition that we would rather proudly walk into hell than crawl with humility to the foot of the cross.

2 And Pharaoh said, "Who is the Lord, that I should obey His voice to let Israel go?"

There are a few understandable reasons for Pharaoh to ask this question in his seemingly arrogant manner. First, Pharaoh has obviously never heard of Yehovah, and even the Israelites probably didn't remember the name until it was re-introduced to them after Moses met Him at the burning bush.

If Pharaoh had never heard the name, then he could honestly believe that it was a made up name, just like the made up names of all the other gods of all the other nations. Secondly, if the Hebrews had been subjected to brutal treatment for many, many years, even before he had ascended the throne, then he would feel confident that Yehovah was an ineffective deity.

Thirdly, because the Lord had allowed the suffering to go on for so long, he may have incorrectly assumed that Yehovah didn't even really care about the people. What kind of God was Yehovah that He allowed the people to live in toil and bondage? It is the exact same thing we see in the world today.

The enemies of Israel have looked at them in their exile and suffering and thought, "How can the God of the Hebrews be the true God? If His name is on them, then He must not really be a great God." But as the Bible says -

"For My thoughts are not your thoughts,
Nor are your ways My ways,' says the Lord.

9 'For as the heavens are higher than the earth,
So are My ways higher than your ways,
And My thoughts than your thoughts.'" Isaiah 55;8, 9

The Lord's plans include suffering, trials, hardships, and loss. They also include eons of those things, countless generations of them, because His plans are greater than any single point in history. They are also greater than providing ease for a brief moment. Instead, His plan encompasses all of time and all circumstances within time.

Pharaoh has failed to see that, and from right here at the beginning, it will prove to be his inevitable downfall. When we as humans try to insert all of God's righteousness, wisdom, love, care, and knowledge into our brief existence, we form an idol which is anything but God.

What we need to do when faced with tough times is to exclaim what Eli, the High Priest of Israel proclaimed when he was informed of really bad news to come concerning his own household. At that time he said, "It is the Lord. Let Him do what seems good to Him." 1 Samuel 3:18

If you go through the Bible, almost every one of the great names of faith recorded there went through suffering. Some of them went through immense suffering. But in the end, they are considered faithful because of how they responded to it - "It is the Lord; Let Him do what seems good to Him." Anything less is tantamount to calling into question His over-arching goodness.

Pharaoh's lack of knowledge concerning Jehovah now will be used in the coming story to demonstrate the absolute supremacy of the true God of Israel as He destroys the false gods of Egypt, one by one. From this first meeting until the waters of the Red Sea cover over him for the last time, all of it contains intentional design in order to display the surpassing greatness of Yehovah.

2 (con't) I do not know the Lord, nor will I let Israel go.”

Jewish tradition of today is that the name Yehovah is ineffable. They say it was and is never to be pronounced. But this verse, among many others, shows that to be false. If Pharaoh says, "Who is Yehovah" then Moses must have used the name Yehovah in order for Pharaoh to ask the question.

And so he exclaims "I do not know Yehovah." Although it is astonishing to consider that there was no knowledge of the true God by the leader of the greatest nation on earth, it is no less astonishing than the fact that there is no knowledge of the same true God by our own leader today. Or, by colleges, universities, governments, and religions all around the world today.

And it is certainly no less astonishing than the fact that there is no true knowledge of this same God in seminaries and churches which actually bear His name. There are countless souls who claim the title of "Christian" and yet know nothing of the Person of Christ.

Like Pharaoh who refused to acknowledge the true God, nor would He let Israel go worship Him, they too refuse to acknowledge Him as well. They dismiss His written word, they disobey their consciences, and they honor Him with their lips while their hearts are far from Him. The rebellious spirit of Pharaoh is alive and well in the world today.

Who is the Lord that you worship?

What is the source of your faith?

Is it in the words of a man, is this your hope
Or is it in the Bible and the words, "Thus the Lord saith

I mean, really... on what is your faith based?

Where, O where I ask can you learn about the Lord?

In someone's crazy agenda, is this where it's placed?

Or do you look for Jesus in God's holy word?

Take out a line, any line from that precious word

And say, these remarks here don't count

Then you have decided in place of the Lord

The counsel of God, and you have poisoned the precious fount

II. A Sacrifice to the Lord (verses 3-5)

3 So they said, "The God of the Hebrews has met with us.

In this answer, Moses and Aaron are granting Pharaoh's view of the matter. In essence they are saying, "Ok, so you don't know Yehovah, and you may not even feel that He has authority over you, but He does have authority over us." Thus, the answer to Pharaoh here is given as an appeal to pity.

"The God of the Hebrews has met with us. We are a group of people who are identified as separate and peculiar from the Egyptians. We have suffered in bondage, we have been your slaves, and now we have been confronted by our God. In our meeting, He has made a demand of us."

The words are intended to appeal to the already hardening heart of Pharaoh. They form a petition that will now show the severity of the consequences against them if their request isn't granted.

3 (con't) Please, let us go three days' journey into the desert and sacrifice to the Lord our God, lest He fall upon us with pestilence or with the sword."

In this statement, it has to be noted that the consequences for denial aren't directed toward Pharaoh, but towards Israel. It is another passive way of the Lord hardening Pharaoh's heart. No threat is directed towards him and therefore he feels there are no consequences that will affect him.

He must be thinking, "If Yehovah had a demand and could enforce it, He would make it against me, not against His own people. He must be scared of me." But, at the same time, any supposed god is given offerings by his people in an attempt to appease him. If this weren't so, then there would be no need to offer sacrifices.

Pharaoh should have no reason to doubt that the Hebrews believed they would suffer if they didn't sacrifice to the Lord. But if it didn't affect him, then why should he care? The saying, "That's your problem, not mine" holds true in this exchange.

His concern isn't if the people he has already treated brutally would die by pestilence or the sword. His concern is that they continue to be used for the building of his empire. If many die, there were still many more to take their place. To him, there is no gain and only loss by responding favorably to their request.

4 Then the king of Egypt said to them, "Moses and Aaron, why do you take the people from their work?"

Ten times in this chapter, the term "Pharaoh" is used. However, only in this verse is the term "the king of Egypt" given. Time and again "Pharaoh" has been set in contrast to Yehovah or Yehovah's people. But in this verse, he is set in contrast to Moses and Aaron who are supposedly inciting the people against his rule.

Thus he is termed "the king of Egypt." In essence, he is charging them with insurrection and rebellion. It is the common charge which is levied against those who rightly or wrongly look for a change in the general order of a given society.

The prophets of Israel were often accused of this when they spoke the word of the Lord, in order to get the people to return to their faith and worship of the Lord. And more often than not, they were accused of rebellion and sedition.

Jeremiah's life continuously fell into this category. As soon as he opened his mouth, he found himself accused, challenged, imprisoned, or threatened with death. A classic example of this is found in Jeremiah 26 and is well worth the read.

And unfortunately, the same is found to be true more and more within our own society today. When preachers stand up for the truth of God and the contents of His word, they are rallied against, even by their own family members, their own government, and even members of their own church sometimes.

And sometimes the people in the church are the ones who stand up against the faithless pastors who have departed from the word of the Lord. No matter which direction, inevitably the person of God will be accused of sedition against those who feel threatened by their words; words which exalt God, even at a personal cost.

4 (con't) Get back to your labor."

The words are leku lesiblotekem - "get you to your burdens." It is the same word, siblah, used twice so far in Exodus to describe the unusually heavy labor of the people in bondage and under a heavy load of work. It will be used again in the next verse and only two more times in Exodus.

In what is certainly directed to Moses and Aaron personally, and not to the people generally, he tells them to get to the demeaning work which he has assigned to the people.

5 And Pharaoh said, "Look, the people of the land are many now, and you make them rest from their labor!"

The words of Pharaoh here, "Look the people of the land are many" implies that the injury to his kingdom was immense. If a portion of the people stopped working, others would fill the gap, but if an entire population of many people suddenly stopped working, the effect would be disastrous.

This is what he is implying, and yet it is completely contrary to the idea of what it means to rest. In this verse is the first use of the word shabbat or "sabbath" when applied to people in the Bible. The only other time that the word has been used was when God rested from His creative efforts and when it said that the cycles of the seasons wouldn't cease as long as the earth remained.

Now it is being applied to the people of God in a negative way, as if they were to have no such rest. But it is this very rest, which will be given to them as a sign of being the covenant people, which is what has brought them prosperity, abundance, and culture.

The very thing that Pharaoh accuses Moses and Aaron as causing harm to his kingdom is the thing that, if given to them, would cause his kingdom to prosper beyond his wildest imaginations. But the stubbornness of the human heart cannot see beyond its own pride.

Who will proclaim the word to the people?

Who will be faithful to the call?

Is there any faithful soul remaining under the church steeple?

Over the whole land there has been cast a deadly pall

God desires from His flock worship and sacrifice

He desires that they honor Him with a pure heart

Praise from the lips to Him is deemed pleasant and nice

Let us vow to turn to Him in a fresh start

Be bold and make the solemn proclamation

And be sure to give God what is His just due

And even more, let us worship with jubilation

Because of His attentive care for me and you

III. An Unreasonable Command (verses 6-9)

6 So the same day Pharaoh commanded the taskmasters of the people and their officers, saying,

In looking at the exodus account, we find that after Pharaoh there are three levels of superintendence over the people as they worked. The first were mentioned in chapter 1 and were known as sare missim, or "chiefs of tributes." The next are mentioned here and are known as nogeshim, or taskmasters.

The word means to drive like an animal, a workman, a debtor, or an army. The implication is to tax, harass, and tyrannize someone. The people were constantly afflicted and never given rest from it. These, like the other ones, would be the ones who extracted service or money from the people for the benefit of Pharaoh and the economy.

And there is also another group known as shoterim, or "officers" which are explained in the coming verses as being Hebrews. These Hebrews would be scribes that attended to the counting of the production of the work, the number of hours people worked, and the like.

It is to these last two groups of people that Pharaoh makes his demand concerning the common people who labored under them...

7 "You shall no longer give the people straw to make brick as before.

All along the Nile, there was planting and harvesting going on. When the crops were harvested, what would make sense is that the stalks from the harvests were to be bundled up and floated down the river to wherever bricks were made.

In doing this, there wouldn't be any waste and it would increase the efficiency of the construction projects in the kingdom. Once the straw was received, it would be cut up into smaller pieces and used as a binding material for the brick. This is the same idea as using rebar in concrete to keep it from cracking.

Without the straw, the bricks wouldn't hold together well, but would instead crumble. The thing about others gathering the straw made for efficiency in the brick-making process, and it also meant that the Hebrews didn't have to do it.

Pharaoh's thought on this was that if they had to get their own straw, they wouldn't have time to worry about other things. Instead, their time would be consumed with work and not the thoughts of God, rest, or the like. And so his order is given...

7 (con't) Let them go and gather straw for themselves.

The problem with this command is that it would literally consume all of the people's time. Because they weren't at the fields, they would have no way of getting the straw of the harvests. This wouldn't just increase their work time, but probably double it. And even then they would find it hard to meet their needs.

In a dry and arid land, apart from living directly on the Nile, there would be little available straw. And the areas that had the straw would be fields of harvest that were managed by others. It would be a giant dilemma for the people.

8 And you shall lay on them the quota of bricks which they made before. You shall not reduce it.

This would have been the most crushing news of all to the people. To make brick was tiresome work. To be told that they also had to provide the straw for the brick would make life most wretched, only adding to their misery.

But to tell them that they had to do both and still maintain the same number of bricks as before would be no less than torture itself. Straw couldn't be gathered at night in any meaningful way and so the straw would have to be collected at day, and the brick-making would have to continue on until any or all hours of the night.

There would be no time for rest, no time for family, and no time - certainly no time, for worrying about taking time off to sacrifice to the God who had suddenly appeared in their lives in hopes of making them better. Instead of things getting better, they had only taken a much more troublesome direction.

8 (con't) For they are idle; therefore they cry out, saying, 'Let us go and sacrifice to our God.'

Pharaoh equates the people's desire to worship their God with being indolent. But once again, when dealing with the worship of the true God, the opposite is true. Throughout Scripture, in both testaments of the Bible, and both implicitly and explicitly, the people of God who are obedient to God are always called on to be model citizens and the most productive and faithful of workers.

In the books of Ecclesiastes and Proverbs, Solomon writes extensively about the importance of laboring and not being idle. The premier example of a virtuous woman in the Bible is noted in Proverbs 31 as being the epitome of diligence in labor.

Throughout the entire description, she is noted for hard work, late hours, and continuous care of her time in a productive manner. And this woman of virtue was probably a description by Solomon of his ancestor Ruth who is shown throughout the book which bears her name to be exactly such a woman of virtue.

In the New Testament, Paul sets the example for others in that he continuously labored with his hands, making tents, in order to keep from being a burden on those he ministered to. And in Ephesians 4, he gives us this advice -

"Let him who stole steal no longer, but rather let him labor, working with his hands what is good, that he may have something to give him who has need." Ephesians 4:28

These examples, and many others, show us that Pharaoh's edict here is a vindictive move against the Hebrews, not an attempt to save his kingdom from some type of monetary loss. The record of Exodus 1 is that the Hebrews were the ones who built the supply cities of Pithom and Rameses.

These cities weren't built through indolence or idleness, but rather through the untiring efforts of an already oppressed and yet diligent group of people.

9 Let more work be laid on the men, that they may labor in it, and let them not regard false words.

These concluding words of the day reject the words of the Lord in two ways. First, they reject His request to let the people go by forcing the people to work harder. The exact opposite of what was requested is what occurs.

The second way in which they reject the words of the Lord is that they claim they are a lie. Yes, Moses and Aaron presented the words to Pharaoh, but they presented the words of the Lord as intended. He is directly challenging the Lord because Moses and Aaron have been commissioned by Him for the work in which they are engaged.

The phrase Pharaoh uses for "false words" here is b'divre shaqer. Amazingly, this is the first time that the word sheqer, or "false" is used in the Bible and yet it is being ascribed to the One in whom there is no deceit at all. The absolute irony of this is beyond astonishing.

The next time this word sheqer will be used is going to be in Exodus 20, when the Lord gives the Ten Commandments. There in the ninth of them, it will say -

"You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor." Exodus 20:16

Pharaoh described the words of Moses and Aaron as false words, but these words were given to them by the Lord. Many of us have made that same error in the past, but eventually we realized that the words of the Lord are true. We called out to Him and He saved us. And yet, from time to time we still question the truth of His words.

We dismiss parts of the Bible because we don't like what they have to say. It shows that a bit of the spirit of Pharaoh still resides in us; a rebellious streak that needs to be quieted. Let's strive with all of our ability to quiet the lie, hold fast to the truth, and accept this precious, superior word at face value.

If the Creator demands that we only testify to the truth, it is because He is truth. He is incapable of any type of unrighteousness and our false witness will only put up a wall between us and Him. And just one transgression is all that is needed to eternally separate us from Him.

The Lord is infinitely perfect and our one sin infinitely separates us from that perfection. The connection is lost and we cannot mend it because we're heading in the wrong direction in time. The past is unavailable to us except as a sad memory of what could have been.

But into this stream of time came the Lord of creation. He did this to mend the rift between us and His heavenly Father. By calling out to Him for pardon, we can be reconciled once again. So as we close today, please give me another moment to explain this to you.

Closing Verse: Forever, O Lord,
Your word is settled in heaven. Psalm 119:89

Next Week: Exodus 5:10-23 (Gathering Stubble to Make Brick) (15th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Thus Says the Lord God of Israel

Afterward Moses and Aaron went in

And there they told Pharaoh

“Thus says the Lord God of Israel

"Let My people go

That they may hold a feast to Me in the wilderness

This is the Lord's request which to you we address

And Pharaoh said, “Who is the Lord

That I should obey His voice

To let Israel go? I do not know the Lord

Nor will I let Israel go; this is my spoken choice
So they said, "The God of the Hebrews has met with us
Please, let us go three days' journey into the desert
For this we are desirous

And sacrifice to the Lord our God, according to His word
Lest He fall upon us with pestilence or with the sword
Then the king of Egypt said to them
"Moses and Aaron, why do you take
The people from their work?
Get back to your labor; no more trouble shall you make

And Pharaoh said, "Look
The people of the land are many now
And you make them rest from their labor
I will fix this disobedience somehow
So the same day Pharaoh commanded
The taskmasters of the people and their officers, saying
"You shall no longer give the people straw
To make brick as before; this command I am relaying

Let them go and gather straw for themselves
And you shall on them lay
The quota of bricks which they made before

You shall not reduce it in any way
For they are idle; therefore they cry out Saying, 'Let us go
And sacrifice to our God
But my answer to them is "No"

Let more work be laid on the men
That they may labor in it
And let them not regard false words
This is my decree, I do submit
The Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart, this we see
But it was done in a passive way
Pharaoh instead hardened his own heart actively
He rejected the word of God on that day

Who is responsible then, in the matter of Pharaoh's heart?
Can someone say that he was in any way free of guilt?
Not at all, for in this he did his own part
He made his own design, like the weavings of a quilt
And we too make the choice about our destiny
Jesus gave His life if we so choose the heavenly pardon
Or we can walk another path, one which ends in misery
By rejecting the cross, God's heavenly beacon

Don't be found in such a sad, sad state
Instead, call out to Jesus, eternal life to receive
And then together with the redeemed patiently wait
On His coming again, for all who do believe

Sure and sound is our heavenly hope
Faithful and true are the promises of the Lord
And so in this life of trials we can cope
Because of the wonders ahead, guaranteed in His word

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 5:10-23 (GATHERING STUBBLE TO MAKE BRICK)

Introduction: You've heard the sermon verses read out loud. Now ask yourself, "Is Israel yet ready to be delivered from bondage?" Why did God include these verses in this passage? Yes, it tells us what happened, but in relation to many other things which surely happened during the same time-frame, they're probably less important.

Certain people have been mentioned in these verses and yet they will never be mentioned again in the Bible. Certain words have been used - work, stubble, brick, and so on. Sometimes, different Hebrew words are described the same way in English.

We miss a lot in translations, not because translators do a crummy job, but because they aren't thinking about pictures of other things. They are thinking about the meaning of individual words. If I translate "job," "work," "chore," and "task" into Japanese, I might use the same Japanese word simply because it's how I want to convey what I am saying.

However, my wife, who spent many years translating both Japanese into English, and English into Japanese, for various governments, might choose to be more specific, or maybe not. Translators do what they can to provide the best meaning of something as they perceive it.

In the case of Bible passages, there are often multiple words which are translated into one English word. Further, there are many individual words which are translated in many different ways based on the context. But even context can be subjective.

Because of this, there are a multitude of possible interpretations of individual passages and so, as the King James Version translators noted in their own preface, a "variety of Translations is profitable for the finding out of the sense of the Scriptures."

In other words, study every translation you can, study the originals if possible, and then study some more. Find yourself approved by searching out what God intends for you to see in His word. One way you can do that is to read acceptable commentaries.

Another is to attend in-depth Bible studies. And a third way is to attend the Superior word and listen to sermons which probe the depths of whatever passage is being looked at. And then after doing this, check what you have been taught. Charlie Garrett may be completely wrong in his analysis.

Text Verse: Blessed is the man whom You instruct, O Lord,
And teach out of Your law. Psalm 94:12

As we started a moment ago, I asked, "Is Israel yet ready to be delivered from bondage?" The answer is, "No, not yet." The Lord is waiting to deliver Israel, watching as they continue to work making brick. And what is even more important is that they are working to make brick with stubble.

What is this picturing? Why did God include this in his word? Sit back and pay attention... If you doze off, please no snoring! And we will continue to see Israel being prepared for deliverance from Egypt. In the future, Israel will be building a temple once again. At that time, they will be striving to please God by following the law.

Are these two accounts connected? If so, how? The answer is to be found in God's superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Insufficient Deeds (verses 10-14)

10 And the taskmasters of the people and their officers went out and spoke to the people, saying, "Thus says Pharaoh: 'I will not give you straw.

The word went out from Pharaoh and those who received it have now, in turn, passed that word on to the laborers. What was said has been amended a bit though. In verse 7, Pharaoh said, "You shall no longer give the people straw to make brick as before. Let them go and gather straw for themselves."

However, the taskmasters and officers equate the orders of Pharaoh to them as a direct statement to the people, "I will not give you straw." In this is a contrast to how Pharaoh handled the words of Moses and Aaron, from our last sermon. He said they spoke false words when they quoted the word of the Lord.

And so a distinction is made between how the words of the Lord, and the words of Pharaoh, are treated in this chapter. This is especially notable because the officers mentioned in this verse are Hebrews, not Egyptians. They have seen the Lord's word called false and yet they ascribe weight and importance to the words of Pharaoh which were spoken to them.

11 Go, get yourselves straw where you can find it; yet none of your work will be reduced.'"

The speakers continue to amend the words of Pharaoh, ascribing the words spoken to them as having been spoken directly to the people. This might seem unimportant, but it's not. I take care of a mall on Siesta Key. A homeless guy sleeps behind the mall from time to time.

He doesn't do anything wrong. and he keeps an eye on things, so I don't bother him. However, if one of the owners said to me, "You aren't allowed to let that guy sleep back there anymore," would it have more weight for me to say to him, "The owners said you can't sleep here anymore," or "I can't let you sleep here anymore."

Obviously the first carries the most weight. If Pharaoh has spoken directly to the people, then unless they want even more trouble, they will comply with the words of Pharaoh. Further, what will come about in the chapters ahead will have much more significance for them.

In essence, the words of Pharaoh to the Hebrew people will be pitted against the words of the Lord, which the Hebrew people have already been made aware of. In the short term, the situation will be trying, the people will question the ability of Yehovah to accomplish what He has spoken, and the people will suffer more.

However, in the long run, the people will see the contrast between the two more clearly. This same truth will be seen in the end times when the word of the Lord, the Holy Bible, will be pitted against the threats of the antichrist. The people will be able to look back on its record, match that up what their own eyes and experiences behold, and they will understand that the Lord is true to His word.

12 So the people were scattered abroad throughout all the land of Egypt to gather stubble instead of straw.

The Hebrew here says l'qoshesh qash la'taben - literally, "to gather stubble for the straw." The word for "straw" is teben. It is something useful and which generally has purpose, even for feeding animals.

Qash on the other hand is something left behind, like stubble or chaff. As the reapers in the fields cut the grain, they would leave behind any stalks. In the place where grain was threshed and winnowed, they would leave piles of the chaff that was separated from the grain. The chaff, or qash, had no value at all.

The Hebrews went anywhere to look for anything left over that they could use for binding of the mud in the brick-making process. Without straw being provided, they were left to use whatever came their way, even what was considered worthless to the field workers. This shows desperation and a tiresome search as the words "throughout all the land of Egypt" imply.

Not only did they have to make bricks, but they had to spend time traveling on foot looking for the stubble. They would have to bring it back and chop it to the right size for brick-making. Then they would have to make the bricks at the full measure they previously made. The next day, they would get up and start again.

13 And the taskmasters forced them to hurry, saying, "Fulfill your work, your daily quota, as when there was straw."

There has been a standard demanded in the past and it is expected to continue regardless of the situation. The term "daily quota" comes from the Hebrew term yom b'yommow - daily by day. It's an idiom implying a set portion for the given day, thus a quota.

They are being asked to fulfill this quota, just as when there was straw, but there is none. Instead, there is only qash - stubble. This word, qash, is used 16 times in the Bible and it is always used to indicate something worthless. It may be a person, or a thing, but it is as chaff which is swept away in the wind. An example of this is found in Isaiah 33 -

“Now I will rise,” says the Lord;
“Now I will be exalted,
Now I will lift Myself up.
11 You shall conceive chaff,
You shall bring forth stubble;
Your breath, as fire, shall devour you. Isaiah 33:10, 11

The taskmasters are known as nogeshim. They would tirelessly drive the Hebrews on a good day, and so how much more when things weren't going well. As we will see, they were brutal in their attitude and actions, demanding what was expected at any cost.

The word for "work" here is maaseh. It implies either a deed done or a thing made. It is a word used to describe the work of man as well as the accomplishments of God. In this verse here, it is speaking of human effort for its accomplishment.

And so a contrast can be seen between the efforts of man in order to please Pharaoh which is insufficient, and the work of God which will destroy Pharaoh. The people have placed their works above reliance on Yehovah and they are suffering because of it. However, they will also see the Lord prevail with their own eyes.

If you can see what is being relayed, the Hebrews have been under the authority of Pharaoh, who pictures the end-times anti-Christ. He has been a harsh taskmaster. They have now been told that they would be delivered by the Lord and at first they believed.

However, their burdens have only increased. And their burdens have increased with qash, stubble. What they are working with is useless and incapable of delivering them.

The picture is that of the people of Israel. They have been in exile and under the authority and influence of Satan. They have worked and accomplished deeds in their religious life. Deeds are always insufficient to save, but deeds are what Judaism is all about.

Now, in the end times, the Lord has called them back to the land and is preparing to deliver them from the authority and bondage of the devil. But until they trust the Lord completely, they will only suffer more.

The temple will be rebuilt, sacrifices will be made, the law will be reinstated - Daniel 9 shows us this specifically. Their deeds will increase as they conduct sacrifices and offerings in the rebuilt temple which is coming. But this will be ineffective to save them. They will be qash, stubble. We're given these stories to show us what has occurred, but what is yet to come as well.

The Lord desires faith from His people concerning His provision. He desires trust that He is capable of saving. But until He receives it, the people will suffer more. And yet, His glory will be multiplied when their deliverance comes.

14 Also the officers of the children of Israel, whom Pharaoh's taskmasters had set over them, were beaten and were asked, "Why have you not fulfilled your task in making brick both yesterday and today, as before?"

These officers are Hebrews, not Egyptians. They are those who were responsible for counting the daily tally of bricks and making the reports on labor practices. They are placed between the harsh taskmasters and their own people.

Now they are facing the consequences of that position. The Egyptians are accusing them of not being responsible over the laborers, thus they are blaming them directly for missing the quota. The Hebrew here is much more expressive than our translations. It actually says, "yesterday, third, both yesterday and today."

It's a way of saying, "In the past you did this, but now it's not happening." The officers are being accused of increasing negligence which then results in their being beaten. The scholars Jamieson-Faucett-Brown note in their commentary that -

"The mode of beating was by the offender being laid flat on the ground and generally held by the hands and feet while the chastisement was administered" [Wilkinson]. (De 25:2). A picture representing the Hebrews on a brick field, exactly as described in this chapter, was found in an Egyptian tomb at Thebes."

The beatings would have been unpleasant in the extreme and a source of even greater consternation for the laborers because the officers wouldn't want to face this a second time. Thus the burdens on the people would only increase yet again.

This type of treatment by Hebrews against their own people isn't unique. Something similar is found in the book of Nehemiah when the wealthier people exacted usury against the poorer Hebrew people. This is found in Nehemiah 5 -

"And there was a great outcry of the people and their wives against their Jewish brethren. 2 For there were those who said, 'We, our sons, and our daughters are many; therefore let us get grain, that we may eat and live.'

3 There were also some who said, 'We have mortgaged our lands and vineyards and houses, that we might buy grain because of the famine.'

4 There were also those who said, 'We have borrowed money for the king's tax on our lands and vineyards. 5 Yet now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children; and indeed we are forcing our sons and our daughters to be slaves, and some of our daughters have been brought into slavery. It is not in our power to redeem them, for other men have our lands and vineyards.'" Nehemiah 5:1-5

What we are evaluating here is the process of making brick. It's the same word, lavan, used in the construction of the Tower of Babel. In all, as a verb, it is used eight times in Scripture to indicate one of two things - making brick, or purification of people.

The three times it is used for brick are in the Tower of Babel account and this account. The other five times are concerning purifying from sin and uncleanness - several times it is referring to the end times, something this account is picturing.

Here in Exodus, they are using stubble to make brick and it isn't working. It is a picture of works-based salvation which can never purify a person. They have not yet learned to trust the Lord. Remember, the rapture of the church has already been pictured back in Chapter 3. This then is pointing to Israel and the end times.

The officers are picturing the spiritual leaders of Israel who are under the authority of the antichrist, pictured by Pharaoh. This will become more evident in the verses ahead.

What works can I do to build a tower to heaven?

With what effort can I reach from here to God?

My life is already tainted, like bread filled with leaven

And in my walk, it is an unholy path which I trod

Purge me from on high and I will be pure

Wash me with the blood of my Lord Jesus

Then I know that my eternal fate is sure

He has done such marvelous things for us

No longer will I work to earn my way to heaven

Through Christ I am purified, bread purged of its leaven

II. Servants of Whom? (verses 15-19)

15 Then the officers of the children of Israel came and cried out to Pharaoh, saying, "Why are you dealing thus with your servants?"

Even though these officers are Hebrews, they had access to Pharaoh. This may sound less than believable, but according to the writings of Herodotus, "Egyptian monarchs were accessible to all. It was a part of their duty to hear complaints personally; and they, for the most part, devoted to this employment the earlier hours of each day." (Ellicott)

With this type of freedom to petition Pharaoh himself, they do just that, questioning why such strict and firm standards have been levied upon them. The people have been given an impossible set of demands, the taskmasters have been given the authority to enforce the standards, and the Hebrew officers are stuck between the two, beaten for something they didn't initiate and have no control over.

In their words, they identify themselves as servants of Pharaoh. Because of this, they want to know why he would treat them in this way. Their words imply that they have been obedient to their master and yet have been treated unfairly by him.

This then is a picture of those Jewish leaders who have made an alliance with the antichrist. They will think that they will be safe from the troubles of the common people, but they will find out it isn't so. All of this is picturing what is coming upon the people of Israel, just as Jesus warned in the Olivet discourse of Matthew 24.

16 There is no straw given to your servants, and they say to us, 'Make brick!' And indeed your servants are beaten, but the fault is in your own people."

The words of this verse are obvious, and commentary is seemingly unnecessary, but there are actually three ways of looking at it. The word "own" as in "your own people" isn't in the original. The Hebrew says, v'khatat ammekha - "and fault your people."

In this wording, it can mean that the officers are saying that the fault is in the Hebrews who aren't doing their job, so why are they being beaten? They have identified themselves as servants of Pharaoh, and so they are being beaten even though they are faithful to him, and so they feel what has happened isn't their fault.

The second option is that they are speaking of the taskmasters who are between them and Pharaoh and who have been beating them. There is no straw and yet the same quotas are demanded. Because this is impossible, their beatings are unjustified and the fault is in the taskmasters for beating Pharaoh's own servants.

The third option is that the Hebrew has an error in it. The scholars at Cambridge say, "The text cannot be right: not only is the Heb. ungrammatical, but the fault was not in the people, but in the king."

And so they note that by adding a single letter into the Hebrew, the text will read as several other manuscripts, like the Greek Old Testament, which basically says that Pharaoh is committing a wrong against his own subjects.

I believe it is the first option and that it speaks of the Israelites. These scribes have identified themselves as servants of Pharaoh, and therefore they have placed themselves in contrast to the Hebrews under them. If they said the fault was in the taskmasters, it would imply that the fault was in Pharaoh because he gave the orders. It's unlikely that they would chance this.

The unusual wording is probably why the Greek translation was changed. They may have seen the difficulty and not wanted to leave open the option that the Hebrew people were somehow at fault. But I think that is what is being said. They are blaming their own Hebrew people in order to avoid punishment.

It is convenient to say the Hebrew is wrong, but it is also unnecessary. What we are seeing is a picture of something else. Leaving the Hebrew alone does allow for clarity. The word for "brick" in this verse is the noun form of what was used above. It is levanah. This word is used just 11 times in the Bible.

Again, it is used in the erection of the Tower of Babel and in the Exodus story. The other times it is used, it is always in a negative connotation which is dealing with the sinful workings of the people. In one, it is specifically speaking of the buildings which had fallen during the Lord's judgment. That is in Isaiah 9 -

"The bricks have fallen down,
But we will rebuild with hewn stones;
The sycamores are cut down,
But we will replace them with cedars.'
11 Therefore the Lord shall set up
The adversaries of Rezin against him,
And spur his enemies on,
12 The Syrians before and the Philistines behind;
And they shall devour Israel with an open mouth." Isaiah 9:10-12

Everything about these unique words shows us a contrast between faith in the Lord, which brings in a right relationship with Him, and man's ineffective works which put up a barrier between man and Him. These Hebrew leaders are following the sinful path in Exodus and they picture the sinful leaders of Israel in the future.

17 But he said, "You are idle! Idle! Therefore you say, 'Let us go and sacrifice to the Lord.'

Repeating and even doubling his comment from verse 8 about the Hebrews, Pharaoh proclaims that they are idle and therefore they desire to go and sacrifice to Yehovah. It is known that idleness was considered one of the worst sins in Egyptian society.

So much so that they would actually post epitaphs on tombstones which disclaimed any idleness in their lives because it was believed by them that idleness was a reason for condemnation at the final judgment.

For Pharaoh to use this term in the superlative way that he has by repeating it twice, shows his utter disdain for both the Hebrews and the God whom they desire to serve. He is literally taunting them from his throne, challenging them to do anything about the decision he has rendered.

What he is doing is equating their religious desire with idleness rather than as complimentary to it. But people who are diligent in proper religion are more often than not diligent in work too. This is particularly true with the worship of the true God who fashioned man to be diligent in all of his affairs.

Because of their familiarity with the notion of idleness being a damnable sin, he was challenging them even further, both in their eyes and in the eyes of the Egyptian people in general. He has truly proven himself to be a ruthless tyrant to the people of God.

18 Therefore go now and work; for no straw shall be given you, yet you shall deliver the quota of bricks.”

Curiously, this a different word for "work" than the previous one of verse 13. There it was maaseh, here it is abad. It is the same word that the officers used concerning themselves when they said they were his servants. It is also the same word that Moses was told to speak to Pharaoh in Exodus 4:23 -

"So I say to you, let My son go that he may serve Me."

He is telling them to work in his service rather than work for, or serve, the Lord. Again, he is exalting himself above the Lord in his words to these officers.

19 And the officers of the children of Israel saw that they were in trouble after it was said, "You shall not reduce any bricks from your daily quota."

This is the fifth and last time that the term "officers" will be applied to these men who have been working for Pharaoh. They now perceive that there is no substantial difference between them and the other Hebrews in his eyes.

They also perceive that they are in trouble because of their standing. For any infractions, they will be held accountable. Their status and positions reckon them as Hebrew first and officers of Pharaoh secondly. Because of this, they will elevate their frustrations in a new direction.

Lord, give us leaders who will be faithful to You

Keep us from one who would sell his own soul

We wish to follow You in all that we do

Keep us from those who are under the devil's control

May our lives be dedicated to You, pure and undefiled

Let our works be of faith, pleasing and right

In the past You have upon us smiled

Let that be so now and forever, acceptable in Your sight

Hear and be attentive to our prayers to You

Be pleased with our lives, O God, in all that we do

III. The Time of Jacob's Trouble (verses 20-23)

20 Then, as they came out from Pharaoh, they met Moses and Aaron who stood there to meet them.

It is not a chance meeting, but one planned by Moses and Aaron. They had already been told that Israel would not be allowed to go out to conduct a sacrifice to the Lord. They had also surely seen what additional conditions had been levied on the people, and they would have known of the treatment of the officers.

If their hopes were that the officers would have met with more success than they had, their hopes were in vain. Deliverance may come, but it won't come from those who claimed to be servants of Pharaoh. And in fact, those supposed servants had only been rebuked in the process of petitioning.

21 And they said to them, "Let the Lord look on you and judge,

The irony of the words of these men is palpable. To say Yehovah alekhem v'yishpot - "Yehovah look on you and judge" means that they are calling on Yehovah. And yet, it is Moses who had come from the Lord, declared to them the name of Yehovah, and had given proof of his commission by Him.

The very fact that they complain to Moses while complaining about the matter which was initiated by Yehovah implies that they have absolutely no confidence in the Lord. They are the words of those who pay lip-service to Him while ignoring the very words of the Lord they pay lip-service to.

It is no different than people who very rarely or never step into a church in their life and yet they love to quote "Jesus says to not judge" whenever a Christian says something that offends their sensibilities. They heap insults upon God's people while all the time their actions show that they are servants of the devil.

All we need to do is look around the world at any time in history and the land is filled with such troublemakers. They were there for Moses to contend with, they are there today, and they will be there in the end times challenging the two witnesses who stand and accuse the world, prophesying the word of the Lord to closed minds and hard hearts.

21 (con't) because you have made us abhorrent in the sight of Pharaoh and in the sight of his servants,

The Hebrew here says, "you have made our smell to stink in the eyes of Pharaoh and in the eyes of his servants." We use similar terms in English, but the Hebrew has more force than most of our idioms. There is an incongruity between "smell" and "eyes" which gives the notion of the entire face welling up in disgust.

It is as if the smell is so bad that the eyes start to run from it. And the smell they mention will permeate the entire house of Pharaoh because they include the term "in the eyes of his servants." Suddenly, they are speaking of the servants of Pharaoh as if they are not included in that distinction, even though they had just moments before made the claim that they were.

The Hebrew people, including those Hebrews who had previously been distanced from them by an arm's length, are all lumped together into one basket. It is a pattern which has repeated time and again throughout history and will occur again in the end times.

21 (con't) to put a sword in their hand to kill us.”

The meaning is obvious. They are accusing Moses of bringing them to the point of destruction because he has meddled in their affairs. They were safe and secure and suddenly they are facing the same calamity that all of their people had previously faced.

Because they are Hebrews, they are identified with the Hebrews. They cannot change who they are anymore than a leopard can change his spots. Esther was informed of exactly this when Mordecai spoke to her about their impending doom -

“Do not think in your heart that you will escape in the king’s palace any more than all the other Jews. 14 For if you remain completely silent at this time, relief and deliverance will arise for the Jews from another place, but you and your father’s house will perish. Yet who knows whether you have come to the kingdom for such a time as this?” Esther 4:13, 14

And so, in realizing their plight, they heap reproaches upon the Lord's designee over them. Jesus faced this as well and they nailed him to a cross. In fact, in Acts 7 Stephen spoke to the leaders of Israel about numerous such instances in their history, constantly following the same disobedient pattern.

Moses received no gratitude at this time, but as Jamieson-Faucett-Brown notes -

"...as the greatest darkness is immediately before the dawn, so the people of God are often plunged into the deepest affliction when on the eve of their deliverance; and so it was in this case." Jamieson-Faucett-Brown

22 So Moses returned to the Lord

It is unknown just what these words mean. There is no explanation of them and there is no hint to offer expanded guesswork. And so all we can do is speculate. Later we find out that the Lord spoke to him in Egypt. Did he have a spot picked out to meet the Lord, or did he simply prostrate himself because of his troubled heart?

Whatever the case is, the old adage "A praying heart never lacks a praying place" rings true. The Lord is there for His people and their petitions do not go unheard. And so Moses returned to the Lord.

22 (con't) and said, "Lord, why have You brought trouble on this people? Why is it You have sent me?"

Some scholars find these words impetuous, others might say he is lacking faith or irreverent. Augustine took a different stand and said that, "These are not words of contumacy or indignation, but of inquiry and prayer."

But there is more than this. There is a heartfelt desire being spoken of by Moses here to know the depths of the wisdom of God concerning a matter which involves a seeming hand of discipline when it appears it should be a hand of comfort.

This type of comment to the Lord is not at all uncommon in the Bible. It's found in the books of the law, the books wisdom, the prophets, and even in the New Testament. In Psalm 74 and from the hand of Asaph we read this -

"O God, why have You cast us off forever?
Why does Your anger smoke against the sheep of Your pasture?
2 Remember Your congregation, which You have purchased of old,
The tribe of Your inheritance, which You have redeemed—" Psalm 74:1

Rather than simply saying that the Lord has brought trouble on the people, in a more literal sense, Moses' question to the Lord asks why He has afflicted the people with evil?

He has already been told twice that he should expect Pharaoh to not respond favorably towards his petitions, but what he didn't expect was that there would be evil consequences towards Israel in the process.

Just like the psalmist, he wanted to understand the process and not just the outcome. But this tells us that there is more involved than just the story of Moses delivering Israel from Egypt. If it were only that, the Lord would have surely told him that things would get worse for the people before they got better.

Or, he would have surely kept harm from coming upon the Israelites while He accomplished His work. But neither of those things have occurred. Because of this, we can know that what is recorded here is an appeal for faith for all times, as well as being a picture of the end times.

Job understood this as he pronounced his great affirmation that God is sovereign and that he would serve him through both blessing and adversity. And the Bible is asking us to follow the same path. If the world spirals out of control before the rapture of the church, we are to hold fast to the sure promises of God despite the troubles.

And Israel will be asked to do the same through the tribulation as well. We're asked to have faith and to be faithful, even when we don't understand the troubles which seem to come from the hand of the Lord Himself.

23 For since I came to Pharaoh to speak in Your name, he has done evil to this people; neither have You delivered Your people at all.

Moses expected deliverance, but he didn't expect Pharaoh's evil treatment of the people in the process. And these words clarify what he said in the previous verse when he asked, "why have You brought trouble on this people?"

The evil was actively brought on by Pharaoh, but was passively allowed by the Lord. The Lord is never the cause of evil, and if He does cause something which we perceive as evil, then we have misperceived what has happened. Moses understood this and so his questions are probing and specific.

In Hebrew his words are v'hatzel lo hitzalta - "and delivering no delivered." The words indicate that what was started is left uncompleted despite the evil which Pharaoh has brought upon Israel. Rather than an abundance of accusations and a snippy attitude, his words are frank and filled with perplexed curiosity.

And this is the way we should conduct ourselves as we speak to the Lord about those things which trouble us. We can't hide the obvious and so there is no point in ignoring it. And yet, we lack the full picture and so there is no point in being wordy or demanding. In what is a good parallel thought to complement how Moses has addressed the issues on his heart to the Lord, we can look to words from Solomon in the book of Ecclesiastes -

"Do not be rash with your mouth,
And let not your heart utter anything hastily before God.
For God is in heaven, and you on earth;
Therefore let your words be few." Ecclesiastes 5:2

The verses today are filled with hints of other things, they picture what is coming in the future, and they show us once again that God is not pleased with human effort in an attempt to be reconciled to Him. The religious leaders of Israel will find this out someday.

If the Lord told Moses in advance what was coming, or if these things didn't happen, then the specific words which have been used wouldn't have been included in the account. Work, stubble, officer, brick, and so on, have all been used in specific ways to show us not just a story of the past, but a story of what is coming in the future.

Moses didn't understand because his life and circumstances were being used to show us that future. And these things are starting to come to pass in our own lives! Israel must learn that instead of working deeds of the law, that it is faith in the Lord that brings harmony and reconciliation between God and man.

Anything else, no matter how seemingly good to human eyes, is mere stubble. No matter how much stubble we find, it will never be sufficient to make enough bricks to get to heaven.

Let us turn away from pleasing the devil in our attempts to please God. Instead, let us please God through the work of His Son which was given for that purpose. If you've never understood why you need Jesus and you'd like to call out to Him to save you today, give me another moment to explain how you can do just that...

Closing Verse: "...to him who does not work but believes on Him who justifies the ungodly, his faith is accounted for righteousness, 6 just as David also describes the blessedness of the man to whom God imputes righteousness apart from works:

7 'Blessed are those whose lawless deeds are forgiven,
And whose sins are covered;

8 Blessed is the man to whom the Lord shall not impute sin.'" Romans 4:5-8

Next Week: Exodus 6:1-13 (I Will Rescue and Redeem) (16th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Gathering Stubble to Make Brick

And the taskmasters of the people and their officers

Went out and spoke to the people they saw

Saying, "Thus says Pharaoh:

'I will not give you straw

Go, get yourselves straw where you can find it

Yet none of your work will be reduced, not a little bit

So the people were scattered abroad

Throughout all of Egypt the land

To gather stubble instead of straw
With whatever they could fill their hand
And the taskmasters forced them to hurry
Saying, "Fulfill your work, your daily quota
As when there was straw the full tally
And make sure it's not less, even one iota

Also the officers of the children of Israel
Whom Pharaoh's taskmasters had over them set
Were beaten and were asked to tell
Why at the end of the day things weren't accomplished yet
"Why have you not fulfilled your task
In making brick both yesterday and today, as before?"
This is the question that we ask
Why can't you even up the daily score

Then the officers of the children
Of Israel came and cried out in a fuss
To Pharaoh, saying to him then
"Why are you dealing with your servants thus?
There is no straw given to your servants
And to us, 'Make brick!' they say
And indeed your servants are beaten
But the fault is in your own people, this we convey

But he said, "You are idle! Idle! This his word
Therefore to me you say
'Let us go and sacrifice to the Lord
So that from your work you can get away
Therefore go now and work
For no straw shall be given you
Yet you shall deliver the quota of bricks
This is what I order and what you shall do

And the officers of the children of Israel
Saw that they were in trouble, more than an iota
After it was said to them what Pharaoh did tell
"You shall not reduce any bricks from your daily quota
Then, as they came out from Pharaoh
They met Moses and Aaron in the way
Who stood there to meet them
To see what occurred with them that day
And they said to them without just warrant
"Let the Lord look on you and judge
Because you have made us abhorrent
In the sight of Pharaoh, to us he bears a grudge
And in the sight of his servants, it's a bitter pill
To put a sword in their hand in order us to kill
So Moses returned to the Lord

And said in a manner speaking frankly
“Lord, why have You brought trouble on this people?
Why is it You have sent me?
For since I came to Pharaoh to speak in Your name
He has evil to this people done
Neither have You delivered Your people at all
They are still dwelling here under Egypt's sun
God is patiently waiting to deliver Israel
He has a plan and it will come about as it should
This is a truth which the Bible does tell
In the end, all that the Lord does is good

God allows us to make brick if we choose
And even brick with crummy stubble
And he lets us direct the path of our own shoes
Even if it gets us in a bit of trouble
But the good news is Christ, whom He has sent
In Him there is freedom from all trials
And with Him our eternity will be spent
When we call out to Him our future is guaranteed smiles
Praise You O God for our precious Lord Jesus
Who has certainly done all things wondrously for us

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 6:1-13 (I WILL RESCUE AND I WILL REDEEM)

Introduction: Before we start looking at the verses today, I want to share with you a chiasm that I found while preparing this sermon. It comprises all of Exodus 6:1-11. If it seems like there is repetition in the verses we're looking at, it's because there is. They are specifically formed to highlight what the Lord is going to do and why.

Exodus 6:1-11 - Words of Covenant Surety (Seven "I Wills)

A Promise of Redemption and Inheritance (1/5/2015)

- a. (vs 1) Then the Lord said to Moses, "Now you shall see what I will do to Pharaoh. For with a strong hand he will let them go, and with a strong hand he will drive them out of his land."
- b. (vs 3) I appeared to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob,
- c. (vs 4) I have also established My covenant with them, to give them the land of Canaan,
- d. (vs 5) The groaning of the children of Israel whom the Egyptians keep in bondage,
- e. (vs 6) 'I am the Lord;
- f. (vs 6) I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians,
- g. (vs 6) I will rescue you from their bondage,
- g. (vs 6) I will redeem you with an outstretched arm and with great judgments.
- f. (vs 7) I will take you as My people, and I will be your God.
- e. (vs 7) Then you shall know that I am the Lord your God

- d. (vs 7) The burdens of the Egyptians.
- c. (v 8) And I will bring you into the land
- b. (vs 8) I swore to give to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; and I will give it to you as a heritage
- a. (vss 10, 11) And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying, "Go in, tell Pharaoh king of Egypt to let the children of Israel go out of his land."

The Chiasm is centered on two parallel thoughts - 1) I will rescue you, and 2) I will redeem you. But even more than that, it encompasses seven "I wills" spoken by the Lord. Time has borne out that the Lord fulfilled His word exactly as He stated.

The last of the seven "I wills" is that He would give the land of Israel to the people as a heritage. Some could claim that this promise failed because they have been kicked out of it twice. Or they might incorrectly state that this promise is fulfilled in the church, not Israel. But both of these would be incorrect.

The land was given to Israel. When they remained obedient to the Lord, it was their land and they could use it. When they were disobedient, it was their land and they could not use it; like a parent withholding a toy from a child. It belongs to them, but they cannot use it until their behavior is corrected. But either way, the land has remained God's gift to Israel.

Additionally, Israel is Israel and the church is the church. Crossing the two lines only confuses one's theology. Regardless as to how one feels about Israel, God's promises to them stand. Those promises, going all the way back to Abraham, are repeated in today's verses. Now is the time for them to begin to be fulfilled.

We'll see this as we research out the verses ahead of us today.

Text Verse: "Now therefore, our God,
The great, the mighty, and awesome God,
Who keeps covenant and mercy:
Do not let all the trouble seem small before You
That has come upon us." Nehemiah 9:32

Trouble has befallen Israel, and the burdens have seemed beyond their ability to bear, even more so since Moses spoke to them the first time. And Pharaoh has already hardened his heart against Moses once as well.

Now he is being told to once again speak to both Israel and Pharaoh. Without understanding the reasons for the first seeming failure, he will feel that he is wholly unqualified for the task set before him.

We too may feel this way about the challenges we face, but it is absolutely certain that if we are in Christ and we are being obedient to Him, whatever seems to be hindering us is there for a reason. Knowing this then must surely help take the stress off of the moment.

Let us be determined that the end we are working towards is being directed by Him, and our steps are carefully selected to meet His final goal. It is a continuing theme of the Bible that speaks to us, so let us apply this truth to our lives at all times. It is a truth found in God's superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Land Grant of Canaan (verses 1-4)

The last words of the previous chapter were those of Moses. He was practically in a state of desperation over the treatment he had received from the officers who were over the people of Israel. They complained against him because he caused them to receive the same grief that the common people had suffered.

Despite their leadership status, they had been first and foremost lumped in with their own people. It formed a picture of the future when the political and spiritual leaders of Israel will be in bed with the anti-Christ, thinking that they will be safe from persecution through their faithfulness to the one-world religion and government - something that is beginning to happen before our eyes in today's world.

But they will find this to be false. They will be persecuted as Jews because they are Jews. And so they will come to understand that they need true deliverance as well. Their false hope in the antichrist will prove to be just that... false hope.

After all that occurred, Moses was distraught and he cried out to the Lord with these finishing words of chapter 5 -

"So Moses returned to the Lord and said, 'Lord, why have You brought trouble on this people? Why is it You have sent me? 23 For since I came to Pharaoh to speak in Your name, he has done evil to this people; neither have You delivered Your people at all.'" Exodus 5:22, 23

That appeal to the Lord has now set up the response of the Lord which is found in our first verse of the day...

1 Then the Lord said to Moses, "Now you shall see what I will do to Pharaoh.

In response, the Lord promises action "Now." There was a delay which Moses didn't understand, but taken in the context of the previous chapter, it is clear. The people weren't ready to be delivered. The officers over them had their allegiances tied to Pharaoh, not toward the people under them.

Until they realized that they were no different, but instead needed the Lord, the affliction continued. This precept is found explicitly stated by Peter, who is writing to the Jews of the end times, and so the pattern fits perfectly. Here's what he said

"The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some count slackness, but is longsuffering toward us, not willing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance." 2 Peter 3:9

Sure enough, he had withheld action until repentance was possible. There was a need to refine the people in preparation for the exodus. The account shows us that even after the exodus, many of the people continuously rebelled against the Lord. They had seen all of His wonders, and yet their hearts continuously turned back to Egypt at the slightest experience of discomfort.

As this is so, how much worse would they have acted if the Lord hadn't allowed them time to more fully rely on Him. It is the constant theme of the workings of the Lord, He does things that at first seem hard to understand, but later become clear. This is why even on the night before the crucifixion, He had to tell His disciples to trust Him.

His words in John 13:7 can be applied to His actions before the people here at the time of the Exodus -

“What I am doing you do not understand now, but you will know after this.”

The ways of the Lord are perfect, and His timing is always exact in order to meet His intended purposes. Pharaoh would be dealt with, it would be now, and Moses would see it with his own eyes.

1 (con't) For with a strong hand he will let them go, and with a strong hand he will drive them out of his land.”

Some translations make it seem that the "strong hand" He is speaking of could be the hand of Pharaoh as he drives the people from the land. This is certainly not the intent. Rather it is the work of the Lord which is being referred to. The NIV translates this very clearly by saying -

"Now you will see what I will do to Pharaoh: Because of my mighty hand he will let them go; because of my mighty hand he will drive them out of his country."

It is a less literal translation, but it is certainly a more accurate one. The strong hand of the Lord on behalf of His people is seen time and again in Scripture. A great parallel to this is found in Jeremiah. There the Lord again promises to redeem the people and return them to the land of Israel -

"For the Lord has redeemed Jacob,
And ransomed him from the hand of one stronger than he.
12 Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion,
Streaming to the goodness of the Lord—
For wheat and new wine and oil,

For the young of the flock and the herd;
Their souls shall be like a well-watered garden,
And they shall sorrow no more at all." Jeremiah 31:11, 12

2 And God spoke to Moses and said to him: "I am the Lord.

This verse follows the same pattern that was seen back in Exodus 3:1. There it said, "..when the Lord saw that he turned aside to look, God called to him from the midst of the bush." In other words, the term "God" and "Lord" are used in the same verse.

However, the translation is much, much better rendered as "I am Yehovah" instead of "I am the Lord." Otherwise, when we get to the next verse, it won't have the same effect and force. As readers of English versions, the word "lord" can be used in many ways, but the name Yehovah means only one thing.

For the most part, I have no problem with the name Yehovah being translated as LORD, but there are times when clarity demands the name be given. This is one of those times. He is declaring His name. It is the same name He gave at the burning bush, and it is a declaration to Moses that He will perform what He has spoken.

3 I appeared to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, as God Almighty, but by My name Lord I was not known to them.

What this means is that the way that God expressed Himself to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob was as El Shaddai, or God Almighty. His words to them were words of covenant faithfulness and great fruitfulness. The title Yehovah wasn't actually unknown to them, but the full import and weight of the name wasn't understood.

Now He has revealed it as more than a title; it is His name. As a name expresses behavior and being, it signifies that He is the Existent One. It appears that the reason He waited until this time to finally reveal His name in this way was because of the idolatry and polytheism which surrounded Israel and to which even Israel had fallen prey to.

By now proclaiming Himself as the Existent One, He was revealing to them the truth that there is but One God and that He was it. No other god is a god, but is rather a false god. The Lord waited for over 2500 years of human existence to reveal Himself in this way for a reason.

That reason is that this group of people is being prepared for an encounter with Him where He will reveal His holiness to them. They will learn that this One true God has certain standards which He cannot compromise. In order for the world to learn this, He will use this group of people as an object lesson to learn from.

Before that meeting takes place, however, this One true God will prove Himself against the false gods of Egypt. The ten plagues on the ten false god's of Egypt are emblematic of the final destruction of all the false gods of the world in the end times. Each step of how God reveals Himself is taken with purposeful care.

4 I have also established My covenant with them, to give them the land of Canaan, the land of their pilgrimage, in which they were strangers.

It needs be understood that the words of promise encompass everything from verse 2 to verse 8. God appeared to the fathers as El Shaddai and He established the covenant with them. That covenant was to give them the entire land of Canaan which was the land of their pilgrimage.

They never possessed the land, but rather lived there as strangers. God gave Abraham the reason why they couldn't possess the land at that time, which was because the Amorites who lived there had not yet reached their full level of iniquity.

In His grace, He gave them 400 years before bringing in Israel to destroy them and assume the land as their own. And before that would occur, Pharaoh and Egypt would be judged as well. But again, this is given not only as a historical account, but as a lesson of the work of Christ all the way through to the end times.

God promised to never destroy the world by flood again even though the inclination of man's heart is evil all the time. Instead, God will judge the world through the plagues of Revelation and the land of Canaan will be where Christ returns to; He being the true Israel returning to the land of promise. Every story in the Bible is used to show us patterns of future history.

The Land of Israel is for the people of God
It is defiled by those who are unholy
And so may God's people in righteousness tread
When they enter His land, so may it be

Let all of God's people walk rightly each day
Let each of us be examples for others to see
In our actions, let us holiness display
And may justice spread out like branches of a tree

This we petition, and for this we pray

O God, let us always walk in Your holy way

II. I Have and I Will (verses 5-9)

In verse 5, the Lord will say "I have" twice. And then from verses 6-8, He will say "I will" seven times. The Lord is aware and the Lord will perform.

5 And I have also heard the groaning of the children of Israel whom the Egyptians keep in bondage, and I have remembered My covenant.

This is almost a repetition of the thought which came at the end of Exodus 2. There, just before the account of Moses leading his flocks to Horeb, which was a picture of the rapture of the church, and which was immediately followed by the account at the bush, it said this -

"Then the children of Israel groaned because of the bondage, and they cried out; and their cry came up to God because of the bondage. 24 So God heard their groaning, and God remembered His covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob. 25 And God looked upon the children of Israel, and God acknowledged them." Exodus 2:23-25

The Lord is giving Moses a full accounting of what has transpired, even from the time of Abraham until the time of his own calling. Moses asked why all the trouble had come upon the people since he arrived in Egypt, and he reminded the Lord that nothing had been done about it.

Without explaining the reason directly, he has indirectly shown Moses that there is a time and a place for everything and that the proper time had now arrived.

Certain things had to happen which Moses was unaware of and he needed to trust that all was occurring as it should. It is an appeal to Moses to have faith.

6 Therefore say to the children of Israel: 'I am the Lord; I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians, I will rescue you from their bondage, and I will redeem you with an outstretched arm and with great judgments.'

The redemption, or purchase, of the people of Israel is mentioned for the very first time in this verse, and it will continue to be used throughout Scripture. This is actually accomplished in two separate ways. The first here is noted in the great judgments that the Lord will perform.

They will go from slavery to the Egyptians to being servants of God through these judgments. This is the first time that these judgments are referred to, and the word will be used sixteen times in the Old Testament. God will use such judgments both for and against Israel and others in the future as He deals with their sin.

The second way Israel will be redeemed is when they are led through the Red Sea and are forever delivered from the death that pursued them. It is, in essence, being "purchased anew." (Ellicott)

These two types of redemptive acts picture our own salvation by first being delivered from the power of the devil and then being delivered from the presence of sin. It is a pattern which Paul explains in the book of Romans.

Finally, one more term is used in this verse for the first time. It is the "outstretched arm" of the Lord. It is a term that will be used repeatedly concerning the Lord in the Bible after this and it makes an obvious picture.

When a man desires to show His strength or to defeat an enemy, he will stretch his arms out. In this one stance, he will both defend some and work against others. This is what the Lord says he will do with His outstretched arm. He will redeem Israel and destroy Egypt.

7 I will take you as My people, and I will be your God.

Later in Exodus 19, the term segullah will be used to describe Israel. They are considered a peculiar possession who belong to the Lord. He has taken them as His people in order to fulfill the promises that He made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

However, this idea of the Hebrews being a special possession to God doesn't in any way imply that He had abandoned the rest of the people on earth. Throughout the Old Testament, and even in the New before Christ's cross, people are noted as joining to God, or being given particular favor by Him.

The selection of Israel is a demonstration of God's wisdom for a multitude of reasons. One was to have a people set aside to usher in the Messiah. Another was to show that a chosen people, who were set apart to live under God's standards, were still unable to meet those standards.

Through Israel, the world would learn two important lessons. 1) The law cannot save anyone. Instead it only shows how utterly sinful sin is, and 2) It was used to show the world their absolute need for Christ, who was to come through the very people who proved these two points.

In this selection of Israel to be God's people, He is fulfilling His promises and He is also demonstrating what His name implies, which is that He is able to perform His spoken word. Their later unfaithfulness in no way negates His faithfulness. In fact, it only highlights it as He has remained faithful to them all along.

7 (con't) Then you shall know that I am the Lord your God who brings you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians.

In performing His word, the people will know that He is, in fact, the One He claims to be, and that He has done exactly what He said He would do. But again, there is the immediate understanding of these words and there is a prophetic fulfillment of them. If these verses only pertained to Israel, then it would actually be a failure of the greater plan of redemption.

Abraham's promise was one based on faith, and it was given long before he was circumcised. The pattern of being redeemed based on faith then must pertain to all people and not just Israel. It must ultimately be based on the work of the Messiah. And in this verse is a picture of that.

Verses 6 & 7 contain the very last two uses in the Bible of the word siblah, which is translated as "burdens." All six have been in the book of Exodus. This word siblah comes from another word sabal. It is a word used to describe the work of the Messiah in Isaiah 53:4 and 53:11 -

Surely He has borne our griefs
And carried our sorrows;
Yet we esteemed Him stricken,
Smitten by God, and afflicted. Isaiah 53:4

He shall see the labor of His soul, and be satisfied.
By His knowledge My righteous Servant shall justify many,
For He shall bear their iniquities. Isaiah 53:11

This word, siblah, is being used for the last time to show that the burdens are lifted in the work of the Lord. And so it is with Christ. The burden of our sins is taken from us when we call on Him. Although these stories might seem distant and quaint, they are words which are near and right now. They picture the eternal gospel which proclaims that the Lord, not our deeds, is what rescues us.

I have carefully noted this unique word, siblah, in each account in which it was used, and now you know why. Our burdens are lifted in Christ, all pictured here in Exodus.

8 And I will bring you into the land which I swore to give to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; and I will give it to you as a heritage:

The imagery of the Hebrew is much more exciting than the English. It says, nasathi eth yadi - "I have lifted up my hand." Yes, to lift one's hand implies to "swear," but in many translations we miss the action and the mental pictures which the Hebrew portrays.

Three promises have now been given concerning what the Lord will do. The first is that He will deliver His people from bondage. The second is to take the Hebrew people as His own; in essence, to adopt them. And the third is to bring them into the land of Canaan and give it to them as a heritage.

This is true at the time of the Exodus, and it is true of the end times which Exodus pictures. But it is also true in the greater picture of the Lord and His church, who are those who have crossed over from death to life. Let's see it from the New Testament. He has promised to deliver us from bondage to sin which ends in death, and He has done it. Hebrews 2 says -

"Inasmuch then as the children have partaken of flesh and blood, He Himself likewise shared in the same, that through death He might destroy him who had the power of death, that is, the devil, 15 and release those who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage."
Hebrews 2:14, 15

He has promised to adopt us as His people and He has done it. Galatians 4 says -

"But when the fullness of the time had come, God sent forth His Son, born of a woman, born under the law, 5 to redeem those who were under the law, that we might receive the adoption as sons." Galatians 4:4, 5

And He has promised us heaven, and it is accomplished, we are just waiting on its actualization. Ephesians 2 tells us this is so -

"But God, who is rich in mercy, because of His great love with which He loved us, 5 even when we were dead in trespasses, made us alive together with Christ (by grace you have been saved), 6 and raised us up together, and made us sit together in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus." Ephesians 2:4-6

This exodus story shows us history, but it also shows us the present and the future. It is the continuing pattern of the Bible -

"That which has been is what will be,
That which is done is what will be done,
And there is nothing new under the sun." Ecclesiastes 1:9

8 (con't) I am the Lord.”

Ani Yehovah - "I (am) Yehovah." "My name is my guarantee. What I have said is inviolable because I am the Existent One. My words cannot fail because I encompass time. What I have spoken is already performed and is merely waiting for your present to catch up with that future where I already exist."

9 So Moses spoke thus to the children of Israel; but they did not heed Moses, because of anguish of spirit and cruel bondage.

Proverbs says, "Hope deferred makes the heart sick" (Proverbs 13:12). The first time they heard the news from Moses, the Bible says that -

"...the people believed; and when they heard that the Lord had visited the children of Israel and that He had looked on their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshiped." Exodus 4:31

At that time, Moses presented to the people the three signs which He was granted from the Lord. Those signs, accompanied by the word of the Lord, were all the people needed to believe. But the signs were forgotten and the word lost its significance. Now, instead of hope, they don't even heed.

And the reason is because of the anguish of the spirit. In Hebrew the words are kotzer ruach which is literally a "shortness of spirit" or a "shortness of breath." The suffering was so continuous and burdensome that there wasn't time for the people to breathe, much less revive their spirits.

It is an exacting picture of what could be expected in the end times. As the world falls apart, there will be few who will remember the promises of the Lord, but the Lord would ask for them to persevere, even through the times of despondency.

Where is your hope and in whom do you place your trust?

What will you do when the world around you shatters?

Place your hope in the Lord, who is faithful and just

Abiding in His truth is, in the end, all that matters

To place your hope in man is like air passing through a vent

To place your hope in money is a terrible dark pit

When man has failed you and your money is all spent

What meaning is found in your life? Please don't do it

Instead, place your hope in the Lord, so I say

You will be found safe and secure for all eternity

Place your hope in the Lord, Yes! Do it today!

And then watch history unfold, great things you will see

III. Who will Heed The Word of the Lord? (verses 10-13)

10 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying,

At times, verse numbers are given which don't seem to make sense. Why would it stop in the middle of a sentence and begin a new verse? Six other times in this chapter alone, this type of introduction is used and all six of them contain a complete sentence.

And the last time is in verse 28 which is a recap of this verse, and yet it isn't divided as this one is. Only this once is the sentence divided into two verses. What seems to be the reason is that it shows a contrast between what was just said and what is coming.

The people of Israel didn't heed Moses in the last verse and yet Moses is instructed to speak to Pharaoh in the next verse. The words "And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying" are given for our benefit. Everything that was spoken from verse 2 to verse 8 is what the Lord said.

Verse 9 tells us that Moses repeated it to Israel and they didn't heed. And now, without any other words between the directives, the next thing Moses will hear is another command to do something even more difficult than what he just did. Therefore, this portion of a sentence is more pertinently highlighted by being offset from the words to come, which are...

11 "Go in, tell Pharaoh king of Egypt to let the children of Israel go out of his land."

The last time Moses went before Pharaoh to speak the word of the Lord, he said, "Thus says the Lord God of Israel: 'Let My people go, that they may hold a feast to Me in the wilderness.'" Now, no reason is given and no limitations on where they would go are made. Instead it is a fixed demand to let them go out of His land.

What becomes clear in this is what the Lord said to Moses before he departed for Egypt in Exodus 4:21 -

"But I will harden his heart, so that he will not let the people go."

The first visit to Pharaoh was a mild request which could have been easily granted. No signs were given and no power was displayed before Pharaoh. By coming in this manner, the Lord has already hardened Pharaoh's arrogant heart to any future demands.

Now, when a demand rather than a request is made, it will certainly be met with greater resistance. And as the plagues come, they will come from lesser to greater plagues. Each step is calculated to only harden Pharaoh's heart further and thus magnify the work of the Lord.

Unfortunately for Pharaoh, he should have been more lenient at the beginning and saved himself the wrath of God at the end. It is a valuable lesson for all people. As Ellicott says about this -

"If we refuse a light cross, a heavier cross is laid on us. If we will not close with the Sybil on the first occasion, she offers us a worse bargain on the second." Charles Ellicott

12 And Moses spoke before the Lord, saying, "The children of Israel have not heeded me. How then shall Pharaoh heed me,

The people of Israel had seen the signs of the Lord. They had been convinced once of the surety that their freedom was at hand. And yet they had forgotten those things and were left in the shortness of their breath as their bondage continued.

As this was so, and as both Moses and the Lord knew this, the question to the Lord is all the more pertinent. Certainly one who didn't believe the first time, and who was both insolent and deaf to that command, would respond even more negatively than those who at first openly welcomed His words.

But this is exactly what was intended by the Lord. Moses has just failed to see it from the Lord's vantage point.

12 (con't) for I am of uncircumcised lips?"

In verse 4:10, Moses said he was "slow of speech and slow of tongue." His words here expand on that. He says he is "of uncircumcised lips." It is as if he had a foreskin over his mouth which hindered his tongue. It is a claim that his speech makes him unqualified to perform the duty he has been directed to perform.

In Genesis 17, any person who was uncircumcised was outside of the covenant of God. In Leviticus 19, fruit which was unacceptable as food was considered uncircumcised. In Leviticus 26, hearts that are uncircumcised are hearts which are guilty before the Lord. And in Jeremiah 6:10, an uncircumcised ear is one which will not heed the word of the Lord.

To be circumcised means to be right, acceptable, and pure. And so to be uncircumcised meant that his words would be considered impure and unacceptable. Because Aaron has already been assigned as his speaker, Moses has now made the assumption that even what he transmits to Aaron is defiled and thus it is the reason why both Israel and Pharaoh have rejected his words.

Said differently, Moses is intimating that he has a defect which is actually a moral hindrance to the plans and words of the Lord. His petition isn't because of a fear of personal danger, but of being the cause of failure in what the Lord intended. It is the honor of the Lord that he is concerned about.

This is exactly the same sentiment found in Isaiah 6 -

"In the year that King Uzziah died, I saw the Lord sitting on a throne, high and lifted up, and the train of His robe filled the temple. 2 Above it stood seraphim; each one had six wings: with two he covered his face, with two he covered his feet, and with two he flew. 3 And one cried to another and said:

'Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts;
The whole earth is full of His glory!'

4 And the posts of the door were shaken by the voice of him who cried out, and the house was filled with smoke.

5 So I said:

'Woe is me, for I am undone!
Because I am a man of unclean lips,
And I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips;
For my eyes have seen the King,
The Lord of hosts.'" Isaiah 6:1-5

Like Isaiah, Moses had personally experienced the majesty of the Lord and he assumed that he had failed him. The command to speak to Pharaoh brought him to a new low as he only contemplated more failure would come from him.

13 Then the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, and gave them a command for the children of Israel and for Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt.

Without any prior introduction of Aaron in this account, and no mention of him since near the end of the previous chapter, he is suddenly named in this verse. Moses spoke, the Lord heard, and the Lord acted.

To show Moses that he is qualified for the task, he now speaks to both Moses and Aaron together. And he does it not just for speaking to the obstinate Pharaoh, but to the disheartened children of Israel. It is a command to both parties and it is to be carried out.

In both verse 11 and this verse, Pharaoh is called "king of Egypt." And yet the title wasn't given in verse 1 or verse 12. Why would this be? The reason is that in verse 11 and here, the children of Israel are mentioned. In other words, there is a contrast which the Bible is asking us to see.

Though Pharaoh is the king of Egypt, he is not the king of Israel. Thus the title is specifically mentioned when they are mentioned. This follows perfectly with the idea of the kingdom of Christ in contrast to the kingdom of this world, ruled by the devil. This contrast is made between the two until the final pages of the Bible when it says in Revelation -

“The kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever!” Revelation 11:5

Following little hints like the terminology used when speaking of or to Pharaoh shows us greater patterns of what God has done and what He continues to do in the world. Never be afraid to stop and think on these types of things because what may seem unimportant never is. And what seems like a passing thought can often lead to the greatest of discoveries.

Our verses for today have ended and yet they continue on in our lives from moment to moment. The pictures of the Lord, Moses, and Israel, and their interactions with Pharaoh picture our own interaction between Christ and the devil.

If we remember that the eternal truths found in these ancient stories are given to remind us of that, they become all the more relevant to our own lives, and the lives of those around us who still have not called out to Christ.

We are either under the rule and authority of the devil in his world of sin, pictured by Pharaoh and the kingdom of Egypt, or we are under the rule and authority of Christ. Someday, just like Egypt, this world will be destroyed through judgment. Those who don't belong to Christ will be destroyed with it.

If you've never made a commitment to the Lord, stop rebelling and start yielding. Open your heart, open your eyes, and call out to Him. He is mighty to save. Let me tell you how you can receive Christ, even today...

Closing Verse: "Cast your burden on the Lord,
And He shall sustain you;
He shall never permit the righteous to be moved." Psalm 65:22

Next Week: Exodus 6:14-30 (The Family of Moses and Aaron) (17th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

I Will Rescue and I Will Redeem

Then the Lord said to Moses

Now you shall see what I will do to Pharaoh

With a strong hand he will drive them out of his land

With a strong hand he will let them go

And God spoke to Moses this word

And said to him: "I am the Lord

I appeared to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, as God Almighty
To their eyes, this is how I was shown

But by My name Lord

To them I was not known

I have also established My covenant with them

To give them of Canaan the land

The land of their pilgrimage

In which they were strangers beforehand

And I have also heard the groaning

Of the children of Israel

Whom the Egyptians keep in bondage

And I have remembered My covenant as well

Therefore say to the children of Israel:

I am the Lord; I will bring you out

From under the burdens of the Egyptians

I will rescue you from their bondage, no doubt
And I will redeem you, I will not hesitate
With an outstretched arm and with judgments great

I will take you as My people and I will be your God
Then you shall know that I am the Lord
Your God who brings you out from under
The burdens of the Egyptians, this is my sure word

And I will bring you into the land
Which I swore to give to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob too
And I will give it to you as a heritage:
I am the Lord, this I will certainly do

So Moses spoke thus to the children of Israel
But they did not heed Moses because
Of anguish of spirit and cruel bondage
This is what being disheartened does

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying
“Go in, tell Pharaoh, Egypt's king
To let the children of Israel, as I am relaying
Go out of his land, tell him to do this thing

And Moses spoke before the Lord, saying
“The children of Israel have not heeded me
How then shall Pharaoh heed me, I am praying
For I am of uncircumcised lips as you already see
Then the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron
And gave them a command
For the children of Israel, and for Pharaoh king of Egypt
To bring the children of Israel out of Egypt the land

Once again, the words have been carefully selected
To show us of the great work of the Lord
In each word and in each verse can be detected
Greater pictures found in His superior word

O God, with such attention and such care
How could we quickly pass through without careful note?
When you have been so meticulous everywhere
And in every word You did Your wisdom upon us dote
Grant us hearts that desire to see every detail
Grant us eyes that can see Your precious Son
Even if we have to go slow as a snail
Let us not miss a thing, no - not even one!

Thank You for this wonderful book

And all the joy it reveals to us

Remind us daily to open it and upon its pages look

And to seek out there our precious Lord Jesus

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 6:14-30 (THE FAMILY OF MOSES AND AARON)

Introduction: Genealogies and records of ancestry can be important for a multitude of reasons. An example which I chew on probably more often than I should is listening to people whine about the past and how they have a right to reparations for one supposed offense or another.

It is quite common among the black community today to lump all whites in as "former slave owners," and people like our current president, Jesse Jackson, Al Sharpton, Eric Holder, and others of their ilk, use race in an attempt to divide, not unite, the American people.

They have steeped the black community of our nation into believing that whites only have their worst intent in mind, and that it has always been this way; it is all about race and subjugation to them. Such is not the case and their version of history is riddled with misrepresentations and lies.

Having a truthful account of one's ancestry then can be used to bring out the truth of a matter which is necessary to quell the tide of such revolting nonsense. In the case of the Garrett family - my family, we have an unusual right, honor, and privilege to recognition from the African American slave community.

Our ancestry leads to my great, great grandfather, Thomas Garrett. He was born on August 21, 1789 in Upper Darby, PA. He is one of the most prominent figures in the history of the Underground Railroad.

He has been called Delaware's greatest humanitarian and is credited with helping more than 2,700 slaves escape to freedom in a forty-year career as a Station Master. He was a white Quaker, whose family hid runaway slaves in its Delaware County farmhouse.

As a child, he credited an experience which he characterized as "transcendental" with directing his life's work toward aiding in the escape of slaves. The incident, in which a black servant employed by his family was kidnapped and nearly forced into slavery, was a watershed moment in his life.

Because of it he would devote his life to the abolitionist cause. He was a friend and benefactor to the great Underground Railroad Conductor Harriet Tubman. She passed through his station many times, during which he frequently provided her with money and shoes to continue her missions.

Of note, he personally provided Tubman with the money and the means for her own parents to escape from the South. In 1848, he and fellow abolitionists were tried and convicted for aiding in the escape of a family who had been slaves in Maryland. Both were given considerable fines which rendered them nearly bankrupt.

In his closing address, Garrett regaled those in the courtroom with a redoubled commitment to help runaway slaves. Eyewitness accounts detail the particular contrition of one slave-holding juror from southern Delaware who actually rose to shake Garrett's hand and apologize at the close of the impassioned speech.

Following the Civil War, he continued his work for minority groups in America. In 1870, when blacks were given the right to vote, he was carried on the shoulders of black supporters through the streets of Wilmington as they hailed him "our Moses."

There was the Moses of Wilmington, and knowing his accomplishments is both something I take joy in, and it is something that I wish I could put right in the face of the race-baiters of today. Our president disgusts me because of his one-sided, misguided, and skewed view of Christian history and of American history.

All men are on an equal standing before God and the terrible consequences we are paying because of this modern mindset of ignoring the deeds of those who worked to secure freedom for blacks, can only result in greater animosity and division.

There is another Moses, the first Moses, who also had a genealogical record which is found Scripture to prove that he was of the same stock of those who he was sent to lead out of their own bondage. God ensured this record was maintained and the placing of it in the Bible is absolutely perfect.

Text Verse: But for their sake I will remember the covenant of their ancestors, whom I brought out of the land of Egypt in the sight of the nations, that I might be their God:

I am the Lord.” Leviticus 26:45

Yes, it is good to know our roots. But even if they have been lost through the ravages of time or carelessness, we still can trace who we are back to our one father Noah and from him back to our original father, Adam.

So in the end, we are all really one blood and one people, divided by petty divisions which the Lord does not see as we do. He sees us in one of only two ways, either redeemed by Christ, or a child of the devil. He would choose that you become His adopted son once again so that you can fellowship with Him for all eternity.

A portion of the great story of how that is possible is found in today's verses. Yes... it's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Generations of Levi (verses 14-19)

14 These are the heads of their fathers' houses:

Suddenly after the last 13 verses, there appears this genealogical listing which was preceded by a note from Moses declaring his inability to speak properly and then a command by the Lord concerning the children of Israel and Pharaoh about their departure from Egypt. The exact words of verses 12 & 13 were -

"And Moses spoke before the Lord, saying, 'The children of Israel have not heeded me. How then shall Pharaoh heed me, for I am of uncircumcised lips?'

13 Then the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, and gave them a command for the children of Israel and for Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt."

Now, with what seems sudden abruptness, the Bible turns to 14 verses of the names of families and individuals. And then as soon as they end, they will be followed by two verses which give a command for Moses, and then a note from Moses, declaring his inability to speak properly.

What liberal scholars see as arbitrary and even ill-planned is actually a beautifully formed chiasm which acknowledges the right of Moses and Aaron to the leadership of Israel. This chiasm is the second such chiasm in the chapter and which, together, span the entire chapter, from verses 1-11 and then from verses 12-30 -

Exodus 6:12-30 - The Family of Moses and Aaron

A Foreshadowing of the Coming Prophet and Priest (1/12/2015)

a (vs 12) And Moses spoke before the Lord, saying, "The children of Israel have not heeded me. How then shall Pharaoh heed me, for I am of uncircumcised lips?"

b (vs13) Then the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron ... for Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt.

c (vss14-15) Families of Reuben and Simeon (rejected as leaders)

d (vss 16-19) Genealogies of Levi "according to their generations."

x (vs 20) The family of Moses and Aaron

d (vss 21-25) Houses of Levi "according to their families."

c (vss 26, 27) Moses and Aaron (selected as leaders)

b (vs 28, 29) The Lord spoke to Moses ... "Speak to Pharaoh king of Egypt all that I say to you."

a (vs 30) But Moses said before the Lord, "Behold, I am of uncircumcised lips, and how shall Pharaoh heed me?"

Despite the attacks of liberal theologians, there is harmony, purpose, and order to what is being given in these verses. The term for "father's houses" is rashey beit avotam. It refers to the heads of the individual houses. This listing is given for quite a few reasons as we will continue to see in the verses ahead.

One of those reasons is to establish a direct line from Abraham to Moses and Aaron, through Isaac and Jacob. This can be discerned when compared with the other sets of genealogies which have been presented already in the Bible.

A second reason is that God made a promise to Abraham in Genesis 15 concerning his descendants -

“Know certainly that your descendants will be strangers in a land that is not theirs, and will serve them, and they will afflict them four hundred years. 14 And also the nation whom they serve I will judge; afterward they shall come out with great possessions. 15 Now as for you, you shall go to your fathers in peace; you shall be buried at a good old age. 16 But in the fourth generation they shall return here, for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet complete.” Genesis 15:13-16

This listing is given to show that the Lord's words were true. Jacob went to Egypt with His family which included his son Levi and Levi's three sons, Gershon, Kohath, and Merari. This is recorded in Genesis 46. In Egypt, Kohath had a son named Amram and Amram had a son named Moses.

Thus, Moses is the fourth generation from Jacob who went to Egypt. This listing is a proof of the fulfillment of covenant promise. A third reason is that the specific ages of Levi, Kohath, and Amram will be given.

By knowing their ages, the approximate length of time which the Israelites dwelt in Egypt can be determined. This dating can then be checked against other dating and confirm that there are no missing names in the genealogies.

In other words, the line goes directly from Abraham, to Isaac, to Jacob, to Levi, to Kohath, to Amram, and then to Moses without any interim generations being left out. The line is complete and unbroken. Moses is the 7th from Abraham; from Promise to Deliverer.

This might seem unneeded, but it's not. It proves the right of Moses and Aaron to lead and it also shuts up scholars who either negligently or willfully claim the Bible has errors or omissions in it - and there are lots of them that do.

Some scholars will say this listing, without missing generations, is impossible because of the number of Levites who are recorded later in Exodus. It is a faulty conclusion based on a misunderstanding of who is included in those census numbers. There is nothing missing from this genealogy.

The placing of this listing here is natural and appropriate because the Lord will now begin His decisive actions against Pharaoh. The time has reached its fullness and action is coming. In order to establish that Moses was qualified for assuming this responsibility, the listing is given now.

This type of specific recording is the same as for that of Christ. It is also somewhat of a picture of His record. Moses is to be Israel's prophet and Aaron is to be their priest. Jesus' genealogy is likewise meticulously recorded to show that He is Israel's rightful Prophet and Priest.

14 (con't) The sons of Reuben, the firstborn of Israel, were Hanoch, Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi. These are the families of Reuben.

These are the same names recorded in Genesis 46:9, but with the additional note that Reuben was the firstborn of Israel. He has been rejected as a leader and so he will be passed over.

15 And the sons of Simeon were Jemuel, Jamin, Ohad, Jachin, Zohar, and Shaul the son of a Canaanite woman. These are the families of Simeon.

This is the exact same record as that given in Genesis 46:10. Simeon has been rejected as a leader and so he will be passed over.

16 These are the names of the sons of Levi according to their generations: Gershon, Kohath, and Merari. And the years of the life of Levi were one hundred and thirty-seven.

These are the same names as are recorded in Genesis 46:11, but something new is given... the lifespan of Levi. If one understands the clues of how to interpret what is going on in the Bible, they can tell from this one addition that the house of Levi will now become a central figure in the narrative.

A point that is worth remembering is that three people are recorded as living 137 years in the Bible - Ishmael, Levi, and Amram the father of Moses and Aaron. Ishmael pictured the law during his life and the families of Levi and Amram both encompass Moses and Aaron, the lawgiver and the law's priest.

Another point of interest is that the term "generations" in this verse is the Hebrew word toledot. It can be spelled in one of four ways. The way that it is spelled for the generations of Ishmael, and often in the family of Levi is unique. Unlike other genealogies in the Old Testament, it is lacking the letter vav.

This is a hidden clue concerning the law which is given for us to understand what the Bible teaches. The clue is that the law can never save. In fact, relying on works of the law merely separate us further from God.

As the family of Levi is the steward of the law, this unusual spelling of the word in Hebrew shows us this. This information on the letter vav was explained in detail in earlier Genesis sermons and in the final sermon from the book of Ruth.

Seeing these hidden clues in Scripture gives us a much greater understanding of how God deals with man and what man needs to do in order to be right with Him. What is hidden in the Old Testament is explicitly explained in the New. Here are Paul's words on the matter -

"...knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law but by faith in Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Christ Jesus, that we might be justified by faith in Christ and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law no flesh shall be justified." Galatians 2:16

17 The sons of Gershon were Libni and Shimi according to their families.

Gershon was the firstborn of Levi and so his family is listed first.

18 And the sons of Kohath were Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel. And the years of the life of Kohath were one hundred and thirty-three.

Kohath is the second son of Levi and so his family is listed next. However, like his father, his age at death is given. If we were to stop here and pick up in the future, we could first say to ourselves, "Sometime important will come from the line of Kohath."

19 The sons of Merari were Mahli and Mushi.

Merari is the youngest of Levi and so he is listed last.

19 (con't) These are the families of Levi according to their generations.

Again, the spelling of the word toledot is without a vav. The Bible is showing us a clue that the generations of the law will come to an end and they will be replaced with something greater - the dispensation of grace found in Christ Jesus.

So many generations, name upon name

Why are they there in the Bible's pages?

If they weren't there, wouldn't it be the same?

Would it make any difference to scholars and sages?

The answer is that they are there for a reason

Each name is important as God reveals to us

Things that have been, and that will also be in a season

Things that point to the Lord Jesus

If we skip them or pass by them without a care

We will miss so much that we could know

In these lists God is willing to share

Many hidden treasures that He desires to show

II. Aaron and Moses; Moses and Aaron (verses 20-27)

20 Now Amram took for himself Jochebed, his father's sister, as wife;

Amram is the father of Moses. For a wife, he married his own father's sister, Jochebed. She is a daughter of Levi and a sister of Kohath. At this time, such a marriage was common and accepted.

As their father lived to be 133, he could have had Amram many years earlier and the two of them could have been the same age, or Amram could even be older; we can't know. Later, under the law, such a marriage will be forbidden. This is found in Leviticus 18 -

"You shall not uncover the nakedness of your father's sister; she is near of kin to your father." Leviticus 18:12

However, prior to the law, as we have seen repeatedly in such things, there were no prohibitions against them and there was nothing wrong in what occurred. Paul explains this in Romans 5 -

"For until the law sin was in the world, but sin is not imputed when there is no law." Romans 5:13

Her name, Jochebed, or Yokeved, is the earliest known name which carries the abbreviated form of Yah, or Yehovah. Her name means either "Lord of Glory" or "Glory of the Lord." What a fitting and appropriate time for such a name to come into the biblical account and what a fitting family for it to be recorded!

Her son, Moses, would literally be the one to first lead the united people of Israel to seeing the glory of the Lord in the most astonishing ways. And, as we're considering names, we shouldn't leave out Amram. His name means "A People Exalted."

Looking at this union then, we see a picture of what is coming. Israel, A People Exalted, will be united to the Lord of Glory.

20 (con't) and she bore him Aaron and Moses.

From this union between Amram and Jochebed will come Aaron, which means "Light Bringer" and Moses, which means "He who Draws Out." Thus we have another picture of what is coming in Christ.

Through this exalted people, Israel, (pictured by Amram) in their union to the Lord of Glory (pictured by Jochebed) will come the true High priest who will bring light to the people (pictured by Aaron), and the true Redeemer and Prophet who will draw out a people from the world for Himself (pictured by Moses). The names of this family show us a snapshot of what is coming in history.

20 (con't) And the years of the life of Amram were one hundred and thirty-seven.

Again, the years of this line are given. And for the third and last time in Scripture, a person will be noted as dying at 137 years of age - Ishmael, who pictured those under the law; Levi, whose name is used synonymously with the law; and Amram, from whom will come Israel's human lawgiver, and also the priest of that law.

21 The sons of Izhar were Korah, Nepheg, and Zichri.

Izhar is the second son of Kohath and Amram's bother. His family is listed showing the future heads of their houses. Korah will be the instigator of a most remarkable rebellion in Numbers 16. Though his family line will continue and be notable, even for the writing 11 of the psalms, he himself will forever be remembered as one of the great losers in the history of the Bible.

He's even mentioned in the New Testament book of Jude -

"Woe to them! For they have gone in the way of Cain, have run greedily in the error of Balaam for profit, and perished in the rebellion of Korah." Jude -11

Thus he is forever noted alongside two other troublemakers of history.

22 And the sons of Uzziel were Mishael, Elzaphan, and Zithri.

The third son of Kohath, Hebron, is overlooked and the record goes directly to his last son, Uzziel. Two of his sons will be remembered again in Scripture as they are asked to carry from the camp the dead bodies of Aaron's sons. That is recorded in Leviticus 10 -

"Then Moses called Mishael and Elzaphan, the sons of Uzziel the uncle of Aaron, and said to them, 'Come near, carry your brethren from before the sanctuary out of the camp.' 5 So they went near and carried them by their tunics out of the camp, as Moses had said." Leviticus 10:4, 5

23 Aaron took to himself Elisheba, daughter of Amminadab, sister of Nahshon, as wife;

Aaron married a woman who is from the tribe of Judah. Both Amminadab her father and Nahshon her brother, are listed in the genealogy of Jesus in Matthew 1. The name Elisheba is the same as the name Elisabeth which is the wife of Zechariah, the mother of John the Baptist.

Her name means "Oath of God." At the exodus, her brother Nahshon will be the leader of the tribe of Judah. In her marriage to Aaron, we see a uniting of the lines of the King and of the Priest, both offices of the coming Christ.

23 (con't) and she bore him Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

These are the sons of Aaron who were born to Elisheba. The oldest two will die when they offer unauthorized fire before the Lord. This will leave Eleazar as the oldest son and through him will continue the high priestly line of Israel when Aaron dies.

It's interesting that this name Elisheba, or Elisabeth, is only given to these two women in the Bible. Together, they will have intimate contact with women named Miriam. The first became the sister-in-law of Miriam, Aaron's sister. The second is a relative of Miriam, or Mary, the mother of Christ Jesus.

And the Bible records the unusual deaths of each of their first born. Nadab died when he was burnt by fire before the Lord, and John the Baptist died by beheading.

24 And the sons of Korah were Assir, Elkanah, and Abiasaph. These are the families of the Korahites.

Even though Korah was destroyed when he rebelled against the Lord, the whole family wasn't destroyed with him. At least three of them continue to be mentioned in Scripture, even to the writing of some of the psalms.

25 Eleazar, Aaron's son, took for himself one of the daughters of Putiel as wife; and she bore him Phinehas.

The line of Eleazar is given to show where the high priestly line was heading. When Nadab and Abihu die, the line will continue through Eleazar and thus his son Phinehas. The Bible is being very specific, in advance, to show us hints of what is coming.

By simply reading the genealogies, one can divine clues as to the importance of individuals before their actions are ever mentioned. Such is the case with Phinehas who will become a great name in Israel's history. So great in fact that this is recorded in Numbers -

“Phinehas the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, has turned back My wrath from the children of Israel, because he was zealous with My zeal among them, so that I did not consume the children of Israel in My zeal. 12 Therefore say, ‘Behold, I give to him My covenant of peace; 13 and it shall be to him and his descendants after him a covenant of an everlasting priesthood, because he was zealous for his God, and made atonement for the children of Israel.’” Numbers 25-11-13

Wouldn't it be nice if all of us were so noted in our lives for the zeal of the Lord! The name Putiel isn't mentioned anywhere else and it's believed to possibly be of Egyptian origin. The same is true with the name Phinehas.

If this is so, then a son who partly comes from the line of Ham, the wayward son of Noah, figures predominantly in the high priestly line of Israel. God is no respecter of persons and many notable figures of the Bible come from what may seem unsavory or unclean lines of people.

In the end, we are all one race of people, human beings. In Christ, every curse is lifted and all are on an equal playing field. If you harbor racial or cultural prejudices against another, you're not looking at those people as God does. Get beyond those things!

25 (con't) These are the heads of the fathers' houses of the Levites according to their families.

This verse sums up the entire listing of names which went from verse 16 through 25. The introduction has been carefully placed here to show us this most important family before they begin their awesome work before the Lord.

It is work which would continue until the time of Christ and only be annulled in His establishment of a New Covenant.

26 These are the same Aaron and Moses to whom the Lord said, "Bring out the children of Israel from the land of Egypt according to their armies."

With the matter of the genealogies established and properly recorded, and in preparation for what lies ahead, this verse is given. The words are emphatic. It is these - Aaron and Moses, to whom the Lord has spoken.

And so as quickly as the genealogical record appeared, it as quickly ended and the narrative commences where it left off. This list has been no unexplainable insertion, but rather a carefully placed listing intended to validate the offices of Aaron and Moses.

And as the narrative recommences, in this quote from the Lord, something new is given. It says, "Bring out the children of Israel from the land of Egypt according to their armies." The word for "armies" is tsibotam, plural of tsaba, which means "war, to train, army, struggle, etc."

This is the first time in the Bible the word is used when speaking of the people of Israel as a unified force, capable of mustering troops. Israel won't just leave Egypt as a ragged bunch of people, but rather as a well organized group of people, each in ranks and each rank exhibiting dignity and power because of the power of the Lord their Leader.

27 These are the ones who spoke to Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring out the children of Israel from Egypt.

What was commanded is what was spoken to Pharaoh. Though the occurrence is still future in the overall narrative, it is past at the time of the recording of the genealogy which occurred, as all of the record of the exodus did, after the events happened.

Moses is looking back to show that those who were selected were those who performed, and those who performed were qualified to do so as testified to by their well-documented heritage. And more than just bring out the children of Israel, they brought them out from under Pharaoh king of Egypt.

The entire title, including the words "king of Egypt" are given as a contrast to the previous word "armies." The power of the king was ineffective against the hosts of Israel when led by the Lord of Israel. Now is this only mild speculation by Charlie, something to just lengthen a sermon, or is this something we can be sure of?

It is, in fact, something we can be sure of. After verse 29 of this chapter, the title "king of Egypt" won't be used again until Exodus 14:5, after the Israelites have departed from the land. And the entire title Pharaoh, king of Egypt, won't be used until verse 14:8 when the fool decides to pursue Israel to try to recapture them.

However, in the intervening verses, from Exodus 6:29 until Exodus 14:5, the term Pharaoh will be used 72 times without the additional title of "king of Egypt." It is during these verses that the Lord gives this stubborn individual a marvelous display of His power and majesty, showing him who the true King is.

27 (con't) These are the same Moses and Aaron.

Again, the names are emphatically stated. It is these two who were called and who were obedient to the call. And thus they are noted once again. However, this time, the order is reversed. In the previous verse, it said "Aaron and Moses" to show the firstborn status of Aaron. Now in this verse, Moses is placed first.

As so often happens in the Bible, the second replaces the first in position of preeminence. It is a picture of Christ who is given preeminence over Adam. The concept is explained in detail by the hand of Paul in 1 Corinthians 15, so take time to read that today!

So far we've seen this pattern occur many times, including Abel's offering/Cain's offering; Shem/Japheth; Abraham/Haran; Isaac/Ishmael; Jacob/Esau; Jacob's Second Wife/Jacob's First Wife; Perez/Zerah; Ephraim/Manasseh; etc. God is giving us these hints to think on and to understand what He is doing and why.

If every name recorded was important to You
And then You handed them along for us to see
Then You must think we're pretty important too
Why else would you keep them so carefully

The details are all part of a great plan
They record special events and names in a tapestry
All intended to detail the redemption of man
And it's there for us if we will open our eyes to see
It all makes sense when we see how much you love us
And wrote each and every word to reveal Jesus

III. I Can Do All Things (verses 28-30)

28 And it came to pass, on the day the Lord spoke to Moses in the land of Egypt,

These words take us right back to the final verses of chapter 5 and which led us into this chapter. There, after being rejected by Pharaoh, this was recorded -

22 So Moses returned to the Lord and said, "Lord, why have You brought trouble on this people? Why is it You have sent me? 23 For since I came to Pharaoh to speak in Your name, he has done evil to this people; neither have You delivered Your people at all." Exodus 5:22, 23

But in this verse now it says that "the Lord spoke to Moses in the land of Egypt." This wasn't just a call from the bush in Sinai where the Lord reigned. Rather, he made his presence known in Egypt as well. By speaking to Moses in this way in Egypt, he was granting him "a sort of divine dominion, namely, a theocratic dominion over Pharaoh." (Clarke)

On that same day and in the land of Egypt, the Lord spoke and gave His instructions as Moses now remembers for us...

29 that the Lord spoke to Moses, saying, "I am the Lord. Speak to Pharaoh king of Egypt all that I say to you."

This was the general thought given in verse 10. After Moses' words to the Lord, the Lord spent the next 9 verses explaining His intentions and the reasons for them. These reasons extended all the way back to the time of Abraham and the covenant with him. They gave a concise review of Israel's state until that time.

And then in verse 10, he repeated his commission to Moses to do as he was instructed. But Moses had an excuse which he hoped would absolve him of the tasks which lay ahead...

30 But Moses said before the Lord, "Behold, I am of uncircumcised lips, and how shall Pharaoh heed me?"

This is not a newly spoken repeat of these words. Rather they are a reiteration of what Moses spoke in verse 12. In other words, it may seem that Moses is saying the same thing again to the Lord that he said in verse 12. But that isn't the case.

Rather, Moses is re-recording, after the insertion of the genealogy which confirmed him and Aaron in their leadership positions, that he had once said these words to the Lord. That is why the previous verses said the names of Moses and Aaron emphatically and noted their accomplishments in the past tense.

The Lord chose someone who felt wholly unqualified for the task set before him, and yet the Lord demonstrated that he was perfectly qualified. He was selected, even from eons before, to accomplish the task which was known but to God alone when He made the promise to Moses' long dead forefather Abraham.

Moses' recording of this account for the second time is to show us the truth which is recorded in the book of Zechariah which says, "'Not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit,' Says the Lord of hosts." Zechariah 4:6

It is a concept which is restated in the New Testament as Paul says to the Philippians - " I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me."
Philippians 4:13

The entire sixth chapter of Exodus has been carefully laid out into two separate chiasms to show us these and so many other truths. Both of these chiasms can be found on my Wonderful1 website along with all the other chiasms I've found. Anytime you want, you can go there and review them and think on them.

As you do, you'll more clearly see how God works and why He does things the way He does. Everything has purpose and everything is directed to help us apply the same truths to our own lives. Now let's look at this chapter, with its two chiasms, and imagine our lives being recorded in this way.

If everything you did was carefully recorded to be displayed before all people someday, what would be the defining moment of your life? What would be the one thing that all other things pivoted on? If you were to give any answer other than, "I received Jesus as my Lord and Savior," your life would ultimately be a waste.

For all the money we make, we can't take a dollar of it with us. For all the hard work we did, it will be forgotten. If you worked cutting down trees, more trees will grow and replace them. If you sold insurance, there will be new policies written to replace yours. If you were a tugboat captain, well... that tugboat will someday be scrapped or sunk.

Everything has a season, but every season ends. Without the hope of Christ, it is all merely vapor on a cold morning which disappears from sight. But with the hope of Christ, there is an eternal walk in God's garden of delight. It is the only thing that gives our years and our toils any meaning or purpose.

If you have never called out to Christ to forgive you and redeem you from this fallen world of sin and death, please let me tell you how you can do that today...

Closing Verse: "All flesh is grass,
And all its loveliness is like the flower of the field.
7 The grass withers, the flower fades,
Because the breath of the Lord blows upon it;
Surely the people are grass.

8 The grass withers, the flower fades,
But the word of our God stands forever.” Isaiah 40:6-8

Next Week: Exodus 7:1-7 (Notable Obedience) (18th Exodus Sermon)

Less than a year after being hailed as the Moses of Wilmington, by the black community there, Thomas Garrett died on January 25, 1871. His funeral, attended by many of the black residents of the city, featured a procession of Garrett's coffin - borne from shoulder to shoulder up Quaker Hill. He now awaits his final call for judgment of deeds done while in the body.

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Family of Moses and Aaron

These are the heads of their fathers' houses:

The sons of Reuben, the firstborn of Israel

Were Hanoch, Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi, not mentioned are their spouses

These are the families of Reuben as the Bible does tell

And the sons of Simeon

Were Jemuel, Jamin, Ohad, Jachin, Zohar

And Shaul the son of a Canaanite woman

These are the families of Simeon of which you are now famili-ar

These are the names of the sons of Levi
According to their generations, living under heaven
Gershon, Kohath, and Merar-i
And the years of the life of Levi were one hundred and thirty-seven

The sons of Gershon were Libni and Shimi
According to each family

And the sons of Kohath were Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzzi-el
And the years of the life of Kohath were
One hundred and thirty-three as the story does tell

The sons of Merari were Mahli and Mushi, making alliterations
These are the families of Levi according to their generations

Now Amram took for himself Jochebed
His father's sister, as wife
And Aaron and Moses to him she bred
And one hundred and thirty-seven were the years of Amram's life

The sons of Izhar were Korah, Nepheg, and Zichri
And the sons of Uzziel were Mishael, Elzaphan, and Zithri

Aaron took to himself Elisheba, daughter of Amminadab
Sister of Nahshon, as wife
And she bore him Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar
A very productive lady in her life

And the sons of Korah were Assir, Elkanah, and Abiasaph
These are the families of the Korahites, for sure
They were guided by Korah's staff

Eleazar, Aaron's son, took for himself
One of the daughters of Putiel as wife
And she bore him Phinehas
Who was a notable figure during his life

These are the heads of the fathers' houses
Of the Levites according to their families
Along with a few of their spouses

These are the same Aaron and Moses to whom the Lord said
"Bring out the children of Israel
From the land of Egypt according to their armies
This is what the Lord to Moses did tell

These are the ones who spoke to Pharaoh
King of Egypt, to bring out
The children of Israel from Egypt
These are the same Moses and Aaron, without a doubt

And it came to pass, on the day
The Lord spoke to Moses in Egypt the land
That the Lord spoke to Moses and did say
“I am the Lord as you understand

Speak to Pharaoh king of Egypt all that I say to you
But Moses said before the Lord
“Behold, I am of uncircumcised lips, it's true
And how shall Pharaoh heed me and Your word?

Thus ends chapter 6 of Exodus
And we can see in it perfect order and harmony
If we research it well, it will speak to us
Of the hidden mysteries which reveal God's glory

So it is with every detail of God's word
It will teach us of the wonders of His plan
In sending to us Jesus the Lord
Who came to redeem fallen man

The Bible does this so that we will seek after God
And search for Him carefully in each detail
So let's do it for as long as on this earth we trod
Until we at last hit that heavenly trail

Yes! Thank You, Lord, for this precious book
Help us to study it well and to each day take a look

There in its pages are wonders for us
Such beautiful wonders concerning our precious Lord Jesus

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 7:1-7 (NOTABLE OBEDIENCE)

Introduction: In our sixth of the seven verses today, there is a special emphasis placed on the deeds of Aaron and Moses. God placed this there for a reason. He loves obedience to His word and He cherishes those who are so obedient. Throughout His word, there are records of people which center on exactly that premise.

The question is how will each of us be remembered? Is it your heart's desire to be remembered favorably by God? Listen now to our text verse for today and see how the book of Nehemiah ends...

Text Verse: Remember me, O my God, for good! Nehemiah 13:29

Is Nehemiah' prayer one that you long for in your own life? May it be so! Jesus said that for every idle word men may speak, they will give account of it in the Day of Judgment. (Matthew 12:36). Our words, our deeds, all of who we are and what we do, will be laid before our God when we stand before Him.

It's a truth which is found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Words for Pharaoh (verses 1 & 2)

1 So the Lord said to Moses: “See, I have made you as God to Pharaoh,

This follows directly after Moses' proclamation that he felt he was unqualified for the challenge ahead. In Exodus 6, he said this -

"And Moses spoke before the Lord, saying, 'The children of Israel have not heeded me. How then shall Pharaoh heed me, for I am of uncircumcised lips?'

13 Then the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, and gave them a command for the children of Israel and for Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt." Exodus 6:12, 13

This was essentially repeated later at the end of the chapter with the Lord telling Moses, "I am the Lord. Speak to Pharaoh king of Egypt all that I say to you." (verse 29).

Immediately following this exchange we come to this first verse of chapter 7 and the words, re'eh netatikha elohim l'paroh - "See, I have made you as God to Pharaoh." Some translations, in order to avoid this sounding somehow inappropriate say "a god" instead of God. Either could be correct, but God is probably what is intended.

The reason why this is so is because this is a modified repeat of what was said in Exodus 4:16 -

"So he shall be your spokesman to the people. And he himself shall be as a mouth for you, and you shall be to him as God." Exodus 4:16

There, translators generally agree the intent is "God" rather than "a god." In accordance with this, Aaron is to stand in a mediatorial role between Moses and Pharaoh. He is to be the mouthpiece of Moses who would announce whatever Moses intended.

Moses, after having been assured by the Lord of his position and capabilities, would no longer have a reason to fear Pharaoh. He would have something akin to divine authority, and his word would eventually bring Pharaoh to his end.

The power he would display would be the power of the Lord, and Aaron would be the one to relay this. But even more than this, the people of Israel would come to understand that Moses was truly selected to bring about their deliverance.

They had seen the three signs and believed for a spell, but eventually they lost heart in Moses. By the time the plagues were finished, they would fully understand his position.

And isn't this a beautiful picture of Christ. The early Jews bowed their head and worshipped at the coming of Christ with His fulfillment of those three signs, but eventually they turned away from Him. But the Bible says that they will come to acknowledge Him in the end times, when the world heads into the tribulation.

We will see Pharaoh, who is proud and exalted, be brought low by what the Lord brings upon Him through Moses. Plagues will come at his command and they will end at his will as well. This is what it means that he would be as God to Pharaoh.

1 (con't) and Aaron your brother shall be your prophet.

In the Old Testament, a prophet spoke the words that were put in his mouth by God. We see this in Deuteronomy 18:18 -

"I will raise up for them a Prophet like you from among their brethren, and will put My words in His mouth, and He shall speak to them all that I command Him." Deuteronomy 18:18

It is seen also in Jeremiah 1:9 -

"Then the Lord put forth His hand and touched my mouth, and the Lord said to me: 'Behold, I have put My words in your mouth.'" Jeremiah 1:9

It is Moses who will stand in this special position in relation to Pharaoh by speaking through a prophet and directing Aaron as to what he should say. Thus we see why Moses should be like God to Pharaoh, and why Aaron would be his prophet. And so, calling Moses "God to Pharaoh" rather than "a god to Pharaoh" is surely more accurate.

Interestingly, this role puts Aaron in the notable position of having been first a prophet and then a priest. Thus, he pictures Christ who spoke the words of God first and then fulfilled His priestly role for His people. It is the first of many times he will picture the Lord.

2 You shall speak all that I command you.

Ultimately though, despite the words of Moses being spoken by Aaron, it is the Lord, Yehovah, who will direct the affairs which will occur. Moses will obediently follow the Lord's directives, impart them to Aaron, and Aaron will speak them to Pharaoh.

2 (con't) And Aaron your brother shall tell Pharaoh to send the children of Israel out of his land.

The word will be repeated as directed. Aaron will be the speaker directly to Pharaoh. The term "say to Aaron" or "speak to Aaron" will be repeated several times to remind us that it is the Lord who initiates the words, and that Moses then conveys them to Aaron.

At other times, there will be exchanges with Pharaoh which will appear that Moses is speaking to him. Whether he does, or whether he speaks through Aaron at those times isn't known, but when the Lord's intended words are given, it is Aaron who receives them from Moses.

What is occurring here is very similar to that of the Trinity. The will of God the Father is expressed in a concrete manner through His Mediator Jesus. And this Mediator's duties will be articulated with eloquence through His orator, the Holy Spirit. In the case of Moses, the Lord directs what is to be said, just as Jesus relays the words of God the Father. That is from John 12 -

"For I have not spoken on My own authority; but the Father who sent Me gave Me a command, what I should say and what I should speak. 50 And I know that His command is everlasting life. Therefore, whatever I speak, just as the Father has told Me, so I speak." John 12:49, 50

From there, what is given to Moses is spoken by Aaron, just as the Holy Spirit is given to speak from what Jesus possesses. That is found in John 16 -

"However, when He, the Spirit of truth, has come, He will guide you into all truth; for He will not speak on His own authority, but whatever He hears He will speak; and He will tell you things to come. 14 He will glorify Me, for He will take of what is Mine and declare it to you." John 16:13, 14

One more point on this verse - depending on what translation you use, there are different designations for "the children of Israel." The NIV says, "let the Israelites go." The NLT says, "let the people of Israel leave." The NASB says, "let the sons of Israel go." And the ISV says, "let the Israelis go."

In Hebrew, the term is bene yisrael, literally, "the sons of Israel." Translators choose what they believe the best intent is, but none of these are incorrect. The 12 sons of Israel are the children of Israel, and they then represent the collective group who issues from them.

The time of redemption is soon ahead
The many years of bondage are at their end
Our bodies are weary, we have toiled and bled
Soon the Lord our Deliverer He will send
The many years we have been in bondage to sin
There seemed no hope at all for any of us
But at the cross of Calvary our Savior did win
He defeated the devil! Hail the Lord Jesus!

Now we have a sure hope and the promise of glory
Because of the truth contained in the gospel story

II. My Armies; My People - the Children of Israel (verses 3-5)

3 And I will harden Pharaoh's heart,

The first time Moses was told this was in Exodus 4:21, but it used a different word than here. That word was khazaq, a word used quite a few times in the exodus account. But the word used here is qashah. It's used only here and in Exodus 13:15.

In this verse, it says that the Lord is the agent of the hardening, "I will harden." However, in 13:15, it shows that Pharaoh is the agent of the hardening. There is says -

"And it came to pass, when Pharaoh was stubborn about letting us go, that the Lord killed all the firstborn in the land of Egypt." Exodus 13:15

These words are being used with definite purpose. They are given to show that the Lord is working behind the scenes to effect His purposes, and yet we are ultimately responsible for our own choices, be they stubborn or be they soft and yielding to His will.

By paying attention to the words of the Bible, we can certainly learn more about ourselves and more about how to perceive those around us who are either belligerent to the Lord or who are responsive to Him.

If we can pay attention to these things, it is even possible to use them as examples to those belligerent souls in hopes of having them change their hearts. The first time the Lord told Moses that He would harden Pharaoh's heart, Moses didn't grasp the plan and he became disheartened, feeling that he had failed the Lord.

But the Lord knew how to manipulate Pharaoh in order to harden his heart. Moses didn't, and so he misunderstood the first rejection by both Pharaoh and the Hebrews. By making a polite request to let the people go into the wilderness and sacrifice to the Lord, the hardening of Pharaoh's heart was started.

When no consequences for his refusal came about, he was thus emboldened against future requests. In the coming plagues, each will have less of an effect than the one to follow. And the first two plagues will actually be repeatable by Pharaoh's magicians.

Because they are, Pharaoh will be duped into believing that his gods and his magicians are comparable to Yehovah. Thus he will harden his heart. It will be a passive hardening by the Lord which will be actively responded to by Pharaoh. And the reason for this process is given as we continue...

3 (con't) and multiply My signs and My wonders in the land of Egypt.

There is a truth that permeates the Bible. It is that God will receive the glory He is due. He will either receive it in a repentant heart and a bowed knee, or He will receive it in judgment upon the unrepentant sinner. In His display of the signs and wonders upon Egypt, he will be more glorified.

He will be more glorified in the eyes of His people at the majestic display of His wonders, and He will be more glorified in those who reject them because the wonders will be a witness against them in judgment. Either way, God will receive the glory.

As Egypt is a picture of the sin-filled world, the pattern holds true. Those who call on Christ give glory to God, and through those who reject Him, He is glorified. And the pattern hold true as well for the tribulation period of the end times which is pictured here.

It is through the signs and wonders that these things came about in the past, and it is through signs and wonders that they will come about in the future. The word for "signs" is owth. It is a sign of something. The stars in Genesis 1:14 are said to be given for signs.

They would be used, not just as pretty lights in the sky, but for signs of other things. They form the constellations which, according to the Bible, give us a story of God's redemptive plans. The Bible shows also that stars unite at certain times in history as signs of divine occurrences.

When king Ahaz was told to ask for a sign to confirm the Lord's word, he refused to do so and so Isaiah turned to the people of Israel and said this -

"Therefore the Lord Himself will give you a sign: Behold, the virgin shall conceive and bear a Son, and shall call His name Immanuel." Isaiah 7:14

God's signs during the coming period of this exodus account are then not just for the eyes of the people of Egypt, but are signs for all to read about and remember. They can even be considered as precursor signs to the parallel events of judgment upon the world in the end times.

The sign was both an immediate promise and one which looked forward to the coming Messiah. Thus signs are given to represent other things. The other word the Lord uses here is translated as "wonders." It is the Hebrew word mophet. This word speaks of something out of the ordinary course of nature.

These wonders would be unusual phenomena, either natural or supernatural, which cry out for an explanation. Whether natural or supernatural, they imply that the divine hand is behind them. Thus they act as a testimonial of being a messenger of God. For example, the parting of the Red Sea is a natural event. The Bible tells how it happened - an east wind blew all night.

However, there is the implied divine hand behind it. First, the Red Sea doesn't just divide whenever there is an east wind. Secondly, the east wind doesn't just blow at any given time. But the east wind blew, and the waters were parted at the exact moment needed to deliver Israel.

Therefore, it is a supernatural occurrence, even though it came about by natural causes. The parting of the Red Sea was, in essence, God's messenger to His people that He was there for them. It was also His messenger to those who saw or heard. They would be alerted to the greatness of God through it.

4 But Pharaoh will not heed you,

Knowing in advance both the person of Pharaoh, as well as how he will respond to the series of encounters that he will have with Moses and Aaron, the Lord reminds Moses once again that there will be resistance to his words before Israel is delivered. He is being informed of this again so that the resistance won't be unexpected or to be taken as a sign of failure.

4 (con't) so that I may lay My hand on Egypt

Pharaoh represents Egypt as its leader. The actions against Pharaoh then are an action against Egypt. And so the Lord says that He will lay His hand on Egypt. Through signs and wonders, Jesus validated His office while at the same time laid His hand on the world of sin.

He defeated the devil at the cross, and through the resurrection He took away the power of sin in those He redeemed. The pattern is exactly detailed for us to see. Christ has laid His hand on the world and He has done so in a way which will allow the world to willingly follow Him in His victory.

4 (con't) and bring My armies and My people, the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt by great judgments.

The purpose of the signs and wonders was to progressively harden Pharaoh's heart in order to lay His hand on Egypt. And in that, the Lord will then bring out

His people from Egypt. Think of the church. Christ performed His wonders and He continues to do so today in each repentant soul who bows to Him.

And in this He is gathering to Himself His people, bringing them out of spiritual death and decay and into His kingdom. This is all being pictured in the events of the past. Yehovah promises Moses here that He will bring out His armies and His people, or more rightly it is translated as "My armies; My people."

The people are the armies and the second term explains the first because the people are His. At the exodus, there will be 603,550 men of fighting age who will depart. With them will be their families and their possessions. All of them will be delivered, as it says, by great judgments.

And these judgments have a purpose beyond the annihilation of Pharaoh and his armies. They are intended to stand as a memorial to the world concerning the work of the Lord. This is explained several times in the Bible, such as in Deuteronomy 2:25 -

"This day I will begin to put the dread and fear of you upon the nations under the whole heaven, who shall hear the report of you, and shall tremble and be in anguish because of you." Deuteronomy 2:25

These judgments had the intent of calling to mind the work of God on behalf of His people so that others would hear of them and pay heed. This was certainly the case because after their years of wilderness wanderings, this is recorded in Joshua 2 -

"I know that the Lord has given you the land, that the terror of you has fallen on us, and that all the inhabitants of the land are fainthearted

because of you. 10 For we have heard how the Lord dried up the water of the Red Sea for you when you came out of Egypt Joshua." 2:9, 10

And even many years later, about four hundred years or so, the surrounding people still remembered the stories of Israel's deliverance. Before a battle between the Philistines and the Israelites, we see this recorded in 1 Samuel 4 -

"So the Philistines were afraid, for they said, 'God has come into the camp!' And they said, 'Woe to us! For such a thing has never happened before. 8 Woe to us! Who will deliver us from the hand of these mighty gods? These are the gods who struck the Egyptians with all the plagues in the wilderness.'" 1 Samuel 4:7, 8

The purpose of God's judgments upon the Egyptians was not limited to a short span of time or to an isolated location in the Middle East, but they were intended to show the world of His power over the elements, and His care for Israel.

In this then, they are intended even for the people of the entire world to take heed to and learn from. First, God is God and He alone controls the elements, not man. So much for global warming and man's denial that God is really in control of the world.

Secondly, God is the God of Israel. He is the God not just of Abraham as Muslims and the confused religious world states, but the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. He is the Defender of Israel whether Israel deserves His defense or not.

Third, He is Jesus Christ, who is the fulfillment of the pictures which we see in these signs and wonders, and who we see fulfilling the judgments that are pictured as well. Thus, He is also the Defender of His church and His called-out bride. In Him for us, there is hope, assurance, and ultimately deliverance.

5 And the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord,

Egypt in Hebrew is mizraim. It means "double distress." It is a picture of the world; people without God and without God's law. They are, in essence, in double distress. In this, is another purpose for what God is doing. It is so that those who are in double distress shall know that ani Yehovah - that "I am Yehovah."

In other words, God intends to demonstrate that He is who He claims to be through His signs, wonders, and judgments. I AM is the self-existent God. I AM is the Creator. I AM is the Sustainer. I AM is, and there is no other. I AM Yehovah. This is the force and intent of the words that are given.

This saying, that "XX shall know that I am the LORD," or a near form of the words, is repeated about 75 times in the Bible, and the vast number of those times are in the book of Ezekiel. A large number of those times it is referring to the nations surrounding Israel, but a very large percent of them refer to Israel herself.

In other words, it is not just the nations of the earth who need to learn this lesson, but also the very people who bear His name. The promises of future restoration and protection of Israel, which began with the return of them to the land in 1948, are included in this.

He has called them home, He is currently working on them, and He will continue to do so until they call out to Him once again. It is both a sad commentary on the Jewish people, and an immense act of love, mercy, and grace - even covenant faithfulness, on behalf of Yehovah. They nailed Him to a tree and yet He still longs for them to know Him.

But the question is, "How can we be sure that they will know Yehovah is Jesus someday?" The answer is that it is through the claims of Yehovah in the Old Testament, and the application of those claims to Jesus in the New. There are too many to count, but one read through the book of Isaiah will show an abundant number of them. In Isaiah 44 we read -

"Thus says the Lord, the King of Israel,
And his Redeemer, the Lord of hosts:
'I am the First and I am the Last;
Besides Me there is no God.'" Isaiah 44:6

In that one verse, Yehovah says He is the King of Israel - a term applied to Jesus in the New Testament. He says He is the Redeemer, a term used of Jesus. He is the Yehovah Sabaoth, or the Lord of Hosts - a term applied to Jesus in the book of James.

He says I am the First and the Last - a term applied to Jesus in Revelation. And it says there is one God and no other. In the New Testament, that is Jesus. This is one verse, in a succession of verses in the book of Isaiah, which show this to be true of Jesus.

And Isaiah is just one of 39 books in the Old Testament which are all filled with references to Him - explicit references, implicit references, and hidden nuggets which need to be wrestled from the wisdom of God through study and prayer, but in the end, they all point to Jesus.

Everything God is doing in history brings us to the thought that humanity shall know that He is the Lord; He is Yehovah; He is Jesus. All intuitively know there is One God, and all will come to the sure realization that He is the God of the Bible; Jesus!

5 (con't) when I stretch out My hand on Egypt and bring out the children of Israel from among them.”

Again, think it through from the greater panorama of the Bible. The Lord stretched out His hand upon Egypt and yet He did it in order to bring out the children of Israel out from among them. There was intent and purpose for His actions.

Throughout the Bible, the Lord is said to stretch out his hand for or against people groups. The symbolism here is that He has stretched out His hand in a negative way against Egypt, and at the same time it is in a positive way for Israel.

Mentally we can think of an arm in one motion, toppling over the enemies like bowling pins, and then at the same time that arm gathers in His cherished people as if they were loved children who will rest in the safety of His lap.

And in this is the greater picture of Christ, toppling over the enemies of addiction, deceit, adultery, bitterness, hatred, and lies, while He draws to Himself a purified people who will spend eternal days in His presence. From the land of double distress come forth a people called by His name.

And yet, there is more. Because these early Exodus stories are picturing the future during the tribulation period which comes after the rapture of the church, they again picture the Lord, the fully revealed Lord Jesus, destroying the wicked powers of the world in order to rescue and redeem Israel once again so that He may be glorified in them and among them.

The premise of the Bible which is found in Ecclesiastes 1 is seen in this repeating pattern. There it says -

"That which has been is what will be,
That which is done is what will be done,
And there is nothing new under the sun." Ecclesiastes 1:9

God does this so that we can know what is ahead by looking behind, and He does it so that when things repeat we will know that His hand was involved in the event. Every story is true, and yet every story contains more than just its immediate fulfillment. They are given for us to see the hand of the Lord in all things.

How long with you harden your heart to the truth?
How long will you dismiss the word of God?
Even since the earliest days of your youth
While as a child, on a wayward path you did tread
But patient is the Lord for those who will yield the heart
He continues to reach out hands scarred by nails
Waiting for any who desires a fresh new start
Waiting for those weary of life's many travails

So don't harden your heart and be cast away
Instead be receptive to the truth found in His word
Call out to Jesus, don't wait another day
All will find new life who call upon the Lord

III. Notable Obedience (verses 6 & 7)

6 Then Moses and Aaron did so;

These words are general in nature and they anticipate what lies ahead throughout the entire time of the plagues on Egypt. Everything that happens up until the departure of the Israelites will show obedience to what has been stated.

There will be no fear in Pharaoh's presence, and there will be no shying back from their duties. Because of this, the words of Hebrews 3 are recorded concerning the obedience of Moses to the call he has been given -

"And Moses indeed was faithful in all His house as a servant." Hebrews 3:5

And yet, even in this obedience which is recorded about Moses and Aaron, there is a picture of Christ. Continuing the same verse in Hebrews 3, we see that, yes, Moses was faithful in His house as a servant... -

"...for a testimony of those things which would be spoken afterward, 6 but Christ as a Son over His own house, whose house we are if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm to the end." Hebrews 3:5, 6

What the Bible is repeatedly telling us is that it is all about Jesus. Every word is given to show us our precious Lord. The author of Hebrews is writing this for the Hebrew people, but particularly the words are directed to the Jews of the end times.

They are intended to open eyes long blinded, and to awaken minds long dumbed-down, to the truth of who Jesus is and to the perseverance they will need for the difficulties which lay before them. They will need to conduct themselves in a particular manner, just as Moses and Aaron did...

6 (con't) just as the Lord commanded them,

The Bible is many things, one of which is a book requiring obedience. The Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron; the Lord speaks to us. The Lord commanded Moses and Aaron; the Lord commands us.

Moses and Aaron heard the word, they received the command, and they were obedient to it. The same voice speaks to us today, though it is in the written rather than the spoken word. But despite being written, it should be as audible to our hearts as that which fell upon the ears of Moses.

How often do we see it neglected though! Churches dismiss those portions which they find burdensome, outdated, or old fashioned. They make excuses for bad conduct and they rationalize away the severity of their sin. Believe it or not, this will be seen in just 25 more chapters, a time which is just a few months after the Exodus.

The faithfulness of Aaron will take a fall and he will participate in a gross display of idolatry which will be followed by one of the lamest excuses for what happened in the pages of the Bible. And even Moses will fall prey to a short disobedient spell. His failing will cost him the privilege of leading Israel across the Jordan and into the Promised Land.

It is always better to follow the Lord's commands, be ready to engage the battle with confidence, and not allow ourselves to fall prey to weakness, temptations, or frustrations which so easily catch us in their hold, tripping us up and bringing us into God's hand of judgment.

6 (con't) so they did.

The whole verse reads, "Then Moses and Aaron did so; just as the Lord commanded them, so they did."

The final portion isn't superfluous, but rather it is emphatic and intended to show that they were fully compliant. Their actions were exact, complete, and in accord with the word of the Lord. Nothing was skipped and nothing was added.

If you wonder why words like this are recorded, and you should, then you should stop and think on why they are, in fact, recorded. What does the Lord want us to see in a few extra added words that could have been left out without changing the general meaning?

The answer is that He wants us to see that this type of obedience to His word is pleasing to Him and thus it is worthy of note. In this one verse, we can think of people like good King Josiah. Imagine these words being written about you -

"Now before him there was no king like him, who turned to the Lord with all his heart, with all his soul, and with all his might, according to all the Law of Moses; nor after him did any arise like him." 2 Kings 23:25

How pleasing this person must have been to the Lord. Not only are they recorded after the fact, but he and his actions were actually anticipated by the Lord before they happened. In 1 Kings 13, this was written about Josiah -

"Then he cried out against the altar by the word of the Lord, and said, 'O altar, altar! Thus says the Lord: 'Behold, a child, Josiah by name, shall be born to the house of David; and on you he shall sacrifice the priests of the high places who burn incense on you, and men's bones shall be burned on you.'" 1 Kings 13:2

Imagine that! It is as if the Lord Himself were waiting for this person to come along that He could delight in. So much so, that He told in advance that he was coming. And in contrast to that, there are other levels of adherence to His word. There is the account of Solomon. This is the Lord's evaluation of him -

"Solomon did evil in the sight of the Lord, and did not fully follow the Lord, as did his father David." 1 Kings 11:6

And then there is the record of Manasseh -

"Manasseh was twelve years old when he became king, and he reigned fifty-five years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Hephzibah. 2 And he did evil in the sight of the Lord, according to the abominations of the nations whom the Lord had cast out before the children of Israel." 2 Kings 21:1, 2

So wicked was Manasseh, that the Lord could not forgive what he did. In Jeremiah 15, this is the verdict which He pronounced -

"And I will appoint over them four forms of destruction,' says the Lord: 'the sword to slay, the dogs to drag, the birds of the heavens and the beasts of the earth to devour and destroy. 4 I will hand them over to trouble, to all kingdoms of the earth, because of Manasseh the son of Hezekiah, king of Judah, for what he did in Jerusalem.'" Jeremiah 15:3, 4

Whether you spend your time thinking about it or not, there is also a record of your actions which is being kept. Moses and Aaron were faithful in their actions before Pharaoh and we have the record of that. They failed in the wilderness and we have the record of that.

Good kings came, and bad kings replaced them, and we have their record to instruct us as well. And your life is being recorded too. There is the record of salvation which is done, once and for all. But there is also the record of deeds which is on-going. And all of your deeds will be held against the standard of God's word.

Those deeds which are worthy of reward will be rewarded. Those which aren't will be burned in the fire. But Paul says that for those in Christ, the fire will only go so far and all in Him will be saved through that time of purification. Thank God for such mercy.

7 And Moses was eighty years old and Aaron eighty-three years old when they spoke to Pharaoh.

There is a lot to learn from these few words. First, we have the seemingly advanced ages of the two men. In fact, in the 90th Psalm, the oldest psalm in the Bible, and the only one written by Moses, we read this -

"For all our days have passed away in Your wrath;
We finish our years like a sigh.
10 The days of our lives are seventy years;
And if by reason of strength they are eighty years," Psalm 90:9, 10

The two men were not young by any stretch. Secondly, we know from this and from Acts 7:23 and Acts 7:30 that Moses' life has thus far been divided into two equal portions of 40 years each. He was 40 when he first attempted to rescue Israel from bondage and was rejected. He is now 80 when he will accomplish the task.

This pictures the work of the Lord Jesus in fulfillment of His covenant promises. Moses' heart was first turned toward his people at forty in hopes of ending their time of bondage. However, they rejected him and their probation continued for another forty years. And so it was with Christ and Israel. And so they continue on to this day awaiting their final deliverance.

Thirdly, we are told in Deuteronomy 34:7 that Moses died at the age of 120 years. Thus his life is divided into three equal portions of 40 years each. This reflects the three periods of Christ's interactions with humanity.

There is the pre-advent period. Like Moses who lived in Pharaoh's house, Christ dwelt in heaven, ruling as Yehovah, and appearing only when necessary to direct events. Then there is the time of Christ's first advent where He was rejected and tended to flocks in a Gentile location. This is the Christ of the nations.

And finally, there is the third period which begins with Moses leading His people out of bondage and into a forty-year period under His rule. This is the Messiah of the Jews, who will redeem captive Israel and rule from Jerusalem for a thousand years.

Three periods of Moses' life equate to these three times of Jesus' interaction with humanity. Then forth, the dating of Moses and Aaron here, combined with the life spans of their father Amram and their grandfather Levi, show us the fulfillment of the promise to Abraham concerning the years that the people of God would be afflicted.

In total, it is 430 years from when the promise was made to Abraham until the giving of the Law. This is found in Galatians 3. Fifth, the ages of Moses and Aaron show that Aaron is older than Moses. This continues the pattern of the younger being preferred above the older.

This pattern will continue on through the Bible and help us to understand better the doctrine of divine election as well as the grand picture of Jesus replacing Adam; the second Man replacing the first.

And finally, in this we see a contrast between Joseph and Moses. Joseph rose to power under Pharaoh, second in position to him, at the age of thirty. However, Moses is said to be as God to Pharaoh at the age of eighty. The thirty years of Joseph are comparable to the thirty years of Jesus' life recorded in Luke 3:23.

The eighty years of Moses are comparable to the completion of Israel's two periods of exile and their coming exaltation during and after the tribulation period. Each thing is connected to each other thing, while building upon one another in order to show us a snapshot of what is going on in redemptive history.

All this is seen in one sentence about the age of two brothers. Great stuff! But imagine... if God has given so much for us to learn from a simple sentence about the ages of two brothers, how much more He surely wants us to know the overall message of the Bible - that He loves us enough to send His Son to redeem us!

If you have never called on Jesus to forgive you and restore you to our heavenly Father, please give me another moment to tell you what you can do to settle that, once and for all...

Closing Verse: "Ahaz was twenty years old when he became king, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem; and he did not do what was right in the sight of the Lord his God, as his father David had done." 2 Kings 16:2

Ahaz was one of Israel's crummy kings. When he died, the people refused to bury him in the tombs of the kings of Israel. His life is now recorded for all to see and contemplate. As we finish today, think soberly on how you will be remembered. Live for Christ, honor the King, and hide His word in your heart that you might not sin against Him. Be remembered as one of the good guys.

Next Week: Exodus 7:8-13 (The Hardening of Pharaoh's Heart) (19th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Notable Obedience

So the Lord said to Moses plainly

"See, I have made you to Pharaoh as God

And Aaron your brother shall your prophet be

So shall it be while in Egypt you trod

You shall speak all that to you I command

And Aaron your brother shall tell

Pharaoh to send out of his land

The children of Israel
And I will harden Pharaoh's heart
And multiply My signs and My wonders too
In the land of Egypt
But Pharaoh will not heed you

So that I may lay on Egypt My hand
And bring My armies and My people whom I designate
The children of Israel out of the land
Of Egypt by judgments great

And the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord
When I stretch out upon Egypt My hand
And bring out the children of Israel according to my word
From among them, from out of this land

Then Moses and Aaron did so
As the Bible does to us relate
Just as the Lord commanded them so they did
Yes, as the written word to us does state

And Moses was eighty years of age
And Aaron eighty-three years old
When they spoke to Pharaoh

This is their years as we have been told
Obedience to the Lord should be our life's desire
Living our life in a manner fitting and right
Let us not get bogged down in sin's swampy mire
But may the Lord's word be our heart's delight

By applying it to all we do in our life
We will stay on the path which is correct
The one which is free from trial and strife
From God our Father, there will be no disconnect

Keep close to the word; keep in prayer always Remember to go to church and have some fellowship there
And your life will be blessed as you live your days
In Christ there is joy and hope, not sadness and despair

Heavenly Father, we thank You for your precious word
And of the wonders and treasures in it, given to us
All of which tell of our glorious Lord
Our Savior, our Redeemer, our Friend... our Lord Jesus

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 7:8-13 (THE HARDENING OF PHARAOH'S HEART)

Introduction: Every time I type up another sermon, I think "there's a lot of difficult stuff here for people to listen to." And then, almost immediately, I also think, "Thank You Lord for the people who come to hear these sermons. I am so grateful for people who are willing to sit through difficulty in order to know You more."

Today is no different. It's just six verses which are necessary to understand the logical progression of what is happening in Egypt, why it happened, and what the result of those steps will be. Two of those results are 1) the redemption of Israel, and 2) God receiving the glory He is due from His creatures.

In order for those things to come about, we are told that the Lord hardens Pharaoh's heart. Some questions which then arise may be, How can this be fair? Is the hardening of one to save another morally right? And why is God due glory at all? Is God a narcissist as so many over the ages have claimed?

In order to understand the truth of these questions, we have to carefully evaluate the passage and we need to thoughtfully consider what it means to harden one's heart or to harden another's heart. To misunderstand this concept will lead one down an entirely different path.

For the non-believer, they will come to see God as overbearing, unrighteous, and morally faulted. For the believer, misunderstanding the hardening of Pharaoh's heart will lead to a completely different theological perspective on the nature of God and His relationship with man.

The misanalysis of just a few words can have an enormous bearing on how we perceive our relationship with God.

Text Verse: "And no wonder! For Satan himself transforms himself into an angel of light. 15 Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also transform themselves into ministers of righteousness, whose end will be according to their works." 2 Corinthians 11:14, 15

Satan is behind all deception, including the dismissal or distortion of God's word, and the Lord's intent for the people of the world. Today, we'll see actions which Satan took to deceive Pharaoh through his magicians. The fact that the Lord knew this would occur doesn't show either a manipulating or an uncaring God.

Rather, by properly seeing what occurs, it will show that God understands the human heart. He works within the framework of that understanding to accomplish His sovereign purposes. This is the glory of God as is revealed in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Show Me a Miracle (verses 8-10)

Today we arrive at 6 verses which come after the Lord's assurances that He was ready to act on events which will lead to the exodus of the Israelites and which come before the first plague on Egypt. Everything which is coming will occur in a methodical way which is designed to increasingly harden the heart of Pharaoh in order to bring maximum judgment upon him and upon Egypt.

This first account is given as an introduction to the plagues. It is a chance for Pharaoh to see what the Lord could do in comparison to Pharaoh's wise men and sorcerers. Even if Pharaoh doesn't see the truth of what will occur, they will. But they will fail to counsel him on the matter.

By the time they actually begin to advise Pharaoh that he needs to respond, it will be too late. His heart will be too hardened to respond. Thus, this failure of his advisors leads to his own hardening. This is not unique in the Bible. An account which occurs after the death of Solomon is comparable to it.

In 1 Kings 12 after Solomon's death, the people of Israel came to his son Rehoboam and asked that the burdens which Solomon had placed on them be lightened. He told them to return in 3 days and he would give his answer to them. He first consulted the elders of Israel who served under Solomon. Their answer was -

“If you will be a servant to these people today, and serve them, and answer them, and speak good words to them, then they will be your servants forever.” 1 Kings 12:7

Sadly, the next words of the Bible say -

"But he rejected the advice which the elders had given him, and consulted the young men who had grown up with him, who stood before him." 1 King 12:8

Their advice was just the opposite of the elders -

“Thus you should speak to this people who have spoken to you, saying, ‘Your father made our yoke heavy, but you make it lighter on us’ —thus you shall say to them: ‘My little finger shall be thicker than my father’s waist! 11 And now, whereas my father put a heavy yoke on you, I will add to your yoke; my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scourges!’” 1 Kings 12:10, 11

By not listening to his elder advisors, the people of Israel rebelled against Rehoboam and the kingdom was, from that time forward, divided. The two kingdoms became known as Israel to the north and Judah to the south.

However, even this was anticipated by God. That is recorded in minute detail in 1 Kings 11:26-40. Read that passage today and you will see that God knew in advance the outcome of the situation. He even directed the events to ensure they would transpire as they did.

The hardening of Rehoboam served God's purposes for Israel and the nations of the world, just as the hardening of Pharaoh's heart did. The Lord could have told Rehoboam in advance concerning what he should do, but He didn't. Thus, His plans came out in the intended way.

Because these verses lead directly into the plagues on Egypt, before getting into them, now is the time to see some of the patterns which are to be found in the coming plagues. You don't necessarily need to remember these patterns, but if you simply comprehend them as I read them, you will be able to more clearly see that there is design and purpose to how they occur.

The entire account, from this miracle, to the final hardening of Pharaoh's heart, goes from Exodus 7:8 until Exodus 11:10. After that, the final plague will come upon Egypt, and Israel will be freed. Within the nine first plagues is an arrangement which shows groups of threes.

In plagues 1 and 2, 4 and 5, and 7 and 8, there is an announcement by Moses to Pharaoh of what is coming before it occurs. However, in plagues 3, 6, and 9, there is no announcement. Also, in plagues 1, 4, and 7 the announcement is given in the morning time.

Plagues 1 and 4 are announced by the Nile River because they deal with Nile's waters; the plagues come from it. However, the location at the announcement of plague 7 isn't given because it comes from the heavens.

In the sign of the rod becoming a snake, and for the two first plagues, the sorcerers of Egypt were able to copy what Moses and Aaron did, but by plague 3, they acknowledge that it is the finger of God.

In plague 6, they will be personally afflicted by boils so that they cannot even stand before Moses. And in plague 9, Pharaoh will break off any further negotiations with Moses and Aaron. Thus you again have the pattern 3, 6, & 9.

A distinction begins to be made between Egypt and the people of Israel in plagues 4 through 9. Egypt and the Egyptians are affected, but the Lord's people aren't. In each of plagues 5, 7 & 9, and only in those plagues, the term "the children of Israel" is used, and they are explicitly noted as being spared from the plagues which occur.

Throughout all of this, the term "king of Egypt" will never be used. Rather, only the term "Pharaoh" will be used, and it will be used 66 times. Not until after the exodus of Israel will he be called the "king of Egypt" again in verse 14:5. These 66 times Pharaoh is mentioned during the plagues of Egypt are a sign, and they are a precursor to mark of the best, which is 666.

The last plague is unique and set apart from the others. It is a direct action from the hand of God rather than a natural occurrence directed by God as the first nine plagues were. During these plagues, their severity slowly changes Pharaoh's mind about what he should do.

He eventually will agree to let the people go, but with conditions. Each time he does so, Moses counters by removing the conditions imposed by Pharaoh, or by stating more clearly what must be allowed when they do go.

Each time, Pharaoh weighs the information and rejects it, or he changes his mind once the plague is removed. He determines to ignore the advice of his highest counselors and even his own senses as the marvelous events, in which he personally becomes a participant, are ignored. And so his heart increasingly hardens to the amazing events which occur around him.

The Bible's progression through these plagues is a masterful work of patterns and logical design, but it is also a precise roadmap of how the human heart, which is opposed to God, will eventually work itself into a most stubborn and hard state.

If one reads the book of Revelation and wonders how such terrifying events, which were proclaimed in advance of their coming, will be ignored by the people of the world, all they need to do is come back to Exodus and see how it happened to Pharaoh.

8 Then the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying,

Although there's seemingly not a lot to consider in this first verse, it is still a bit unusual. Normally when it says, "Then the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying..." it is followed in the same verse with what the Lord began to say. We will see this again and again in the coming verses before the exodus.

However, these words are separated as a stand alone verse. I personally believe in the divine inspiration of even the chapter and verse divisions. They exactly show patterns which permeate Scripture. For a specific reason, the Lord ensured that this would be a separate introductory verse to the short account.

And that reason may be to show the fulfillment of the previous section of seven verses. In them, the Lord once again showed that Moses was preferred above Aaron when it said,

"See, I have made you as God to Pharaoh, and Aaron your brother shall be your prophet." Exodus 7:1

This is despite the fact that Aaron is the elder of the two, which was explicitly noted in the very last verse, which was verse 7 -

"And Moses was eighty years old and Aaron eighty-three years old when they spoke to Pharaoh." Exodus 7:7

Despite being younger, Moses is the Lord's preferred instrument for the work set before them and so we are having our attention called to that fact by this introductory verse which notes that Yehovah speaks to Moses and Aaron rather than Aaron and Moses.

Further, it will become apparent that this is the case because in the next verse, Moses is told by the Lord to speak to Aaron. This then implies that the Lord is speaking to Moses directly and Aaron indirectly. Again, as we have already seen quite a few times in Exodus, this then makes a picture of divine inspiration.

The Lord speaks to some and then His word is transmitted to others. However, the weight and authority of the original words remains. The Lord spoke to and through Jeremiah the prophet and the people of Israel were expected to respond.

Likewise, the Lord spoke through the apostle Paul and we are expected to respond. The weight of divine authority rests upon the words of those He chooses to speak through. Thus, when we disobey the words of the Bible, we disobey the One who spoke out the Bible through those He spoke through.

Let us never forget this as we read its words, consider its commands, and look in expectation to its promises. It is either all or nothing to God, and thus it should be "all in all to us." It is our divine source of knowing God, learning how to live, and understanding what we should do with that knowledge.

9 "When Pharaoh speaks to you, saying, 'Show a miracle for yourselves,'

It's obvious from this that during their previous encounter with Pharaoh, no sign was requested by him. They had asked for Israel to be allowed to go sacrifice to Yehovah and Pharaoh turned them down. There was no need to go further with the meeting because he held the upper hand.

However, with their return to Pharaoh now, the Lord knows that he will demand something more of them if he is going to even listen. If they can't demonstrate that they have the authority of Yehovah, then there will be one of two options to consider - 1) Either Yehovah doesn't really exist, or 2) that even if He does exist, they are not His messengers.

Thus, he will certainly request proof of their claimed authority. Further, if they can really support their claim through a miracle, he knew that his own sorcerers would be able to do one as well. And because they could, he then would have an immediate claim to dismiss their request.

The Hebrew word for "miracle" here is mophet which speaks of something out of the ordinary course of nature. It is an unusual phenomenon, either natural or supernatural, which cries out for an explanation. It is not the same word used when Moses presented his three signs to the people of Israel.

Those signs were meant to validate the office and authority of Moses to the people of Israel as a token of future deliverance. The difference between these words may seem difficult to grasp, but maybe the best way to do so is to see signs as proofs of something which is coming, and miracles as proofs of something that is.

God will give a sign in the sun's movement that spring is coming or that it has arrived, but He will give a wonder or miracle to show that He is currently engaged in an activity, such as turning water into blood. However, even a miracle such as that can also be a sign of something else.

I can ask for a sign that you will pay me back borrowed money by seeing your pay stubs. That would demonstrate to me that the future is assured by the job you are doing. Or I can ask for a different type of sign, call it a wonder, by asking you to run 2 miles in 10 minutes, thus proving you are physically capable of working and so able to pay me back.

There is a difference in the two, but they can overlap and they can end with the same basic result - Whoo hooo, I get repaid. In this, Pharaoh won't ask for a sign as if he is anticipating something from Yehovah. Rather, he asks for a miracle as if he is expecting Yehovah to simply prove Himself here and now.

The miracle is asked of the representatives of Yehovah to prove that they have the divine commission from Him. The miracle will stand as their validation.

9 (con't) then you shall say to Aaron,

As we can see here, the Lord speaking to Moses and Aaron in verse 8 was actually the Lord speaking directly to Moses and indirectly to Aaron. It is Moses who receives the word and passes it on, and it is Aaron who will act.

9 (con't) 'Take your rod and cast it before Pharaoh,

Coming later in this chapter, we will read this -

"So the Lord said to Moses: 'Pharaoh's heart is hard; he refuses to let the people go. 15 Go to Pharaoh in the morning, when he goes out to the water, and you shall stand by the river's bank to meet him; and the rod which was turned to a serpent you shall take in your hand.'"

Exodus 7:14, 15

In this, we can see that the rod which is noted as Aaron's rod here is actually Moses' rod; the rod of God. This then reveals what was meant in Exodus 7:1, which said -

"See, I have made you as God to Pharaoh, and Aaron your brother shall be your prophet."

As the rod belongs to Moses and yet it is given to Aaron to perform the miracle, it will demonstrate that Moses has not only been granted power, but that he has been granted authority to delegate power. Thus Moses is "as God to Pharaoh." He has the divine authority and he has a designated representative of that authority.

9 (con't) and let it become a serpent.'"

The word here for "serpent" is not the same as the word used concerning the snake which Moses saw at the burning bush. That word was nakhash. This word is tannin. It is used 27 times in the Bible, but only three times in Exodus - 7:7, 7:9, & 7:12. It is used to signify any type of large reptile or even a sea monster.

It corresponds to the Egyptian word tanem, which according to Albert Barnes is "a synonym of the monster serpent which represents the principle of antagonism to light and life." The Greek translation of this word is drakon, from which we get our word "dragon."

This word, drakon, is used 13 times in the New Testament book of Revelation and is used as a metaphor for the devil, who is Satan. In Jeremiah 51, this same Hebrew word for serpent is used when speaking of Nebuchadnezzar, the oppressor and destroyer of Israel, when they were taken exile to Babylon -

"Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon
Has devoured me, he has crushed me;
He has made me an empty vessel,
He has swallowed me up like a monster;
He has filled his stomach with my delicacies,
He has spit me out." Jeremiah 51:34

10 So Moses and Aaron went in to Pharaoh, and they did so, just as the Lord commanded.

This verse is based on Exodus 7:2 which said -

"You shall speak all that I command you. And Aaron your brother shall tell Pharaoh to send the children of Israel out of his land." Exodus 7:2

Pharaoh didn't just ask for a sign as soon as they walked in. Rather, they were granted access before Pharaoh and they first spoke what they were instructed to speak. Only then were they asked for a miracle to prove themselves.

In obedience to the Lord, they told Pharaoh what Yehovah expected and so Pharaoh responded with His request, just as the Lord said would happen.

10 (con't) And Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh and before his servants, and it became a serpent.

Upon Pharaoh's request, Aaron produces his miracle. The rod becomes a reptile. Almost all Bibles interpret this as a serpent or a snake. But the Jubilee Bible denotes a daringly descriptive designation of "dragon," and Young's Literal Translation most meaningfully and marvelously mentions it as "monster."

I would carefully consider the correct case of this confusingly crazy conundrum to correlate it to a cobra. The cobra would be a direct challenge to Pharaoh. It was the snake which adorned the headdress of Pharaoh. If so, it would then represent Uraeus, which was the symbol of sovereignty, royalty, deity, and divine authority.

The reason why I believe it is a cobra rather than a crocodile is because later, in verse 15, the word used to describe what happens here in this verse will again say nakhsh instead of tannin. Therefore, it is a serpent. But why are both words used?

I believe it is because it is a picture of Christ. Christ came and was lifted up on the cross, just as the nakhsh, or snake, was placed on the pole in the wilderness. Jesus spoke about this in John 3. However, the significance of what He did was missed by His people. The word tannin here then shows that Pharaoh failed to accept this as a true sign. Instead He takes it as a false sign.

What type of a sign is it that you require of the Lord?

What is it that you would expect God to do?

Do you demand of Him more than His word?

Without even checking to see if His word is true?

Would you demand more of Him that He expects of you?

What He desires is faith, from an obedient heart

In this He will know you believe His word is true

And in faith comes life eternal; from God a brand new start

His word tells us of the giving of His Son

To die for sinners, He was nailed to a cross at Calvary

His word tells us that through Him everything is done

Eternal life awaits all who to Christ willingly bow the knee

II. An Angel of Light (verses 11-12)

11 But Pharaoh also called the wise men and the sorcerers;

When Pharaoh saw what Aaron did, he called his own wise men and sorcerers. The wise men here are khakamim. They are men educated in both human and divine knowledge and are able to apply that knowledge in a wise way, thus the term "wise men."

The sorcerers are known as mekashshephim. These would be like charmers or those who utter magic words. Just as Moses instructed Aaron, Pharaoh would then set himself against Moses by calling in his own subordinates.

The question is, "Would the gods of Egypt be able to produce the same effects through his men as Yehovah could through Aaron?" And if so, would they do so in a manner as least as notable, if not greater than, Aaron?

11 (con't) so the magicians of Egypt, they also did in like manner with their enchantments.

Here we have another category of people called "magicians." This is the word khartummim. It is thought to be either scribes or those who knew sacred words because it comes from the word kheret which means tool, such as an iron pen or a stylus.

Through their magic, which could be nothing more than a magic show which works by sleight of hand, all the way to true black magic which uses the power of the devil to effect its work, they did the same with their enchantments. The word here for enchantments is lehatim which equates to secret or hidden arts.

Whatever is to be said about their secret arts, they were enough to be convincing to Pharaoh, even if they were false. This is no different than what is coming in the future as well. In Revelation 16, there is a comparable occurrence which will deceive the world and it is certainly of satanic origin -

"And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs coming out of the mouth of the dragon, out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. 14 For they are spirits of demons, performing signs, which go out to the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty." Revelation 16:13, 14

This power is also spoken of concerning the antichrist in 2 Thessalonians 2:8-10 where we read this -

"And then the lawless one will be revealed, whom the Lord will consume with the breath of His mouth and destroy with the brightness of His coming. 9 The coming of the lawless one is according to the working of Satan, with all power, signs, and lying wonders, 10 and with all unrighteous deception among those who perish, because they did not receive the love of the truth, that they might be saved." 2 Thessalonians 2:8-10

And lest we feel we're safe in this dispensation, before the coming of the antichrist, we should probably remember Paul's words of Ephesians 6 that tell us even now we are facing a spiritual battle against the forces of wickedness.

Only by covering ourselves with the implements of battle will we be able to stand unharmed against the devil's attacks. Take time to read that passage today and ensure you're prepared for this unseen and yet truly real battle that we are in.

12 For every man threw down his rod, and they became serpents.

Sure enough, by deceit or by true satanic powers, they were able to accomplish a similar feat. The result was that there were real reptiles there on the ground before both Moses and Pharaoh. But, the fact that they were able to do this may another the reason why the word is different than the word which was used when the rod became a snake at the burning bush.

This second reason for using the word tannin instead of nakash may be that both produced reptiles, but they were different reptiles. Because tannin can mean a host of things, from a crocodile to a cobra, it may be that different reptiles were produced. The account doesn't say this, but the use of the word may imply it.

If so, then it would explain why the next event comes about...

12 (con't) But Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods.

These reptiles, whatever they actually became, are noted as rods here, not tanninim. The matteh, or rod, is the symbol of the power which it displays. Thus, this is "the rod of God." It is a symbol of the power of Yehovah. The rods of the Egyptians symbolized the power they possessed.

Therefore, we are told the rod swallowed the rods, not the reptile swallowed the reptiles. One could ask why the Lord would choose this miracle before sending the plagues and why he chose it, knowing that Pharaoh's men would be able to reproduce the effect.

There are several reasons for this. One is that in order to clear Moses from appearing as a mere magician, this wonder was chosen first. If not, then whatever he did after this could also be considered mere magic.

But by defeating the false signs, the true sign would stand out more apparently. The dragon of Moses was of far greater power than that of Pharaoh's. What they considered a protector god, the cobra, was of no protection against the greater force which came against them.

A second reason would be to bolster the confidence of the Israelites. Word would come to them of what happened and they would have a renewed hope because even if this challenge is ignored by Pharaoh, their God had displayed that He was more powerful than the powers of Pharaoh.

And third, this miracle, along with the coming plagues, is given as a direct confrontation to the many gods of Egypt. Knowing that Yehovah defeats Egypt through the very objects which the Egyptians worshipped would be a sign to them that only Yehovah was worthy of their worship.

And sure enough, the miracles of Egypt are recorded in both the 78th and 105th psalms as a testimony to the people of the greatness of Yehovah and His superiority over the false gods of Egypt. Earlier I cited Albert Barnes concerning the Egyptian beast tanem to which tanin corresponds.

He said it is "a synonym of the monster serpent which represents the principle of antagonism to light and life." If this is so, then Yehovah has proven His Light and Life to be greater than the antagonist, Satan, who transforms himself into an angel of light and yet who thrives on darkness and death.

However, despite the victory of Yehovah over these workers of iniquity in this first miracle, we will see that Pharaoh has been coaxed into believing that he is still able to withstand the Force which has come against him.

Don't you be distracted by Satan's cunning lies

Don't allow his deceit to creep in and steal your heart away

On the Lord Jesus, there alone fix your eyes

Press on for the goal of Christ each and every day

Surely there is a glorious reward awaiting those of us

Who walk in this life with our gaze firmly fixed on Jesus

Though the devil has power, against it we can stand

Having the shield of faith to quench every fiery dart

And with the Bible always ready, always at hand

Let us press on towards the goal, with Jesus in our heart

III. The Hardening Heart (verse 13)

13 And Pharaoh's heart grew hard,

The words are v'yekhezaq lev parah. Some translations, such as the King James Version, incorrectly state "And he hardened Pharaoh's heart." This would be a mis-translation. The verb is neuter and intransitive, and 'Pharaoh's heart' is its nominative case. It should be translated as, "Pharaoh's heart hardened itself."

It is true that passively, it is the Lord who is acting upon Pharaoh to harden his heart, but it is an active measure of Pharaoh to respond to it. A child can passively make me angry by sticking his tongue out at me, but I am the one who actually gets angry.

Thus saying, "The child made Charlie angry" is sort of true, but it doesn't convey the whole matter. Rather, to properly identify what is going on, you would say, "Charlie allowed himself to get angry at the prodding of a little kid." I could have just ignored him or laughed him off, but instead, I allowed myself to get upset.

In the same way, Yehovah has purposefully chosen a path which has been favorable to Pharaoh's own arrogant demeanor, but Pharaoh is still fully responsible for his actions. God does not act in an arbitrary manner, ever.

He will only act to harden those who are disposed already to being hardened. And if He does so, it will be for His purposes. In this case, it is to lead ultimately to the redeeming of His people. But he could have done this at a time when a different Pharaoh would have responded differently, couldn't He have!

The fact that He didn't shows that He has a specific purpose for choosing this Pharaoh at this time. If he were to have done it for this same purpose at a different time, and yet expected the same results, then He would have to violate His own moral character, by actively hardening someone who would have let them go.

This Pharaoh, right from the beginning of Exodus, has proven to be a tyrant, self-willed, and obstinate. He has already hardened himself against God and therefore, the actions taken by the Lord now are in accord with His perfect moral character.

Any action by God in the hardening process is because this man has already hardened himself. Therefore, the punishments which will result in the chapters ahead will be just and they will be justly due, not arbitrary or vindictive. This is what sets Yehovah apart from all other gods.

He is infinite in His being, and His being is moral, just, righteous, and holy. He does nothing which is wrong, and He will never pervert justice in the sentencing of His creatures. In other words, when we receive penal judgment, we get what we deserve.

The cries of "foul" that ring out by the world against the God of the Bible are wholly unfounded and fail to take His perfect character into consideration. What we need is mercy - not getting what we do deserve. If God always gave us what we deserve, we would be swept away, just like Pharaoh.

In the end, whether Pharaoh actually believed that the reptiles were real, and that one really devoured the others, didn't matter to him. Instead, he looked at this miracle by the Lord as just a different degree of the same thing accomplished by his men.

He saw it as one type of work that happened to be a bit better coming from Moses. Thus he hardened his heart. Even though this was the Lord's intent, it was still Pharaoh's decision to act upon.

13 (fin) and he did not heed them, as the Lord had said.

ka'asher dibber Yehovah - "... as had said Yehovah." The Lord spoke because the Lord knew. He knew what Pharaoh would do when calling for his magicians, and He knew what Pharaoh would do when his magicians performed a miracle similar to Aaron's.

He allowed himself to be taken in by a lie. Satan had his hand in the situation, further deceiving Pharaoh who was already deceived. As Matthew Henry notes about what has transpired -

"None assist more in the destruction of sinners, than such as resist the truth by amusing men with a counterfeit resemblance of it. Satan is most to be dreaded when transformed into an angel of light." Henry

Those who practiced the devil's arts, though not on par with the hand of the Lord, were enough to seduce Pharaoh into believing he was on a sound path. All the while though, he is heading towards his own final doom.

Paul warns us of exactly the same thing in his second letter to Timothy. There in the third chapter, he actually cites two men by name. They are the magicians who faced off against Moses. Paul's warning stands as a testimony to us to watch out for false workers who masquerade behind their false works. Let me read you his sobering warning -

"But know this, that in the last days perilous times will come: 2 For men will be lovers of themselves, lovers of money, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, 3 unloving, unforgiving, slanderers, without self-control, brutal, despisers of good, 4 traitors, headstrong, haughty, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God, 5 having a form of godliness but denying its power. And from such people turn away! 6 For of this sort are those who creep into households and make captives of gullible women loaded down with sins, led away by various lusts, 7 always learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth. 8 Now as Jannes and Jambres resisted Moses, so do these also resist the truth: men of corrupt minds, disapproved concerning the faith; 9 but they will progress no further, for their folly will be manifest to all, as theirs also was." 2 Timothy 3:1-9

The word of the Lord is filled with proof that it is what it claims to be. It is the divine authority to guide and regulate our lives. But if we willingly choose to neglect it, speak against it, or disobey it, then he may allow a snare to entangle us. Let us endeavor to not be so trapped, but to be willing, open, and obedient to His good word.

And of all of the things we need to be obedient to in that precious book, the first is to call on Christ as Lord. If we were to perfectly do every thing in the Bible that is demanded of us, we would still fall short of the glory of God. We can never attain to His perfection because we already have sin in our lives.

Only Christ Jesus can take away that sin. Only He can restore us to God. In fact, if we try to please God through our works without going through Christ, we actually make it worse. That becomes self-idolatry because we reject the Gift He has offered. Don't be obstinate like Pharaoh, but rather, yield to the Lord. Let me tell you how you can...

Closing Verse: Happy is the man who is always reverent,
But he who hardens his heart will fall into calamity. Proverbs 28:14

Next Week: Exodus 7:14-25 (The Plague of Blood) (20th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Hardening of the Heart

Then the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying

“When Pharaoh speaks to you, in this way

Saying, ‘Show a miracle for yourselves, I am praying

Then to Aaron you shall say

"Take your rod and before Pharaoh cast it

And let it become a serpent

As I instruct you, so you shall your actions commit

So Moses and Aaron went in to Pharaoh

And just as the Lord commanded, they did so

And Aaron cast down his rod before Pharaoh

And before his servants too

And it became a serpent as we now know

Just as the Lord told them, so it did do
But Pharaoh also called his men too
The wise men and the sorcerers in their assignments
So the magicians of Egypt they also it did do
In like manner with their enchantments

For every man down his rod threw
And they also became serpents too
But Aaron's rod swallowed up their rods
And Pharaoh's heart, hard it grew
And he did not heed them, there were no favorable nods
As the Lord had said, just as the Lord already knew

Though Aaron performed a miracle with his rod
Pharaoh hardened his heart even more
He rejected the sign, though it was from God
Becoming stony to the core

We too have a miracle presented to us
One that is well documented and attested to
It is the resurrection of the Lord Jesus
It is a sign which offers life to me and you
If we soften our hearts and receive Jesus as Savior
We will be sealed with the Holy Spirit, a heavenly guarantee

And with His guidance, we can adjust our life's behavior
Becoming more like the Lord, as we follow obediently

So let us follow this, the right and holy path
And be saved by His blood shed on the cross of Calvary
In this we become God's children, saved from His wrath
And we are set on a heavenly course for all eternity
Thank You, O God, for this wonderful assurance
Thank You for what You have done for sinners like us
Give us O God continued endurance
Until the day we are called home, to be with Jesus

Yes, thank You O God, for our precious Lord Jesus

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 7:14-25 (THE PLAGUE OF BLOOD)

Introduction: One premise of a Creator God is that He is all knowing. Everything from the beginning to the end is known to Him immediately and intuitively. He doesn't have to make deductions or conclusions. Rather, He simply knows.

And this doesn't just mean mechanical things like 1 plus 1, or how birds are able to fly. It includes all things, including the secret things of the heart and mind. Every thought that we have, every thing we will do, and even what will prompt us to do other things, are all known to Him.

The Bible says He searches out our hearts in order to effect His purposes on earth, He searches us out in order to judge us, and He searches us out so that He can guide us. It is a way of saying that everything about us is known to Him. In this, there is nothing that we can keep secret from Him.

Why did you give to a particular charity? Though you may say it was to do good, it may have been for a reason that you've suppressed so deeply that you might not even realize the truth of the matter. The Lord, however, knows exactly why you did it.

Text Verse: "The heart is deceitful above all things,
And desperately wicked;
Who can know it?
10 I, the Lord, search the heart,
I test the mind,
Even to give every man according to his ways,
According to the fruit of his doings. Jeremiah 17:10

Today, we will see the first plague that was brought upon the land of Egypt. It, like the miracle of the rod turning into a serpent, will be repeatable, at least in part, by Pharaoh's magicians. Because of this, he will fail to see the plague in the proper context.

Not only is it on a completely different scale, but it is a precursor to more plagues intended to secure Israel's release. If Pharaoh had heeded the Lord already, he would have saved Egypt and himself much grief. But in order for the Lord to be glorified, He selected this plague first.

He did it, not to obtain Israel's freedom, but to further harden Pharaoh's heart. And it will have its intended effect because it is the Lord who searches hearts and minds in order to effect His purposes. Let's remember this and keep our hearts soft to the things of God and to the truths which are found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. You Shall Know that I Am the Lord (verses 14-18)

14 So the Lord said to Moses: "Pharaoh's heart is hard; he refuses to let the people go.

The last words we saw came after the miracle of the rods turning to serpents. Aaron had cast down his rod and it became a serpent, but the magicians of Egypt had done the same. In response it said, "And Pharaoh's heart grew hard, and he did not heed them, as the Lord had said."

But, that wasn't the only thing to bring hardening to his heart. In chapter 5, the Lord had instructed Moses to simply go and ask Pharaoh for permission to allow Israel to go into the wilderness to worship. By taking this avenue, and knowing the obstinate nature of Pharaoh, the Lord knew he would harden his heart, and he did.

Pharaoh felt he had gained a victory over Israel and the God of Israel by his refusal. In turn he laid a heavier burden on them. This too would have given him perverse satisfaction and a further hardening of his heart. Each thing done has been calculated to bring about a desired end, known to the Lord who created man.

The first miracle of the rods wasn't a judgment on Egypt, but a display intended to lull Pharaoh into a greater state of dullness. It served that purpose well. He wasn't convicted, but rather emboldened.

The light that was given was swallowed up by the darkness of his false magicians, thus closing his eyes to what lay ahead. Now the judgments would begin. Knowing this, the Lord says to Moses, "Pharaoh's heart is hard." However, a completely different word than in the previous verse is used.

It says, kaved lev paroh - "Pharaoh's heart is heavy." The previous word was khazaq - hard; this word is kaved; - heavy. There is dullness and a stupidity of response to the plagues which are coming. Unlike for example, a bird which flits away at danger, an ox will fail to see the disaster ahead and plod into it directly. This is the intent of the Lord's words now.

15 Go to Pharaoh in the morning, when he goes out to the water,

There is specificity here that we're asked to look at. Two things in particular - it is morning time, and Pharaoh is going out to the water. Scholars have looked at various reasons for this, such as he was going to bathe, to pray to the Nile which is one of the deities of Egypt, to see how high the river was in order to determine when to plant crops, and so on.

I would suggest that it is for worship, and that the worship is two-fold. First he is there to worship the Nile, but secondly, to worship the sun as it first lights on the Nile. Pharaoh, believing he is the son of the sun-god Ra, would be there to honor his supposed father-god as well as the Nile which reflected the coming of Ra. This is speculation, but it fits the placement of both words.

15 (con't) and you shall stand by the river's bank to meet him; and the rod which was turned to a serpent you shall take in your hand.

This seems straightforward enough that no commentary is really necessary, except that commentary is necessary. The word for "serpent" here is not what it was in the previous passage. When Aaron cast down the staff before Pharaoh, it says that it turned into a tannin. Here it says that it has turned into a nakhash.

This asks us to consider why. I have three possibilities. The first is that Moses and Aaron each had a different rod. The rod Moses threw down in front of the bush turned into a nakhash; the same rod that would have been seen by the Israelites. But the rod that Aaron threw down was his own and it turned into a tannin. And so now, the first rod is being used, which turned into a nakhash.

The second option is that the same rod was thrown down and one time it turned into a nakhash, and the second time it turned into something different, a tannin. Here in this verse then, the Lord's words would be referring to the first account.

The third option is that the words are being used synonymously in one way, but are showing a distinction in another. The nakhash was revealing Christ as the giver of the miracle, but the tannin was assumed to be a false miracle by Pharaoh, and thus Christ was hidden from his eyes. Based on the use of the word nakhash elsewhere in Scripture, I believe this last option is correct.

16 And you shall say to him, ‘The Lord God of the Hebrews has sent me to you, saying, “Let My people go, that they may serve Me in the wilderness”; but indeed, until now you would not hear!

This refers right back to Exodus 5, especially verses 1-9. Rather than "The Lord God of the Hebrews has sent me to you" it should say, "The Lord God of the Hebrews sent me to you." He is reiterating what was said, not stating something new.

That first request was a mild one. It wasn't a demand and it wasn't requesting release, but rather simply a time of worship with an implied return to Egypt. But the obstinate nature of Pharaoh immediately set him at odds with the request of Yehovah, the God of the Hebrews. Instead, he wouldn't hear.

17 Thus says the Lord: “By this you shall know that I am the Lord.

When Moses first spoke to Pharaoh in chapter 5, his response was, “Who is the Lord, that I should obey His voice to let Israel go? I do not know the Lord, nor will I let Israel go.” Now, Yehovah promises that Pharaoh will know who He is.

However, he will have to repeat this several more times to Pharaoh. It isn't just this coming miracle then that will convince Pharaoh, but all of them combined and stored in his memory that will collectively cry out that He is Yehovah.

Pharaoh, like many of us, is a tough nut to crack. But we can thank the Lord that He is long-suffering as He waits for us to yield our stubborn hearts to Him.

Unfortunately for Pharaoh, it will never truly transpire and he will be swept away by the Red Sea's waters.

17 (con't) Behold, I will strike the waters which are in the river with the rod that is in my hand, and they shall be turned to blood.

In this we have the commonly accepted idea of Qui facit per alium, facit per se - "He who acts through another does the act himself."

It is the Lord who pronounces anokhi makkeh ba'matteh asher b'yadi, "I will strike with the staff that is in my hand." The action of the instrumental cause - the rod and hand of Aaron, is ascribed as the action of the principle cause, the work of the Lord.

In this verse though is one of the most difficult to determine aspects of any of the ten plagues upon Egypt. It requires care and contemplation; not belligerence. The words are, "and they shall be turned to blood." Question: "Is this actually blood or is it not?"

The answer is one which haunts all scholars to some extent. Among other things, actual blood implies red and white blood cells, it implies DNA, and it implies platelets. It would be beyond the scope of the other miracles to produce all of these things. And yet, the word "blood" is used.

However, it is also used in a one-for-one comparative way many other times in Scripture. In Joel, it says this about the moon -

"The sun shall be turned into darkness,
And the moon into blood,
Before the coming of the great and awesome day of the Lord." Joel 2:13

It would be ludicrous to not see that as a metaphor. The blood moon is an eclipse. This is repeated in Acts 2:20 in the Greek and it again says, it "shall be turned into blood" there. It doesn't say "like blood," but simply that it will be turned into blood. However, this type of sign is explained in Revelation 6:12 where it says -

"I looked when He opened the sixth seal, and behold, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became like blood." Revelation 6:12

Again, in Revelation 8:8, in the second trumpet judgment on the earth, it says, "Then the second angel sounded: And something like a great mountain burning with fire was thrown into the sea, and a third of the sea became blood." It is again understood that this is "like blood" even though elsewhere it says it became blood.

Considering that the plagues of Egypt are given as pictures of the coming plagues upon the world, we see that the turning of the Nile into blood means blood in a figurative sense.

And yet, it is a figurative sense with a literal biblical meaning. At times in the Bible blood implies life, it implies death, and it implies judgment. The Nile being turned into blood is a demonstration of God's ability to give life, to take life, and to judge.

Therefore, the description of blood, though not literal blood as we think of it, carries all the connotations of blood in the Bible. This is not a sign, but a judgment. Just as the house of Pharaoh judged that the Hebrew children were to be cast into the Nile to die, the Lord is now bringing judgment upon Egypt by bringing death to the Nile.

The Nile, this false "god" of Egypt, will come under the judging hand of the true God of the Hebrews. As Matthew Henry says -

"... the river of Egypt, was their idol. That creature which we idolize, God justly takes from us, or makes bitter to us." Henry 18 And the fish that are in the river shall die, the river shall stink, and the Egyptians will loathe to drink the water of the river."''''

The fish are singled out in this verse because it is known that at least three types of them were considered sacred to the Egyptians. But these supposedly sacred fish could not survive in the now- bloodied waters.

Fish are infrequently mentioned in the Old Testament, but a study on them will show marvelous patterns. The first time they're seen is right in Genesis 1 at the creation of the various types of life. After the exodus, the people of Israel will complain in the wilderness that when they were in Egypt, they had fish to eat.

But they forgot that it is the Lord who created the fish and the Lord who destroyed the fish of the Nile. Later in Ezekiel which speaks of the time of the millennial reign of Christ, it says this -

"Then he said to me: 'This water flows toward the eastern region, goes down into the valley, and enters the sea. When it reaches the sea, its waters are healed. 9 And it shall be that every living thing that moves, wherever the rivers go, will live. There will be a very great multitude of fish, because these waters go there; for they will be healed, and everything will live wherever the river goes." Ezekiel 47:8, 9

The living waters of the Nile died at the hand of the Lord, and the dead waters of the Dead Sea will come alive by His hand as well. Such is the nature of the Lord who creates, sustains, and judges.

All life is bound up in the hand of the Lord
What He chooses for us is for Him alone to decide
For those who humble themselves to Him, there lies a reward
Eternal joy will be found in heaven at His side

Those who reject His life will remain eternally dead
But those who die through Him will be granted life eternal
Better to choose the Lord now and be reconciled instead
Than to suffer the flames of the land infernal

Oh wayward man, learn the lesson of Pharaoh
Don't harden your heart to the sacred word
Instead, travel upon the path which is narrow
And call out for salvation to Jesus the Lord

II. Blood Throughout the Land (verses 19-22)

19 Then the Lord spoke to Moses, "Say to Aaron, 'Take your rod and stretch out your hand over the waters of Egypt, over their streams, over their rivers, over their ponds, and over all their pools of water, that they may become blood.

In a direct command from Yehovah, the rod of God by which the plagues of Egypt are to be carried out is ordered to be stretched out over the waters of Egypt, and this directly in the presence of Pharaoh. When this is done, the water would become blood.

The waters of Egypt included the Nile itself, which is the lifeline of water throughout the country. To this day, it remains as such. The nahar or "streams" are the natural waterways which branch off from the Nile. Seen from above, they appear as fingers which branch out as the Nile progresses towards the north.

From there are the yeor which would be the lesser streams or canals. They may be natural or man-made and they would progressively rise and overflow during the wet season. After that are the agam, translated as ponds. These could be lakes or marshes that would particularly flood as the Nile's high season arrived.

And finally are the miqveh, or "pools." The word miqveh implies a gathering, such as when God gathered together the waters and called them "seas" in Genesis 1:10. These then would be cisterns, mostly were probably man-made, which could be filled as the Nile overflowed, or which could be filled by going to the Nile and manually carrying it to the cistern.

Everything that received the once-living waters of the Nile would be affected. They would now only receive the bloodied waters of judgment.

19 (con't) And there shall be blood throughout all the land of Egypt, both in buckets of wood and pitchers of stone.'"

This final portion of the verse has to be considered based on the verses to come. The words "buckets" and "pitchers" are inserted and it makes it sound like any receptacles of water which were in a house were affected as well. But that can't be the intent.

What it means is that any water collected in those things would be equally affected. The receptacles aren't being tied to the spoiling of the water directly, but that the water which would be collected in either wood or stone was affected. In essence, subsequent methods of purifying the water wouldn't work.

20 And Moses and Aaron did so, just as the Lord commanded.

In obedience to the word of the Lord, and showing no fear that the miracle may not happen, thus leaving them in a state of embarrassment, they did as requested. The fears of failing once noted in Moses have disappeared. Now only obedience is seen.

20 (con't) So he lifted up the rod and struck the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pharaoh and in the sight of his servants. And all the waters that were in the river were turned to blood.

Directly in the sight of all, the miracle is performed. In this, the waters of the river, meaning anything into which the river flowed, is singled out. Judgment has come upon the Nile and it serves as a double punch to Pharaoh. It is an attack against their supposed god of the Nile and the fish which they revered.

But it also would be an immense physical affliction upon the people of Egypt. This terrible plague is followed in type and pattern by the third trumpet and the third bowl judgments upon the world of the end times. In the third bowl in Revelation 16, it says -

"Then the third angel poured out his bowl on the rivers and springs of water, and they became blood." Revelation 16:4

After that, the reason for the judgment is given -

"You are righteous, O Lord,
The One who is and who was and who is to be,
Because You have judged these things.
6 For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets,
And You have given them blood to drink.
For it is their just due." Revelation 16:5, 6

Just as the Egyptians shed the blood of the Lord's Hebrew people, the unrepentant world has shed the blood of the Lord's saints and prophets. In response, the Lord will give them blood to drink as is their just due. That which has been, will be again. Just as the Bible both depicts and proclaims.

21 The fish that were in the river died, the river stank,

As the Lord proclaimed, so it happened. The Nile and the life in it died. This then is not a normal seasonal occurrence which has at other times been documented in the Nile. Before the Aswan dam was built, the Nile fluctuated greatly.

In the time before the Nile started to rise, it would be greenish. However, eventually, as the waters increased, they would carry in microscopic organisms which would turn it reddish. It would also stink during the process. If this is all that occurred, it would be neither miraculous, nor unexpected. And it wouldn't have killed everything in the Nile.

Rather, this is something that was far worse than normal. But it also was a plague which Pharaoh could mentally brush off as simply "worse than normal." This is especially true because of what is coming concerning his magicians. Thus the Lord is passively continuing to harden Pharaoh's heart through the order of the plagues that He is delivering to the land and people.

21 (con't) So there was blood throughout all the land of Egypt.

From the biblical perspective, this blood is judgment and this blood is death. And thus, judgment and the stench of death permeated all of the inhabited land of Egypt. Where the Nile flowed, there judgment was found.

The death of the fish would be an unusually difficult thing for the Egyptians because it was, and continues to be in modern times, a main source of food for the people. They would now lose this, and because the blood flowed to all places where the Nile flowed, it would mean that the entire stock of fish was affected.

Even after the clearing of the waters, it would be a long and difficult time to repopulate the Nile with enough fish to once again feed the people. The judgment is a harsh one indeed.

21 (con't) and the Egyptians could not drink the water of the river.

The waters that were in any capacity directly tied to the river truly become impossible to drink. Not only would it have been contaminated with the judging substance termed "blood," but it also would have very quickly been further contaminated with the rotting fish which had died in the water. Within a very short time, the people would truly be suffering from the effects of this horrendous first plague.

Woe unto man who will not heed the Lord

Terrible are His judgments upon the unrepentant world

For man has forsaken the Holy and Precious word

And so upon their hardened hearts, His judgments will be unfurled

But there is escape from this terrible fate

There is hope found in the Lord Jesus

Don't put it off - No! Please don't hesitate

Call out to the One who died and rose again for us

In Him is found life eternal, sure and sweet

In Him is found the love of God

And so will be the joy there before our feet

A heavenly path which forever we may trod

III. Seven Days of Plague (verses 22-25)

22 Then the magicians of Egypt did so with their enchantments;

A stumbling block is placed right before the feet of Pharaoh. The Lord has chosen a plague which is repeatable by the magicians of Egypt. As God is the Giver of life and the life is in the blood, it is assured that the "blood" noted in the previous verses is not truly blood in the literal sense.

Whatever the magicians did, it was sufficiently comparable to that of what occurred in the Nile to be considered the same by Pharaoh. And this also demonstrates that the buckets and pitchers mentioned above are not those containing water that were in houses at the time of the plague. If they were, then how could these have contained water?

The arrogance of Pharaoh here is evident. Just because the magicians could reproduce the effects of this plague, they could not do so on the same scale as Moses and Aaron. The Nile was already converted to blood. Further, a portion of the miracle is the fact that the Nile died as Aaron stretched the rod over it.

The timing was exact and the scope of the event was total. Also, there is no note of an attempt to undo what the Lord had done by these guys. If Pharaoh were willing to simply pursue this path of understanding before turning away, he would see that the plague of the Lord was beyond the scope or control of his magicians. Despite this, Pharaoh willingly sides with that which is unreasonable. As a result...

22 (con't) and Pharaoh's heart grew hard,

From the Hebrew, it is apparent that the ability of the magicians to reproduce the same effect as the plague is what hardened Pharaoh's heart. The two clauses are connected in such a way as to conclusively imply this.

As the Lord knew the magicians would be able to do so, and as the Lord knows the hearts of men, it is His actions which harden Pharaoh, even though Pharaoh has willingly hardened his own heart. Though this may seem nitpicking the subject to death, it is something we all need to continually remind ourselves about.

If we harden our hearts to the things of God, then the Lord will allow our hearts to be hardened against Him by those things that He sends in our direction. In the end, His purposes will always prevail, but they work in accord with His knowledge of how we will respond to Him based on the condition of our heart.

In other words, be soft, open, and forever willing to comply with the Lord and His word. In this, you will always know that He will deal well with you as you live out your days.

22 (con't) and he did not heed them, as the Lord had said.

Who did Pharaoh not heed? He didn't heed Aaron and Moses. The word is alehem; it is plural. But in verse 17, the Lord said He would strike the waters. As Aaron and Moses are the designated representatives of the Lord, Pharaoh is not only rejecting them, but he is rejecting Yehovah. This same pattern is seen in the end times.

In Revelation 11, there will be two witnesses who will carry the authority of the Lord. Their testimony, like that of Moses and Aaron will be rejected and they will be killed, but before that happens, they will have the same type of authority granted to them by Jesus. In Revelation 11:6, we read this -

"These have power to shut heaven, so that no rain falls in the days of their prophecy; and they have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to strike the earth with all plagues, as often as they desire."

Their words will be a sign to the people of the world. If they are heeded, those who heed will be saved. If they are ignored, those who harden their hearts will be lost. The condition of the heart will dictate the outcome of the final destiny.

The hardening of Pharaoh's heart is attributed to the heart itself. It is not an active hardening by the Lord, but a self-willed hardening wrought by Pharaoh at the prompting of the Lord. Pharaoh could have yielded, but he chose not to. In this, the Lord's knowledge of the heart and of the person's response is revealed.

In 1 Kings 8:39, we are told that the Lord alone knows the hearts of all of the sons of men. In Revelation 2:23, this same attribute is ascribed to Jesus, thus it is one of the countless proofs that Jesus of the New Testament is the same as the Lord of the Old Testament. Here is what that verse says -

"...all the churches shall know that I am He who searches the minds and hearts. And I will give to each one of you according to your works."

Pharaoh's heart has been searched out by the Lord, he has willingly hardened himself to the Lord's passive promptings, and he alone is responsible for the judgment he will receive. The same is true with the people now and those in the end times too. The hardened heart is a terrifying and powerful source of eternally sad consequences.

23 And Pharaoh turned and went into his house. Neither was his heart moved by this.

This takes us right back to Exodus 7:10-13 where the rod was changed into a serpent. At the end of that encounter, it said, "And Pharaoh's heart grew hard, and he did not heed them, as the Lord had said." Two demonstrations before Pharaoh have been repeatable by his magicians.

Despite these being on a much higher order than that of his own people's tricks, he was convinced enough to remain unchanged in his attitude towards the Lord. Unfortunately, we can make a very good comparison to this and to the Bible.

The Lord has spoken and His words are recorded there. But other books make many of the same general claims as the Bible. In Luke 6:31, we read what is commonly known as the Golden Rule -

"And just as you want men to do to you, you also do to them likewise."

But this general precept is found in a host of other religions in one form or another. For example, Confucius said it this way -

"Never impose on others what you would not choose for yourself."

Such knowledge will often lead the hardened heart to immediately assume that one religion is the just the same as another. However, just as the miracle of the Lord is on a completely different level than the false miracles of the magicians of Egypt, the word of the Lord, when studied and understood, is on a completely different level than that of any and all other religions.

We are each responsible for where we place our faith. To exercise it without checking the facts, and then contemplating the sources of those facts, can have eternal consequences. Pharaoh, despite being the ruler of the greatest nation on earth, was actually a very shallow thinker.

24 So all the Egyptians dug all around the river for water to drink, because they could not drink the water of the river.

Those who know the layout of the land of Egypt are aware of the fact that apart from the Nile, there are no other natural sources of drinking water available in the land such as springs, fountains, or other rivers.

However, there is water underground which can be accessed, but it isn't suitable for drinking because of the soil conditions of the land. Unlike other areas where wells are commonly dug, Egypt didn't follow this practice because of it. However, with the only truly palatable water ruined, they were left with only this option.

Because of the record here, even the most liberal of scholars must admit that the author of the account had an exacting knowledge of the geography and water system of Egypt. It is a nice touch concerning the authenticity of Moses as the true author.

25 And seven days passed after the Lord had struck the river.

Chapter 7 ends with a note of specificity concerning the duration of the plague, seven days. Some attempt to tie this 7-day period into the start of the next plague recorded in chapter 8 verse 1, but that is unlikely. Rather, the plague itself lasted seven days.

It has been documented that the normal period of discoloration of the Nile lasts for much longer. Therefore, this is again an evidence of the divine nature of the plague. The clearing of the blood from Egypt took less time than the normal flow of the river to do the same.

The question which I had to ponder for quite some time is "Why seven days?" After rereading the account, it seems to me that this goes back to the original request which was made in Exodus 4:3 which said -

“The God of the Hebrews has met with us. Please, let us go three days’ journey into the desert and sacrifice to the Lord our God, lest He fall upon us with pestilence or with the sword.” Exodus 4:3

The request was repeated in verse 16 - that they wanted to go into the wilderness to serve the Lord. But because of Pharaoh's refusal, it was said that the plague of blood would immediately ensue. Thus it is a sign to Pharaoh.

They had asked for a trip which would require travel of three days in each direction. Thus, with the day of sacrifice, it would have been a seven-day journey. The plague of blood was given as punishment, a day for a day, for depriving the Lord of the honor He was due at the ceremony in the wilderness.

This appears to be a one-to-one comparison with the 7-year tribulation period coming in the end times. Daniel 9:27 shows that a 7-year covenant will be made between Israel and the antichrist. There will be a year of tribulation for each year of this covenant. And so there is a pattern reflected here.

The glory of the Lord is proclaimed throughout the Bible. It is man's duty to recognize it and to proclaim it. From the intricate spider's web, to the complexity of the cosmos, every part of creation cries out "Glory" and it tells us of infinite wisdom.

God created us as sentient beings because He desires us to share in His glory, to acknowledge it, and to rejoice in it. But from moment to moment we fail to do so. We set up idols in our hearts, we ascribe worship to the creation rather than the Creator, and we follow our own paths, rarely giving Him any regard at all.

Only when things get bad do we normally even think to give Him remembrance. Let us do our best every day to pursue Him, to consider His goodness in our lives, and to give Him the glory He is due. And in order to truly have a right fellowship with Him, we must deal with the sin in our life which separates us from Him.

Let me tell you how this can come about. He has done everything necessary to restore us to a happy and eternal relationship with Him once again. He did it in the giving of His Son, Jesus. Let me explain that to you...

Closing Verse: Sing to God, sing praises to His name;
Extol Him who rides on the clouds,
By His name YAH,
And rejoice before Him. Psalm 68:4

Next Week: John 12:20-26 (A Grain of Wheat - Resurrection Day 2015)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Plague of Blood

So the Lord said to Moses about Pharaoh

“Pharaoh’s heart is hard

He refuses to let the people go

Go to Pharaoh in the morning

When he goes out to the water and you shall stand

By the river’s bank to meet him

And the rod which was turned to a serpent...

You shall take in your hand

And you shall say to him, even so

"The Lord God of the Hebrews has sent me for this address Saying, “Let My people go

That they may serve Me in the wilderness

But indeed, until now you would not hear!

Thus says the Lord: "By this you shall know
That I am the Lord whom you shall fear
Behold, I will strike the waters which are in the river...
Even I will do so

With the rod that is in my hand
And they shall be turned to blood throughout the land

And the fish that are in the river shall die
The river shall stink,
And of the water of the river
The Egyptians will loathe to drink

Then the Lord spoke to Moses, "Say to Aaron
'Take your rod and stretch out your hand
Over the waters of Egypt - their streams, rivers, ponds
And over all their pools of water throughout the land

That they may become blood, and there shall be blood
Throughout all the land of Egypt,
Both in buckets of wood and pitchers of stone, an overwhelming flood

And Moses and Aaron did, just as the Lord commanded so
So he lifted up the rod and struck the waters

That were in the river, in the sight of Pharaoh

And in the sight of his servants it was done

And all the waters that were in the river

Were turned to blood, of fresh water, there was none

The fish that were in the river died; the river stank

And the Egyptians could not, we understand

Drink the water of the river, of it no one drank

So there was blood throughout all of Egypt the land

Then the magicians of Egypt did so

With their enchantments, a lie they spread

And grew hard the heart of Pharaoh

And he did not heed them, as the Lord had said

And Pharaoh turned and into his house went

Neither was his heart moved by this event

So all the Egyptians dug all around

The river for water to drink

Thus they searched for water in the ground

Which would not be foul and stink

Because they could not drink the water of the river
In it was a plague, of whom the Lord was the Giver

And seven days passed according to the word
After the river was struck by the Lord

This is the first terrible plague upon Egypt the land
But nine more will come because of Pharaoh's hard heart
It is a lesson for us to hear and understand
And in our own lives, to make a new start

Let us soften our hearts to the word of the Lord
So that to Him we will be acceptable, each of us
And to the cross let our eyes look toward Remembering always the work of Jesus

Yes, O God, keep us on the path that is true
May we keep our hearts soft, and be pleasing to you

And some day we know You will come again for us
We anxiously await Your return Lord Jesus

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 8:1-7 (THE PLAGUE OF FROGS PART I)

Introduction: The second plague, that of frogs, is what we'll be looking at this week and next week. It's filled with interesting tidbits from the Hebrew and we'll try to fit in every one of them that we can. But it's filled with marked rebellion by the leader of Egypt as well.

He was given an advanced warning of what was ahead and he chose to refuse to listen. When the frogs come, they will infest everything, even down to the kneading troughs where bread is made. The same is true for later in Israel's history.

God warned Pharaoh in advance that the very place where his bread was made would be defiled by this curse. Knowing this to be true because they had actually witnessed it, the Israelites were warned that their own kneading troughs would be cursed if they didn't pay heed to the word of the Lord.

They didn't and God's judgment came upon them...

Text Verse: "But it shall come to pass, if you do not obey the voice of the Lord your God, to observe carefully all His commandments and His statutes which I command you today, that all these curses will come upon you and overtake you: ... 17 "Cursed shall be your basket and your kneading bowl.

Deuteronomy 28:15 & 17

The word for kneading trough is only used four times in the Bible. It is used twice in the exodus account and twice in Deuteronomy - once in the promise of blessing for obedience, and once in the promise of a curse for disobedience. In Egypt, the kneading troughs of the Egyptians were cursed, but the kneading troughs of the Israelites were spared.

It was to be a sign to them and a warning. The two times in Deuteronomy let them know this is true. Oh, how good it would be for God's people to read the words of the Bible and to heed them! If only we would humble ourselves and be obedient to His superior word.

The way to do that is to read it, study it, cherish it, and apply it to our lives. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Let My People Go that They May Serve Me (verses 1-4)

1 And the Lord spoke to Moses,

The last verse of chapter 7 said, "And seven days passed after the Lord had struck the river." This is generally agreed to be tied to the time the waters were as blood, not specifically the time between the first and second plagues.

However long the time was between these plagues isn't said, but the Lord now again speaks to Moses his words of instruction. The second plague is coming, but before it does, He will give Pharaoh an opportunity to be released from it by heeding His word.

However, we will see that Pharaoh won't do so. The Lord knew this in advance and so it's a good time to contemplate the natural nature of these plagues, even if of divine origin. In other words, at least some of these plagues can be logically tied to one another as the result of the first plague, that of blood.

The river which turned to blood will naturally lead to the second plague of frogs. The second of frogs will naturally lead to the third plague of lice, etc. Though directed by God, He is using natural and normally occurring means to effect His desired outcome.

If this is so, and I believe it is, then it still shows us a few things. First, the miraculous nature of the plagues isn't diminished at all. The miracle of them is that Moses is able to pinpoint the moment the plagues would start or cease.

As soon as Aaron stretched out his staff, thus initiating the cycle, the plague of blood began. This will be the same for the starting of each of the plagues and for the ending of some of them as well. Moses even allows Pharaoh to choose the set time when the plague of the frogs would cease.

Second, even if the plagues follow naturally one after another, and were certain to happen whether Pharaoh yielded or not, it means that the Lord knew, in advance, that Pharaoh would harden his heart. He also knew when that would happen, and He knew when to instruct Moses concerning the next plague to come.

Regardless as to whether any of the plagues stem logically from a previous plague or not, the miracle of those plagues remains because of God's advanced knowledge of every detail that would come about in the unfolding of them. The time for the second plague has arrived, and so the Lord now speaks to Moses...

1 (con't) "Go to Pharaoh and say to him, 'Thus says the Lord: "Let My people go, that they may serve Me.

This is the standard demand that is made time and time again throughout the unfolding drama. It was made in Chapter 5, it was made in Chapter 7, it is made twice in this chapter, it will be made twice in Chapter 9, and once again in Chapter 10 as well.

Each time the Lord states this, He includes a reason. Once it was to hold a feast to Him in the wilderness. Once it was to sacrifice to Him. And six times, as in this verse, it is said so that they may serve Him. Though it is a demand, it is still a merciful offer because in the next verse he will explain the consequences if His request isn't granted.

The implication is that if he obeys, there will be no negative consequences. If he doesn't, then there will be. But the choice is left up to Pharaoh. This is how the Lord works. He speaks His word and then allows those who hear it to receive it or to reject it.

In Leviticus 26 and in Deuteronomy 28, He offered prosperity and blessing to Israel if they obeyed His laws. And in the same chapters, He notes the curses that would come upon them if they disobeyed. He does the same for us in the New Testament. His word is an offering of peace to those who hear and obey it, but it is an assurance of destruction to those who refuse to listen.

And this is how he expected His people to act as well. Israel was told to act this way towards the surrounding nations whom they encountered. See how the pattern of speaking to Pharaoh fits with His directions to Israel in Deuteronomy 20 -

“When you go near a city to fight against it, then proclaim an offer of peace to it. 11 And it shall be that if they accept your offer of peace, and open to you, then all the people who are found in it shall be placed under tribute to you, and serve you. 12 Now if the city will not make peace with you, but makes war against you, then you shall besiege it. 13 And when the Lord your God delivers it into your hands, you shall strike every male in it with the edge of the sword. 14 But the women, the little ones, the livestock, and all that is in the city, all its spoil, you shall plunder for yourself; and you shall eat the enemies' plunder which the Lord your God gives you."

Deuteronomy 20:10-14

Throughout the Bible in such an instance, just like the one here between Moses and Pharaoh, the people of a land suffer or are blessed because of the decisions of the leader. When the leader accepts such an offer, there is peace. When he refuses it, everyone alike suffers.

This is something we need to remember as well. There is no reason to assume that God works any differently today. For the nation who elects a godly leader, blessing can be expected. For those who elect people like we have in office now, we can only expect judgment to come with a strong and punishing hand.

Pharaoh will continue to learn this lesson; we will learn it soon...

2 But if you refuse to let them go, behold, I will smite all your territory with frogs.

An offer of mercy has been made and the results of the refusal are now stated. Pharaoh's choice will determine the result. As I said earlier, the plague of frogs is most probably a naturally occurring, logical result of the first plague of blood. The river died, including all the fish in it and the result is an explosion of frogs.

Because there was nothing to gobble up the tadpoles, the inevitable result is for frogs to multiply in an amazingly immense fashion. Despite the inevitable nature of the plague, the offer is still made to Pharaoh, thus showing the Lord's pre-existing knowledge of his hardened heart.

Knowing that a refusal would come from Pharaoh doesn't in any way demonstrate wrongdoing in the Lord. Nor does His knowing that we will refuse to obey His word demonstrate any wrongdoing towards us. We, like Pharaoh, are accountable for our actions towards His commands.

Pharaoh is now given his choice though. If he refuses to let Israel go, the land will be smitten with frogs. And in fact, the land will be smitten, just as the Lord already knows. He said as much already when He told Moses -

"And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply My signs and My wonders in the land of Egypt. 4 But Pharaoh will not heed you, so that I may lay My hand on Egypt and bring My armies and My people, the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt by great judgments. 5 And the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord, when I stretch out My hand on Egypt and bring out the children of Israel from among them." Exodus 7:3-5

Knowing in advance the heart of Pharaoh, all of the land of Egypt will suffer. In this verse, the term for "territory" is gebul. It properly means "borders." In other words, the land within the borders is what will be infested. Wherever people are under his domain, they will be plagued with frogs.

The word for "frogs" is tsephardea. It is a word that is only used in connection with this plague. It is used 11 times in this chapter and twice in the psalms, referring to this chapter, and nowhere else. It comes from an unused word meaning a swamp or a marsh-leaper, and hence it indicates a frog.

It is believed that the species of frog which would have come in the plague is known as the Rana Mosaica. It is a large frog which apparently resembles a toad and it crawls more than it leaps. What is probably one of the most dreadful aspects of this particular frog is that it croaks perpetually.

This plague is actually an attack on the false gods of Egypt because they regarded the frog as a symbol of the power of procreation. Their goddess Heqet was represented as having a frog head. Because they were considered sacred, no one could voluntarily kill one.

But even the involuntary killing of a supposedly divine animal could lead to punishment, including death. Therefore, such a plague would be a burden almost beyond imagination. Every step would have to be taken with care as they trudged through a sea of croaking noise.

This is, however, the natural result of worshipping the creature rather than the Creator. Anytime we place the creation, or any part of it, above Him the inevitable result will be upheaval in the natural order of things. When a state forbids the hunting of deer because environmental wackos think it's wrong, then the natural order is upset.

Suddenly deer take over and become an enormous problem on numerous levels. Not only do they become a physical nuisance, by impacting vegetation, soils, and other environmental features, they also become a health hazard because eventually the ticks and other parasites they carry can cause diseases to spread.

Both humans and livestock can be at risk because of increased numbers of them. Highways can have significant increases in accidents and death, and so on. One thing leads to another and there are always consequences for our dismissal of the Creator as we interact with His creation.

This second verse of chapter 8 is one of warning against such things, but by the time we reach verse six, the warning will have become a reality. Pharaoh's hard heart will see his false god of procreation become a life force which has procreated into a state of destruction.

3 So the river shall bring forth frogs abundantly,

The river which the Egyptians adored in worship, giving it undue divine honors, will be the source of their coming agony. The same river which had died from the plague of blood will come alive with a most horrendous plague. The frog embryos survived through that first plague, but the predators of those embryos didn't.

Frogs and other amphibians normally lay an immense number of eggs. This is done in order to counter the large range of predators that eat frog spawn and tadpoles. It is normally considered that at best not more than one in fifty of the eggs laid in a pond will actually make it to becoming a frog.

All of the rest will be eaten by predators such as fish and the like. However, it was seen in the first plague that all those natural predators died. Not only would one of many survive, almost all of them would. The availability of food and the lack of predators would render their birthrate at close to 100%.

The balance of nature had been upset and now there would be a reaction to it. Life which would otherwise have been measured through God's use of natural forces was to be unleashed in an almost violent upheaval.

The frogs will come out in such a large fashion that it will appear that the river will literally vomit them out. And frogs, like all life, will look for a little space to exist and prosper. Because the banks of the river couldn't hold them all, they would have to find other places to relax and croak away the hours...

3 (con't) which shall go up and come into your house,

Frogs generally stay in wet areas. They look for places that have reeds or grass. This is where the tasty frog treats would live. But the sheer volume of frogs would force them to separate according to the sound of the croak. With every near croak, they would look to move a hop or two further away.

As people stepped around them, trying not to squish their little gods, the frogs would continue to move along. Houses, which were previously devoid of frogs, would be filled with them as they looked for their own space to fill. The lack of the croak would tell them that there was free space for them to move in.

But the sheer numbers of them would mean that many would move in at the same time. Because all human life in Egypt is close to the Nile or the branches which the Nile flows into, there would be a mingling of the homes of the Egyptians with the millions of frogs looking for their own pad to croak the time away.

And so Pharaoh is told, in advance, that these noisy little gods would come even b'beitekha - into your house. Pharaoh's house may actually have had it worse off than many others because he surely would have lived close to the Nile so that he could rest his eyes upon its supposedly divine waters.

But the sight his eyes would soon behold would turn horrifying to him. His own home would become a den of loathsome, noisy, and indescribably numerous little gods that he would learn to hate rather than revere.

3 (con't) into your bedroom, u-bakhadar mishkavekha - into your room of bedding, namely your chamber. The very place where you found solace, intimacy with another, or rest will now become a place of constant commotion, a complete lack of intimacy, and a place where rest would be utterly impossible. "Because you have denied My people rest, you will be denied your rest."

The sheer number of frogs would mean that stepping like a man would be exchanged for sliding the feet like a snake. Even in the spot of what was normally the greatest ease would be the mental turmoil of noise and personal stress.

3 (con't) on your bed,

v'al mi'tatekha - and yes, even on your bed, be it a mat strewn out on the floor, or a divan or couch which was raised off the floor, your little frog gods will find you there and torment you. Not only would the noise be continuous as they croaked away incessantly, but to merely roll over while sleeping could cause the wrath of the frog-god to descend on you.

There would be terror in sleeping, terror in working, terror in any activity because of the possibility of squishing one's hope of eternal bliss and being consigned to eternal pain. Such is the life of one who worships the creation. Knocking on wood will quickly lose its appeal for the one whose knuckles fill with splinters as they realize the consequences of their actions.

3 (con't) into the houses of your servants, u-b'beit abadekha - I have asked that you allow Israel to come into the wilderness to serve me. If you deny this request, your servants will suffer the affliction of the plague. They will be so overcome with the frogs, that they will not be able to serve you.

Should you choose to deny Me what I request, I will ensure that you are also denied your service. When it becomes known that they have suffered because of you, their own hearts will harden towards you, just as your heart is hardened toward me.

It is an indication of divine reciprocity. And it will not be limited to Pharaoh's servants...

3 (con't) on your people,

u-b'ammekha - Yes, the people in your kingdom will suffer the consequences of your denying to let My people go. I have asked for their release, but if they are to continue to suffer under you, then your people will suffer from My hand.

3 (con't) into your ovens,

u-b'tannurekha - These ovens, or tannur, are basically small firepots or even portable earthenware furnaces. After bread was kneaded, it would be flattened out into a circular shape and hand pressed against the inside of the oven. It would bake while adhering to the wall and then be removed to enjoy.

This type of oven is actually still used in parts of the world today. The same word for them is used to describe the smoking oven which represented the presence of God in the vision Abraham beheld in Genesis 15 when the covenant with him was made.

In Isaiah and Malachi, this oven represents divine judgment. In Lamentations, it represents destructive famine. The parallels to this account are obvious. God's presence would be felt through the plague. The ovens, being filled with frogs, couldn't be used to make bread, thus it is a metaphor for His divine judgment. And this judgment would then result in hunger because of the lack of bread.

Pharaoh would have to consider all of this before making his decision to accept or reject the demand of Yehovah.

3 (con't) and into your kneading bowls.

u-b'misharotekha - What is worse than not being able to eat bread from the ovens is that even the kneading bowls would be defiled. The mishereth was a small household vessel of wood and shaped like a trough where flour would be mixed with water. Normally, there would be a piece of already-fermented dough as well so that the yeast would spread to the entire new batch of dough.

These same bowls will be mentioned again in Exodus 12 as the people prepare to leave Egypt. They were small enough to be wrapped in a person's clothing and carried right on the shoulder. In the case of the plague, the slimy frogs would even get into these most-personal of household appliances.

They would ooze their slime into them or maybe relieve themselves as they sat croaking in them. The Egyptian culture was known especially for its exceptional cleanliness. Such a plague would be as loathsome and revolting to them as just about anything we could envision today.

Just imagine the thought of being plagued with such slimy, noisy creatures that were just small enough to get into everything and to be a hindrance to any sort of normal mobility. But they were also creatures which couldn't be killed because they were considered divine.

Imagine trying to open a door or do whatever normal work needed to be done! You would fear that you might crush one of your little gods in the process! The very religion that they espoused would become as loathsome to them as the creatures themselves were. As the Pulpit commentary wisely notes -

"Their animal-worship was thus proved absurd and ridiculous. They were obliged to respect the creatures which they hated - to preserve the animals they would fain have swept from the face of the earth." Pulpit Commentary

4 And the frogs shall come up on you, on your people, and on all your servants."'"

Although it isn't explicitly stated here as it will be in later plagues, the words of verse 1 imply that the plague will only fall on the Egyptians. In verse 1, He said, "Let My people go that they may serve me." Now it is repeated that the frogs would come upon "your people, and on all your servants."

An implicit distinction is being made. And so not only would the homes and all of the home life associated with the homes of the Egyptians be infested, but even the people themselves. The frogs would be so numerous that as people slept, they would crawl right up on them, maybe stopping on an arm or a cheek for a little rest.

As they took their baths, the frogs would join in for a swim. As they ate their food, the frogs would be there ready to crawl onto the plate or into the cup. The Lord has taken this minute-sized creature and turned it into a giant-sized problem.

Adam Clarke notes that -

"In the present instance he shows the greatness of his power by making an animal, devoid of every evil quality, the means of a terrible affliction to his enemies." Adam Clarke

The frogs would have become offensive to the eyes, harsh on the ears, grating to the weary mind, and repulsive to the touch as they brushed against them, stepped on them, or had them hopping around on them in the dark of the night.

A little rest and a little ease as I lay me down

But it never comes: I fear rolling over on my bed

If I do, I may squash a god! Oh how heaven would frown!

All these terrible thoughts keep running through my head

What can I do? Nature has taken a stand against me

The very things I worship have become my enemy

If there were but one God, the Creator of all

Then I wouldn't have to serve the creation, wouldn't that be nice!

On such a marvelous God, surely I would call

It would be great because after these frogs will come the lice

Oh No!

II. Stretch Out Your Hand with Your Rod (verses 5 & 6)

5 Then the Lord spoke to Moses,

What is unstated, but implied in verse 5 is that Pharaoh declined the merciful offer of Yehovah. He may not have believed Him at all, or He may have actually believed Him, but misjudged the scope of the plague.

No matter what is true, Yehovah now speaks to Moses once again. The words will contain the divine direction to strike the mighty land of Egypt with a sorrowful plague for a second time...

5 (con't) "Say to Aaron,

In Exodus 4:16, the Lord said this to Moses about Aaron -

"So he shall be your spokesman to the people. And he himself shall be as a mouth for you, and you shall be to him as God." Exodus 4:16

As has already happened, and as will continue to occur, God speaks to Moses words which are to be relayed on to Aaron. He is the spokesman, but he is also the one who is often tasked with assuming the action to be taken as well. Such is the case with the second plague...

5 (con't) 'Stretch out your hand with your rod over the streams, over the rivers, and over the ponds, and cause frogs to come up on the land of Egypt.'"

The same bodies of water are mentioned here that are mentioned in Exodus 7:19 - the streams, rivers, and ponds. However, there is one difference. In 7:19, it also included miqveh or "pools" which we noted were probably manmade and used for storing water.

Thus we have an amazing confirmation of the surety of the truth of this passage. The one place that tadpoles wouldn't flourish is not mentioned. These cisterns would have been kept clean for healthy drinking water and so frog spawn and tadpoles wouldn't find them suitable habitats.

And so when the Lord directs the rod to be stretched out over the waters, the miqveh are left out of the description. Even the scholars and commentators that I read for this plague missed this, showing that it isn't something readily noticeable, but once it is seen, it is a sure sign of the truth of the account.

How can it be that people so quickly dismiss the word of God! It is an inexhaustible source of wisdom and a reliable witness to what it puts forth. And yet so many just ignore it without giving it due consideration.

The miqveh aside though, all of the naturally flowing waters of Egypt will now bring forth frogs. But the miracle isn't the frogs so much as the timing of their coming. The frogs are a natural result of the first plague and they were sure to come, but the timing of them coming is right as the word of the Lord directs Moses to have Aaron speak and act.

This is the marvel of what has come about. It is natural enough to further harden Pharaoh's heart, but it is also unusual enough to warn him that the Divine hand is certainly behind the occurrence. He will see enough to understand, but not understand enough in order to act.

6 So Aaron stretched out his hand over the waters of Egypt,

As instructed, Aaron complied. The hand holds the rod, and the rod symbolizes the power of God with which to effect the miracle. At the stretching forth of the rod, the frogs heed the divine call and move to this inner urge instilled by their Creator. It beckons them to the great display of which they have been designed for and destined to participate in...

6 (con't) and the frogs came up and covered the land of Egypt.

It's funny how people who don't believe the Bible never argue that the plagues didn't happen. Instead, they always try to find ways of explaining them from a natural rather than a divine perspective. By doing this, they show that they implicitly believe the story to be credible, at least from a historical perspective.

But even if there is someone who was to say this simply never occurred, all they need to do is look elsewhere in history to show that it very well could have. The Pulpit Commentary provides us with this record of the past -

"In Paeonia and Dardania," says Phoenias, a disciple of Aristotle, "there appeared once suddenly such a number of frogs, that they filled the houses and the streets. Therefore - as killing them, or shutting the doors, was of no avail; as even the vessels were full of them, the water infected, and all food uneatable; as they could scarcely set their foot upon the ground without treading on heaps of them, and as they were vexed by the smell of the great numbers which died - they fled from that region altogether."

And so we have an extra-biblical account which shows us the same type of occurrence has happened in the past. The difference is that the biblical account presupposes that it is an act of God and that it is directed by Him to meet His purposes at the exact moment that He proclaims it will occur.

I can't wait for dinner and for a moment these frogs to forget

I wonder what the wife has prepared for me to eat

Before I sit down, I'd better wash my hands

And then check that there aren't any frogs in my seat

What is that you cooked, my dear, it sure smells nice

How did you fare while cooking with all these frogs around

Mmmmm, that is yummy, just the right amount of spice

I just wish we could get some peace from that horrid croaking sound

These bones sure are little, but tasty is the meat

Wait, this can't be... did you cook us frog stew?

Now we will never get to heaven and paradise so sweet

My dear, what is this thing that to me you did do?

You have cooked our god

No heavenly streets will we trod!

III. False Signs and Lying Wonders (verse 7)

7 And the magicians did so with their enchantments, and brought up frogs on the land of Egypt.

This verse actually tickles me because the full force of the plague hadn't yet arrived and Pharaoh didn't see all that was coming in the hours ahead. But in order to demonstrate that this wasn't beyond their capabilities, the magicians of Egypt brought up frogs as well, thus only exacerbating the scope of the dilemma they would face.

What they probably did was something similar to the rabbit in the hat trick of magicians today. They were able to make frogs appear supposedly at will and thus demonstrate that they were effective workers on behalf of Egypt's gods. However, any decent magician can not only make rabbits appear, but they can also make them disappear.

But the magicians of Egypt couldn't undo the great plague of the Lord. Thus, even though they could supposedly replicate His miracle on some smaller scale, they had no ability to undo the work which He had wrought.

For a second time though, their actions are enough to get Pharaoh to consider that Yehovah was like his own false gods. For him, it will be a stinky and cumbersome lesson that he will have to endure for a season. But it will be a lesson that he will also fail to take to heart.

This second plague and its results are not unlike what is noted in Revelation. In the 16th chapter, we read this -

"And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs coming out of the mouth of the dragon, out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. 14 For they are spirits of demons, performing signs, which go out to the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty." Revelation 16:13-14

The frogs of the magicians of Egypt became a false sign and a lying wonder to Pharaoh. In the same way, there will be false signs and lying wonders which will be accomplished by unclean spirits that appear like frogs in the end times.

It should be noted here that this is the last sign or wonder accomplished by the Lord through Moses and Aaron which can be copied by the magicians of Pharaoh. There was the rod which became a serpent; there was the water which turned to blood; and there are the frogs which are brought forth.

Just as there were three unholy replicas of the Lord's work, there will also be three unclean spirits which come forth in the end times. Three were sufficient to harden Pharaoh just enough to keep him on his wayward course, and three will be sufficient to work their evil in bringing about the final great battle in the end times.

If you are like me, then you probably feel that those end times are just around the corner. All of the signs of the end are here. The world has turned from the true message of God, and even His church has gone far, far off course. The word is no longer held in high esteem and this world is a cesspool of that which is vile.

Jesus is probably coming soon. When He does, He will only be coming for those who have received Him as Savior. For those left behind, a terrible time of trial, pictured by these plagues of Egypt, will come on a global scale. It is my hope that you'll be on that heavenly train out of here.

In order to do so, let me tell you what you need to know...

Closing Verse: “Now it shall come to pass, if you diligently obey the voice of the Lord your God, to observe carefully all His commandments which I command you today, that the Lord your God will set you high above all nations of the earth.
2 And all these blessings shall come upon you and overtake you, because you obey the voice of the Lord your God: ... 5 “Blessed shall be your basket and your kneading bowl. Deuteronomy 28:1, 2 & 5

Next Week: Exodus 8:8-15 (The Plague of Frogs, Part II)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Plague of Frogs

And the Lord spoke to Moses this word

“Go to Pharaoh and say to him with My authority

“Thus says the Lord:

“Let My people go, that they may serve Me

But if you refuse to let them go, behold

I will smite all your territory with frogs

Unless you do as I have to you told

So the river shall bring forth frogs abundantly

Which shall go up and come into your house, as you will see

Into your bedroom, on your bed
Yes, they will be there when you try to lay your head
Into the houses of your servants, as I have said
Even on your people, they won't stop
Into your ovens, where you bake your bread
And into your kneading bowls, they will hop

And the frogs shall come up on you
On your people, and on all your servants too
Then the Lord spoke to Moses this word
“Say to Aaron, ‘Stretch out your hand
With your rod over the streams, as you have heard
Over the rivers, and over the ponds throughout the land
And cause frogs to come up on Egypt the land
Do this now just as I command

So Aaron stretched out his hand
Over the waters of Egypt,
And the frogs came up and covered Egypt the land

And the magicians did so with their enchantments
And brought up frogs on the land of Egypt
And it was through these accomplishments

And by these lying wonders that his heart was tripped
Surely God looks upon each heart
Knowing whether it will be soft or not
He knows which will desire a new start
And for that one a he has reserved a heavenly spot

The choice is up to each one of us
And God will lead the heart as it is so disposed
He will lead it toward life in Jesus
Or away from it, if that heart is hard and closed

So let your heart be open and tender to His call
Allow Him in and let Him work salvation in you
And upon you His grace and mercy shall fall
What a God! What a friend! Ever faithful and true

We praise You, O Lord our God
Our hearts sing joyous hallelujahs to You!
And they shall forever more as we trod
In Your glorious light when, behold, You make all things new

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 8:8-15 (THE PLAGUE OF FROGS PART II)

Throughout the Bible, promises are made. We call them prophecies. The Lord says He will do something, or that some unusual thing will come about, and sure enough, the Bible records those things when they actually happen. We call that "fulfilled prophecy."

The Bible is so full of fulfilled prophecy that it simply can't be ignored. When God speaks of the future in certain terms, or when He speaks of the future as already accomplished, it means that He must be in control of what will happen.

It's not that He can merely see the logical outcome of a set of parameters, like a computer calculating what will occur based on known information. Rather, He knows the outcome because He is already there at the outcome. He is outside of time and in control of time.

Because of this, He knows the end from the beginning to the minutest detail. But of course, people will argue that much of the Bible was written after the prophecies were fulfilled, not before. Thus man has simply inserted God into his own manipulated writings.

But for every such argument, God is always there to vindicate His word once again. The Dead Sea scrolls took care of much of that speculation, at least concerning the coming of the Messiah. And sure enough, time has taken care of more.

The writings of many of the Old Testament prophets have come true in our lifetime with the return of Israel to the land of Israel, and with the return of Jerusalem to Israel's control. More prophecies are lining up before our eyes daily as well. It is an exciting age in which to live.

Text Verse: "'Then you shall know that I, the Lord, have spoken it and performed it,' says the Lord." Ezekiel 37:14

The Lord gives us prophecy so that when His words come true, we have a sure foundation for our faith in Him. Who can not look at the hundreds of prophecies of Christ which were fulfilled in Him and not be amazed. The odds against them all being fulfilled in Jesus are so immense that there isn't enough space in the universe to hold them all if each were a copper penny.

And as more prophecies come true concerning Israel, the ending of the church age and what that entails, and the anticipated return of Christ for His church, we have all the more reason to be thankful for the age in which we live. Our hope in His word is rewarded with strengthened faith and even greater hope.

But there are those who see the word of the Lord performed and dismiss it for whatever crazy reason. Their hearts are hard and they harden a little bit more with each rejection of the obvious. Once again, we will see this happen today in the life of Pharaoh.

Let's not be like that guy! Instead, let's put our hope and trust in God's superior word. It is alive and active and sure; a source of hope. Pursuing it will certainly lead to great reward. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. There is None Like the Lord Our God (verses 8-11)

8 Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said,

Here in verse 8 will be the very first sign of Pharaoh's conceding to the fact that the plague of Egypt is both beyond his power and the power of one of the very gods worshipped in Egypt. They certainly petitioned their frog-god, Heqet, to relieve the burden of the plague, but their prayers, offerings, and sacrifices went unheeded.

The very thing that had been denied to Yehovah, which was the request for the people to go and sacrifice to Him in the wilderness, had certainly been offered to Heqet, but Yehovah proved stronger than this false god. The lack of offerings to Him provoked His anger while their offerings to her went unanswered.

Because of this, Pharaoh calls for Moses and Aaron to appear before him. Yehovah has now triumphed over the second false god of Egypt - first the Nile and now Heqet.

8 (con't) "Entreat the Lord that He may take away the frogs from me and from my people;

Not only had their petitions to Heqet been unanswered, the crafts of the magicians had failed as well. They were able to make frogs appear, but they were impotent in making them disappear. And so now he is asking Moses and Aaron for relief.

In the plague of blood, there was no such appeal because it probably didn't affect him a great deal. He would have had abundant supplies of water in storage at his palace, he could have stayed upwind of the stink of the dead fish, and the plague quickly subsided, it being only seven days in duration.

But, regardless of the length of this plague, he suffered equally with his own people. He would have been inundated with the frogs in his palace, the kneading troughs of his own bread would have been defiled, and he would have heard the constant croaking. Such an incessant noise would have driven him close to insanity.

In what he says to Moses and Aaron are words which showed that he had now learned something he once didn't know. In Exodus 5, we saw this exchange -

"Afterward Moses and Aaron went in and told Pharaoh, 'Thus says the Lord God of Israel: 'Let My people go, that they may hold a feast to Me in the wilderness.'

2 And Pharaoh said, 'Who is the Lord, that I should obey His voice to let Israel go? I do not know the Lord, nor will I let Israel go.'" Exodus 5:1, 2

At that time, and in one combined statement, he made three distinct and arrogant proclamations - 1) Who is the Lord? 2) Who is the Lord that I should obey His voice? And, 3) Who is the Lord that I should let Israel go?

That has all changed as we see here, and as we will see in the rest of this verse. The change in his first proclamation is evident right now. At that meeting in chapter 5, He asked "Who is Yehovah?" After this, he then said, "I do not know Yehovah."

He now knows of Him as is evidenced by the words, "Entreat Yehovah." He has been introduced to Him and he has conceded that only He can help with the dire situation he faces. And so his entreaty is specific. It is that - "He may take away the frogs from me and from my people."

His attitude is similar to what Job said after he had been introduced to the magnificence of the Lord. In Job 42, we read this -

"I have heard of You by the hearing of the ear,
But now my eye sees You." Job 42:5

The surpassing greatness of this second plague has brought Pharaoh to the point of desperation. But unlike Job who saw the majesty and had reverence in His heart for the Source of that majesty, Pharaoh has merely humbled himself out of a state of incompetence and of fear.

He is incompetent to undo what has been done and he is fearful that if it continued, he would face utter ruin. As the Geneva Bible says about this -

"Not love but fear causes the infidels to seek God." Geneva Bible

This is true. But a fear of God, unless it leads to love of God, will once again be replaced with hardness of the heart toward God. We will see this as the record of this second plague continues.

In this, we can discern that preaching about the torments of hell can actually have the opposite effect of that for which it is intended unless it is followed up with an understanding of the sovereignty of God as well as the grace and mercy of God. These, when combined with a soft and yielding heart, will bring about change in the man.

8 (con't) and I will let the people go, that they may sacrifice to the Lord."

The second two of the arrogant proclamations are dealt with here. They were, "Who is the Lord that I should obey His voice?" and "Who is the Lord that I should let Israel go?" He has now conceded to both of them as well.

Unfortunately, the vacillating condition of Pharaoh's heart will only lead him to a further hardening and greater obstinacy in the time ahead. But this was not unknown to the Lord and He will use it to multiply His signs and wonders in the land of Egypt.

Relief! This is what I beg of you

These frogs have me at my wits' end

I will do as you ask of me to do

Please remove them from me, my Hebrew friend

I have had no sleep; the croaking is driving me nuts

I cannot take a bath, because the frogs jump in too

Not to be too graphic, but they now sicken my guts

What once was a god to me, I now know only belongs in a zoo

The Lord is greater than these horrifying frogs

He created them and this I now avow

And he created elephants and cats and dogs

I just missed this fact in the past somehow

9 And Moses said to Pharaoh, "Accept the honor

His words to Pharaoh are hitpaer alai - "glory over me." It's a confusing phrase to scholars and the exact meaning is debated. It isn't repeated in Scripture, but a near form of the same phrase is found in Judges 7:2 which says -

"And the Lord said to Gideon, 'The people who are with you are too many for Me to give the Midianites into their hands, lest Israel claim glory for itself against Me, saying, 'My own hand has saved me.'"' Judges 7:2

What it seems to mean first and foremost is, "I submit to you the honor of the decision." First, I have gloried over you through the Lord's display of power. Now I am offering you a chance to glory over me. I am returning the favor."

"If I disappoint, I will be subject to you, just as you have to this point been subject to the Lord." It could be viewed as someone speaking to another who supposedly feels superior, in the sense that the he is granted the decision to be made.

But at the same time, there is the implication that by accepting the honor which will be bestowed, it very well may be that the Lord will be further vindicated in His actions. It is then both a grant of favor, and yet a renewed challenge by the granter of the favor.

When Satan wanted to test Job, it was with the intent of proving that Job would yield to his attacks. The Lord granted him the opportunity and Satan failed. In a greater picture, Satan came to test Jesus with the intent of keeping for all eternity the earth that he possessed. The challenge was granted and Satan failed.

And Satan continues to attack mankind, sifting them as wheat, but those who are in Christ cannot be removed from His grasp. In the end, the Lord is always vindicated in His actions. Even when Satan is granted opportunity to determine an outcome in which he may prevail, he always ends as the loser.

9 (con't) of saying when I shall intercede

The word for "when" is l'matay - "for when." It is a direct offer to Pharaoh concerning his preference of timing. This may seem like a matter of linguistic hair splitting, but Pharaoh's answer in verse 10 will repeat the same preposition, for.

Moses' offer throws all of the honor of the decision on Pharaoh and all of the burden of the action on the Lord. The intent is to make a marked impression upon Pharaoh that nothing is impossible with God. It is a grant to attempt to undermine the Lord's capabilities, or a challenge to allow them to be exalted.

This is very similar to the offer made to Hezekiah, king of Israel. In 2 Kings 20, Hezekiah was sick and facing death, but the Lord promised to heal him and grant him 15 more years of life. After that promise, we see the following exchange -

"And Hezekiah said to Isaiah, 'What is the sign that the Lord will heal me, and that I shall go up to the house of the Lord the third day?'

9 Then Isaiah said, 'This is the sign to you from the Lord, that the Lord will do the thing which He has spoken: shall the shadow go forward ten degrees or go backward ten degrees?'

10 And Hezekiah answered, 'It is an easy thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees; no, but let the shadow go backward ten degrees.'

11 So Isaiah the prophet cried out to the Lord, and He brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down on the sundial of Ahaz."

2 Kings 20:8-11

We are seeing the same type of grant and challenge now between Moses and Pharaoh. Thus, the intent of this offer is that it is to be a sign to Pharaoh. If it is a sign, then he is to pay heed to the sign. Signs, when given by the Lord, are meant for this purpose.

9 (con't) for you, for your servants, and for your people, to destroy the frogs from you and your houses,

The offer is all-inclusive. There will be complete relief from the plague, not only for Pharaoh, but for his servants and his people. It is to be noted again that these categories are placed in contradistinction to the Lord and the people of Israel.

Pharaoh was considered a god to his people. He had servants, and he had his people. Moses is showing that they were all equally affected because the request of the Lord, along with the plight of His servants and people, had been previously ignored. Because of the promise by Pharaoh to the Lord, and on behalf of his servants and his people, the action would be taken.

9 (con't) that they may remain in the river only.”

As an added grace, the frogs of the river would continue to live and not be affected by the hand of the Lord. The horrendous croaking sounds of the plague would be replaced with the sweet croaking sounds of natural order. The cycle would return to normalcy and river life would continue on with, hopefully, a new understanding of Who controlled it.

10 So he said, “Tomorrow.”

The word is l'makhar - It is not to-morrow, but "for to-morrow." The wording is precise. Imagine the teacher saying, "Tomorrow there will be a test." Although similar, it doesn't carry the same weight as, "Prepare yourselves for tomorrow, when there will be a test."

In Numbers 11, the same expression is used to pinpoint a specific time for an action to come about. There it says -

"Consecrate yourselves for tomorrow, and you shall eat meat..."

Numbers 11:18

Moses wasn't asking the people to consecrate themselves the next day, but to consecrate themselves for the next day. The specificity matters because any misunderstanding could then be misinterpreted by Pharaoh or be used as an excuse to say that the Lord didn't act as stated.

So the question is, "With such a horrifying plague, why didn't he ask that it be ended on that same day rather than the next." The specificity of the wording answers the question. If Pharaoh still thought that purely natural means were involved, he may have suspected that they had already started to die.

If this was true and Moses knew it, then they might all die naturally before tomorrow. If so, then he would have an argument against Yehovah by claiming that the end of the plague was actually natural and not divine.

However, if it was divine, he didn't want it carried on to the third day because it would be one more day of grief than he could bear. But we can still suppose that the frogs dying off is natural anyway, which is likely. There wasn't sufficient food for them and they were out of their natural habitat.

The inevitable truth is that they would eventually die. But the inescapable truth is that Moses granted Pharaoh the final decision for any day on which they were to die. Therefore, even if natural, the miraculous is still tied up in the story. The foreknowledge of the Lord, and His power over the entire situation, is perfectly displayed.

10 (con't) And he said, "Let it be according to your word, kidbarekha l'maan - "according to your word; to that intent." He has been granted the right to choose and the choice of his words will be realized as he has spoken. And there is a reason for this...

10 (con't) that you may know that there is no one like the Lord our God.

Moses speaks for the Hebrew people, the people of Israel. And this God, who is the God of this people, has a name - Yehovah. The purpose of fulfilling Pharaoh's words exactly as they have been spoken is to exalt that name above all others.

This is exactly repeated in Isaiah 45. There he challenges the people to consider His words. When He speaks to them in advance of something happening, and then it happens, it is to prove that He alone is God and that there is none other. Here are His words which were spoken to a people who had forgotten this lesson -

"Tell and bring forth your case;
Yes, let them take counsel together.
Who has declared this from ancient time?
Who has told it from that time?
Have not I, the Lord?
And there is no other God besides Me,

A just God and a Savior;
There is none besides Me." Isaiah 45:21

The Lord is a jealous God and what He does is to secure His place of honor among His creatures.

11 And the frogs shall depart from you, from your houses, from your servants, and from your people.

The words here almost repeat the order of the words of verse 9, but with an unusual difference. Unlike verse 9, the houses are mentioned before the servants and the people. Verse 9 concerned the relief of the people and then how that relief would come about.

This verse shows the order of that relief, giving priority to Pharaoh first, and then the logical order of having them departing from the houses, and then from the servants, and then the people. It makes sense when one looks at how the frogs would be disposed of after they died.

Pharaoh would be the first completely freed from the plague as his servants cleaned his area. Later, the people would finish the work as the entire Nile region would slowly be cleansed of the carcasses. This is a minute detail, but it is an exacting one.

11 (con't) They shall remain in the river only."

Again, the grace of the frogs remaining in the river is mentioned. But there are a few things that this repetition could be hinting at. First, It was to show them that the Lord could again multiply the frogs if he so desired.

Secondly, the friendly sound of their croaks from the Nile would be a call to remembrance of the plague that had transpired. And third, that same croaking was a reminder that the Lord, not the frogs, was the true Deity to be worshipped.

Tomorrow it will come about
Just you wait and you will see
The frogs will be gone, no doubt
As you have spoken, it shall surely be
They will be gone from your house
They will no longer afflict your servants too
They will be as scarce as the field mouse
Only in the river will they come into your view
The plague will end on the morrow
As surely as the word has been spoken
Soon from these frogs you will have no more sorrow
What has been said shall be to you a divine token

II. And the Frogs Died (verses 12-14)

12 Then Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh.

It is to be noted that before the action taken in the rest of the verse is given, we are told that Moses and Aaron first went out from Pharaoh. Pharaoh has been told that his spoken word will come about, but it seems to be that this was granted without any prior approval or command by the Lord.

If so, Moses acted in strong faith by speaking as he did in such a bold promise. And to back up his faith, he will now act out that faith in petition...

12 (con't) And Moses cried out to the Lord concerning the frogs which He had brought against Pharaoh.

The word here for "and cried out" is v'yitssaq. It is an especially strong phrase which shows a truly heartfelt intent. When Cain killed his brother, the Lord, using the same word, said "What have you done? The voice of your brother's blood cries out to Me from the ground."

The same expression was used when Esau realized Jacob had deceived his father and stolen his blessing. And when there was the great famine of Egypt during the life of Joseph, the people cried out to Pharaoh for food. These and other such examples show more than just a casual petition, but a truly heartfelt cry of anguish.

This cry was "concerning the frogs." These words in Hebrew are al davar ha'tsephardeim - "over (the) word of the frogs." The word of the Lord through Moses had brought the frogs upon the land, and Pharaoh had spoken the word as to when the frogs would be gone. Now the word needed to be fulfilled.

Moses' cry then is in earnest expectation that the word would be fulfilled lest dishonor, rather than honor, come about. Should the word fail, it would be a triumph for Pharaoh and a disgrace to the name of Yehovah and to His messenger Moses.

Finally, this verse notes that the plague was "the frogs which He had brought against Pharaoh." Verse 6 showed us that the frogs covered all the land of Egypt and yet it was only said to be against Pharaoh. This is another of the multitude of reminders that the Bible gives us concerning leadership of a nation or a people.

When a king is disobedient in the Bible, all of the people under his authority receive the judgment of the king's actions. This is an inescapable truth which should leave those of us in this nation horrified at the judgment we deserve and which must surely be coming.

We have voluntarily elected a moral miniscule to lead our land. And he will lead it into uncharted waters of judgment and destruction through his vile actions. And how much worse will it be in the tribulation when the antichrist himself rises to power.

The people of the world will be led by the devil's representative and they will receive the devil's punishment for their choice of leader. I pray that you will escape this before it happens by calling on Jesus to keep you from that terrible time which is probably not too far off from now.

13 So the Lord did according to the word of Moses.

The Geneva Bible has an interesting take on these words. They say, "In things of this life God often hears the prayers of the just for the ungodly." This is true, and God does hear the prayer of a righteous man on behalf of the unrighteous.

But more appropriate to this verse is that the Lord heard Moses and defended both the integrity of His own name, and that of Moses, before Pharaoh. This was less of a petition for mercy on Pharaoh than it was for the glory of the Lord to be revealed and the honor of the Lord to be maintained.

In both, the Lord met those tenets at the spoken word of Moses. Thus His surpassing greatness is seen in the ending of this horrifying plague upon Pharaoh, and the land of Pharaoh.

13 (con't) And the frogs died out of the houses, out of the courtyards, and out of the fields.

The death of the frogs furnished a clear and sure proof that these were real frogs, not just demons or apparitions appearing as frogs to afflict the people. It thus implicitly showed the Egyptians, with all certainty, that the Lord controlled nature.

It secondly proved that the supposed divine nature of the Frog, was not divine at all. Rather, it was subject to the word and direction of the Lord. The Frog may or may not have continued to be revered in Egypt or elsewhere, but its effectiveness as a deity was once and forever proven to be a false hope.

Thus, other than two references to this plague of frogs in the psalms, they will never be mentioned again. The Lord has proven the Frog a false god, and His judgment upon it is recorded for all succeeding generations to heed and to believe.

14 They gathered them together in heaps,

The Hebrew here is in the superlative form, vayitsberu otam khomarim khomarim - "and piled them heaps (upon) heaps." This was no run of the mill infestation of frogs, but a truly immense quantity that is strikingly revealed in these words.

Considering the words here, and the fact that surely many frogs had already perished through being squished or scrunched, or having been eaten by predators or even adventurous Egyptians, those left behind on the last day were still more numerous than words could adequately describe without exceptional verbiage being employed.

The plague of frogs was a shockingly devastating plague upon both people and land.

14 (con't) and the land stank.

Ellicott notes that, "God, who knew the heart of Pharaoh, and its insincerity, or at any rate its changefulness, took the plague of frogs away in a manner that made its removal almost as bad as its continuance."

In other words, it was a nice ending touch for Pharaoh to consider. His heart was hard and it was not directed to the things of God. The loathsome stench of death would remain in his nose and in his memory even after the frogs were wholly cleared away.

But in the mean time, there was no place in all the land that he could go without being nauseatingly reminded of his recklessness before the Lord.

As an interesting parallel to consider, the last time the word baash, or "stink" was used was in Exodus 5. When the less-than-faithful Hebrew scribes were scathingly rebuked by Pharaoh, they met Moses and Aaron and said this to them -

“Let the Lord look on you and judge, because you have made us abhorrent in the sight of Pharaoh and in the sight of his servants, to put a sword in their hand to kill us.” Exodus 5:21

Those same faithless Hebrews could now look on the devastation of the Lord through this plague and know what it truly meant to stink in the sight of Pharaoh. It was a stench which would cause the face to scrunch, the eyes to water, and the stomach to wrench.

Such a stench has come into my nose
Piles and piles, heaps and heaps
What we thought were gods were not, so it goes
All these dead frogs just give us the creeps

We can't wait till those Hebrews are gone
Won't that day be wonderfully nice?
Pharaoh has promised to let them go
The only thing worse than this would be a plague of lice

No need to worry about that now
All they have to do is pack up and head on out
We will get along fine without them somehow
In fact, when they leave, we'll give a happy shout

Surely Pharaoh's mind is made up this time
Really no need to even make this verse rhyme

III. The Hardening of Pharaoh's Heart (verse 15)

15 But when Pharaoh saw that there was relief,

In these words is a certain pun. The word for "relief" is ha'revakhah or literally "a taking of breath." We would say, "A breathing space." Once the frogs had been disposed of through burying, burning, or decay, the stink disappeared with them.

There would once again be deep breaths of the pleasantries of the land, and there would be a slow departing of the memory concerning the horrific stench which once permeated even the closed doors of Pharaoh's inner chamber. And with such relief came something else; something not unexpected...

15 (con't) he hardened his heart and did not heed them,

The plague of the frogs was bad, but to this point nothing had occurred which would change the inner workings of the man called Pharaoh. He was predisposed towards arrogance and willingly turned away from the things of God.

His already-hardening heart was no less dull or insensitive now than it was before. Rather, it was becoming more so. With the removal of the frogs and the clearing of the air, he probably figured that the Lord had run his course in miracles and would afflict him no more. In order to test this theory, he refused to heed what he had experienced.

Isaiah speaks exactly of such a person. He is one who is wicked and stubborn and refuses to see when grace has been bestowed -

"Let grace be shown to the wicked,
Yet he will not learn righteousness;
In the land of uprightness he will deal unjustly,
And will not behold the majesty of the Lord." Isaiah 26:10

15 (fin) as the Lord had said.

ka'asher dibber Yehovah - as spoke the Lord. These words are an exact repeat of Exodus 7:13 after Pharaoh had rejected the miracle of the rod being changed into a serpent. There is a difference in the overall verses though. In 7:13, the hardening of Pharaoh's heart was ascribed to an action of the heart itself.

In this verse, it is ascribed to an action of Pharaoh. He has willingly hardened his heart through stubborn disobedience. Once again, we see that the heart is hardened by the active will of the possessor of that heart.

The Lord may have prompted Pharaoh to hardening, but the fault and the sentence for the action remains solely with Pharaoh. Paul shows us this truth in Romans chapter 2 -

"But we know that the judgment of God is according to truth against those who practice such things. 3 And do you think this, O man, you who judge those practicing such things, and doing the same, that you will escape the judgment of God? 4 Or do you despise the riches of His goodness, forbearance, and longsuffering, not knowing that the goodness of God leads you to repentance? 5 But in accordance with your hardness and your impenitent heart you are treasuring up for yourself wrath in the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, 6 who 'will render to each one according to his deeds.'" Romans 2:2-6

God, knowing Pharaoh's already arrogant attitude, used it against him in order to demonstrate His surpassing greatness. There are yet 8 more plagues to be seen, each which will build upon the next as the Lord prepares Israel for their great exodus from Egypt and to His holy mountain.

Let each of us surrender ourselves to the offered grace of God which is poured out upon us. Pharaoh was given grace and he turned from it. Matthew Henry astutely notes the state of the heart which rejects such grace from His hand -

"Till the heart is renewed by the grace of God, the thoughts made by affliction do not abide; the convictions wear off, and the promises that were given are forgotten. Till the state of the air is changed, what thaws in the sun will freeze again in the shade." Henry

Though today we've viewed the end of only the second plague, the book is already complete and all ten plagues of Egypt are behind us in time. And they only picture the greater judgment by God upon sin and upon this sin-filled world. In the midst of this well-deserved hand of plague and misery, there is a Fount of grace.

It was opened on the tree of Calvary as the blood gushed from the dying Man on that cross. Three days later, He was resurrected by the power of God for all eternity. This proves that God was pleased with His sinless life. It proves that He was worthy of the resurrection, and it proves that the precious Fount is open for all people for all time.

All who call on the Lord will be saved. Please grant me a moment to explain how you can receive this wondrous gift of eternal life...

Closing Verse: "Listen to Me, you stubborn-hearted,
Who are far from righteousness." Isaiah 46:12

Next Week: Exodus 8:16-19 (The Plague of Lice)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

When Frogs Die, They Stink

Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said
"Entreat the Lord that He may take away
The frogs from me and from my people, and instead
I will let the people go, so to you I say
That they may sacrifice to the Lord
This is my spoken word

And Moses said to Pharaoh
"Accept the honor of saying
When I shall intercede for you, for your servants too
And for your people, for whom I shall then be praying
To destroy the frogs from you and your houses too
That they may remain in the river only, it's what the Lord will do

So he said, "Tomorrow
And he said, "Let it be according to your word
That you may know
That there is no one like our God the Lord

And the frogs shall depart from you
From your houses, from your servants, so you will see
And from your people too
They shall remain in the river only
Then Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh
And Moses cried out to the Lord
Concerning the frogs which He had brought Against Pharaoh by His spoken word

So the Lord did according to the word of Moses
And the frogs died out of the houses

Out of the courtyards and out of the fields too
They gathered them together in heaps
And the land stank, through and through
But when Pharaoh saw that there was relief
He hardened his heart
And did not heed them, for unbelief
As the Lord had said right from the start

Surely we know that the judgment of God
Is according to the truth
Against those who practice such things in life as they trod
Whether men of advanced age, or those still in their youth

And so let us not despise the riches of His goodness
Forbearance, and longsuffering also
Which is meant to lead us to repentance
And direct us on the path that we should go

Let us pursue Christ with every breath we take
And be obedient to the heavenly call
For Christ, and for Christ alone - all else forsake
For each of us, let Him be our all in all

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 8:16-19 (THE PLAGUE OF LICE)

The day before typing this sermon, a friend on Facebook named Taylor posted to me something that I'd missed during my sermon on Exodus 3. I'm not going back that way again, but I hate not sharing everything about a passage that I can. So I'm including his words in today's sermon because they fit with this sermon.

At the time that Moses stood before the burning bush, I gave several reasons for why the Lord asked Moses to take off his sandals. I then noted that the only other time this was seen in the Bible was in Joshua 5. I gave reasons for this and how the two accounts contrast and yet they confirm a message at the same time.

When Taylor watched that sermon, he thought about it and the Lord led Him to another picture, a prophetic picture, which I had completely missed. He noted that the first and second advents of Christ are pictured in these two accounts.

On His first advent, He came as the Giver of instruction (Torah) to redeem and separate his people from the world. The next time He comes it will be as the Lord of Hosts, to take His people into the Promised Land. And this is absolutely correct.

Moses was the human giver of instruction and redeemer of His people. Likewise, Joshua was the human commander of the armies of Israel who led them into the Promised Land. And so these two accounts provide a prophetic picture of Christ's two advents.

I thought this was a great insight and it also fits well with the ongoing theme of the plagues of Exodus. Each of the plagues is designed to build upon the next and to lead to the ultimate redemption of Israel. When they are redeemed, they'll go to Sinai to receive their instruction. And eventually they will head for the land of promise.

We as Christians have been redeemed. We have also received our instruction in the pages of the Bible. Eventually, we'll be brought into the land of promise. Until we get there though, we should be learning all we can about the precious book He has given us.

Text Verse: "For the word of God is living and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the division of soul and spirit, and of joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." Hebrews 4:12

What a true statement this is! Pharaoh had been given the word of God verbally several times. He has also seen the proofs of it realized in plagues upon His land. Today, no word will be given to him in advance of the plague, but the plague will speak for itself, proving its divine source.

But it will also be a source of hardening, not softening, of Pharaoh's heart. I have to tell you, someone who can hear the word of the Lord, see it analyzed and reanalyzed and see something new come out of it every day, and still not have it change their heart is just asking for grief.

I missed those prophetic pictures of Christ in Exodus and Joshua, even though they were as evident as the nose on my face. Instead of hardening my heart, they make me want to believe the Lord even more. Pharaoh on the other hand, like so many people in the world today, takes just the opposite view. It is a view which can only lead to destruction.

Before that time comes, I would hope that many would open their eyes and see the glory of the Lord revealed in this precious superior word. Maybe somebody will today! And so let's head to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Stretch Out Your Rod (Verse 16)

16 So the Lord said to Moses, "Say to Aaron, 'Stretch out your rod,

This is now the third time that Aaron is instructed by the Lord through Moses to stretch out his rod. The first was over the waters of Egypt, over their streams, over their rivers, over their ponds, and over all their pools of water, that they may become blood. When he did, the waters became blood.

The next time was over the streams, over the rivers, and over the ponds. This caused frogs to come up on the land. Now something new will come about. As we saw concerning the frogs, they were a logical and natural outcropping of the waters having turned to blood. And yet, there was the miraculous involved as well.

This is especially so because the record shows that the frogs came when Aaron stretched out his rod and they departed at the time that Pharaoh had designated when requested by Moses. And so even if the plagues were natural, there is still the supernatural involved. Only the Lord could so minutely direct events such as these.

The next plague very well could be a natural result of the multiplication and then death of the frogs as well.

16 (con't) and strike the dust of the land,

Instead of merely stretching the rod out over the waters, a forceful action is instructed - "strike the dust of the land." It is a demonstration of purpose and intent and it signifies that this third plague will come not from the waters, but from the land.

This then is to be an attack on the Egyptian god Set, the god of the desert, and another god of Egypt I'll mention in a while. It is then to be a lesson that Yehovah is not merely God over the waters, but He is also God over the land. Among the ancients, there was often a misperception concerning the nature of God. He isn't just a mere god over one thing and not another.

He isn't just a god over one group of people, but over all people. And he isn't only a god over one location, but over all places. He is absolutely sovereign over all things. It was a common misperception which is highlighted throughout the Old Testament.

In 1 Kings 20, Ben Hadad, king of Syria, came against Israel in battle. He was sorely defeated by them and returned home to Syria. Upon his return, and in preparation for another battle, his servants told him why they thought they were defeated the first time -

"Then the servants of the king of Syria said to him, 'Their gods are gods of the hills. Therefore they were stronger than we; but if we fight against them in the plain, surely we will be stronger than they. 24 So do this thing: Dismiss the kings, each from his position, and put captains in their places; 25 and you shall muster an army like the army that you have lost, horse for horse and chariot for chariot. Then we will fight against them in the plain; surely we will be stronger than they.'" 1 Kings 20:23-25

If you read the account, you'll see that the Syrians found out that they were once again, incorrect. Rather, they suffered a second great defeat. Likewise, later in 2 Kings 20, after the exile of Israel from the land because of disobedience, the king of Assyria brought people into the land of Israel from other countries to settle there. However, when they were brought in, we read what occurred -

"And it was so, at the beginning of their dwelling there, that they did not fear the Lord; therefore the Lord sent lions among them, which killed some of them. 26 So they spoke to the king of Assyria, saying, 'The nations whom you have removed and placed in the cities of Samaria do not know the rituals of the God of the land; therefore He has sent lions among them, and indeed, they are killing them because they do not know the rituals of the God of the land.' 27 Then the king of Assyria commanded, saying, 'Send there one of the priests whom you brought from there; let him go and dwell there, and let him teach them the rituals of the God of the land.' 28 Then one of the priests whom they had carried away from Samaria came and dwelt in Bethel, and taught them how they should fear the Lord." 2 Kings 17:25-28

In the first account, there was the misperception that Yehovah was the god of the hills and not of the plains. In the second, there was the misperception that the Lord was only the Lord of the Land of Israel.

Misunderstanding God's nature can lead to all sorts of problems. However, no matter whether He is misunderstood or understood, He uses the matter to effect His purposes. One more exceptional case such as these comes from the books of Isaiah, Chronicles, and Ezra.

Isaiah, writing long before the exile of Israel to Babylon, made a prophecy concerning their return. In one of the most profound prophecies of the Old Testament, he twice mentioned King Cyrus of Persia by name, even saying that it would be Cyrus who would rebuild the temple in Jerusalem. That is recorded in Isaiah 44 -

"Who confirms the word of His servant,
And performs the counsel of His messengers;
Who says to Jerusalem, 'You shall be inhabited,'
To the cities of Judah, 'You shall be built,'
And I will raise up her waste places;
27 Who says to the deep, 'Be dry!
And I will dry up your rivers';
28 Who says of Cyrus, 'He is My shepherd,
And he shall perform all My pleasure,
Saying to Jerusalem, "You shall be built,"
And to the temple, "Your foundation shall be laid."'” Isaiah 44:26-28

In the next chapter, he continues with his words concerning Cyrus and ends with this thought -

I have raised him up in righteousness,
And I will direct all his ways;
He shall build My city
And let My exiles go free,
Not for price nor reward,”
Says the Lord of hosts. Isaiah 45:13

It is believed that Cyrus was informed of this prophecy which bore his own name and it so moved him that he agreed to its terms, thus fulfilling the prophecy about him because it was a prophecy about him. The words of fulfillment are so important that they close out the book of 2 Chronicles and they are repeated at the beginning of the book of Ezra –

"Now in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, that the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of

Cyrus king of Persia, so that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and also put it in writing, saying,

23 Thus says Cyrus king of Persia:

All the kingdoms of the earth the Lord God of heaven has given me. And He has commanded me to build Him a house at Jerusalem which is in Judah. Who is among you of all His people? May the Lord his God be with him, and let him go up!" 2 Chronicles 36:22, 23

Cyrus realized that the Yehovah is the God of heaven. He rules not only over portions of the earth such as the water, the hills, the land of Israel, or the Middle East, but He also rules over all of the earth and the heavens too. And not only does He rule over them in time, but beyond time. He rules over the future as well as the present.

The prophecy which named him showed him these things. Unlike Cyrus, a different approach is taken towards Pharaoh. God could have named Pharaoh in advance by the mouth of Abraham and explained what he should do. But a different course is taken in Egypt because a different outcome is needed.

Every detail of history is being carefully guided for a specific outcome. In the case of Pharaoh, it is to harden his heart so that the mighty deeds of the Lord might be magnified. And these deeds aren't just given to show us how the Lord worked in the past, but how He will work again in the future.

16 (con't) so that it may become lice throughout all the land of Egypt.”

As simple as these words seem, the one word which defines the plague, kinnim, translated here as "lice," cannot be definitively identified. It is used only six times in the Bible. Five of them are in these three verses, and the sixth is in Psalm 105, which is speaking of these verses.

Because of the word's difficult nature, it is viewed by scholars in a variety of ways - lice, gnats, mosquitoes, or ticks. Each view has its interesting possibilities. But to determine which, it would be good to look again at the natural order of how plagues occur.

The river turned to blood and frogs become prolific. If the frogs died out in an immense quantity, then there would be a logical outcropping from that. Again, this doesn't deny the miraculous nature of the event. Rather, it follows the natural progression of what God has instilled in nature.

At the same time, the fact that God designed nature means that He would know when the plagues would come about. His instructions to Moses and Aaron are given at the time when these would occur. Thus, just as will be seen with the parting of the Red Sea, there is still a miraculous element to the plague.

With the river having been turned to blood, which in turn would lead to all sorts of unsanitary conditions, and that being followed with a plague of frogs which would lead to even worse conditions, it is not unthinkable that such a plague would arise.

The question is, "Which is most likely." Although there is strong evidence for it being mosquitoes, it is known that they breed in the water, not on the land. Therefore, although some very great scholars have chosen this, I would shy away from it. Aaron was told to strike the dust of the earth, not the waters.

Adam Clarke gives a good argument for it being ticks, but he is a lone voice on that and it doesn't seem like a natural outcropping of unsanitary conditions. Gnats do result from that though and so they seem like a good possibility. Unlike mosquitoes, their larvae are found on the land, particularly moist soils.

After they mature and begin to fly, they have been noted to appear as clouds of dust as they fly as well. Therefore, gnats are an acceptable possibility, but I do feel there is one which is better. What seems most likely is that it is, in fact, lice - just as the NKJV renders it.

Lice are small, as if they themselves were dust. In fact, when you look at them on someone's head, they appear almost like sand or dandruff on the scalp, at least until you see them moving around. They are also extremely prolific. Adam Clarke notes that -

"In the space of twelve days a full-grown female lays one hundred eggs, from which, in the space of six days, about fifty males and as many females are produced. In eighteen days these young females are at their full growth, each of which may lay one hundred eggs, which will be all hatched in six days more. Thus, in the course of six weeks, the parent female may see 5,000 of its own descendants! So mightily does this scourge of indolence and filthiness increase!"

Therefore, not only does their size appear as the dust, but their numbers can as well. A large plague of lice would appear as though the very dust itself had come alive. The 17th century Bible scholar Samuel Bochart gives several convincing reasons for the plague to have been just this, lice -

"1. Because those in question sprang from the dust of the earth, and not from the waters. 2. Because they were both on men and cattle, which cannot be spoken of gnats. 3. Because their name comes from the radix כון kun, which signifies to make firm, fix, establish, which can never agree to gnats, flies, etc., which are ever changing their place, and are almost constantly on the wing. 4. Because כנה kinnah is the term by which the Talmudists express the louse, etc." Samuel Bochart via Adam Clarke

His logic is certainly worthy of note and it will seem to be born out by the wording of the coming two verses.

Does God love me? This I want to know

Yes, He does, it is certain and true

But love is not all of who God is

There are things that He expects from me and you

There must be faith in Him and what He has done

In order for Him to reward us with His love

He asks us to trust in the work of Jesus, His only begotten Son

In order for us to walk with Him in the heavens above

If we refuse to receive this, and instead harden our heart

Should we expect Him to overlook such a thing?

His word teaches us such lessons, wisdom it does impart

And in following its words, happiness it will bring

II. Lice on Man and Beast (verse 17)

17 And they did so.

In obedience to the word of the Lord, and without any seeming hesitation or worry that the plague may not actually occur, they are noted as having followed through with the command. And, unlike the previous two plagues, this one has occurred without any given warning.

It can therefore be considered a direct judgment on Pharaoh for having hardened his heart after the plague of frogs. As absolutely sure evidence that it was the Lord that directed the frogs, Pharaoh himself was given the honor of choosing the selected time of their demise.

When it occurred, exactly as spoken, he should have humbled himself, but instead, when there was relief, he took the other path and further hardened his heart. Thus, this plague is given without warning as a penalty for his arrogant, hard heart, and for his failure to submit to the will of the Lord.

As was seen in an earlier sermon, the first nine plagues are divided into three distinct groups. Advance warnings are given in the first two of the plagues of the specific group, but when the third plague comes, it is without previous notice.

That is the case with this plague, which is the third. It will also be the case with the sixth plague of boils and the ninth plague of darkness.

17 (con't) For Aaron stretched out his hand with his rod and struck the dust of the earth,

Again it is noted that it is "the dust of the earth" which is struck. The specific details of this verse and the previous verse really seem to preclude the notion of mosquitoes. Further, we were told that after the plague of frogs, the frogs of the river still remained.

As this is so, there were plenty of natural predators to consume the mosquito larvae. Although mosquitoes are considered at times horrendous along the Nile, they are water born insects, not land-born. Aaron is said to have struck the dust and the result follows...

17 (con't) and it became lice on man and beast.

As the Lord spoke, the plague occurs. Lice became so numerous that they literally covered both man and beast. Having read numerous articles on lice, it is evident that this is more than possible. There are various types of lice, and they are known to cover humans, clinging especially to any spot of hair on the body.

They also will cover household pets and outdoor animals such as horses, goats, and whatever other livestock they can cling to. They carry diseases and they can be a painful nuisance for any who are infected with them. What probably happened is that the millions of frogs ate whatever predators lice have and upset the life cycle, allowing them to bloom in great numbers.

This plague would have been most unwelcome to the Egyptian people because they prided themselves on cleanliness. The writer Herodotus even notes that the "priests were wont to shave or scrape their whole bodies every third day, lest any lice should breed upon them." (Benson)

Maybe they started this practice after the plagues we are seeing! To have these crawling all over them would be miserable. But it is not unlikely because of the immense lack of hygiene which would have resulted from the death of the frogs. Also, it is the wording of this verse which seems to indicate lice rather than gnats.

It says ba'adam u-ba'behemah - "in man and in beast." The description is more readily identified with lice than it is with gnats. Lice cling and chew. Gnats come and go and only stop to nibble. Regardless of which it truly is, they came in numbers beyond imagination, and they covered both people and animals.

17 (con't) All the dust of the land became lice throughout all the land of Egypt.

The term kal apha' ha'aretz, or "all the dust (of) the land" has to be taken as a form of hyperbole. This type of speech is more than common in the Bible. Both testaments, and in many varying contexts, use the term "all" to indicate a vast number, but not specifically meaning literally "all."

When John the Baptist came, he baptized the people for repentance. In the Gospel of Mark, we are told this and it is noted in the hyperbolic form "all" -

"John came baptizing in the wilderness and preaching a baptism of repentance for the remission of sins. 5 Then all the land of Judea, and those from Jerusalem, went out to him and were all baptized by him in the Jordan River, confessing their sins." Mark 1:4, 5

Twice, in one account, it says "all." First, "all the land of Judea, and those from Jerusalem" and then "all" were baptized by him. If taken literally, then all of the people from those areas, meaning every one of them, were baptized. But in Luke 7, we read this -

"And when all the people heard Him, even the tax collectors justified God, having been baptized with the baptism of John. 30 But the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the will of God for themselves, not having been baptized by him." Luke 7:29, 30

The Pharisees and the lawyers, though being inhabitants of Judea and Jerusalem, were not baptized. Therefore, we always need to be careful to consider what words like "all" and "every" mean in their intended context. In the case of the ten plagues, it is not to be taken that literally all of the dust became lice. Rather, it is a superlative way of noting the immensity of the plague.

And there is a reason for this. The plague fell upon the earth which itself was considered a deity, even the father of the gods. They held sacred "the black fertile soil of the basin of the Nile, called Chemi, from which the ancient name of Egypt is supposed to be derived." (Barnes)

Therefore, the Lord is exalting His name and power above this false god, Chemi, of the created order as well as Set, god of the desert, who I mentioned earlier. The Egyptians had come to worship the ground under their feet instead of raising their eyes to the Lord. Now that ground would appear to come alive with rage upon them for their spiritual harlotry.

Again, as I've said, I personally believe this plague is a natural outcropping of a logical sequence of events. It involves one plague leading to the next as nature unfolds in its normal way. And yet, there is still the note of the miraculous as well. Adam Clarke, based on the writing of an earlier scholar named Calmet, also discerned this process when he said -

"...it may be observed, that God never works a miracle when the end can be accomplished by merely natural means; and in the operations of Divine providence we always find that the greatest number of effects possible are accomplished by the fewest causes." Adam Clarke

This is an important consideration because Pharaoh could perceive the natural and thus reject the supernatural. The same will be true in the plagues of the end times. Though they have been predicted in advance, they will probably come about by natural or man-made occurrences, radiation, chemicals, meteorites, and the like.

The miraculous is that God foresees the event and gives us advanced notice of it, just as He did with Cyrus, king of Persia. Cyrus could have said, "That is just four letters which could be speaking of anybody with a similar name!" Instead, he heard the word and he believed.

Faith comes by hearing and hearing by the word of God. Many, like Pharaoh also hear, and yet they refuse to accept the truth presented to them. In the end, such will suffer both regret and torment.

Once the dead frogs were gone and the stink faded away
We thought that things would again be pretty nice
But we sure thought wrong what we thought on that day
This is just disgusting! We're all covered in lice
We itch all over and our animals are all covered too
Our beds are inundated with them as well
I guess shaving man and beast is what we have to do
We'll all look a bit silly for a spell
But that sure is better than being covered with lice
It will be great when every one of them dies
We won't be itchy and life will be so nice
Ikh! The only thing worse than lice would be a plague of flies

III. The Finger of God (verses 18 & 19)

18 Now the magicians so worked with their enchantments to bring forth lice, but they could not.

The same expression is used here as was used in 7:22 - "and did so the magicians." It doesn't mean they actually were able to do so, but that they tried to do so. Saying something in a definite manner can mean "attempt to do this thing" as well as actually do it.

In Matthew 7:13, it says, "Enter by the narrow gate; for wide is the gate and broad is the way that leads to destruction, and there are many who go in by it." But in Luke 13:24, the same words are rendered as, "Strive to enter through the narrow gate, for many, I say to you, will seek to enter and will not be able."

Jesus uses the definite term in Matthew to indicate that an attempt should be made. In the case of the Egyptians, they did so, "but they could not." What it means is that they did what Aaron did, but they didn't achieve the same results as he did.

This also more clearly explains the "all" of the previous verse, which said, "All the dust of the land became lice." If all of it had, then they would have no dust to try the same miracle. It is beyond credibility to think that they couldn't perform the sign because there was no dust for them to try. If that were the case, the Bible wouldn't have noted them trying.

One scholar went so far as to say that they made dust first by taking moist earth, drying it out, and pounding it until it was dust. That is an immense amount of thought to insert into a verse which is plain on its surface. The superlative "all" is used even though it doesn't literally mean "all."

18 (con't) So there were lice on man and beast.

There is more than not being able to reproduce the miracle. There is also the reality of the lice which came forth. They covered both man and beast and the magicians had no control over them. They could no more get rid of them than they could produce them. The plague had begun and it would run its course without their ability to bring it to an end.

19 Then the magicians said to Pharaoh, "This is the finger of God."

With their inability to reproduce the miracle, they realized that they have been outmatched. In the past, they could reproduce the event that the Lord had originated, even if it was on a smaller level and even if they couldn't end what He had begun. But now, they cannot even repeat the thing.

The tricks up their sleeves had come to an end. They may have assumed to this point that Moses and Aaron were just exceptionally good magicians, but now they see there is a difference in both magnitude and accomplishment. And so they proclaim to Pharaoh etsbah elohim hi.

Translations universally say "the finger of God," but because these priests are polytheists, it doesn't mean that they have yet accepted the premise of one God. Rather, they could be claiming Yehovah is merely "a" god, rather than "the" God. The word elohim allows either.

This God, Yehovah, who they have come to know is not one of their gods, but to them He may still be just another of many gods. All they know at this point is that what they have seen has come from a force greater than what they can conjure up on their own.

No matter what they were thinking though, the use of the word "finger" is notable for a few reasons. So far, 2500 years of human history have been recorded and yet this is the first time a finger is mentioned in the Bible. And even more, it is used in a metaphorical rather than a literal sense.

To us, the idea of a finger is that it accomplishes things, it points out things, and it indicates the source of power. The finger leads to the hand which is used for swearing. Swearing implies an oath and thus authority. It implies power, to both fend off and to hold.

The hand leads to the arm which is used to indicate strength - strength to destroy and strength to save. All of this, and much more is seen in the Bible concerning these body parts. The priests here acknowledge that the source of what has occurred is from another realm, represented by the finger.

This concept will be seen again in both testaments of the Bible, ascribing the sovereign and omnipotent power of God to the work of His fingers. In Psalm 8, we read this -

"When I consider Your heavens, the work of Your fingers,
The moon and the stars, which You have ordained." Psalm 8:3

And in Luke 11:19, 20, we find these words of Jesus -

"And if I cast out demons by Beelzebub, by whom do your sons cast them out? Therefore they will be your judges. 20 But if I cast out demons with the finger of God, surely the kingdom of God has come upon you."

When the Ten Commandments were written, it was with the finger of God. And when the leaders of Israel were about to stone a woman for adultery, it was the finger of the Lord writing in the sand which withheld their intent for her demise.

The power of the finger is not to be underestimated, especially the finger of God. But for some, there is a lack of understanding the full implication of the work which is wrought by that awesome appendage of Yehovah.

The finger of the Lord is attached to a strong hand, and that in turn is attached to an outstretched arm, ready to work even greater miracles in the midst of Egypt. Pharaoh just doesn't realize it yet. We see this as verse 19 continues...

19 (con't) But Pharaoh's heart grew hard, and he did not heed them,

The words of his magicians do not reflect the certainty of one God. There is no definite article in front of the word God and there is no other descriptor attached to Him other than that the deed was by elohim's finger.

Pharaoh has already seen two supposed demonstrations of the ability to replicate God's miracles. Just because one attempt has failed is not enough to convince him that He is superior in all ways. Rather, for all Pharaoh knows, He may be inferior in other ways.

For him, it has probably been an uncomfortable plague, but not one of sufficient magnitude to cause him the loss of an entire group of people under his authority. The Lord has successfully worked in the life of Pharaoh in a way which has caused him to harden his heart to the things of God. And we know this is so because of our final words of today...

19 (con't) just as the Lord had said.

ka'asher dibber Yehovah - "as spoke the Lord." These words along with the ones just before them are an exact repeat of Exodus 7:13 -

"But Pharaoh's heart grew hard, and he did not heed them, just as the Lord had said."

The heart of Pharaoh has been passively hardened by the Lord, not actively. That is what is implied here. He has shown His glory in small steps rather than in one great act. Because of this, Pharaoh has become more, not less, obstinate in his attitude toward Him.

It is true that the Lord may have prompted Pharaoh to hardening, but the fault and the sentence for the action remains solely with him. The magicians have acknowledged the finger of God in the matter, whatever that meant to them. And so, by rejecting what the plague has made plainly known, Pharaoh has now placed himself on the level of that same elohim.

This is what the antichrist will do in the future as he leads the world to inevitable destruction. And this is what many individuals willingly do every day of their lives. God has made himself known to His creatures through His creation. But we suppress that truth in our unrighteous minds.

Pharaoh only added to his guilt in this matter because he not only rejected natural evidence, but he has rejected three instances of supernatural evidence. And maybe there is someone like Pharaoh here today. We have been given not only the natural truths of God in the timing of the stars and in the intricacy of DNA, but we have been given the supernatural truths of God as well.

We have the evident truths of revealed prophecy. We have the Jew who, beyond all possibility, has survived and flourished, just as the Bible said they would. We have the evidence of God revealed in changed lives and restored families. And even more we have His sure word.

In every reasonable evidence for there being a God, there is only an unreasonable response by the unbeliever that there is no God. Let us not be like Pharaoh in this regard. Instead, let us soften our hearts and simply acknowledge His greatness.

Let us welcomingly receive the knowledge that He imparts to us. And let us bow our knee and receive His greatest Gift of all, the salvation of our souls through the work of His Son, our Lord Jesus. If you have never understood the need for Jesus in your life, please give me just another moment to explain it to you now...

Closing Verse: "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who suppress the truth in unrighteousness, 19 because what may be known of God is manifest in them, for God has shown it to them." Romans 1:18, 19

Next Week: Exodus 8:20-32 (The Plague of Flies) (24th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Not so Nice, It's a Plague of Lice

So the Lord said to Moses, as he had before spoken twice

"Say to Aaron 'Stretch out your rod

And strike the dust of the land, so that it may become lice

Throughout all the land of Egypt, wherever people trod

And they did so, for Aaron stretched out his hand

With his rod and struck the dust of the earth

And it became lice on man and beast throughout the land

Surely anguished cries replaced any sounds of mirth
All the dust of the land became lice
Throughout all the land of Egypt
Things had turned not so nice

Now the magicians so worked with their enchantments
To bring forth lice, but they could not
So there were lice on man and beast
In all of Egypt, yes, in every spot
Then the magicians said to Pharaoh
“This is the finger of God, not just a trick instead
But Pharaoh’s heart grew hard as we know
And he did not heed them, just as the Lord had said

The plagues of Egypt were severe upon the land
But worse things are coming upon the earth
From the Bible, someday, we understand
That the world will be plunged into horrible dearth
There will be great plagues and famines too
War and death will be found everywhere
But to escape this terrifying time, I'll tell you what to do
Call on Jesus to save you, and He will, right then and there

His coming judgment is because of a world gone astray
We ignore Him, like a radio - tuning Him out
And things cannot forever go on this way
Instead of faith and trust, there is only uncaring and doubt

People, let us turn our hearts back to the Lord
Let us give Him the rightful glory that He is due
He has shown us what is proper in His word
And He even sent Jesus to save me and you

Let us hold fast to Him, cherishing Him all of our days
And let us never fail to give Him all of our praise

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 8:20-32 (THE PLAGUE OF THE SWARM)

My brother once told me, "Freedom is not congenital." It has to be taught to each subsequent generation. And if we fail to do so, it will be lost. The American experiment is all but over because we have failed to wisely handle and transmit, untainted by corruption, the lessons of our own freedoms.

The same is true not only with freedom though, but with religion also. Nobody is born a Christian. The title does not transfer from parent to child automatically. Instead, we must tell the next generation of the works of the Lord again and again. The stories of the plagues upon Egypt and the hardening of Pharaoh's heart are actually a part of this lesson.

In this self-willed, hardened individual, and the events which occur in relation to him, we can clearly see that the Lord calls, but the man must respond. The word is given, its rewards or consequences are provided, and a response is expected.

Unfortunately, this is not properly taught in many churches and people are left feeling secure in their eternal destiny when in fact, they haven't followed through with the response part. This is seen, once again, in the life of Pharaoh to teach us this valuable lesson.

We are to tell the great works of the Lord to our children along with all that His work for us entails. Let us hide nothing in the process, but speak to them of both the rewards and consequences for failure to respond to the call.

Text Verse: "We will not hide them from their children,
Telling to the generation to come the praises of the Lord,
And His strength and His wonderful works that He has done." Psalm 78:4

Even more specific than this text verse, Deuteronomy tells us to keep the Lord's commands in our heart, to teach them diligently to our children, to talk of them when we sit in the house and when we walk by the way. We are to do so when we lie down, and when we again rise up.

They are to be so near to us that it is as if they are bound on our hands and placed between our eyes - metaphors meaning at all times and always to be remembered. He asks us to write the words of the Lord even on the doorposts of our house and on our gates - again, signifying even as we come in and go out from our homes we should have the word with us.

Are you this prepared with the word of the Lord? Is it set firmly in your heart and retained in your memory? If not, make it so from this day and forevermore. Cherish the wondrous words that give joy, hope, and which even lead to eternal life. Cherish this wondrous superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. I Will Set Apart the Land of Goshen (verses 20-24)

20 And the Lord said to Moses, "Rise early in the morning and stand before Pharaoh as he comes out to the water."

This is an early morning announcement, just as was seen in Exodus 7:15. Moses is instructed to "rise early." It is an indication that Pharaoh is going to the water at sunrise, probably to worship the god Ra, the sun-god. It could then be that he did this regularly, or at set times of the year, like a solstice.

Either way Moses was to be there ahead of Pharaoh and he is instructed v'hityatsev liphne pharaoh - "and stand in the face of Pharaoh." The imagery is him standing between the water and Pharaoh, probably with the sun at his back, as if challenging the sun-god.

There, illumined by the splendor of the sun around him, Moses would make the same demand he has already made three times - "Let my people go." And he again explains the reason for the demand...

20 (con't) Then say to him, 'Thus says the Lord: "Let My people go, that they may serve Me.

With just a minor change in the Hebrew, dropping an accusative, it is an exact repeat of Exodus 8:1. The Lord's name, Yehovah, is declared; the people are identified as His people; and He desires their service of Him. It is the words of the God who has already proven Himself a competent adversary.

However, to this point, Pharaoh has had his heart increasingly hardened as the plagues have become ever more troublesome. With the passing of each plague, it appears Pharaoh believes the Lord's arsenal is depleted and he continues his belligerent stance.

21 Or else, if you will not let My people go, behold, I will send swarms of flies

Another plague is announced, in advance, if Israel is not released for the service of Yehovah. The actual identity of this plague cannot be determined with certainty. In Hebrew it is he'arov - "the swarm." The words "of flies" are inserted by the translators.

Jewish commentators tie the word arov in with erev which means "mingled" or "mixed," and they thus identify it as a variety of beasts, reptiles, insects, and the like.

However, the term he'arov is used in the singular throughout the plague and so it is one species, not many. The Greek translation of the Old Testament identifies it with the dog-fly. However, scholars have noted that the dog-fly isn't a pest in houses and it doesn't damage the land, both of which are noted in this plague.

However, there is a certain type of beetle which does fit the description by harming man, beast, and the land itself. If this is what is described here, it would certainly be another terrible plague, not only because of the great nuisance they made, but because the beetle was considered sacred in Egypt.

The beetle was tied to their god Kephri, the god of rebirth, the sunrise, and the scarab. Kephri was Ra's aspect in the morning, and thus it is a fitting possibility as Moses has come to encounter Pharaoh in the morning. Therefore, like the frog, the people would refrain from killing one of their little deities and thus they would be overrun all the more.

They apparently have been known to suddenly appear upon the Nile in immense numbers and according to Kalisch they "inflict very painful bites with their jaws; gnaw and destroy clothes, household furniture, leather, and articles of every kind, and either consume or render unavailable all eatables" (Kalisch).

Another commentator notes that "They sometimes drive persons out of their houses; and they also devastate the fields" (Pulpit). It is a seemingly likely choice for the description of the swarm which was to come upon the land. Therefore, this is a challenge against the Egyptian gods Ra and Kephri.

21 (con't) on you and your servants, on your people and into your houses.

In verse 21, four distinctions are made. It might seem curious that it is worded this way instead of saying that they would simply cover everyone and everything, but each distinction is calculated to give specific effect. He first notes "you" meaning Pharaoh.

It is Pharaoh who has denied Yehovah in the past, setting himself directly against Him. Therefore, he is specifically mentioned. He next notes "and your servants." It is the noun form, ebed, of the verb abad, or "serve" which was used in the previous verse. If Israel may not serve the Lord, the servants of Pharaoh will suffer.

Next, he says "on your people." It is the same word used in the previous verse concerning Israel - "My people." If My people may not serve Me as their God, your people will suffer by one of your false-gods."

And finally it notes "into your houses." "If I, the great and awesome God, may not have the joy of open and personal fellowship with My people, you will suffer a private and most personal fellowship with your little biting gods."

21 (con't) The houses of the Egyptians shall be full of swarms of flies, and also the ground on which they stand.

"The infestation will permeate the dwelling places of the Egyptians, biting and nauseating the people, turning their hearts away from the little devils that you so worship." The swarm will be everywhere they go, and will cover the ground on which they stand. In this may be a subtle play on the creation account.

The word for "ground" here is adamah, which is essentially the same as adam, or "man." Adam was shaped and formed from the adamah and he is intricately tied to it. Rising from it, he walks upon it, he eats what comes from it, and he returns to it. The very ground from which man came will be so covered with the swarm that he will loathe it.

But something new is specifically stated concerning this plague which has not been stated before...

22 And in that day I will set apart the land of Goshen, in which My people dwell, that no swarms of flies shall be there,

When the plague comes, in that day, the Lord promises to "set apart" the land. The term in Hebrew is v'hiphleti. It is the first of seven uses of the word palah in the Bible. It means to "set apart," but the word also means "wonderfully" or "wondrously."

Because of this, the Latin Vulgate says, "I will do a marvelous thing." The Greek translation says, "I will render illustrious the land of Goshen." It is the same word used by David when he said these most memorable of words -

"I will praise You, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made;
Marvelous are Your works,
And that my soul knows very well." Psalm 139:14

The part of land which is so distinguished is Goshen, the residence of the Hebrews. This area called Goshen is mentioned only ten times in the Bible, eight in Genesis and two in Exodus. It means, "drawing near" or approaching."

In the Genesis sermons, it was apparent that the name was given to show the coming tribulation period on earth pictured by the plagues on Egypt. Now that time has come and the distinction between the Hebrews and the Egyptians is seen explicitly for the first time.

Thus, it pictures the Jews of the tribulation period who will take Jesus' advice in Matthew 24 to flee into the wilderness as the time of the Great Tribulation is to draw near. The patterns are beautifully represented in the use of individual words and names which appear at perfectly timed intervals.

It is more than likely that Israel was spared from one or more of the other plagues, but the introduction of the name "Goshen," and its being separated from the plagues to come, highlights the future events of the end-time tribulation period perfectly.

It should be remembered now that at the end of the previous plague, the magicians said "This is the finger of God." They used a general term for God which could mean "gods" or any "god." They didn't give specific credit to Yehovah, or to the "God of the Hebrews."

Because of this, the special distinction is now being made to show that this is not just a god, but Israel's God. And more poignantly, He will next make an even more specific claim...

22 (con't) in order that you may know that I am the Lord in the midst of the land.

Yehovah isn't just a god "over there" somewhere, looking for the service of an individual group of people. Nor does He sit upon one parcel of land. Rather, He is Yehovah b'qerev ha'erets - "Yehovah in the midst of the earth." He is the Lord of the whole earth.

Just as a king is said to rule and reside from the midst of his kingdom in order to conveniently rule and guide his people, Yehovah rules in the midst of the earth and in the midst of the people of the earth. Thus He is the true and only sovereign.

23 I will make a difference between My people and your people.

Here comes another special note to Pharaoh, v'shamti pedut. The word translated here as "difference" is used only four times in the Bible and it means, more properly to "redeem." The Lord is making a distinction by redeeming. His people will be redeemed from the plague which will fall on all others.

The same word is used in Isaiah 50 to show that He is fully capable of speaking His word and then fulfilling it -

"Why, when I came, was there no man?
Why, when I called, was there none to answer?
Is My hand shortened at all that it cannot redeem?
Or have I no power to deliver?
Indeed with My rebuke I dry up the sea,
I make the rivers a wilderness;
Their fish stink because there is no water,
And die of thirst.
3 I clothe the heavens with blackness,
And I make sackcloth their covering." Isaiah 50:2, 3

23 (con't) Tomorrow this sign shall be.””””

In order to fully demonstrate that this is the work of the Lord, not only has it been shown in advance that Israel would be exempted from the plague to come, but that it would come at a specific time. There will be little time to prepare as it will be on the morrow. The timing is given and it is called a "sign."

The word for sign is owth. It is generally used to indicate a sign of something else - one thing pointing to another. Thus, this "sign" is given to show both the omniscience and the omnipotence of the Lord. He sits in the midst of the earth and controls what occurs there, but He also sits in the midst of time and controls when things will occur. Thus, the sign is given to demonstrate this.

24 And the Lord did so. Thick swarms of flies came into the house of Pharaoh, into his servants' houses, and into all the land of Egypt. The land was corrupted because of the swarms of flies.

No record of the staff being stretched out like the commencement of the other plagues is mentioned. Rather, the word was spoken and the plague began because of it. Therefore, the magicians couldn't claim that this was merely a magician's trick.

Rather, by the mere word of an unseen power, the land would come alive with the swarm. And the swarm performed exactly as the word spoke. It covered everything, from the houses of Pharaoh and his servants, even to all of Egypt.

And it says that the land was "corrupted" because of the swarm. This word for "corrupted" more exactly means "destroyed." The swarm, be it beetle, fly, or some other pest, devoured up everything in its path and brought calamity wherever it went.

The increasing severity of the plagues is seen most notably here. The first three plagues were certainly annoying, but they didn't actually cause damage or injury to the people or to the land. But this one has caused harm to both. Step by step, the Lord is bringing His judgment upon Egypt and its gods while at the same time progressively hardening the already obstinate heart of Pharaoh.

Another plague is coming unless you pay heed

Our request is made and an answer is expected

The plague will come soon and it will come with speed

Is there a note of defiance in your voice that I have detected?

Pharaoh, you are continuing to bring this evil upon yourself

By not heeding the Lord who makes this request of you

Take your pride, fold it up, and put it on the shelf

Pharaoh, this is what I recommend you do

Now the plague which you assumed wouldn't come is here

And it is frightful for you, tee hee. What? No, I did chuckle!

This is going to get worse for you I fear

Because of your raised fist; I can see the hair on every knuckle

II. Intercede for Me (verses 25-28)

25 Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, "Go, sacrifice to your God in the land."

This is the second time that Pharaoh has now conceded to the judgments he has faced. The first was during the plague of frogs when he said, "Entreat the Lord that He may take away the frogs from me and from my people; and I will let the people go, that they may sacrifice to the Lord." (8:8)

After that, when he saw there was relief, he hardened his heart and changed his mind. Now he again tells them that they may go, but he only gives in to what they requested this time, not what they had originally asked for. The original request was that they could go into the wilderness of a three-day journey.

Overlooking that, Pharaoh grants them to "sacrifice to your God in the land." As an indication of the already hard heart of Pharaoh, we can read those words once again - "sacrifice to your God." He has granted that Yehovah is "a" god, but not "the" God. To him, He is only "Israel's" God. Further, rather than identifying Him by name, he only identifies him by his "otherness."

26 And Moses said, "It is not right to do so, for we would be sacrificing the abomination of the Egyptians to the Lord our God.

This explains what was previously left unexplained. In Chapter 5, a three-day journey into the wilderness was requested, but the explanation for this wasn't given. Now it is being relayed to Pharaoh. The request wasn't unfounded, but he simply didn't care about the reason at the time and so he didn't bother asking why.

Now though, the explanation is rendered, "for we would be sacrificing the abomination of the Egyptians." It is improbable that the Israelites had not sacrificed to the Lord in small groups, like at weddings or funerals. Further, as shepherds, they would have been meat eaters.

However, this wouldn't have been done in an open way, just as it isn't done by them today. Rather, they would have prepared the animals in markets or shops. But what is being requested is on a wholly different level. An entire group of people would be offering public, open sacrifices to their God.

This would be right "in the face" of the Egyptians and a true affront to them. Today, with open media, the sacrifices of the Jews and other groups are coming under greater scrutiny once again. The world, especially the radical left, vegans, and animal-rights activists, and other nutjobs are working to get animal sacrifices stopped altogether.

These Hebrews were looking to offer animals considered sacred to the Egyptians in a public display of worship. It would in essence be equivalent to killing Egypt's god for the pleasure of Israel's God. It would be an all-out affront on the Egyptian society.

26 (con't) If we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, then will they not stone us?

If they were to openly and publicly sacrifice a cow, which represented their god Isis, it would be beyond the pale. These and other animals were deified by the Egyptians and only catastrophe could result. Ellicott notes that later in Egyptian history, "On one occasion a Roman ambassador, who had accidentally killed a cat, was torn to pieces by the populace."

The request by the Lord was intended to honor Him while maintaining peace within the greater Egyptian society. The risk of conflict was not without reasonable basis. And Moses indicates what the result would be in the words "will they not stone us?"

It is the very first mention of stoning in the Bible or in any recorded history. Whether it was an accepted form of punishment in Egypt or elsewhere at this time isn't known, but it is an easy and obvious way to vent one's anger.

And it is still a common outrage levied against the people of Israel 3500 years later. The muslims living in the land of Israel frequently stone the Jews, their vehicles, their trains, and their homes and offices. And the first mention of this practice is right here in Exodus 8:26.

27 We will go three days' journey into the wilderness and sacrifice to the Lord our God

Now with the explanation fully revealed for the original request, it is repeated as a statement of certainty for Pharaoh. What he ignored in the past is now made clear to him and it is spoken with implicit intent behind the words. "Now you know; now we will."

27 (con't) as He will command us."

This indicates to Pharaoh that they had not been informed exactly what was entailed in the sacrifice and feast to be held. Rather, they had been instructed and they were simply attempting to be obedient to the calling.

It more poignantly shows the trouble they could be in with the Egyptians, because whatever mode and means of worship was requested wasn't known, and so it could be more than just sacrificing animals that could upset them. This also is another anticipatory statement which will be later explained in Exodus -

"Our livestock also shall go with us; not a hoof shall be left behind. For we must take some of them to serve the Lord our God, and even we do not know with what we must serve the Lord until we arrive there."

Exodus10:26

Like before, if Pharaoh asked now what they meant, he would understand the whole picture, but he doesn't. It shows a continued arrogance and simplicity of mind that will persist in leading him to more hardening of the heart and more trouble to come.

28 So Pharaoh said, "I will let you go, that you may sacrifice to the Lord your God in the wilderness; only you shall not go very far away.

Pharaoh, again grants release, even with the condition of going into the wilderness, but it is to be inferred that he means still within the realm of Egyptian rule. Instead of agreeing to a three-day journey, he agrees with the unspecified "not...very far away."

He has now, for the first time, shown what his true opposition to the request is. If they go, they may never come back. They could easily continue on towards Canaan and refuse to return. Rather than refuse the vague words of Pharaoh, Moses remains quiet. This is probably because he already knows the outcome of the matter.

Pharaoh will get relief and he will again harden his heart. Moses has already been made aware that the firstborn son is to be threatened in exchange for the release of Israel, and that has not yet occurred. Instead, Pharaoh has niggled over minutiae and Moses has remained silent. As the Geneva Bible evaluates this verse

"So the wicked instruct God's messengers how far they may go." Geneva

It is like the increasing attacks of the government upon Christian pastors - "You can say this, but no more." First, they silence them on politics in exchange for their obedience to the dollar. Next they silence them on moral issues in exchange for their freedom.

Soon, they will demand silence on the principle tenets of their faith in exchange for their lives. Each step brings the people of God closer to a final confrontation.

28 (con't) Intercede for me."

In verse 8, during the height of the plague of frogs, Pharaoh said, "Entreat the Lord that He may take away the frogs from me and from my people; and I will let the people go, that they may sacrifice to the Lord."

Now, an abbreviated form of that long plea is given - hatiru baadi, "pray for me." All of the rest of the words can be inserted by us. "Oh man, this swam is horrifying. I can't stand it anymore and I will let you go sacrifice to the Lord. Let's just get this plague ended. Intercede with the Lord for me."

This plague is horrifying, yes it is true

Please make it end and I will do as you say

I will let Israel go sacrifice in the land, this I will do

Just get rid of this swarm, as to you I now pray

It shall be done if a three day's journey is granted

The plague will end and all will again be good

What was destroyed can again be planted

Now that the agreement is made and things are understood

But Pharaoh, don't make the same mistake you made before

Don't harden your heart and from the Lord turn away

Surely worse things will come as He plagues you some more

If you are unwilling to fulfill the words that you did say

III. But Pharaoh Hardened His Heart (verses 29-32)

29 Then Moses said, "Indeed I am going out from you, and I will entreat the Lord, that the swarms of flies may depart tomorrow from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people.

In agreement to the conditions, while leaving the vague words of Pharaoh for the Israelites to "not go very far away" left alone, He promises that he will, in fact, entreat the Lord for the plague to end. This time, rather than asking Pharaoh when the plague should end, he simply follows with the same time-frame as the ending of the plague of frogs, which is "tomorrow."

The relief would come, it would be soon, and it would be complete. The swarm would depart from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people. However, the granting is conditioned upon allowing the worshipping of Yehovah through sacrifice by His servants and by His people.

The contrast is evident, though unstated at this time. The distinction is made between the people of God and the people who are not of God. So it will be at the rapture of the church, and so it will be in the end times, during the tribulation.

There are spiritual separations which exist and the boundaries between them are known to, and closely watched by the Lord.

29 (con't) But let Pharaoh not deal deceitfully anymore in not letting the people go to sacrifice to the Lord."

In the closing words of the conversation, Moses rebukes Pharaoh for his conduct which was noted in verses 8-15. Pharaoh agreed to let Israel go, but in his agreement, he dealt deceitfully. The word used here is hathal and it means properly, "to mock."

His change of heart is equated with mockingly deceiving the Lord, and it is an evident trait in anyone who fears the true God only as long as His effects are felt in a negative way. There is no true love or caring for Him or His people.

Rather, there is a purposeful mocking attitude deep in the heart which comes forth like blooming flowers in the spring. They are evident, they are showy, and they fade just as quickly at the next time of deprivation or hardship arises.

In order to keep him from such an attitude, Moses makes the effort to remind him of his past transgression in hopes of it not turning into another one. As Ellicott notes -

"God's servants must rebuke even kings when they openly break the moral law."
Ellicott

How few are willing to do this, but how important it is, especially in this world where the spirit of Pharaoh is growing almost exponentially as the days pass!

30 So Moses went out from Pharaoh and entreated the Lord.

In accord with the request of Pharaoh, and even before the people have assembled to depart for their sacrifice in the wilderness Moses upholds his part of the bargain. This takes us right back to verses 12 & 13 where the same basic thing happened.

Although we could throw the old adage at Moses, "Fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me," he is willing to follow the preset plan of the Lord so that His signs and wonders might be multiplied. The Lord's representative thus petitions Him on behalf of Pharaoh.

31 And the Lord did according to the word of Moses; He removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people. Not one remained.

Again as before, the Lord heard Moses and defended both the integrity of His own name, and that of Moses before Pharaoh. For a second time, the petition comes less for mercy on Pharaoh than it is made for the glory of the Lord to be revealed and the honor of the Lord to be maintained.

The removal of the plague is as remarkable as the initiation of it. The plague was everywhere, it was unstoppable by any known means, and yet it was ended in all places, completely, and at a specified time. Another victory over more false gods of Egypt!

Again as before, the surpassing greatness of the Lord is seen in the ending of the terrible plague upon Pharaoh and in the land of Pharaoh. The swarms departed exactly as promised. When the word is spoken, the word never fails. But the same is not true with the word of man.

It is a rare trait that a man can be known for the truth of the words he utters. Normally, something more certain than the breath out of one's mouth is required to ensure that the words will be followed up with deeds. And the reason is that all the way through human history, men have made promises and those promises have been broken.

From the desperate gambler looking to pay off his debts and never gamble again, to the great Pharaoh in Egypt who begged for the removal of the plagues, promising relief to his enslaved Hebrews, the words prove false and the actions of the heart are recorded in God's scroll of memory for future judgment...

32 But Pharaoh hardened his heart at this time also; neither would he let the people go.

The hardening of Pharaoh's heart is so important that it has been mentioned continuously and meticulously by the Lord. It isn't an arbitrary side issue, but it is at the very core of biblical doctrine. We are being taught about the nature of God in relation to man, and the nature of man in the presence of God.

And yet, we as Christians will follow misguided presuppositions about what is occurring rather than pay heed to what the Lord is trying to tell us. The Lord is directing us with His actions towards us, but He is also leaving the final decision of how we relate to Him, and how we perceive Him, completely up to us.

Because of this, when we stand before Him, we will only have ourselves to blame in how we responded to Him and how we instructed others about His nature. The goodness of God cannot be on trial here because Pharaoh was given advanced warning of what would come about.

He was given time to reflect on that bad decision, and then he was granted the grace of being relieved of what he had brought upon himself. The Lord could have allowed the plague to go on forever, made the plague worse, or even added in another plague on top of this one. Instead, He ended it.

And yet, once again, the Bible tells us that "Pharaoh hardened his heart at this time also." It was a volitional act of his free will. And it is recorded for us to read and to assimilate into our own minds. He has given us His word, He has told us what He expects, and He has shown the consequences of our disobedient hearts.

We can't blame God when we get syphilis or AIDS. He has told us how to conduct our lives from a moral standpoint. We can't blame God when a loved one dies, when He has already shown us that all are destined to die and that He alone is the Decider of when that will occur.

We cannot say five minutes after the rapture, "It's not fair! I wasn't ready!" And we cannot stand before him at the judgment and say, the preacher told me that I was predestined to salvation and so I assumed that was true. Instead, we have to call to Him for healing, and we have to actively participate in His plan of salvation.

The span of our lives is unknown except to the One who gave us that life. When the final moment comes for you, will He say, "This one hardened his heart and would not yield to my call." Or will He be pleased with how you responded to His goodness in creation, in family, in blessings, and in the Gift of His Son, Jesus?

It is up to you. Choose wisely, and be sure to choose today. The Bible promises us no tomorrows. Let me tell you what you need to know so that you will stand approved when He comes for you...

Closing Verse: "Be still, and know that I am God;
I will be exalted among the nations,
I will be exalted in the earth!" Psalm 46:10

Next Week: Exodus 9:1-12 (The Plagues of Livestock and Boils)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Swarming Plague

And the Lord said to Moses

“Rise early in the morning

And stand before Pharaoh as he comes out to the water

There you shall give him my warning

Then say to him, ‘Thus says the Lord plainly

“Let My people go, that they may serve Me

Or else, if you will not let My people go, behold

I will send swarms of flies on you

And your servants, on your people as you are told

And into your houses the swam will go too

The houses of the Egyptians shall be full of swarms of flies

And also the ground on which they stand; Pay heed! Be wise!

And in that day I will set apart
The land of Goshen, in which My people dwell
That no swarms of flies shall be there
Pay attention to the words which I do now tell
In order that you may know and understand
That I am the Lord in the midst of the land

I will make a difference between
My people and your people
Tomorrow this sign shall be seen
And the Lord did so
Thick swarms of flies came into the house of Pharaoh
Into his servants' houses, they did go
And into all the land of Egypt, what an amazing show!
The land was corrupted because of the swarms of flies
The immensity of what was coming Pharaoh didn't realize

Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, we understand
And said, "Go, sacrifice to your God in the land."
And Moses said, "It is not right to do so
For we would be sacrificing the abomination
Of the Egyptians to the Lord our God, as you know
We cannot sacrifice inside Egypt the nation
If we sacrifice the abomination

Of the Egyptians before their eyes
Then will they not stone us?
Even until every Hebrew dies
We will go three days' journey, thus
Into the wilderness and sacrifice
To the Lord our God as He will command us
The removal of the plague demands this price

So Pharaoh said, "I will let you go
That you may sacrifice to the Lord your God
In the wilderness, even so
Only you shall not go very far away as you trod
Intercede for me
This plague is horrifying as you can see
Then Moses said, "Indeed I am going out from you, here I go!
And I will entreat the Lord
That the swarms of flies may depart tomorrow from Pharaoh
From his servants, and from his people, according to the word

But let Pharaoh not deal deceitfully anymore, making it twice
In not letting the people go, and to the Lord make sacrifice
So Moses went out from Pharaoh and entreated the Lord
And the Lord did according to Moses' spoken word
He removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh

From his servants, and from his people, not one remained
But Pharaoh hardened his heart at this time also Neither would he let the people go, but instead them he detained
A hard heart inside a man is a fearful thing
It will lead him down a path towards great loss
In the end only immense sorrow it will bring Especially when that heart is hard towards Jesus' cross

God gives us every warning in advance to beware
He provides guidance for the path, as a lamp so bright
If we heed His word, reading it daily, we will find there
Life and healing and the most radiant light
It is given as a guide and a rule for our life
To lead us across the Jordan to the heavenly shore
Read it now, accept its words and end all your strife
Come to Jesus and be reconciled to God forevermore

He is reaching out nail-scarred hands, offering peace
Receive the gift, bow the knee, and let the enmity cease

Together with the saints of God we shall our mighty Lord praise
There in His majestic presence for innumerable, eternal days

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 9:1-12 (THE PLAGUES OF LIVESTOCK AND BOILS)

Today we will zip right through two more plagues upon Pharaoh and the land of Egypt... well maybe not zip. But be it a zip or something a bit less than that, one of the plagues we'll look at is a plague upon the livestock of Egypt... all of the livestock. And for me, it's a good time to consider the position of animals in relation to man.

The Lord created the animals and, just like man, He is sovereign over them. But there are times when we don't act as if we believe it anymore than we act as if we believe God has a right to our own souls. When someone close to us dies, we may find ourselves questioning God's goodness, struggling with our faith, and unable to continue to praise Him.

But there is a fact that we need to consider - we are all going to die and we have no control over that. It is inevitable. And the same is true with animals, including our precious pets. It hurts to lose a pet and unfortunately, we may allow ourselves to get caught up in the same confused thinking about a pet as we do with a human.

However, if we simply consider the world around us, we can hopefully evaluate these things differently. How many of us like to have a burger or a steak? How about a nice chicken parmesan? Can we honestly say that the Lord loves our favorite pet more or less than one of these animals?

But suppose you don't eat meat? Tigers do. Do we kill the tigers to spare the deer? The world around us is filled with life and all of that life belongs to the Lord. Some animals eat others, some bugs need to be swatted, and sometimes entire herds of animals will die in a plague.

We don't question God's goodness in these instances. We accept that the world around us works in a certain way. As we read today's account, think of the innumerable cute little goats that died. Think of the donkeys and horses that were struck by the plague.

God created and God is sovereign over His creation. Remember this when your favorite pet dies. Instead of being angry at God for taking the pet that was inevitably going to die, remember to thank God for the pet that He allowed into your life for a special season and for the joy of your heart.

Keep all things in perspective and know that God is good and He is good all the time.

Text Verse: "How the animals groan!
The herds of cattle are restless,
Because they have no pasture;
Even the flocks of sheep suffer punishment." Joel 1:18

Ecclesiastes tells us that there is a season for everything under heaven, including a time to die. Until all things are made new, this is what we can expect to continue with regularity and often with great sorrow for any one of us. In our sorrow, let us remember that God remains good, despite the painful tear in our hearts.

For those who belong to the Lord, let's just keep our eyes on the Prize; let us fix them on Jesus. Yes, weeping may come for a night, but joy comes in the morning. As we see the destruction upon innumerable animals, and then the terrible plague of boils upon man and beast, let us remember that such things are according to a much greater plan than we could ever conceive or imagine.

This great plan centers on the work of the Lord for His people, the flock of His pasture. This is a truth which is found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Let My People Go (verses 1-5)

1 Then the Lord said to Moses, "Go in to Pharaoh

Towards the end of the previous chapter, the plague of flies ended because of a promise by Pharaoh to let the people go sacrifice to the Lord in the wilderness. The last words of the chapter revealed a broken promise though. Here are those concluding words of chapter 8 -

"So Moses went out from Pharaoh and entreated the Lord. 31 And the Lord did according to the word of Moses; He removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people. Not one remained. 32 But Pharaoh hardened his heart at this time also; neither would he let the people go." Exodus 8:30-32

It is with this thought in mind, that we begin chapter 9 with the Lord once again instructing Moses to go in and speak to Pharaoh...

1 (con't) and tell him, 'Thus says the Lord God of the Hebrews:

koh amar Yehovah - "Thus says Yehovah." He once again declares His name. "I am the Existent One, full of all power. I control my creation and I see the future before it comes to pass. And I also see the heart of man."

However, unlike the beginning of chapter 8, an additional distinction is made. Not only is He Yehovah, but He is elohe ha'ivrim - "God of the Hebrews." This is the first time that this term has been spoken directly to Pharaoh. The term "Hebrews" was known to the Egyptians, but it was a name, like that of a clan. The meaning was disconnected from its use.

Now though, the name "Hebrew" is being reconnected to the use of the name. We may call someone "Tom Carpenter" and think of that as his name - "Oh, there goes Tom Carpenter." However, a "carpenter" is something. If we reattach the use of the word to the name of the person, we can deduce that at some point in his history, one of his forefathers was probably a carpenter.

If we pay attention to names, we can do this with many people we know. There is Alex Goldsmith; his father worked in gold. There is Andy Miller; his father worked with grains. There goes Mark Holiday; his family never did a thing. In the case of the title "Lord, God of the Hebrews," the use is being reconnected to the name.

In essence, "I, Yehovah, am 'elohe ha'ivrim.'" The term "Hebrew" means "to cross over." In His words, we can see what that means. "I am the Defender and Protector of those who have crossed over to Me. They are my people and I have made a distinction between them and you by placing My name upon them and by separating them for Myself."

This is now the 17th time that the term "Hebrew" is mentioned in Scripture and the 11th in Exodus. In all, it will be used about 50 times in the Bible, and many of those will be speaking of the language and not necessarily the people. Each time the word is used, it has significance.

Its introduction here is to further distinguish the Lord's people from all others. As those who have crossed over to be His servants have not yet been set free, the demand of Exodus which has become so common is made once again...

1 (con't) "Let My people go, that they may serve Me.

The Hebrew people are the Lord's people, not Pharaoh's people. And to the Lord, their service is demanded. They have been in bondage to Pharaoh and He is expecting this to change. It isn't coincidence that the book of Hebrews follows directly after Paul's epistles.

This pictures the transition from the church age back to a focus on the Hebrew people. Those who have long been in bondage to the power of sin and the devil are being asked to return to the Lord and understand that He had always been there for them.

The demand upon the world of the antichrist will be parallel to the demand upon Pharaoh in Exodus. If he continues to afflict them, consequences will be suffered, just as they are upon Egypt now. We see this as we continue...

2 For if you refuse to let them go, and still hold them,

These words are only a portion of a thought, and yet they are offset as a single verse. It is as if they are being highlighted with a pause off of the lips of the Lord for Pharaoh's strained and expectant ears.

They are spoken as a "more definite assumption, in view of past experience, that Pharaoh may defiantly harden himself." (Lange) In other words, they are showing that Pharaoh was heaping up guilt by his continued obstinate attitude against the word of the Lord.

The words "if" and "still" show, with all of the exactitude that the Bible can give, that the hardening of Pharaoh's heart has, and continues to be, the fault of Pharaoh alone. Yehovah has, and will continue to emphatically declare his will, and yet Pharaoh has willfully chosen to reject that will by exercising his own.

Matthew Henry gives a clear and concise evaluation of this attitude of Pharaoh and expands it to all people who strive against the word of the Lord -

"Sinners have none to blame but themselves, for that pride and ungodliness which abuse the bounty and patience of God. For, however the Lord hardens the hearts of men, it is always as a punishment of former sins." Matthew Henry Pharaoh has been sinful and his sins continue. And with his sin comes the judgment of the Lord...

3 behold, the hand of the Lord will be on your cattle in the field, on the horses, on the donkeys, on the camels, on the oxen, and on the sheep—a very severe pestilence.

The fifth plague is announced. It will be against the beasts of the field, some of which were deified by the Egyptians. If they were gods, they can now demonstrate their god-ness by resisting Yehovah. But if Yehovah is the One, true God, then they will suffer by His hand.

This then is an attack on the false gods of Hathor, the goddess with a cow head, and Apis, the bull god - symbol of fertility. These false gods will be proven exactly that, false. The "hand of the Lord" was promised in Exodus 6:1. There it said -

"Then the LORD said to Moses, "Now you will see what I will do to Pharaoh: Because of my mighty hand he will let them go; because of my mighty hand he will drive them out of his country." Exodus 6:1 (NIV)

The hand represents strength, power, and ability to perform. He formed these animals on the sixth day of creation and gave man dominion over them. However, He is sovereign over all things, even the life of all animals. This is reflected in the 50th Psalm -

"For every beast of the forest is Mine,
And the cattle on a thousand hills.
11 I know all the birds of the mountains,
And the wild beasts of the field are Mine." Psalm 50:10, 11

Now, working out His sovereign will, he calls down the sentence upon Pharaoh and his kingdom. The pestilence, or deber in Hebrew, will come upon a notable list of valuable property. This word, deber, is usually used when speaking of pestilence among people, but it also covers animals as we see here in Exodus.

And it isn't just a normal pestilence that occurred from time to time as the waters of the Nile rose and fell, or as the seasons changed bringing in pests carrying disease. Instead, the Lord says that it will be kaved, or literally "heavy" upon the land.

The imagery is that of the hand of the Lord coming down in a crushing blow against the animals which comprised much wealth in Egypt. It will be upon the "cattle in the field," a term used to describe any of the animals of the flock or the herd, some of which will be named specifically after this.

It will also come upon "the horses." Horses would have been used for the chariots of Egypt and possibly as beasts of burden in the field as well. Their main use at this time would have been for warfare. Having a chariot implies having horses for the chariot.

And chariots were used both for royal transport and for military use. They were first mentioned in Scripture all the way back at the time of Joseph, over 200 years earlier, and so they would probably have been very abundant in the land.

The plague would also be on the donkeys. Again, donkeys would have been very common in Egypt. They were first mentioned in Genesis 12 at the time when Abraham was in Egypt, noting that Abraham had many as a part of his great wealth.

The plague would also be on the camels. In the same verse that donkeys were first mentioned, Genesis 12:16, camels were first noted in Scripture as well. According to the liberal scholars at Cambridge -

"Camels were not used, or bred, in ancient Egypt, nor do they appear 'in any inscription or painting before the Greek period.'" (Erman, p. 493; cf. W. Max Müller, EB. i. 634; Sayce, EHH. 169). Cambridge

Because of this, they see the inclusion of camels as an anachronism, unless it is a reference to camels owned by traders. However, the Bible itself is a witness to history, and therefore this statement is no anachronism.

If Abraham had camels and other wealth when he was in Egypt, then it implies that there were camels in Egypt at that time. A little thought clarifies what liberal scholars can't seem to grasp. Egypt was an integral part of the trade route from the Middle East to Africa.

Just because they didn't deify camels doesn't mean that there weren't jillions of them hanging around the pyramids waiting for tourists to hop on and take a ride. In addition to these animals, oxen and sheep are also noted. The standard and common animals of the herd and flock were to be affected by this heavy pestilence.

4 And the Lord will make a difference between the livestock of Israel and the livestock of Egypt.

In the previous chapter during the fourth plague, the Lord said -

"And in that day I will set apart the land of Goshen, in which My people dwell, that no swarms of flies shall be there, in order that you may know that I am the Lord in the midst of the land." Exodus 8:22

The Land of Goshen was set apart from the rest of Pharaoh's domain, but it was only noted that it was where Israel dwelt. Nothing was said, one way or the other, concerning any Egyptians who also dwelt there, which later we will see that they did.

However, this plague adds in an entirely new dimension. Not only will the Lord make a distinction between the land where Israel dwelt and the rest of Egypt, but He will now make a distinction between the livestock of Israel and of Egypt, much of which would have been collocated.

The very livestock of one group would die next to the livestock of another group. It would be a marvelous display of the Lord's grace upon Israel while at the same time judging Egypt. It is somewhat of a precursor to the final plague on the firstborn in this respect. The word for "and make a difference" in Hebrew is v'hiphlah.

It is the second of seven uses of the word palah, in the Bible. It means to "set apart," but the word also means "wonderfully" or "wondrously." Surely we can see the wondrous work of the Lord in his ability to judge even between the livestock of one group and another.

4 (con't) So nothing shall die of all that belongs to the children of Israel.'''

The Hebrew is emphatic and could be more literally rendered, "There shall not die of all that is the children's of Israel a thing." (Pulpit) The Lord gives life and the Lord controls death. It is a note of His absolute sovereignty over all things.

5 Then the Lord appointed a set time, saying, "Tomorrow the Lord will do this thing in the land."

Like the previous plague, it is announced by the Lord and it will come about. There will be no stretching forth of Aaron's rod, or any other visible display to initiate the action. Rather, the word alone has spoken and it will come about by that same word.

There are a few reasons why this plague may have been announced in advance as it was. One is to show the Lord's sovereignty over the plague and the timing of it. Plagues of this type surely came from time to time, but this one is warned of in advance. The second is to show His control, in advance, over which animals would be affected by it.

And the third would be as a point of grace. In verse three, it said that all the cattle in the field would die. If they were brought in from the field, it is possible some could be saved, although this wasn't stated either way.

Every beast of the forest is Mine
And the cattle on a thousand hills also belong to Me
I know all the birds of the mountains
And the wild beasts of the field I watch over tenderly

The life of all the creatures is in My hand
I created them and direct their life's span
But somehow man has failed to understand
They are not gods, but a portion of My earthly plan

And as I wish I give life, and I take it away
Directing all things so that man will hopefully see
That as God to Me alone they should exalt and obey
And with their hearts they should worship only Me

II. The Heart of Pharaoh (verses 6, 7)

6 So the Lord did this thing on the next day, and all the livestock of Egypt died; but of the livestock of the children of Israel, not one died.

It is certain here, as it is throughout Scripture, that context needs to be considered when making absolute claims concerning words such as "all" and

"every." In this verse, it says that "all the livestock of Egypt died." However, in the coming plagues, it is noted that they will come upon the animals of the Egyptians.

Therefore, this verse now does not mean all in the absolute sense, but in the general use of the word which is found throughout Scripture. The great number is being considered in opposition to the exclusive description given for the animals of the Israelites, which was "not one." A literal translation from the Hebrew is lo met ekhad - "not.died.one."

This contradistinction between the two is all the more poignant when considering its ramifications concerning the superstitions of the Egyptians. Whether they actually deified the animals, or whether they deified what the animals represented, the fact that their animals died and the Israelite's didn't shows that Yehovah was sovereign over all.

What would seem the cruelest part of this wasn't the loss of money and accumulated wealth, but the knowledge that He was capable of this act at will. Thus, He was capable of it in the past, but took no action against their misguided beliefs.

Further, He was also capable of accomplishing the same feat at any time in the future if He so chose. Their livelihood and the animal's lives were subject to His sovereign will. Thus as Job says -

"Who among all these does not know
That the hand of the Lord has done this,
10 In whose hand is the life of every living thing." Job 12:9, 10

7 Then Pharaoh sent, and indeed, not even one of the livestock of the Israelites was dead.

It is obvious from this verse that Pharaoh saw the immense destruction of life around him and thought that it was impossible that none of Israel's animals would have shared in the same fate.

In comparable terms for us, it would be like a nuclear bomb going off in a city full of Christians and Muslims while all of the Muslims died, but none of the Christians did. How could it be possible? But in fact, not even one of their animals died. However, the perverse nature of Pharaoh is revealed once again in this remarkable plague as we see in the finishing of verse seven...

7 (con't) But the heart of Pharaoh became hard, and he did not let the people go.

Whatever he was thinking, it didn't include releasing captive Israel. Perhaps he figured they were better at tending to their flocks than the Egyptians. Maybe he figured he would simply take the animals of Israel for himself.

Whatever he thought, he showed that he cared nothing for the animals he had lost, and neither did he care for his subjects who fared very poorly under the heavy hand of the Lord. Instead, it says that "the heart of Pharaoh became hard." But the Hebrew reads differently. It says his heart became kavad - heavy.

It is a verb comparable to the adjective used to describe the hand of the Lord in verse 3 - kaved. Despite the heavy hand of the Lord, the heart of Pharaoh only increased in heaviness. The contrast is given to show us, once again, the utterly obstinate nature of the man and how these judgments came upon him because of his own willful disregard of the Lord.

A hard heart is terrible thing to keep inside
It can only lead down a path of woe and sorrow
With every moment and with each step and stride
It will lead to a more painful tomorrow

If a plague on the livestock won't change the heart of Pharaoh
I will bring yet another plague upon the land
One that will lead him to more calamity and woe
This will continue until he learns to understand

Now I will afflict him in a most painful way
Boils will well up on him and all of Egypt the land
The magicians will have had their final say
Another plague is ahead, coming from My heavy hand

III. The Plague of Boils (verses 8-12)

8 So the Lord said to Moses and Aaron, "Take for yourselves handfuls of ashes

Because no positive change in heart arose from the previous plague, a sixth plague is now directed by the Lord. It is to be an object lesson for Pharaoh to consider. Like the third plague, it comes without notice and it is inflicted directly on people.

To initiate this plague, they are told to take melo ha'penekhem - "that which fills the hollow of the hand." In this action they are directed to use piakh. This is not "ashes," but rather "soot." To figure out exactly what is occurring here, I did a study on this word, which is only used two times in the Bible and both are in this plague - in verses 8 & 10.

This word piakh, comes from the word puakh which means to breathe or blow. Thus soot far better fits the imagery. This word, puakh is used "in the negative sense of 'to utter' lies" (HAW). If one thinks of Pharaoh when reading the following proverbs, you can see the similarity -

"A true witness delivers souls,
But a deceitful witness speaks lies." Proverbs 14:25

Pharaoh has previously promised to let Israel go, but he has rather spoken lies. Likewise, the consequences of this are noted -

"A false witness will not go unpunished,
And he who speaks lies shall perish." Proverbs 19:9

The soot which will blow throughout the land is set in contrast to the lies which have issued from Pharaoh's scoffing mouth as he has sneered at the word of the Lord. And the object lesson continues...

8 (con't) from a furnace,

The word here is kibshan. It is only used four times in the Bible and refers to something used for firing materials. The word comes from another word, kabash, which means to subdue or bring into bondage and "to make serve, by force if necessary" (HAW).

Therefore, there is a contrast being made between what Pharaoh has done to Israel and what will happen to him with the soot of the furnace. Goshen, and much of Egypt had been converted into fields of brick-making, and it was the Israelites who had been subjected to the forced labor of making them.

As Ellicott notes, "When ashes from one of these kilns were made the germs of a disease that was a sore infliction, their own wrongdoing became to the Egyptians a whip wherewith God scourged them."

It is then a just retribution for the ill-treatment of Israel that they should receive this plague from the Hebrew hands of Moses and Aaron, and from the kilns which brought so much suffering. Later in Deuteronomy 4, the Lord will describe to the Israelites their ill treatment and His deliverance -

"But the Lord has taken you and brought you out of the iron furnace, out of Egypt, to be His people, an inheritance, as you are this day." (4:20)

8 (con't) and let Moses scatter it toward the heavens in the sight of Pharaoh.

Finally, the object lesson is revealed in what they do with the handfuls of soot from the furnaces. They are to "scatter it toward the heavens." As fine dust permeates everything and everywhere, so this plague would permeate the land.

And as the dust would settle upon the people from the heavens, it was indicative of God's judgment alighting upon the people from the heavens. As this was done "in the sight of Pharaoh," it was a clear indication that the object lesson was intended for him to see the contrast between the ruthless, forced service of Israel and the soot; between the bondage of Israel and the furnace; and between the God of Israel and the kingdom of Pharaoh.

9 And it will become fine dust in all the land of Egypt,

The word for "dust" is abaq. It indicates very small particles, which carry on the wind. It is the noun form of the verb abaq, which means "to wrestle." The idea is that when men wrestle, dust is thrown up from the ground.

There is a divine wrestling match which is occurring as the dust is being thrown up into the skies of Egypt. The question for Pharaoh is, "What will be the outcome of the match?" It won't be pleasant -

9 (con't) and it will cause boils that break out in sores on man and beast throughout all the land of Egypt."

This horrible plague is an attack on the Egyptian goddess Sekhmet, the goddess with power over diseases. It is also an attack against Sunu, the pestilence god, and Isis, the goddess of healing. Again, the Lord is demonstrating the futility of polytheism as He works his plagues against the Egyptians.

In Deuteronomy 28, this affliction will be called "the boils of Egypt." The Lord warned Israel that if they would not heed His commandments, this same affliction would come upon them that had come upon Egypt. Here is that verse -

"The Lord will strike you with the boils of Egypt, with tumors, with the scab, and with the itch, from which you cannot be healed." Deuteronomy 28:27

Because it is identified with Egypt, it is something that was considered unique to Egypt at that time. However, it would become a tool of the Lord for correction of Israel as well as for the punishment of Egypt.

But the New Testament also gives a similar description of this plague in the bowl judgments coming upon the earth during the tribulation period. In the first of the bowl judgments, we see this -

"So the first went and poured out his bowl upon the earth, and a foul and loathsome sore came upon the men who had the mark of the beast and those who worshiped his image." Revelation 16:2

The Lord is consistent in His measures for judgment and correction, and He is sovereign over time, place, and type concerning His choice of those measures. In this action against Pharaoh and Egypt, Adam Clarke notes that there is -

"...a congruity between the crime and the punishment. The furnaces, in the labor of which they oppressed the Hebrews, now yielded the instruments of their punishment; for every particle of those ashes, formed by unjust and oppressive labor, seemed to be a boil or a blain on the tyrannical king and his cruel and hard-hearted people." Clarke

10 Then they took ashes from the furnace and stood before Pharaoh, and Moses scattered them toward heaven. And they caused boils that break out in sores on man and beast.

Just as the Lord has spoken, they performed as commanded in the presence of Pharaoh. And just as the Lord had said, the boils that break out in sores came upon both man and beast. And so bad were these boils that they were completely debilitating to those afflicted by them...

11 And the magicians could not stand before Moses because of the boils, for the boils were on the magicians and on all the Egyptians.

The magicians, or khartummim, are singled out in this verse and it is the last time that these khartummim will be mentioned in Exodus. Up to this point, they had accompanied Pharaoh and were there at his side for the expressed intent of standing against the signs and wonders of the Lord which were accomplished through Moses.

However, since the first plague, they could do nothing about matching the scope of any plague, nor could they do anything about ending any of them. By the third plague, they could not even replicate what had been done.

Now, not only are they afflicted by the plague, but they can no longer even stand before Moses because of it. In this last mention of them, they have formally conceded the match and have acknowledged their defeat before the Lord. There will be no more support from them, or resistance offered by them.

This is what Paul refers to in his second letter to Timothy -

"Now as Jannes and Jambres resisted Moses, so do these also resist the truth: men of corrupt minds, disapproved concerning the faith; 9 but they will progress no further, for their folly will be manifest to all, as theirs also was." 2 Timothy 3:8, 9

The folly of the magicians became manifest to all and they have become a sign to the people of the world who attempt to perform magical signs in opposition to the Lord. How unfortunate that so many have continued down this path, even to this day. And even more are those who supposedly do so in the name of the Lord.

In the end, their folly will be manifest to all.

12 But the Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh; and he did not heed them,

In Exodus 4:21, the Lord said he would harden Pharaoh's heart, using the word khazaq. Since then, four times it has been said that Pharaoh's heart was hardened using this same word. But this is the first time it is ascribed directly to the Lord - "But the Lord hardened."

Up until this point, the hardening has been a volitional act of Pharaoh's will, even if it was passively accomplished by the Lord. The Lord gave signs and wonders which could have been responded to favorably or negatively based on the predispositions of the individual.

In the case of Pharaoh, he was predisposed to arrogance and an obdurate behavior. Now, with there being no remedy to his arrogance, we see what Paul describes in Romans 1 -

"And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a debased mind, to do those things which are not fitting."

Romans 1:28

This verse then signals a judicial hardening of the heart because of his previous volitional acts of obstinacy. With no remedy, there is no point in wooing; only punishing. Pharaoh has gone from forsaking the right way to hating correction. There can only be one end for such a person and it is explained in the book of Proverbs -

"Harsh discipline is for him who forsakes the way,
And he who hates correction will die." Proverbs 15:10

12 (fin) just as the Lord had spoken to Moses.

ka'asher dibber Yehovah el Mosheh - "as spoke the Lord to Moses." The heart of Pharaoh was passively hardened by the Lord in the past; now it is an active punishment for rejecting the right path. And the purpose behind this progressive action is exactly as stated at the beginning -

"And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply My signs and My wonders in the land of Egypt. 4 But Pharaoh will not heed you, so that I may lay My hand on Egypt and bring My armies and My people, the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt by great judgments. 5 And the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord, when I stretch out My hand on Egypt and bring out the children of Israel from among them." Exodus 7:3-5

The Lord was not honored among the Egyptians, but they would learn to know Him. The children of Israel were bound by the Egyptians, but the Lord would bring them out from that bondage. And in His acts, Israel would learn that He was their God, the only God, and that He was faithful to His covenant promises.

As we have seen time and again already, there is a lot we can learn about obstinate Pharaoh. He has willfully turned from the Lord, even after abundant evidences that His word is true and reliable. Of course, we all know many who have followed this same avenue.

They have seen changed lives, they have been made aware of the nature of God, and have then realized that the God of creation matches the God of the Bible.

And yet, they harden themselves to the truth that they know is there in front of them.

For those of us who are saved, we shake our head in disbelief, we pray for those like this that we love, and we even secretly feel smug over those we think deserve God's judgment... "How stupid can they be? They'll get it in the end."

But in reality, many of us who are saved already by the blood of Christ are actually in an even more deplorable state. We are saved, we have acknowledged Him, received Him, and been granted the assurance of eternal life because of what He did.

And yet, we haven't placed Him as Lord of our lives. We ignore the commands and exhortations of Paul when they don't suit our personal mores, and we lie to ourselves that the Lord doesn't care. Is our disobedience worth the loss of eternal rewards? Is that the case? Are we merely satisfied with being on the heavenly highway and letting it go with that?

Today, I would ask each person here who has called out to Christ to soberly consider their walk. Are you reading His word, going to Bible Studies, walking in obedience, and continuously redirecting yourselves to the right path when you stray?

If not, today I challenge you to do these things. Make the Savior of your soul the Lord of your life. You will fall... we all do, but better to attempt obedience, than to ignore it. Today, ask Christ to strengthen you in who you are as a valued child of God through His gracious adoption. May it be so! Amen.

Closing Verse "To whom shall I speak and give warning,
That they may hear?
Indeed their ear is uncircumcised,
And they cannot give heed.
Behold, the word of the Lord is a reproach to them;
They have no delight in it." Jeremiah 6:10

Next Week: Exodus 9:13-35 (The Plague of Hail) (26th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Plagues Upon Beast and Man

Then the Lord said to Moses, "Go in to Pharaoh
And tell him, 'Thus says the Lord
God of the Hebrews: "Let My people go
That they may serve Me; listen to my word

For if you refuse to let them go
And still hold them, and will not yield
Behold, the hand of the Lord even so
Will be on your cattle in the field
On the horses and on the donkeys that you keep
And there's more, as I continue the sentence

On the camels, on the oxen, and on the sheep—

A very severe pestilence

And the Lord will make a difference

Between the livestock of Israel

And the livestock of Egypt

You will see it's true as I do now tell

So nothing shall die of all, as I am relaying

That belongs to the children of Israel, please understand

Then the Lord appointed a set time, saying

"Tomorrow the Lord will do this thing in the land

So the Lord did this thing on the next day

And all the livestock of Egypt died

But of the livestock of the children of Israel... hooray!

Not one died, and so the Lord was glorified

Then Pharaoh sent, and indeed

Not even one of the livestock of the Israelites was dead

But the heart of Pharaoh became hard

And he did not let the people go, just as the Lord had said

So the Lord said to Moses and Aaron

“Take for yourselves handfuls of ashes from a furnace

And let Moses scatter it toward the heavens

In the sight of Pharaoh, so he knows the source of the menace
And it will become fine dust no doubt
In all of Egypt the land
And it will cause boils that break out
In sores on man and beast, from head to toe and hand to hand

Throughout all of Egypt the land
Let it be so as I command
Then they took ashes from the furnace
And stood before Pharaoh
And Moses scattered them toward heaven
And everywhere it did go

And they caused boils that break out
In sores on man and beast
A painful, disgusting plague now doubt

And the magicians could not stand before Moses
Because of the boils, a plague so grand
For the boils were on the magicians
And on all the Egyptians throughout the land
But the Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh
And then he did not heed
Just as the Lord had spoken to Moses

An obstinate fellow indeed
In due time, the Lord will hand us over
To our own wills; a hardening of the heart
Unless we yield ourselves to Him
And make a fresh start

His offer is made and heaven we may choose
We can accept this marvelous gift of grace
Or we can turn away and so refuse
But that will lead to a different place
In the end our destiny remains our choice
If we have heard of the Gift of His Son Jesus
And so let us open our mouth and use our voice
Receiving what He has offered to us

Let our hearts not be hard, but soft and open today
And in receiving Jesus, let us eternally say...

Great, glorious, and awesome God, hear our eternal praise
You are worthy of it; glorious and perfect in all Your ways

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 9:13-21 (THE PLAGUE OF HAIL PART I)

From time to time, someone will bring up the old tale about the guy who was questioned by his pastor why he stopped coming to church. The guy's response was that he didn't see any point in it because by Monday he didn't remember a thing about the sermon.

"Hey Brian, I missed church Sunday. What did the pastor speak about?" He'd think and couldn't remember, so he knew it wasn't really of any value to him. So, he stopped going. The pastor then asked, "Brian, what did you have for dinner last Tuesday night?"

Brian's answer, "I have no idea. Why?" The pastor's response, "You've been eating three meals a day for your entire life and you might remember a handful of them. But every one of them nourished you until the next. Without them, you would waste away, and yet you can't remember them! Sometimes, remembering isn't the point. Instead, it is the nourishment you get."

I think about that from time to time, but I would like to go a bit further. In a meal, there are all kinds of things you might eat. Normally, we don't eat just a bowl full of potatoes, or even a bowlful of different foods pureed together.

Instead, we generally have some meat, some vegetables, some bread, a good dessert, a nice drink that we like, and so on. And if there is something in the meal that we really like, we'll savor each bite of it. Suppose you love asparagus... you will eat each stalk slowly and with delight.

And even more, the things that are really good for you are the things that your mom or wife will try to get you to eat... at least my wife and mom do! Those are the things that will make you strong, mentally competent, and so on. And yet, by Tuesday you probably won't remember any of it.

The sermons at the superior word are not made only of potatoes. Nor are they a lot of food pureed together. Instead, they are made of the most delightful of food from the word of God because they are based solely on the word of God. Line by line, bite by bite, we consume each tasty morsel.

Do not be disappointed if you don't remember what you ate here on Sunday morning when you get to Monday afternoon. What you are consuming is my special meal, prepared for you with ingredients provided by the Lord in the honest hope and intent of having you grow to be healthy, wise, and competent in your faith, in your Bible knowledge, and in your relationship with Christ.

If the details seem overwhelming, they aren't. The meal is prepared, it is just the right portion, and the table is set. And so pay attention because this Tuesday I will be calling to see if you remember any of it...

Text Verse: "I have not departed from the commandment of His lips;
I have treasured the words of His mouth
More than my necessary food." Job 23:12

Job said that he treasured the words of the Lord more than his necessary food. Do you feel this way? Can you honestly say that your time in church is spent to feed your hungry soul? If so, I rejoice in you with my deepest heart. And if I do, how much the Lord who gave us this wondrous, superior word!

Let us rejoice in it now and all the days of our lives. May it be so! And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. That My Name May be Declared in All the Earth (verses 13-17)

We are about to enter into the details of the seventh plague to come on Pharaoh and Egypt. The sixth plague came and went with no recorded effect on Pharaoh at all, except the continued hardening of his heart. There was no petition for the plague to end and there was no hint of any release as during some of the other plagues.

The suffering of his subjects, even up to the magicians who stood before him, had no effect on him. And so now the seventh plague will be added to what has already come about. However, there are differences in this plague than the others so far.

This one is introduced with an exceptionally long and fearful warning which is directed specifically at the heart of Pharaoh. Because his heart had been so hardened in the past, it would be directly attacked in this manner.

There is the claim that Pharaoh will realize the uniqueness of Yehovah. There is a note that up to this point that the Lord had withheld His power and actually shown mercy rather than coming at him with all the weight and force that He could have.

But there is also an explanation from the Lord as to why He had followed this path, which is that He may show His power through the plagues in order that His name would be declared in all the earth. Pharaoh is being told explicitly now of the reason why things had happened, and yet it will still not change him.

He will have to suffer through the final plagues before it does. This shows an immense dullness and obstinacy in the man. Think of when one person pushes another around simply to get them angry. Everyone around him can tell him, "He's doing this just to get you riled up. Don't let him do it."

And yet, the instigator prevails because he understands the weak spot of the individual. That is something akin to what Pharaoh is going through. Even with advanced notice, he still follows the very path which he has been told about.

This seventh plague will be the first which actually brings destruction on human life. Unlike the others which merely afflicted them, this is one which is life-threatening and life-consuming. This plague will also be far more destructive because it will not only come against livestock, but against crops as well.

It will literally be able to ravage the country in a much greater way. Further, it will be a plague which has more than one means of destruction. It will have a combined arsenal of weapons united for greater effect. Additionally, though it is explained in advance like the other plagues, it will be a plague which can be avoided.

Thus it is a text of belief in the word of the Lord as much as anything else. Those who hear and comply with the warning will be safe from its consequences. Those who either don't hear or fail to comply will not be safe. Several of the false gods of Egypt will come under attack during this plague.

The first will be Nut, the sky goddess. The next will be Osiris, the god of crops and fertility. And the third will be Set, the god of storms. The Lord, Yehovah, is teaching the Egyptians and He is teaching Israel. He is more powerful than these gods because He is the One, only, and true God. Let us pay heed to this truth as well.

13 Then the Lord said to Moses, "Rise early in the morning and stand before Pharaoh,

Before the beginning of the plagues, we looked at the patterns which run through them. One of them was that there were three groupings of them. This is now the third and final group. Each of the three groups, as this one does, begins with the command to Moses to rise early in the morning to meet Pharaoh.

However, there is a difference in this one. In both the first plague and the fourth plague, not only was Moses told to rise early to go meet Pharaoh, but he was told to do so as he went out to the water. For example, here is how it reads at the beginning of the fourth plague -

"And the Lord said to Moses, "Rise early in the morning and stand before Pharaoh as he comes out to the water. Then say to him, 'Thus says the Lord: "Let My people go, that they may serve Me.'" Exodus 8:20

In this seventh plague, the portion about going out to the water has been left off. In this meeting there is a sense of more urgency and the demand seems more of a fearful threat than a petition for reasonable understanding.

It is also true that Plagues 1 and 4 were announced by the Nile because they dealt with Nile's waters. However, the location at the announcement of plague 7 isn't given because it comes from heaven. Thus it will cover all locations.

13 (con't) and say to him, 'Thus says the Lord God of the Hebrews:

This is the 18th time the term "Hebrew" has been used in the Bible and 12th in Exodus. We are again reminded that Yehovah is in fact the God of the Hebrew people. Five times in Exodus, the term "God of the Hebrews" has been used and this is the 4th time that the entire title Yehovah elohe ha'ivrim or "Yehovah, God of the Hebrews" has been used.

Considering that the term "Hebrew" is only used 38 times in the Old Testament and only about 50 total in the Bible, it's important to remember how often it is used in Exodus. God has called out this people for Himself and has identified Himself with them.

This foundational principle is necessary to remember because He shows the same care for them in the book of Revelation which precedes the millennial reign of Christ where He will reign among them after bringing them out of the control of the world once again. When the church age is over, Israel will be the focus.

Those Gentiles, who see this and receive it, aligning with them, will fall under His care. Those who don't will face a different end.

13 (con't) "Let My people go, that they may serve Me,

This is the exact same wording that has been used on several occasions already. Pharaoh has His people in servitude and the Lord demands that they now be released to serve Him. They are not Pharaoh's and therefore the demand is valid. If it is favorably responded to, all will go well. If it is not, there will be consequences...

14 for at this time I will send all My plagues to your very heart,

This is an emphatic announcement. The previous six plagues were brought against an already stubborn man with an already hard heart. The first five of them only made Pharaoh harden his heart by voluntary action. The sixth initiated a penal hardening of his heart by the Lord.

However, this one is intended to work on his heart in a new way. It is to begin to alert him to the power of the Lord and the immense consequences of continued obstinacy. In other words, even if his heart continues to harden, it is intended to ultimately bring it to the breaking point where he will voluntarily release the Hebrews.

Whereas several of the previous plagues only afflicted the external part of the man, these next three are intended to afflict his very heart. The words "at this time" are certainly speaking of all of the coming plagues. They would arrive in rapid succession as if blows in a boxing match.

In this verse, the term for "plagues" is unique to the book of Exodus. It is the noun form of the verb which is more commonly used. The word is maggephah and it indicates pestilence which leads to a slaughter, like a striking blow. Human death is associated with it.

It is the same word that is used three times in Zechariah 14, a passage which is speaking of the end times during the tribulation period of which the plagues on Egypt picture. Those three times read as follows -

"And this shall be the plague with which the Lord will strike all the people who fought against Jerusalem:

Their flesh shall dissolve while they stand on their feet,
Their eyes shall dissolve in their sockets,
And their tongues shall dissolve in their mouths." Zechariah 14:12

"Such also shall be the plague
On the horse and the mule,
On the camel and the donkey,
And on all the cattle that will be in those camps.
So shall this plague be." Zechariah 14:15

So great will the coming plagues upon Pharaoh be that he will eventually have to admit defeat and let the people of Israel go. As John Calvin says about this verse -

"It announces that they will be plagues that will not only strike the head and arms, but penetrate the very heart, and inflict a mortal wound" (Calvin).

14 (con't) and on your servants

Like previously, the plague will come upon the servants of Pharaoh. Because he fails to allow the Hebrews to serve the Lord, his own servants will suffer from the hand of the Lord.

14 (con't) and on your people,

In the previous verse, the Lord said, "Let my people go." If he fails to release the Lord's people, his own people will suffer. If he complies, his people will be safe. And the reason for this is made explicitly clear...

14 (con't) that you may know that there is none like Me in all the earth.

The Lord is God and beside Him there is no god. He is unique and He is sovereign. This 14th verse of Exodus 9 is tied directly to the opening statement and the first two of the Ten Commandments given in chapter 20. Here are those words -

"I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

3 "You shall have no other gods before Me.

4 "You shall not make for yourself a carved image—any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth; 5 you shall not bow down to them nor serve them."

Exodus 20:2-4

And this prohibition in the Second Commandment is explained in detail in Deuteronomy 4 -

"Take careful heed to yourselves, for you saw no form when the Lord spoke to you at Horeb out of the midst of the fire, 16 lest you act corruptly and make for yourselves a carved image in the form of any figure: the likeness of male or female, 17 the likeness of any animal that is on the earth or the likeness of any winged bird that flies in the air, 18 the likeness of anything that creeps on the ground or the likeness of any fish that is in the water beneath the earth. 19 And take heed, lest you lift your eyes to heaven, and when you see the sun, the moon, and the stars, all the host of heaven, you feel driven to worship them and serve them, which the Lord your God has given to all the peoples under the whole heaven as a heritage. 20 But the Lord has taken you and brought you out of the iron furnace, out of Egypt, to be His people, an inheritance, as you are this day." Deuteronomy 4:15-20

The lesson of verse 14 is a lesson we are to never forget. We are to learn and remember that there is no god like the Lord because there is no god, but the Lord.

15 Now if I had stretched out My hand and struck you and your people with pestilence, then you would have been cut off from the earth.

This is actually a very difficult verse in the Hebrew. It is in the past tense, as noted by the NKJV, but their wording still is lacking in the force of the Hebrew. The KJV completely botched the translation, putting it in the future tense which sets up a contradiction with the account. They translate it as -

"For now I will stretch out my hand, that I may smite thee and thy people with pestilence; and thou shalt be cut off from the earth."

Young's Literal Translation says it as it is written in the Hebrew -

"...for now I have put forth My hand, and I smite thee, and thy people, with pestilence, and thou art hidden from the earth."

The words are past tense and yet they show the entire scope of what the Lord is capable of doing, what He has done, and what He will do. It is an announcement of the whole process; beginning to end. He will strike Pharaoh, He will strike Pharaoh's people, and pestilence will be a part of it, but not the whole of it. And the whole process will include their being cut off from the earth.

He could have already done this, but thus far it had not fully come to pass. And the reason for this is given in the next verse...

16 But indeed for this purpose I have raised you up,

The word translated as "I have raised you up" is a single word based on the verb amad - "to stand" or in essence "to keep alive." The Lord kept Pharaoh standing through this entire process thus far instead of striking him down for a reason.

This is set in contrast, for example, with the magicians who in verse 11 were described as not being able stand before Moses. There the same word, amad, was used. Where they could no longer stand, Pharaoh could because the Lord caused him to stand. There is purpose and intent in this which is explained as we continue...

16 (con't) that I may show My power in you, and that My name may be declared in all the earth.

This entire 16th verse is quoted by Paul in Romans 9:17 to reveal and demonstrate the absolute sovereignty of God. There he uses a different word for "raise up" than the Greek translation of the Old Testament. After citing this, he continues with the words, "Therefore He has mercy on whom He wills, and whom He wills He hardens." (Romans 9:18)

Paul's choice of wording is used to demonstrate to the Jews of his time that their national rights and privileges under the Lord were not inalienable. God was neither unjust nor arbitrary in His rejection of them. Rather, He is sovereign in His dealings with man, even man who bears His name, even Israel.

What God wills is what will happen, and at times He even explains the purposes for it, but He owes us no explanation at all. He is God and we are man. Pharaoh has been given an explanation for the events which have come to pass, and others which will transpire. Israel has likewise been given an explanation for their rejection.

What is most notable is that despite being told the reason, both Pharaoh and Israel continued to act exactly as the Lord intended. There is no outwitting God, even with all of His cards laid out on the table. Likewise, the antichrist who is coming already has the details of what will happen and how it will happen, and yet, it will still happen.

There is nothing he can do to change it, even if he tried. His attempts to subvert the Bible would only turn out to be a portion of the fulfillment of it. Pharaoh of the past, Israel of today, and the antichrist of the future were marked for ruin. Unlike Pharaoh and the antichrist, Israel's ruin will end and they will again be exalted. Such is the nature of the sovereignty of God.

17 As yet you exalt yourself against My people in that you will not let them go.

Owdkha misto-el b'ammi - "As yet you exalt yourself against my people." The word "exalt" is salal. It means to "cast up" or "lift up" as a dam or a rampart. It is connected to the word meaning "highway," which carries the same connotation. A highway is built up higher than the surrounding terrain.

There is, in the Bible, a contrast between the correct highway and the incorrect one. Like Pharaoh here, in the book of Jeremiah, and to their detriment, the people of Israel had left the proper one -

"Because My people have forgotten Me,
They have burned incense to worthless idols.
And they have caused themselves to stumble in their ways,

From the ancient paths,
To walk in pathways and not on a highway." Jeremiah 18:15

But Isaiah foresaw a time when they would take the correct one once again -

"Go through,
Go through the gates!
Prepare the way for the people;
Build up,
Build up the highway!
Take out the stones,
Lift up a banner for the peoples!" Isaiah 62:10

It might seem like a roundabout way of explaining Pharaoh's actions, but his exalting himself is simply a pattern which is followed by others, be they Israel, or be they one of us. But whether it is casting up a rampart against the Lord's people or even the Lord Himself, sometimes we just keep doing what makes no sense.

In this verse, the words are a statement, not a question, but in them may be a sense of incredulity. "Aren't you tired of this yet? Aren't you tired of heaping up a rampart which only hinders you, not Me? Stop opposing Me, stop exalting yourself, and let My people go!"

A point we can see from this verse, and which is plainly evident, is that if Pharaoh had already yielded to the word of the Lord, the plagues would have ended. If he were to yield to them now, there would be no further destruction. In other words, we cannot read into this that God created Pharaoh for destruction.

Rather, Pharaoh's free will has acted against the Lord and his free will has brought him calamity. And it will continue to bring it on him until he is destroyed. God's pre-knowledge of Pharaoh's decisions does not mean that Pharaoh didn't make them. He did and the consequences for them belong to him as well.

You're a terribly stubborn soul there Pharaoh
Aren't you ready yet to yield to Me?
You're obstinate right down to your bone's marrow
This will end badly for you, but you just can't see

Your water has turned to blood
And zillions of frogs haven't made you wise
You've seen the land filled with lice
And everything around you was corrupted with flies

Your livestock has died from pestilence
And your bodies have been covered with festering boils
Your hard heart just makes no sense
Now it's time for you to end My people's toils

II. Advanced Warning (verses 18, 19)

18 Behold, tomorrow about this time I will cause very heavy hail to rain down, such as has not been in Egypt since its founding until now.

In past plagues, the day of the plague has been announced, "tomorrow."
However, with this plague, even the timing of the day is given. This is meant to demonstrate that Yehovah is the Lord of every aspect of what will occur, even of time itself.

Every element of the plague is under His control, the region of the plague is within His control, and the very timing of it is as well. The Lord is demonstrating absolute sovereignty over all aspects of creation. Further, the wording in the Hebrew of this verse is given as a confirmation of His words in verse 14.

There He said, ba'abur teda ki en kamoni - "that you may know (there is) none like Me." In this verse He says, asher lo hayah kamohu - "such as not has been like." There is none like Yehovah and none can do like Yehovah. What He does is beyond the ability of any other because it comes from the One who is, and there is no other.

What the Egyptians would experience on the morrow would be unlike any other such event in the entire history of the nation. The stories from years past of great storms or unique weather events would pale in comparison to what lies ahead, just a few hours hence. The event is referred to in both Psalm 78 and Psalm 105.

In fact, barad, or "hail" is mentioned only 29 times in the Old Testament and 20 of them are either in Exodus or are referring to the account in Exodus. But despite the unique nature of the coming plague upon Egypt, there are other plagues of hail recorded in the Bible.

One notable one is found in Joshua. In a battle where the enemy was defeated and had gone into full retreat, the Lord handled those who fled -

"And it happened, as they fled before Israel and were on the descent of Beth Horon, that the Lord cast down large hailstones from heaven on them as far as Azekah, and they died. There were more who died from the hailstones than the children of Israel killed with the sword." Joshua 10:11

And two more such displays are promised to come during the tribulation period. One is seen in the first trumpet judgment -

"The first angel sounded: And hail and fire followed, mingled with blood, and they were thrown to the earth. And a third of the trees were burned up, and all green grass was burned up." Revelation 8:7

And the other is seen in the final bowl judgment -

"And great hail from heaven fell upon men, each hailstone about the weight of a talent. Men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail, since that plague was exceedingly great." Revelation 16:21

Egypt will receive a good resounding pounding during their plague, but unlike the coming tribulation period, at least the Lord granted them terms of mercy. He gave them the time of the plague, the nature of the plague, and what to do about it. It is to be a test of individual trust concerning the word of the Lord...

19 Therefore send now and gather your livestock and all that you have in the field, for the hail shall come down on every man and every animal which is found in the field and is not brought home; and they shall die.""

It is noted that in Egypt the livestock was left in the open country from about January to April. This was the time when the grass was most abundant. At other times, the Nile would overflow its banks and the livestock would be brought into shelters in the villages.

Now with the Nile having been dammed, this is no longer a problem, but the timing of this event is believed to be around February because of the wording concerning the flocks. This then aligns with the coming final plague being at the time of the Passover.

It is during this early part of the year that the announcement is made and the warning is given. Those who pay heed will be saved, those who don't will die. It is the first time that the loss of human life is explicitly mentioned as a result of a coming plague.

The Lord has raised the stakes and yet has granted mercy at the same time through the warning. It is an exacting parallel to what is coming in the tribulation period. God has given a warning, in advance, for those who must suffer through that time.

Chapter 13 of Revelation says that in order to function in the coming post-rapture society one will need to take the mark of the beast -

"He causes all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and slave, to receive a mark on their right hand or on their foreheads, 17 and that no one may buy or sell except one who has the mark or the name of the beast, or the number of his name." Revelation 13:16, 17

However, chapter 14 shows what the consequences of taking the mark will be -

"If anyone worships the beast and his image, and receives his mark on his forehead or on his hand, 10 he himself shall also drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out full strength into the cup of His indignation. He shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels and in the presence of the Lamb. 11 And the smoke of their torment ascends forever and ever; and they have no rest day or night, who worship the beast and his image, and whoever receives the mark of his name." Revelation 14:9-11

A warning has been given to those who dwell in Egypt, Pharaoh's domain, and a warning has been given to the world of the tribulation period, the domain of the antichrist. The question is, "Who will pay heed?"

In Your wrath, remember mercy O God

Remember that we are but flesh and wither as grass

Short is the time that on this earth we trod

And O, how quickly away do our days pass

Who could stand if You were to fairly judge our sin

Who could say, "Yes, I here today am free of guilt."

No, our lives testify that we are done in

And with our deeds only condemnation we have built

But You, O God are rich in mercy to us

You have cut through the bars of iron and chains of brass

You have sent Your Son, Your beloved Jesus

For fallen man, this marvel has come to pass

III. Who Will Pay Heed? (verses 20 & 21)

We just noted at the end of section 2 the thought that a warning was given to those who dwell in Egypt, Pharaoh's domain, and a warning has been given to the world of the tribulation period, the domain of the antichrist. The pertinent question in both of these circumstances is, "Who will pay heed?" And the answer is...

20 He who feared the word of the Lord among the servants of Pharaoh made his servants and his livestock flee to the houses.

Of those Egyptians who realized that Yehovah is worthy of fear, there was a display of wisdom. As the proverb says -

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom,
And the knowledge of the Holy One is understanding." Proverbs 9:10

These servants of Pharaoh began to display wisdom because they began to fear the Lord. They paid heed to His words and they readied themselves for what they were certain was coming. Those in the tribulation period, those who missed the call of the Lord and the catching away, will have to decide what they will do.

Will they ignore the word, take the mark, and be lost, or will they take the narrow path? Only time will tell who is who, but the book of Revelation does say that there will be a great multitude that will finally learn to fear the word of the Lord and to pay heed.

Here are the words of their notable deeds of faith which will be rewarded with life -

"And I saw thrones, and they sat on them, and judgment was committed to them. Then I saw the souls of those who had been beheaded for their witness to Jesus and for the word of God, who had not worshiped the beast or his image, and had not received his mark on their foreheads or on their hands. And they lived and reigned with Christ for a thousand years."

Revelation 20:4

It should be noted that in this verse, it never mentions Pharaoh's people as it did in the previous verses. It says "the servants of Pharaoh" and then their servants after them. If I were to look for a reason why, it is because Pharaoh is a picture of the antichrist.

Everyone who enters the tribulation will be, by default, servants of the devil and thus servants of his representative, the antichrist. This then is a picture of those who realized that the Lord is the Lord, and they have eventually acknowledged that fact.

They may be the crummy preachers who never believed the Bible, which the world is full of at this time. Now, they are the devil's servants and do his bidding. Not only that, they are also leading their flocks down that same crummy path to destruction.

However, when they realize their error after the rapture, they will finally learn to protect their own servants and the flocks under them. This then gives a reasonable explanation for the great multitude that will refuse the mark of the beast.

A simple word like "servant" give us clues to pay attention to in order to see the pictures of what lies ahead when the world heads into the great calamities it is destined to endure.

21 But he who did not regard the word of the Lord left his servants and his livestock in the field.

Of course, there are those who had already endured six plagues and yet still refused to acknowledge the word of the Lord. They did not regard the word and they left their flocks out for destruction. Solomon beautifully describes this type of reprobate in the Proverbs as well, and he gives a contrast to him also -

"He who disdains instruction despises his own soul,
But he who heeds rebuke gets understanding.
33 The fear of the Lord is the instruction of wisdom,
And before honor is humility." Proverbs 10:32, 33

In order to be honored, one must show humility. Bowing to the Lord as the greater is a sign of humility. Fearing the word of the Lord and His instruction is also a sign of humility. When one fears the word, they will heed the word and carefully apply it to life.

Some will take this path and they will be saved, but there will be an immense number that will put their temporary desires for life and food above any eternal reward they could be granted. They will care nothing for their flocks and they will leave them for destruction. As Matthew Henry says about such folks -

"Obstinate unbelief is deaf to the fairest warnings and the wisest counsels, which leaves the blood of those that perish upon their own heads." Henry

Only time will tell which are which. At the rapture, everyone left behind will be in the same position. However, the Lord is merciful and He will grant life to those who put Him above all else. Great is our God who grants us the freedom to accept Him or reject Him.

These stories have been recorded to show us what really happened in the past and to show us the story of redemptive history as it has slowly unfolded. In individual bites, they give us glimpses of what the Lord disdains and of the things He rejoices in.

In the larger picture, we see the whole scope of what God has done, is doing, and what He will do all the way through until the end of time. Many generations have come and gone and the vast majority of people have not had the enormous blessings that we have today.

We have the whole record of God's word, we have churches everywhere, and Christian TV and radio in abundance. And yet, it may be that we have still not made peace with God. If the people of the past were swept away for not heeding the word of the Lord, how much more do we deserve it!

But the Lord is there, calling out to us and waiting on us to act. Time is fleeting though, and all things must come to an end. Before that day comes for you, and it very well may be today, I would hope and pray that you would make your peace and get right with God. The way to do that is through Jesus. So please let me tell you what you need to know...

Closing Verse: "He who heeds the word wisely will find good,
And whoever trusts in the Lord, happy is he." Proverbs 16:20

Next Week: Exodus 9:22-35 (The Plague of Hail, Part II) (27th Exodus Sermon)

Wasn't that a nice closing verse! He who heeds the word wisely will find good. And whoever trusts in the Lord, happy is he. What a Rock of refuge in a most unstable world! What a fixed and firm anchor in a sea of turmoil and chaos! Thank God for Jesus Christ who has bound us to Him for eternity! And thank God for the Bible which lights our path and gives us joy and comfort every time we pick it up and read it! What a great God!

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Raining Down from Above

Then the Lord said to Moses as we know

“Rise early in the morning

And stand before Pharaoh

And say to him this as a warning

“Thus says the Lord God of the Hebrews, plainly

“Let My people go, that they may serve Me

For at this time I will send all My plagues, even so

To your very heart, and on your servants too

And on your people, that you may know

That there is none like Me in all the earth, so I warn you

Now if I had stretched out My hand

And struck you and your people with pestilence

Then you would have been cut off from the land

A just and right display of my magnificence

But indeed for this purpose I have raised you up
In withholding from you destruction or dearth
That I may show My power in you, as I pour My cup
And that My name may be declared in all the earth
As yet you exalt yourself, yes even so
Against My people in that you will not let them go

Behold, tomorrow about this time
I will cause very heavy hail to rain down, and how!
Such as has not been in Egypt with its clime
Since its founding until now
Therefore send now and gather your livestock
And all that you have in the field
For the hail shall come down on every man
Any who to My word will not yield
And every animal which in the field is found
And is not brought home, shall die on that piece of ground

He who feared the word of the Lord, we will see
There, among Pharaoh's servants
Made his servants and his livestock flee
To the houses, showing wise observance
But he who did not regard the word of the Lord
Left his servants and his livestock in the field

Shunning that kind and merciful word
Their hearts to Him they did not yield
How many times, I would like to know
Does the Lord have to prove His word is true?
What more could you ask, some great heavenly show?
Is it this that which is required by you?
His word is splendid, holy and pure
It is filled with proofs if you will but open your eyes
It is faithful, reliable, and sure
And it is sufficient to make you wise

Rain down, you heavens from above
And let the skies pour down righteousness
O God, Thou who art abundant in love
It is You alone our souls shall bless
Help us to receive and apply to our lives Your superior word
As we wait on the return of Jesus, our precious Lord

And then in that day, O great, glorious, and awesome God
In Your magnificent presence we shall trod

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 9:22-35 (THE PLAGUE OF HAIL PART II)

Today we will finish the seventh plague which fell upon the land of Egypt. It is the first plague which explicitly mentions that men will die because of it, but it is also a plague which came with advanced warning so that the word of the Lord could be heeded.

At the time of the Babylonian invasion, Habakkuk asked the Lord to remember mercy in the midst of His wrath, and maybe he was thinking of how the Lord dealt with Egypt so many years earlier. As we think on these plagues, we have to remember that the Lord had purposed to multiply His wonders in Egypt before Pharaoh would relent and let Israel go.

Everything He has done has been orchestrated to meet this goal. But for what purpose is He doing this? Is it a perverse sense of vindictive joy that He is getting from this continual pummeling of land and people? The answer is, "No!" There is a specific goal which we have been seeing and will continue to see.

And not only is it a lesson from ancient times for us to remember, but it is a lesson for the future for those who don't remember. The reason for the plagues is explicitly noted in Numbers 33 and it is our text verse for today...

Text Verse: "For the Egyptians were burying all their firstborn, whom the Lord had killed among them. Also on their gods the Lord had executed judgments."
Numbers 33:4

It was only about 860 years since the Flood of Noah and yet Egypt had completely forgotten the true God and had devolved into idol worship. They had gods for this and gods for that. They worshipped the created rather than the Creator. And so the Lord brought judgment upon those false gods.

The same has occurred time and again throughout history, including upon wayward Israel. When we turn from the Lord, He will execute judgment to correct the problem. It's an especially important lesson for the world now. A time of tribulation will come upon it because we have rejected the greatest evidence of all, the life and work of Jesus Christ.

Soon enough, He will come for those who are His faithful and the world will be plunged into judgment. It will be on all of the false gods we worship - sex, perversion, money, technology, allah, krishna, buddha, fame, fortune, personal glory, global warming... the list goes on and on.

We're given these stories of the past to show us what lies ahead. Let us pay heed to them and humble our hearts before the Lord who is revealed in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Destruction in Egypt; Safety in Goshen (verses 22-26)

22 Then the Lord said to Moses, "Stretch out your hand toward heaven,

In the previous verses, the Lord gave Pharaoh the exact time that he would accomplish the miracle of the plague of hail. In both the warning and the delay, He granted mercy on those who would choose to heed His word. Now that time had arrived and there would be no more delay.

This is very similar then to the terminology coming in the end times. In Revelation 10, we read this concerning the judgment which would ensue at the sounding of the seventh trumpet -

"The angel whom I saw standing on the sea and on the land raised up his hand to heaven 6 and swore by Him who lives forever and ever, who created heaven and the things that are in it, the earth and the things that are in it, and the sea and the things that are in it, that there should be delay no longer..." Revelation 10:5, 6

Like this angel of the future, Moses of the past is told to stretch out his hand toward heaven. However, in the next verse, we will see that Moses stretches out his rod, meaning the rod of God, toward heaven. The hand here is being used as the principle cause, whereas the rod is used as the instrumental cause.

Thus there is no contradiction. Rather, it is an acknowledgment of the power of the Lord in the hand of Moses. And the action of stretching out toward heaven is fitting because this is where the plague will issue from.

In the first two plagues, Aaron stretched out the rod over the waters from where the blood and frogs came. In the third plague it was on the dust of the ground from whence the lice came. The action is suited to the plague which is precipitated by the action.

22 (cont') that there may be hail in all the land of Egypt—on man, on beast, and on every herb of the field, throughout the land of Egypt."

In verse 19 last week it said, "Therefore send now and gather your livestock and all that you have in the field, for the hail shall come down on every man and every animal which is found in the field and is not brought home; and they shall die."

What was obvious, but which was unstated at that time was that the "herb of the field" would be struck as well. This is now added into what is said. The word translated as "herb" is esev. It means properly "grass." From this, the idea of any fresh springy herbs or pasturage is implied.

Other plants are mentioned in the coming verses which will further describe the devastation which lies ahead. However, this word is being used to describe everything in a general sense. This word, esev, was first mentioned in Genesis 1:11.

After this, it was mentioned 5 more times in the early Genesis account, but it hasn't been used again until now. The last time it was used was in Genesis 3:18 where it said “Cursed is the ground for your sake;

In toil you shall eat of it
All the days of your life.
18 Both thorns and thistles it shall bring forth for you,
And you shall eat the herb of the field.
19 In the sweat of your face you shall eat bread
Till you return to the ground,
For out of it you were taken;
For dust you are,
And to dust you shall return.” Genesis 3:17-19

For about 2500 years of history, nothing is mentioned concerning general plant life in this way, and yet now, the very plant life given to man after the fall will be involved in the plague upon Egypt. Therefore, we can see the Lord's attack on three more of the false gods of Egypt in this one verse -

Nut, the sky goddess, will be shown as false; Osiris, the god of crops and fertility, will be shown as false; and Set, the god of storms, will be shown as false. It is the Lord who created, and it is the Lord who controls how these things are used, wielded, and destroyed.

Whereas the Egyptians worshipped the created, Yehovah now shows them that He is the Creator. We should note that He will do this in a marvelous way. Hail storms normally cover smaller areas, such as a mile in distance or so. This storm, however, would cover everything throughout the land of Egypt.

23 And Moses stretched out his rod toward heaven;

In compliance with the word of the Lord it is Moses again, like the previous plague of boils, who acts. He apparently has lost the timidity he once had and, instead of working through Aaron, has now assumed the responsibility for the actions himself.

23 (con't) and the Lord sent thunder and hail, and fire darted to the ground.

The word for "thunder" here is qolot - it literally means "voices." When a person speaks, they use their voice, when a trumpet blows, that is its voice, and when a lion roars, the roar is his voice. In this verse, the voices are thunder, but the symbolism is clear. The voices are being used as a demonstration of the work of the Lord. This is beautifully represented in the 18th Psalm -

"The Lord thundered from heaven,
And the Most High uttered His voice,
Hailstones and coals of fire." Psalm 18:13

Along with the majestic display of voices came more terror. It says, va'tihalekh esh aretsah - literally, "and the fire walked upon the earth." Scholars look at these words with several possible meanings. One is that it means ball lightning, a phenomena where lightning literally rolls upon the ground.

Although possible because a storm of this magnitude would be heavily charged with electricity, this is probably not the intent. The meaning is explained in Psalm 78 which I will quote in a couple verses. Another view is that it is lightening descending from heaven to the earth, thus "fire darted to the ground." Adam Clarke seems to analyze it best when he says -

"It was not a sudden flash of lightning, but a devouring fire, walking through every part, destroying both animals and vegetables; and its progress was irresistible."
Adam Clarke

In other words, the "walking upon the ground" is the movement of the lightening along with the movement of the storm. It isn't ball lightning rolling around on the ground, but rather lightening descending as if it were literally legs walking in the storm. The effect would have been extreme and extremely terrifying.

23 (con't) And the Lord rained hail on the land of Egypt.

There is an emphasis in these words by repeating the thought of the hail once again. It is noted that thunderstorms aren't frequent in the lower and central parts of Egypt, but they do happen from time to time. If there is hail associated with them, it is normally not in any considerable amount.

The emphasis is given to show that this storm was unique, it was everywhere, and it was hugely destructive as we continue to see...

24 So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail,

The words here, if translated directly, wouldn't make sense to us. It literally reads, "There was hail, and in the midst of the hail a fire infolding itself." (Pulpit) To understand this verse better, the same terminology is used in Ezekiel 1:4 when speaking of the whirlwind which accompanied the presence of the Lord. There is says -

"Then I looked, and behold, a whirlwind was coming out of the north, a great cloud with raging fire engulfing itself; and brightness was all around it and radiating out of its midst like the color of amber, out of the midst of the fire." Ezekiel 1:4

What is probably being described in this storm over Egypt is an absolute chaos of lightening flashing everywhere and in all directions. It would have been an unqualified marvel to behold, especially considering its uniqueness....

24 (con't) so very heavy that there was none like it in all the land of Egypt since it became a nation.

This implies a natural plague, even though its timing was predicted in advance, and despite it being greater than any other such occurrence which had ever come before. The Lord was working through the elements in a majestic way in order to demonstrate His surpassing greatness in comparison to the false gods of Egypt.

In regard to the plague, there "was none like it" ever. This then is being tied to the claim made in Exodus 9:14, which said -

"...at this time I will send all My plagues to your very heart, and on your servants and on your people, that you may know that there is none like Me in all the earth." Exodus 9:14

The Lord has sent a plague of hail like none other to show that there is none other like Him.

25 And the hail struck throughout the whole land of Egypt, all that was in the field, both man and beast; and the hail struck every herb of the field and broke every tree of the field.

It must be noted again that not every "every" in the Bible means every, and that not all "alls" mean all. There is a hyperbole being used here to show the immense magnitude of what occurred. We can know this with absolute assurance because of what it says in the next chapter -

“Stretch out your hand over the land of Egypt for the locusts, that they may come upon the land of Egypt, and eat every herb of the land—all that the hail has left.” Exodus 10:12

The land was crushed in an extraordinary way by the plague of hail and therefore the superlative words "all" and "every" are used to highlight this. The devastation is described in Psalm 78 -

"He destroyed their vines with hail,
And their sycamore trees with frost.
48 He also gave up their cattle to the hail,
And their flocks to fiery lightning." Psalm 78:47, 48

26 Only in the land of Goshen, where the children of Israel were, there was no hail.

Even if the storm was natural, the supernatural elements of advanced notice, time, and locality are all highlighted. The storm was everywhere in Egypt with one exception, Goshen. This is the last time that this location will be used by name in the Bible. It means "drawing near" or "approaching." Based on Pharaoh's response to the horrendous plague, it is apparent that the name Goshen is being used specifically to show that the end of Israel's time of bondage is truly approaching.

A noted distinction has been made from where the Israelites were and with the rest of Egypt. Even though Pharaoh will again change his mind, there is a marked difference in how he now responds to the events which have unfolded before his eyes and the understood distinction between Egypt and Israel.

Woe to the land whose king won't heed the Lord
Who walks contrary to what is just and right
Woe to him who rejects His sacred word
And who harasses God's people day and night

Upon him shall come terror - fire and hail
Upon him will come the wrath of the Almighty God
He and his subjects will morn and wail
For the destruction will be in every place they trod

But mercy is found in the Lord as well
When the leader of a nation will repent and turn
He will save himself from the clutches of hell
Where the terrifying eternal fire does burn

II. I Have Sinned This Time (verses 27-30)

27 And Pharaoh sent and called for Moses and Aaron, and said to them, "I have sinned this time.

In these words, there is attrition, but still not contrition. Pharaoh has had pressure steadily applied on him and his kingdom by the Lord and now he has reached a breaking point. Thus he acknowledges that he has been at fault with the words, "I have sinned." This is the point of attrition.

But the repentance is only skin deep at this point and there is no true contrition, thus the words "this time." He has been terrified by the majestic display, death has been involved, and extensive harm has come to his kingdom. But he can only go so far as to acknowledge limited guilt. The translators of the Geneva Bible state his condition well -

"The wicked confess their sins to their condemnation, but they cannot believe to obtain remission." Geneva

27 (con't) The Lord is righteous,

In these words is finally found a direct answer to Pharaoh's questions of Exodus 5

"Who is the Lord, that I should obey His voice to let Israel go? I do not know the Lord, nor will I let Israel go." Exodus 5:2

With his own mouth, he answers his own question - Yehovah ha'tsadiq, "Yehovah (is) the Righteous (One). The word contains a definite article, making it emphatic. And in contrast to this...

27 (con't) and my people and I are wicked.

v'ani v'ammi ha'reshaim - "and I and my people (are) the wicked ones. It is again emphatic. The words though cannot be separated from the previous verse which said, "Only in the land of Goshen, where the children of Israel were, there was no hail."

The plague was terrifying, but it is not only the plague that has convinced Pharaoh. It is the separation between Egypt and Goshen which has prompted his pronouncement. Yehovah is contrasted to Pharaoh, and the Israelites are contrasted to Pharaoh's people.

Where he previously accused them of being idle and looking for excuses to get out of their work, he now acknowledges that their requests were valid and their words were true. This is the force and intent of the words he now utters. Israel is the people of the Lord and the Lord is righteous.

28 Entreat the Lord, that there may be no more mighty thundering and hail, for it is enough.

There is a lot to consider here. First, Pharaoh has now recognized the LORD as God. He now acknowledges that Moses is the Lord's designated mediator by asking him to entreat the Lord. Secondly, Pharaoh implies that he is exceedingly fearful of the Lord because he places the thunder before the hail in his request.

The term is qolot elohim - literally "voices of God." In other words, he has tied the Lord, the voices, and Deity into one thought. This is similar to the words found in Revelation 10 where the words "thunder" and "voice" are used to describe the same thing -

"He had a little book open in his hand. And he set his right foot on the sea and his left foot on the land, 3 and cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roars. When he cried out, seven thunders uttered their voices. 4 Now when the seven thunders uttered their voices, I was about to write; but I heard a voice from heaven saying to me, 'Seal up the things which the seven thunders uttered, and do not write them.'" Revelation 10:3, 4

Pharaoh was so fearful of the raging thunder that he could only see it as comparable to the very voice of God. Only after recognizing this does he note the hail which was to be the main substance of the plague. But to Pharaoh, the place where the hail came from was also the place from whence the voices issued.

28 (con't) I will let you go, and you shall stay no longer."

The word is pronounced. The fear of God finally forced Pharaoh to state release without any conditions. The fact that he changes his mind later doesn't negate the absolute fear that he now displays at the events which he has beheld. However, it does show a common trait among people. When things get better, we quickly forget the promises made when they were bad.

29 So Moses said to him, "As soon as I have gone out of the city, I will spread out my hands to the Lord; the thunder will cease, and there will be no more hail, that you may know that the earth is the Lord's.

It has to be noted that Moses was both called to, and left from, Pharaoh's palace during the plague of hail. Pharaoh is the one who cowered inside and sent out for his relief rather than going out to Moses to beg for it. However, Moses came through the storm unharmed. As Matthew Henry notes -

"Peace with God makes men thunder-proof." Henry

Moses not only goes out from the palace to end the plague, but all the way out of the city. Only then does he promise to spread out his hands to the Lord. This then shows his complete confidence in his own safety. It is an implied rebuke to Pharaoh. In essence, "You cower in your palace and yet I am safe throughout the land."

And as a curiosity that shouldn't be missed, he uses a different word here for "spread," paras, than what was used to initiate the plague, which was natah, translated as "stretch." This is the first time paras is used in the Bible.

To stretch out then is implying the initiation of the action under divine authority. However, the spreading out is an appeal or petition for it to end. Another point is that Moses says he will spread out his "palm," not his "hand."

In Scripture, this word paras is used with the word "palm" 13 times and with the word "hand" 5 times. How the verb is used always indicates whether the word "palm" or "hand" will be used, with one exception in the Bible. That is in Isaiah 1:15 -

"When you spread out your hands,
I will hide My eyes from you;
Even though you make many prayers,
I will not hear.
Your hands are full of blood." Isaiah 1:15

In this verse in Isaiah, it says the people spread out their palms, but then it says that their hands are full of blood. What we can learn from this word, paras, when used in conjunction with prayer is that the unfolding of the hand for prayer is to be pure and that when we pray, our palms are to be open and undefiled.

In other words, the open hand before the Lord is metaphorically a symbol of earnestness, purity, honest petition, and submission. This is what Moses will now offer to the Lord, open palms of petition. This action will have two specific purposes.

The first is to petition for the ending of the plague as he has promised. This will reflect on the Lord because he is the Lord's messenger. It also has the purpose of making Pharaoh realize "that the earth is the Lord's."

This pronouncement is in direct contrast to Egyptian belief where each of their gods cared for a particular thing, like the weather, the crops, the waters, the sun, and so on. Instead, Moses is showing that everything belongs to the Lord.

He is not "a" god, but "the" God. His power is one and it is universal. To demonstrate this, the plague came by Yehovah's hand and it will end at His hand as well. However, there will still be a void in Pharaoh's theology...

30 But as for you and your servants, I know that you will not yet fear the Lord God."

Pharaoh and his servants have the kind of fear that is noted in James. The demons are said to believe that there is one God and this makes them tremble, but there is no reverence for Him. Only when such fear is united with reverence and love can the true fear of the Lord be understood. This is still lacking in them.

To enhance what he means Moses uses the term Yehovah elohim. It is the same term used at the very beginning in the creation account. It is Yehovah elohim who created the heavens and the earth. As this is so, He alone is God and He alone is to be feared.

The Lord is the First, and the Last also is He
He is the Creator and there is no other god
When we acknowledge Him alone, pleased will He be Let our hearts be pure and let our feet on the holy path trod

He was there when the pillars of the earth found their place
It was He who into Adam breathed the breath of life
And when Adam fell, He covered Him in an act of grace
Yes, with garments of skin He covered Adam and his wife

And He remains watchful over the sons of men
Those who fear Him, He will reward with tender care
Someday He promises He will come to us again
And take us to Himself; forever we shall be there

III. He Sinned Yet More (verses 31-35)

31 Now the flax and the barley were struck, for the barley was in the head and the flax was in bud.

Interestingly, it notes the flax and then the barley and yet it then notes the characteristics of the barley and then the flax. There is a reversing of the order in the objects as they are described. This same pattern will be seen again in just a few verses.

This verse has certainly been provided for us to know not just the devastation of the plague, but to know the timing of it. First, in the devastation is that the crops of flax and barley were ruined. This tells us that the time is somewhere from the end of January to the beginning of March. Most likely it was during February.

Flax is grown in order to make linen garments. The people wore them, the priests had the purest of linen garments, and even the mummies were swathed in linen. To lose the annual crop of flax would be comparable to the south losing its entire crop of cotton.

The word for flax is pishtah. It is used only four times in the Bible, twice here and twice in Isaiah where it is also translated as "wick." Pishtah comes from pishteh which means "linen." In this you can see how the flax makes the linen which also is used as a wick.

Barley or seorah is the other crop which was destroyed. It was grown for the same purposes that it is still grown for today - as food for animals, as a part of the Egyptian beer making process, and also as a source of making lower quality bread.

There is also another reason why these crops are highlighted. It is to give us a look into a picture of the state of Egypt. Barley is known as the crop of hairy ears because of its hairy appearance. The root of this word is sear or "hair." Hair in the Bible indicates an awareness of things.

The goat for example is used in Leviticus for the sin offering and it is known as a hairy goat. We have an awareness of sin in the hairy goat sin offering. In Numbers there is a type of person known as a Nazirite. This is someone who made a vow or was consecrated to the Lord.

During the time of the vow, they were not to cut the hair. Samson was a Nazirite from birth as were Samuel and John the Baptist. Paul may have taken a Nazirite vow in Acts. The hair on their head was a reminder of their state, just as the hairy goat reminds of sin.

The destruction of the barley then is being tied to Pharaoh's awareness and acknowledgement of the sin he has committed and yet his soon-to-commit yet more sin. His awareness of sin is destroyed. The flax, which is used to make garments, represents the people's nakedness in their sin before the Lord.

This can be seen, for example, in Revelation 3:18 where Jesus says for the people to "...buy from Me gold refined in the fire, that you may be rich; and white garments, that you may be clothed, that the shame of your nakedness may not be revealed; and anoint your eyes with eye salve, that you may see."

He has both stripped away their awareness and he has stripped away their ability to cover themselves. Finally, the word for "bud" concerning the flax is used only this once in the Bible. It is the word gibol which comes from the word gabia, or "cup." Thus the term "bud" or "bloom" is understood from its shape like a cup.

32 But the wheat and the spelt were not struck, for they are late crops.

The two unharmed grains are wheat and spelt. The KJV has "rye" instead of spelt. That is wrong. Rye is a grain that has never been grown in Egypt. The word for wheat, khittah, comes from khanat which means to make spicy or to embalm. Wheat is considered the finest and most valuable of the grains in the Bible.

Jesus used wheat to represent Himself in John 12:24. And it is also the wheat harvest which pictures the church age. The word kussemeth for "spelt" comes from kasam to trim. That word is used only twice in the Bible, both in Ezekiel speaking of the trimmed hair of the priests during the millennial reign.

The spelt is a crop very similar to wheat and closely resembles it. Finally, the word for "late" is aphil. This comes from a word indicating "dark" or "hidden" and so it can be conjectured that these crops had been planted, but not yet sprouted. In other words, they were hidden from the plague.

Because these crops are mentioned here and not again in the coming plagues, it is asking us to think on why they were mentioned. If I were to surmise they, like the two other grains, are given as pictures. The wheat and the spelt picture those in Revelation who are saved from the plagues by rapture or protection and enter into the millennium.

There are those who are a part of the first resurrection noted in Revelation 20:5. There are also those who survive through the tribulation. Of the first it is explicitly noted that -

"...they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years." Revelation 20:5

The four grains are specifically mentioned and there is a purpose for it. The pattern fits and it is in line with the other uses of these grains in the Bible. I do believe these pictures are why they are noted now here in the Exodus account.

33 So Moses went out of the city from Pharaoh and spread out his hands to the Lord; then the thunder and the hail ceased, and the rain was not poured on the earth.

Without fear of being pummeled by the hail, being zapped by the lightening, or catching a sniffle from the rain, which has not been mentioned until this point, Moses went out from Pharaoh and out from the city before spreading his hands to the Lord. But when he did, the land became calm once again.

The rain wasn't mentioned before because it wasn't a direct part of the event which was considered the plague. The hail, the noise, and the fire from the sky were the plague. The rain was only an associated part of what occurred.

But noting it now is an added proof of the first-hand nature of the eyewitness of the account. It is also the first time in the Bible that "rain" is mentioned in the noun form. Up to this point, it has only been used in the verb form.

34 And when Pharaoh saw that the rain, the hail, and the thunder had ceased, he sinned yet more; and he hardened his heart, he and his servants.

In the previous verse, it mentioned the thunder, the hail, and then the rain. Now it turns around and highlights what was said by noting the rain, the hail, and then the thunder. It is an often repeated pattern in the Bible where reverse repetition is used. In this, Pharaoh is mentioned smack dab in the middle of the series.

thunder/hail/rain - Pharaoh - rain/hail/thunder

Immediately following this, it says that he sinned yet more by hardening his heart. This is a theme which will run throughout the Bible. The Lord prevails in the challenge either directly or through His mediator, and yet there is no change in the foe.

Moses acted and heaven was opened and then it was shut. Elijah prayed and the heavens were shut and then they were open. And the Two Witnesses of Revelation will have the power to do the same. But time and again, like Pharaoh, there are those who reject what the Lord does and further harden their hearts to Him.

In fact, Clarke notes that the conjunctions used here "often signify a bare permission, from which it is plain that the words should have been read, God suffered the heart of Pharaoh to be hardened." He has continued to passively work on this most obstinate fellow in order to meet his purposes.

And yet there is more than just hardening the heart which is mentioned. It says that this, in itself, is sin because the hardening leads to a refusal to fulfill what his mouth had spoken. In this, he not only lies to Moses, but to the Lord whom Moses represents. And the result of this is our final verse of the day...

35 So the heart of Pharaoh was hard; neither would he let the children of Israel go, as the Lord had spoken by Moses.

The hardening of Pharaoh's heart was greater this time because he was more moved by this plague than any before. The more movement to submit and allow the release of Israel required a greater swing in the pendulum to once again deny their release.

But because sin is involved in this decision, it cannot be that the Lord caused it. Anyone who ascribes these hardening actions of Pharaoh to the direct work of the Lord would then have to ascribe Pharaoh's sin to the hand of the Lord as well. Rather, the Lord has prompted, the Lord has allowed, but Pharaoh is responsible.

What the Lord had said would happen at the beginning has come about exactly as He spoke. Pharaoh has seen the judgments and has likewise been granted the mercies which accompanied them. And yet, he has continued to stubbornly fight against what has happened. As Matthew Henry says about this -

"Those that are not bettered by judgments and mercies, commonly become worse." Henry

And so it is with Pharaoh. The children of Israel will have to wait a little longer for their deliverance from Egypt. However, this to them is probably a vacation. With Egypt being destroyed by the plagues, they surely haven't had time to worry about forcing greater burdens on the Israelites.

Instead, Israel has been safe and secure in the land of Goshen, waiting as the time draws near when they will see their release from the bondage of Egypt. Time and again so far, the false gods of Egypt have been shown for what they truly are. The Lord has magnified Himself and has brought Egypt to its knees.

But all of this could have been avoided. Rather than being forced to our knees, the Lord would ask us to willingly submit to Him. Either way, it will happen. The Bible tells us -

"Therefore God also has highly exalted Him and given Him the name which is above every name, 10 that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of those in heaven, and of those on earth, and of those under the earth, 11 and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." Philippians 2:9-11

Be wise and discerning, bow the knee willingly to the Lord who created you and who loves you enough to have sent his own Son to die for you that you might be reconciled to Him. Let me tell you what you need to know for this to happen...

Closing Verse: Righteous are You, O Lord,
And upright are Your judgments. Psalm 119:137

Next Week: Exodus 10:1-11 (The Plague of Locusts, Part I)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Lord is Righteous

Then the Lord said to Moses

So we understand

“Stretch out toward heaven your hand

That there may be hail in all of Egypt the land

On man, on beast, and on every herb of the field

Throughout the land of Egypt in order to make Pharaoh yield

And Moses stretched out his rod toward heaven

And the Lord sent thunder and hail and fire darted to the ground

And the Lord rained hail on the land of Egypt

It must have been a terrifying sight and a horrifying sound
So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail
So very heavy that there was none like it
In all the land of Egypt since it became a nation
This time you would think surely Pharaoh would submit

And the hail struck throughout the whole land of Egypt
All that was in the field, both man and beast
And the hail struck every herb of the field
And broke every tree of the field, from the greatest to the least

Only in the land of Goshen, there was no travail
Where the children of Israel were, there was no hail
And Pharaoh sent and called for Moses and Aaron
And said to them, "I have sinned this time
The Lord is righteous, and my people and I are wicked
I now understand the scope of my crime

Entreat the Lord, that there may be
No more mighty thundering and hail in the land
For it is enough; I will let you go willingly
And you shall stay no longer, please understand
So Moses said to him, "As soon as I have gone out of the city
I will spread out my hands to the Lord

The thunder will cease, and there will no more hail be
Be assured of the truth of this word
That you may know that to the Lord belongs the earth
Everywhere where man may trod
But as for you and your servants
I know that you will not yet fear the Lord God

Now the flax and the barley were struck
For the barley was in the head and in bud was the flax
But the wheat and the spelt were not struck
For they are late crops, they were immune to the attacks
So Moses went out of the city
From Pharaoh and spread out his hands to the Lord
Then the thunder and the hail ceased
And the rain was not poured on the earth, according to his word

And when Pharaoh saw that the rain
The hail, and the thunder had ceased
He sinned yet more; and he hardened his heart again
He and his servants; his sin only increased
So the heart of Pharaoh was hard
Neither would he let the children of Israel go
As the Lord had spoken by Moses
This is what transpired as we now know

The Lord has dealt fairly with Pharaoh
Whose heart was hard and obstinate
He would not let Israel go
And so the Lord brought plagues to make Pharaoh submit

And the Lord will deal in like manner with us
When we put up false gods there in our heart
Instead of acknowledging His Son, the Lord Jesus
Instead of putting away sin and making a new start

So let us call out to the Lord, each one of us
Softening our hearts to Him and bowing the knee
Let us acknowledge Christ, the Lord - who is Jesus!
Let our faith be so strong that the whole world can see

And yes, we praise You, O glorious Jesus
We praise You and to You alone we will give honor and glory
For it is You who have done such wondrous things for us
Thank You for the cross and the resurrection, Your gospel story

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 10:1-11 (THE PLAGUE OF LOCUSTS PART I)

At the time of Pharaoh, he was the leader of the greatest nation on earth. He had complete control over the nation, something he had inherited from a previous Pharaoh who listened to a wise young Hebrew man concerning a devastating famine which was coming upon his land.

Since then, the Hebrew people had been a part of the population and their efforts had continued to make the nation great, having built store cities for it and having remained productive members of the society, even if they remained apart from them culturally.

However, the dynasty of this Pharaoh has become an enemy of the Hebrews instead of their ally. He has continually made decisions which have been harmful to them. In turn, he has only brought hardship on himself. Little by little, his power has been slipping away because of the devastations which the Lord has brought on him.

Today, we will see him continue down this stubborn path and eventually he will come to complete ruin. He has set himself against the Lord and against the Lord's people, banging his head against an unyielding wall. It is the mark of a true dolt, but it isn't uncommon in history and it is no different than what is happening in the world today.

Text Verse: "For the Lord's portion is His people;
Jacob is the place of His inheritance.

10 'He found him in a desert land

And in the wasteland, a howling wilderness;

He encircled him, He instructed him,

He kept him as the apple of His eye.'" Deuteronomy 32:9, 10

Pharaoh is stubborn and each time he sets himself against the word of the Lord, he only hurts himself and his people more. If that doesn't sound like a perfect parallel of our nation today, you probably aren't paying attention.

How we treat the Lord, how we treat the Lord's people, and how we respond to His judgments are all gauges of what the future holds for us. This is especially true with the leaders of a nation. They represent that nation and therefore that nation will collectively suffer because of the leader's decision.

Is it too late for our own land? Only time will tell, but we've been warned several times in the past 15 years. How many more warnings do we need? And when the tribulation period comes, it will only be worse. Locusts are coming upon Egypt and they will be coming upon the world of the end times.

This is what the Bible proclaims and this then is exactly what has happened and what will happen. It's as sure as His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Locusts to Cover the Face of the Earth (verses 1-6)

1 Now the Lord said to Moses, "Go in to Pharaoh; for I have hardened his heart

Chapter 10 begins with the order for Moses to go in once again and confront Pharaoh. In this, He notes that "I have hardened his heart." There are a few points of interest here. The first is that the "I" is emphatic. Everything thus far has been orchestrated to harden Pharaoh's heart and so the Lord can be said to harden Pharaoh, even though it has been done passively.

And it's certain that it is a passive rather than an active hardening because a different word was used than just one verse before. In the final two verses of chapter 9, after the plague of hail was complete, it said -

"And when Pharaoh saw that the rain, the hail, and the thunder had ceased, he sinned yet more; and he hardened his heart, he and his servants. 35 So the heart of Pharaoh was hard; neither would he let the children of Israel go, as the Lord had spoken by Moses." Exodus 9:34, 35

The order of the words for "harden" in these three verses is kaved, khazaq, and then kaved again. Verse 34 said that Pharaoh is the one who sinned and hardened his heart and it used kaved. Then it said his heart was hard using khazaq. Now it says that the Lord has hardened his heart and kaved is used again.

This may sound unimportant, but it is foundational in understanding what is happening and why these events have come about. We cannot impute wrongdoing to the Lord. It is Pharaoh who sinned. However, He sinned because of his own stubborn heart which the Lord knew would harden through His promptings.

There is both a willful and intentional hardening of Pharaoh through arrogance and yet the behind-the-scenes hardening of the man by the Lord through the steadfast operation of His moral and just nature which increasingly dulls him as well. As this increases, the natural result is that more and greater punishment will be inflicted with each occurrence.

The hardening of Pharaoh's heart is a reflection of the state of man as he either yields to, or willingly hardens against, the prompting of God, be it through nature or through His word. If we can cling to this when things go bad, we can still proclaim with our lips, "Despite the trial, He is the Lord. I will be obedient and I will not withhold His praise from my lips."

A close walk with the Lord and a good grounding in His word will keep us from all sorts of unnecessary trials, tribulations, and temptations as we face the troubles that are sure to come our way.

1 (con't) and the hearts of his servants,

I just read you verse 9:34. Let me read it again -

"And when Pharaoh saw that the rain, the hail, and the thunder had ceased, he sinned yet more; and he hardened his heart, he and his servants."

It noted the servants in that verse specifically. And now, because of their self-willed hardening, attention is again being brought on them in this first verse of chapter 10. In this case, the word is the same for both instances - kaved. The action of the servants in verse 34 is ascribed to them; the action here in verse 1 is ascribed to the Lord, but the same word is used.

The active actions of the Lord through the plagues have been used to harden the servants' hearts. And it worked. They actively hardened against the Lord. But even though the plagues were an act of the Lord, they were a passive action in relation to the servants. It seems like hair-splitting, but it isn't.

Time and time again these words are being introduced to teach us fundamental truths concerning our relationship to our Creator and our responses to His active hand in the world around us. And so, in order to get a clearer picture, let's remove ourselves from the plagues on Egypt for a second and pretend that it is Florida which gets hit by a catastrophic tsunami.

A staunch believer in the Lord will understand that God is sovereign. He will know he isn't immune from the catastrophes of nature. If he survives but his entire family is lost, he will naturally be filled with grief. But he will not impute wrongdoing to the Lord. Mournful questions may arise, but they will be from the soft heart of faith.

However, another affected person may have been a nominal Christian or someone who never really considered himself in relation to the Creator. He also loses his entire family and his heart becomes hard towards God, rebellious and angry - even defiant.

And let's introduce one more person; we'll call him Al. Al also loses his family, but he sees the destruction as a way that he can profit off of it. And so he willfully denies that there is any God at all through his actions. He begins a crusade to convince the world that the tsunami was the result of man-made global warming which caused the waters to get so hot that they hiccupped.

Each of these three has experienced the same calamity and yet each has responded differently to it. As the Lord is ultimately in control of all events, the catastrophe was allowed by the Lord, and yet the response to Him has had measurably different effects on those who were afflicted by it.

Back to Pharaoh and Egypt - the Lord now once again explains the reason for what He is doing...

1 (con't) that I may show these signs of Mine before him,

The Lord is sovereign. He has an end purpose for every action He takes, or for every event that He allows to proceed unimpeded. There is no wrongdoing which can be imputed to Him for these things. In the case of the plagues upon Egypt, it is so that He may show his signs before Pharaoh.

The word "signs" is owtot. A sign is given to show something else. They are miracles, but they also serve the purposes of revealing the glory of God, destroying the false objects of worship in Egypt, and showing pictures of future events in redemptive history. All of this and more is tied up in the signs of the Lord.

2 and that you may tell in the hearing of your son and your son's son the mighty things I have done in Egypt, and My signs which I have done among them, that you may know that I am the Lord."

Even more than what we have already noted is found here in verse 2. The signs have been given for the benefit of future generations to hear, recall, and remember the work of the Lord so that they will know that He is, in fact, Yehovah - the existent One.

The word for "tell" here is saphar. It indicates to count, recount, or relate. The recounting of what occurred in Egypt became a standard among Israel and it has been recounted, year by year, at the Passover, for over 3500 years. The plagues are recounted in the Psalms as well; specifically Psalms 78 & 105, among others.

As Adam Clarke comments on this verse - "It was not to crush the poor worm, Pharaoh, that he wrought such mighty wonders, but to convince his enemies, to the end of the world, that no cunning or power can prevail against him; and to show his followers that whosoever trusted in him should never be confounded."

The words "I have done" in this verse are based on the verb alal. It is the first of 19 times that it will be used in Scripture and its specific meaning is to "abuse." This is why some versions more poignantly translate this as "dealt harshly" or "made a mockery" toward those in Egypt.

And this is the intent of the word "Egypt." It isn't speaking of the land, but the people in the land. This is evident from the plural pronoun "them" which is used. Further, the intended recipients of the knowledge which is being passed on concerning what occurs in Egypt are obscured in this translation.

It says, "...that you may know that I am the Lord." This makes it sound like the Lord is speaking to Moses, but the pronoun in Hebrew is plural. All of Israel will see the events. The events will also be recorded by Moses who is the representative of all of Israel. And all of Israel of the future will receive the law through Moses. Thus Israel of all generations is who is being spoken to.

And because the full revelation of God's word is included in the Christian Bible, the Lord is speaking directly to us as well. Any person, believer or not, who hears or reads the word is expected to assimilate what is said and to respond by acknowledging Him.

3 So Moses and Aaron came in to Pharaoh and said to him, "Thus says the Lord God of the Hebrews:

This is now the 19th time that the term "Hebrew" has been used in Scripture. It is also the 6th time that the Lord has been identified with the term in relation to them being His people. And finally, it is the last time that the term "Hebrew" will be used until after the exodus of the people from Egypt.

The Lord has identified Himself with them and He is now speaking once again on their behalf for their release.

3 (con't) 'How long will you refuse to humble yourself before Me? Let My people go, that they may serve Me.

In verse 9:27, there was a brief moment where Pharaoh had clarity of thought. There he proclaimed, "I have sinned this time. The Lord is righteous, and my people and I are wicked." Now, just 11 verses later, he is being prepared for further chastening because of his refusal to truly submit and humble himself before the Lord.

Though hardening of Pharaoh has been the intent in the events so far, the ultimate intent of the plagues is to humble, not harden him. The word for "to humble yourself" is l'anot. It means to abase oneself or to submit to another.

Pharaoh has purposely refused to do this, thus the hardening is shown to be a purposeful response to the work of the Lord. If you wonder why someone you know refuses to call out to Jesus for salvation, the same truth applies to them as that which applies to Pharaoh here.

They have willingly refused His calling. So much for the perverse doctrine of "limited atonement" which is espoused by Calvinists! They say that Jesus only died for a certain group of people, the elect, and not for all people. That is false.

The only limit in atonement is what actually occurs among those who believe, not what is potentially offered to all people. Jesus Christ died for all, but not all have received His offer. As the Geneva Bible notes -

"The purpose of affliction is that we humble ourselves with true repentance under the hand of God." Geneva

Pharaoh has thus far failed to humble himself before the afflictions upon his kingdom, and many obdurate souls walking around the world today have likewise failed to humble themselves before the splendid majesty of the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 Or else, if you refuse to let My people go, behold, tomorrow I will bring locusts into your territory.

Plague 8 is announced. Like plagues 3 and 4, insects are being used to meet the Lord's purposes. Also, like plague 7, it is a direct attack against the Egyptian gods Nut, the sky goddess, and Osiris, god of crops and fertility. The gods will be shown false and the captors of Israel will be punished once again.

In addition to this, the coming plague is a precursor to the fifth trumpet judgment upon the earth in the end times. Here is what Revelation 9 says -

Then the fifth angel sounded: And I saw a star fallen from heaven to the earth. To him was given the key to the bottomless pit. 2 And he opened the bottomless pit, and smoke arose out of the pit like the smoke of a great furnace. So the sun and the air were darkened because of the smoke of the pit. 3 Then out of the smoke locusts came upon the earth. And to them was given power, as the scorpions of the earth have power. 4 They were commanded not to harm the grass of the earth, or any green thing, or any tree, but only those men who do not have the seal of God on their foreheads. 5 And they were not given authority to kill them, but to torment them for five months. Their torment was like the torment of a scorpion when it strikes a man. 6 In those days men will seek death and will not find it; they will desire to die, and death will flee from them.

7 The shape of the locusts was like horses prepared for battle. On their heads were crowns of something like gold, and their faces were like the faces of men. 8 They had hair like women's hair, and their teeth were like lions' teeth. 9 And they had breastplates like breastplates of iron, and the sound of their wings was like the sound of chariots with many horses running into battle. 10 They had tails like scorpions, and there were stings in their tails. Their power was to hurt men five months. 11 And they had as king over them the angel of the bottomless pit, whose name in Hebrew is Abaddon, but in Greek he has the name Apollyon. Revelation 9:1-11

Locusts are noted throughout the Old Testament as well and they are especially highlighted in the book of Joel. Their Hebrew name is arbeh. But the root of that word is what gives substance to their name. It is ravah and means "multiply."

Thus, the very name, "locust" implies astonishing numbers. In fact, in Joel 2:25, the Lord calls them "My great army." They are chosen now as an instrument of destruction from the heavens. And there is a reason for this, which is because the previous plague of hail, which was also from the heavens, left some standing vegetation.

The locusts are ordered to come and take care of all that is left. They are a consuming army which literally destroys the earth as they march forward in their ranks. They are used metaphorically for the armies which come against Israel in Joel 2 because, like real armies, they destroy everything in their path. In Joel, the destruction is described poetically -

"A fire devours before them,
And behind them a flame burns;
The land is like the Garden of Eden before them,
And behind them a desolate wilderness;
Surely nothing shall escape them." Joel 2:3

Anything alive and green at their coming is left completely consumed as they depart. This is how they operate and this is what is now promised to Pharaoh...

5 And they shall cover the face of the earth, so that no one will be able to see the earth; and they shall eat the residue of what is left, which remains to you from the hail, and they shall eat every tree which grows up for you out of the field.

Grace was given in the previous verse. In essence, if you will humble yourself and let my people go, no further harm will come upon you. Further grace was given by announcing that he had until the next day to comply. And grace is even given in the announcement of the type of plague that will come.

Knowing in advance what would afflict Egypt was not necessary, but as with each previous plagues, it is announced so that Pharaoh could consider and amend his ways. If he chose to not do so, the extent of the plague is minutely described. Thus it is one final note of grace before judgment comes.

The antithesis is therefore given. Release my people who have built your land, or I will send my destroyers to destroy your land. And here is what it will be like...
"They shall cover the face of the earth." The Hebrew here literally says, "the eye of the earth."

It is a phrase used only three times in the Bible, once here and twice speaking of the immense number of Israelites who were preparing to enter the Promised Land. The plague of locusts would be so thick that the "eye" of the land would be darkened by them.

The term is explained by the next words, "no one will be able to see the earth." This is not an exaggeration either. Plagues of locusts have been noted many times in history with so many of them that they are literally 5 or 6 inches deep and they cover a distance of a thousand square miles or more.

Egypt would be so inundated that Pharaoh is told that every green thing left alive would be completely consumed by them. One writer, Stuart Poole, notes that -

"...locusts suddenly appear in the cultivated land, coming from the desert in a column of great length. They fly across the country, darkening the air with their compact ranks, which are undisturbed by the constant attacks of kites, crows, and vultures, and making a strange whizzing sound, like that of fire, or many distant wheels. Where they alight they devour every green thing, even stripping the trees of their leaves. Rewards are offered for their destruction; but no labour can seriously reduce their numbers" Stuart Poole

6 They shall fill your houses, the houses of all your servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians—

I read several eyewitness accounts of plagues of locusts and some of them were almost horrifying. They not only would get into houses, but they would be so thick that they would fly into the mouth of anyone taking a breath. It would be so dark out that even with candles or torches it would still be dark.

People wrote of the locusts being so hungry that they would eat leather and wood in the houses. Nothing is safe from their onslaught and no matter how many one killed, it wouldn't be a tiny dent in those left behind. Joel 2:9 describes such a locust plague -

"They run to and fro in the city,
They run on the wall;
They climb into the houses,
They enter at the windows like a thief." Joel 2:9

6 (con't) which neither your fathers nor your fathers' fathers have seen, since the day that they were on the earth to this day." And he turned and went out from Pharaoh.

Locusts are not indigenous to Egypt, but they have been known to afflict them many times. As the wind blows, it brings them in from other areas. Pharaoh would probably have been familiar with a swarm of locusts, but now he is told more. The plague coming upon Egypt will be unlike any plague ever seen in the land.

From the time of the first man upon earth until the rising of the sun on the next day, there will have been nothing like it. Whatever Pharaoh imagined would be less than what would come about. The weight of the plague would be utterly immense. And with that final note, Moses stepped out of Pharaoh's palace, leaving him to consider what he had been told.

You're a stubborn one, Pharaoh, but you will yield

I will continue to come against you until you do

Next up is locusts to cover Egypt, including every field

And they will be so thick, they'll come into your houses too

Nothing green will be left unless you humble your heart

And let My people go to serve Me

This advanced warning I do to you impart

But I'm sure that you haven't yet begun to see

You're a stubborn one, Pharaoh, but you will yield

Eventually, I know that you will let Israel go

My word has been spoken and it is sealed

What I have said will come about, even so

II. Let the Men Go! (verses 7 & 8)

7 Then Pharaoh's servants said to him, "How long shall this man be a snare to us?"

Verse 7 now initiates a new phase in the events of the plagues. Up until now, nobody has been recorded as giving Pharaoh advice, but that now changes. In Exodus 8:19, the magicians acknowledged the plague of lice as "the finger of God." In Exodus 9:20, it says that certain people "feared the word of the Lord" and acted upon it.

Now, Pharaoh's own servants have accepted that the words of Moses are, in fact, true. They fully believe that what he says will come about. Thus, they have acknowledged the Power behind the words, Yehovah.

The question in Hebrew is different than it reads in English. It says ad matay yiyeh zeh lanu l'moqesh - "until when shall this be unto us a snare?" There is no noun for "man" here, and so it could be talking about Moses, it could be talking about the situation of the plagues, the reason for the plagues - which is keeping Israel, or the entire scenario as one giant catastrophe.

I would prefer the last option - it is referring to the whole sh'bang. This is the first of 27 times that the word moqesh or "snare" is used in the Bible. The word literally means a snare, such as for catching animals, but it is as often as not used figuratively to indicate something that will lead to destruction.

The next time it is used will be in Exodus 23 when describing the inhabitants of the Promised Land. There it says -

"For I will deliver the inhabitants of the land into your hand, and you shall drive them out before you. 32 You shall make no covenant with them, nor with their gods. 33 They shall not dwell in your land, lest they make you sin against Me. For if you serve their gods, it will surely be a snare to you."
Exodus 23:31-33

The snare at that time is referring to the inhabitants of the land, making a covenant with them and/or their gods, and serving their gods. This is exactly how Israel is now perceived to the Egyptians. Everything about them is a snare that will end in their destruction.

7 (con't) Let the men go, that they may serve the Lord their God.

From time to time, it needs to be repeated that the words "the Lord" mean literally, Yehovah. It is a pronoun indicating His name, not a title. The force of what the servants of Pharaoh say here is lost without understanding this. They actually say, "Let the men go, that they may serve Yehovah, their God."

They are acknowledging now that Yehovah is the God of the Hebrews and that He is to be served just as Pharaoh would serve his own gods. And so they make a recommendation, "Let the men go." It does not say, "Let the people go."

A different word is used here than in verse 11 for "man" and so some scholars try to say that the term "men" is inclusive of all of the people. However, there are 2006 uses of this word for "man" in the Old Testament and I went through most of them. Not one that I found was translated any other way than "man."

The servants are merely asking for the men to leave to serve Yehovah. It then implies that they would be returning after their time of worship was complete. This is certain because otherwise, the rest of the account makes no true sense.

7 (con't) Do you not yet know that Egypt is destroyed?"

The words are in the past tense, "Egypt is destroyed." And yet it isn't yet destroyed. There is then a sense of fear in the servants concerning the finality of the coming plague for their land and their fortunes. They are not so much guided by their love of Israel as they are by the horror that continued resistance will bring about.

8 So Moses and Aaron were brought again to Pharaoh, and he said to them, "Go, serve the Lord your God. Who are the ones that are going?"

Obviously, the consultation had a partial effect on Pharaoh because Moses and Aaron were brought again into his presence with the grant that they may in fact go to serve Yehovah their God. But even before acceptance can be made, an implied qualification is added into the mix.

The Hebrew provides a wonderfully poetic translation into English. It says mi vami haholekem - "who and who will go with you?" The repetition is a way of asking for a complete description of who is intended to join in the trip into the wilderness.

The counselors had gone so far as to recommend the men leave and so Pharaoh asks his question implying that not everyone will actually be allowed to go. He knew from the plague of frogs that "the people" were to go, but he now wants the ambiguity of that statement removed and a firm answer of who is entailed in the term "the people." And so Moses now tells him...

9 And Moses said, "We will go with our young and our old; with our sons and our daughters, with our flocks and our herds we will go, for we must hold a feast to the Lord."

The designations given by Moses are all-encompassing. There is no more ambiguity in what is demanded. The first designation is "our young and our old." These are males. The elders would be in superintendence over the affairs of the feast and the younger would be instructed in the method of the feast for the future.

The "sons and daughters" means that the entire household would be included - obviously if the children went, their mothers would be with them. The "flocks and the herds" meant that not an animal would be left because they were to be the offering to the Lord. Whatever was determined would be offered. To leave any behind would also mean they would be susceptible to theft. All would go.

The entire company of Israel was to participate without exception. But according to the ancient writer Herodotus, this was the custom of the Egyptians as well. The entire family was included in their six annual feasts. Because of this, Moses wasn't asking for anything that was beyond what Egypt already understood.

It needs to be noted that in just a short time, Israel will observe the Passover. In the instructions for it, there was to be a lamb per household for the Passover meal. Considering that there are 603,550 fighting aged men who will depart, that would be an immense number of lambs.

And at the exodus, a large number of flocks and herds of the people are mentioned as they depart. Thus, there would have been millions of animals ready to head out of Egypt and from under his grasp. He will not be pleased with this thought.

I'm not keen on seeing Egypt ruined even more
And so I will now consider letting you go
You may leave to serve Yehovah, that's for sure
But who and who will go with you, this I want to know

I'm a generous guy and I'm sure we can agree
You'll get your request granted and off you'll go
I hope it's a grand time, a super festive par-ty
But who and who will go with you, this I need to know

Every one will go, this you must know, dear Pharaoh
The whole group of people known as Israel

And all of our flocks will go too, that is who and who will go, so you know
You have asked and now my words do tell

III. It Looks Like Tomorrow Will be a Bad Day for Egypt (verses 10 & 11)

10 Then he said to them, "The Lord had better be with you when I let you and your little ones go!"

All of verse 10 is debatable in its intended meaning. This first portion is obscure. Some look at it as a curse, some look at it as a statement of mockery. Either way, because he has already credited Yehovah with the preceding plagues, he is now blaspheming Him.

The same God who has wrought all of this destruction is being challenged in His demand for service and who the participants of that service will be. His words now all but call out for the plague of locusts to come.

10 (con't) Beware, for evil is ahead of you.

This second half of the verse is also difficult to interpret. It says ki raah neged penekhem - "indeed evil is before your faces." It is either a threat - "If you try to leave as you have demanded you will certainly find evil in the punishment you receive." Or it is an indictment on their character - "I can tell that your heart is bent on evil because your face reflects it quite clearly."

Either way, Albert Barnes sums up the thought quite nicely -

"Great as the possible infliction might be, Pharaoh held it to be a less evil than the loss of so large a population." Albert Barnes

In other words, "If letting all of you go is the price of not being plagued, then bring on the plague, because you all aren't going!"

11 Not so! Go now, you who are men, and serve the Lord, for that is what you desired."

His words drip with irony because he knows that Moses won't flinch, and his mind is made up as well. The war of ego is all he can think about at this point. Instead, he tells them that the men can go, but he uses a different word for man. It is geber which implies an adult male. It comes from the verb gabar which means "mighty."

It is being used by him as an antithesis to the word for "men" mentioned in verse 7. Further, he is inserting it into Moses' mouth because this word has never been used during the entire dialog. Regardless of what he may have thought Moses meant, it is not what Moses meant.

Along with all of this, there is one more point of irony which is the words "go now." He is falsely implying that the mighty men may go, but he actually means that these two heroes standing in front of him were to be excused as we see in the final portion of the verse...

11 (con't) And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence.

This is an indignity that they had not yet suffered. The increasing anger and hardening of Pharaoh has become almost a torrent of rage. He is a troubled man who desperately wants to control the events around him and yet he has no power to do so.

And so he uses his anger to vent his frustrations and to subject his opponents to whatever disgrace is available to him. He had just told them that evil was before their faces, and now the final words say that they have been "driven from the face of Pharaoh." With this act, He has sealed the fate of Egypt to yet another plague.

It is a hard, painful road he has chosen, but we too have made similar choices of our own. As a people we elect leaders who we intuitively know will bring us temporary relief and long term pain.

As individuals, we may choose a sinful divorce for momentary pleasure in place of staying married and enduring through times of difficulty, which will normally in the end with times of great joy and blessing.

As students we may cheat instead of putting forth the effort to study. As employees, we may find ways of hiding our laziness in order to make our day a little smoother. Whatever it is that is self-centered in our decision-making process, it is almost always the worst possible avenue to pursue.

Pharaoh hasn't learned this and it has cost him. It will continue to cost him until his kingdom is ruined, his firstborn son is dead, and until he finally perishes beneath the waters of the Red Sea. Following the word of the Lord, being obedient to His commands, and honoring Him with our life and our actions is always the very best course for us to follow.

And there is no greater truth than that which says we must belong to Him in order to be able to please Him. And the only way that can come about is by calling out to Him for forgiveness of sin and reconciliation between the warring parties. If you have never called out to Jesus, please let me tell you what you need to know...

Closing Verse: A wicked man hardens his face,
But as for the upright, he establishes his way. Proverbs 21:29

Next Week: Exodus 10:12-20 (The Plague of Locusts, Part II)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Release or Locusts, Take Your Pick

Now the Lord said to Moses

“Go in to Pharaoh; for I have hardened his heart

And the hearts of his servants

That I may before him these signs of Mine impart

And that you may tell in the hearing of your son

And your son’s son the mighty things I have in Egypt done

And My signs which I have done among them by My word

That you may know that I am the Lord.”

So Moses and Aaron came in to Pharaoh

And said to him, "Thus says the Lord God of the Hebrews
'How long will you refuse to humble yourself before Me?
Let My people go, that they may serve Me in the manner I choose

Or else, if you refuse to let My people go
Behold, I will bring locusts into your territory tomorrow
And they shall cover the earth's face
So that no one will be able to see the earth
And they shall eat the residue of what is left in this place
Which remains to you from the hail, anything of worth

And they shall eat every tree which grows
Up for you out of the field, anything that shows

They shall fill your houses
The houses of all your servants, all looking for what's green
And the houses of all the Egyptians
Which neither your fathers nor your fathers' fathers have seen,
Since the day that they were on the earth to this day
And he turned and out from Pharaoh he went away

Then Pharaoh's servants said to him
"How long shall this man be a snare to us?
Let the men go, that they may serve the Lord their God

Do you not yet know that Egypt is destroyed from all this fuss?

So Moses and Aaron were brought again to Pharaoh

And he said to them, in a manner unknowing

“Go, serve the Lord your God, even so

Who are the ones that are going?”

And Moses said, “We will go

With our young and our old

With our sons and our daughters

With our flocks and our herds we will go, now you have been told

For we must hold a feast to the Lord

This is the command of His spoken word

Then he said to them as we now know

“The Lord had better be with you

When I let you and your little ones go!

Beware, for evil is ahead of you, it's true

Not so! Go now, you who are men

And serve the Lord, for that is what you desired

And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence, there and then

These are the things which have transpired

Pharaoh is a tough nut to crack as we see

He is stubborn to the point of foolishness and ruin

But how often is the same true with you and me
When we let our emotions become our own undoin'

Let's choose a better path and be obedient to the Lord
Let's willingly follow Jesus in this life we live
Together let us follow the precepts laid out in His word
And all of our praise and worship, to Him let us give
May peace reign in our hearts, each of us
May our lives be suitable offerings to God
Every moment let us pursue the Lord Jesus
And find contentment on the hallowed path we trod

All our praise we offer to You. O Lord Jesus
You are our Rock, our Light, and the Guide for each of us

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 10:12-20 (THE PLAGUE OF LOCUSTS PART II)

In 2013, the most recent major plague of locusts filled the Middle East. It wasn't by any stretch comparable to the plague described in the Bible or some other plagues which have come about in recorded history, but photos from it still showed an impressive amount of locusts suddenly showing up in various places.

Over Egypt, they estimated an infestation of about 30 million locusts. Just before the Passover in Israel, a portion of them flew over the border and covered about 2000 acres in the south of the land. With modern pest control, the infestation quickly died out, but it made for great new stories, especially because it occurred so close to Passover.

In our ongoing look into the plagues on Egypt, we're also getting closer and closer to the first Passover. Seven plagues are behind us and the eighth is just about to start. And despite it being the greatest plague of locusts ever to come upon the earth, it will still not have a permanent effect on Pharaoh.

When reading Exodus, he sounds like a nut job because he keeps refusing to yield to the Lord. When you read it, it almost seems impossible that someone could act this way. And yet, Pharaoh is simply a picture of any one of us or any group of people at any given time.

We can laugh at the stupid man because we see the whole story in front of us, but he was really no different than Israel. They got many of the same punishments as Pharaoh and they still wouldn't yield to the Lord. And really, how much worse was this when they were the Lord's people and had the Lord's word right there in front of them!

Text Verse: "I blasted you with blight and mildew.
When your gardens increased,
Your vineyards,
Your fig trees,
And your olive trees,
The locust devoured them;
Yet you have not returned to Me,'
Says the Lord." Amos 4:9

The words of Amos go on citing the measures the Lord took to get Israel to repent. And yet time and again, they wouldn't listen. Eventually, the sobering words of the Lord show the utter frustration He had at their continued rebellion as He cried out, "Prepare to meet your God, O Israel!" (4:12)

I can't think of a more terrifying thought, and yet every person on earth will eventually hear the same words. Some will be ready and some won't, but we will all be meeting our God someday. The terms on which we meet Him depend solely on our relationship with Jesus Christ.

For Pharaoh, the Lord will continue to demonstrate that He alone is God and that the gods of Egypt are merely false gods. And for us, He has proven this so powerfully through His word that we are simply left without excuse if we ignore it and turn our hearts away from Him.

And so let's not do that. Instead, pay heed to His superior word. In order to do that, we need to know it. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The East Winds Brings Destruction (verses 12-15)

12 Then the Lord said to Moses, “Stretch out your hand over the land of Egypt for the locusts,

In the previous verse from last week, Moses and Aaron had suffered the disgrace of being driven from Pharaoh's presence. Because they are the representatives of the Lord, it was an act against Him. This is no different than treating an ambassador from another country with disgrace.

The treatment of the representative reflects upon the people or authority that the person represents. To expel an ambassador is thus intended as an action against the one whom the ambassador represents. To expel Moses and Aaron can only be viewed as a defiant action against the Lord.

Therefore, the Lord will now act once again, multiplying His wonders in the land of Egypt. And so He instructs Moses to “Stretch out your hand over the land of Egypt for the locusts.” Mentally, we can picture what this would entail.

Moses would raise his arms to the heavens and draw them out in the direction of all four quarters as if beckoning the great army which God has prepared for the moment. It will be, as Pharaoh was already told, locusts.

To repeat so you remember, locusts are seen throughout the Old Testament and they are especially highlighted in the book of Joel. Their Hebrew name is arbeh. But the root of arbeh is what gives substance to their name. It is ravah and means "multiply."

Thus, the very name, "locust" implies astonishing numbers. As we saw, in Joel the Lord calls them "My great army." The great army of the Lord will now rain destruction from the heavens. Their devastating power will come heavily upon the land with the sole purpose of consuming everything they encounter.

12 (con't) that they may come upon the land of Egypt, and eat every herb of the land—

Last week, in verse 5 it mentioned that the locusts "shall eat the residue of what is left" and it specifically mentioned the trees. Now it uses a general word to describe every green thing - ehev. It is the same word which was used in the plague of hail. There it said -

"Then the Lord said to Moses, 'Stretch out your hand toward heaven, that there may be hail in all the land of Egypt—on man, on beast, and on every herb of the field, throughout the land of Egypt.' 23 And Moses stretched out his rod toward heaven; and the Lord sent thunder and hail, and fire darted to the ground. And the Lord rained hail on the land of Egypt. 24 So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, so very heavy that there was none like it in all the land of Egypt since it became a nation. 25 And the hail struck throughout the whole land of Egypt, all that was in the field, both man and beast; and the hail struck every herb of the field and broke every tree of the field." Exodus 9:22-25

The plague of hail wrought its damage on the trees and herbs, and now these words are used again to show that although the hail did great damage, some plants survived. These will now be consumed by the grand plague of locusts.

The Hebrew word for "come upon" is alah. Here it gives the general idea of rising like clouds as they are carried in by the wind. From a distance, one would only see a great black cloud coming upon the land. If you didn't know what it was, it would be a most terrifying sensation.

One might think some type of supernatural hostile force was coming upon the land or that the earth itself was rising like a black dust cloud to consume whatever was in its path. Even someone who knew what the cloud was would surely feel panic in the moment before it arrived. The cloud would come and the damage will be immense...

12 (con't) all that the hail has left.”

The stretching out of the hands over Egypt was symbolic. It meant that there would be complete coverage of the country, just as there was with the hail. Whatever was spared in that plague will again be susceptible to further destruction. But because there was so much damage already from the hail, the locusts would have less to eat than they otherwise would have.

Because of this, what was left would be at even greater risk than by a normal plague, and Pharaoh has already been told that this will be greater than any other known plague up to that point. He should have heeded, but the hardened heart is like an iron wall. And Pharaoh's heart was very hard.

Pharaoh's heart is hard and his mind is fixed

And many pains he has brought on himself and his land

First he relents and then hardens, his actions are mixed

And so again and again he receives a punishing hand

First it was blood, then frogs, and then the lice

Those didn't work, nor did the flies or the death of the livestock
And the boils and the hail could not have been nice
Now maybe the locusts will his heart finally unlock

They are coming and they will cover the land
What hasn't been destroyed will now be chewed away
Another plague from God's powerful hand
Another plague which for an end Pharaoh will pray

13 So Moses stretched out his rod over the land of Egypt,

As instructed, so Moses does. Like the plague of hail, Aaron isn't mentioned. Instead it says that Moses took the action. There has been a marked shift in the initiation of the plagues, as least from how the Bible records them. Moses, whose name means "He who draws out," will once again draw out a terrifying plague upon the land of Egypt.

13 (con't) and the Lord brought an east wind on the land all that day and all that night.

Moses is very careful to describe the details of how the Lord worked this great miracle. Because locusts plagues are not entirely uncommon, this one is again natural enough to be dismissed as chance timing by a hardened heart, but it is supernatural enough to be seen as a true miracle by one who understands God's foreknowledge of such events when they occur.

The true miracle is just that - the event was foretold by the Lord and it will come about exactly when He directs it to occur. The Pulpit Commentary notes that -

"Locusts generally come with a wind; and, indeed, cannot fly far without one. An east wind would in this case have brought them from northern Arabia, which is a tract where they are often bred in large numbers. Denon, the French traveller, notes that an enormous cloud of locusts which invaded Egypt during his stay, came from the east."

Because the verse tells us that the wind blew all that day and all that night, it is telling us that the locusts could easily have been carried a very great distance without any trouble at all. There was a devastating date with destiny for these destructive demons and there was no delay in their duly-timed arrival...

13 (con't) When it was morning, the east wind brought the locusts.

While speaking to Pharaoh through Moses, the Lord said this in verse 4 - "...if you refuse to let My people go, behold, tomorrow I will bring locusts into your territory." Exactly as prophesied, so it occurred. Only a truly hardened heart could continue to fight against such precise warnings with such devastating results.

Before we go on, I want to read you this entire verse again and then read you Exodus 14:21. There you will see the similarities in how God performs the miracles -

"So Moses stretched out his rod over the land of Egypt, and the Lord brought an east wind on the land all that day and all that night. When it was morning, the east wind brought the locusts."

"Then Moses stretched out his hand over the sea; and the Lord caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea into dry land, and the waters were divided." Exodus 14:21

Both times an east wind is used to produce the miracle. God's use of the east wind in the first instance was to destroy Pharaoh's land of Egypt while continuing to work towards securing Israel's freedom. His use of this same east wind later was to actually secure freedom for Israel and at the same time to destroy Pharaoh and the Egyptian people.

There are both similarities and contrasts, but in both the glory of the Lord is revealed.

14 And the locusts went up over all the land of Egypt and rested on all the territory of Egypt.

The same word for "territory" which was used to describe the coverage of the plague of frogs is used again here. It is gebul and it means "borders." In other words, the land within the borders is what was infested. Wherever anything green was within the borders it was plagued with locusts.

After their long flight, they are said to have rested there. This is the same word for "rest" as was used for example, after the flood of Noah. As the flood ended, the ark rested on the mountains of Ararat. In the same way, the locusts have been on a long, divinely-directed journey, and they too will now rest and reinvigorate themselves.

14 (con't) They were very severe; previously there had been no such locusts as they,

In verse 6, Moses told Pharaoh this -

"They shall fill your houses, the houses of all your servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians—which neither your fathers nor your fathers' fathers have seen, since the day that they were on the earth to this day."

Exactly as had been prophesied, so it came about. In fact, the words used to describe the coming of the locusts are kaved meod - "very heavy." The sheer numbers of them would have been such a weight and a burden on the already devastated land that it would simply groan from the arrival of this new plague.

But there is more than just a plague which had never been seen before. The Bible describes it as a plague which is unique for all time...

14 (con't) nor shall there be such after them.

There is no reason to not take these words literally. The Bible says that this plague was immense and that there would never be such a plague like it again. It doesn't specify only Egypt. It simply says that this is the big one for all time.

In Joel 2:2, it uses similar words, but the locusts referred to in Joel are metaphorically being used of men. The army of the end times prophesied in Joel will be comparable to the locusts of the book of Exodus. As often happens in the Bible, things from nature are used both literally and in metaphor for us to see how the Lord's hand works in redemptive history.

As this is the greatest plague of locusts ever, then in order to understand how immense it must have been, we can read Benson's comments on other plagues which have been documented in history -

"In the year 1527 great troops of locusts were brought by a strong wind out of Turkey into Poland, which country they wasted; and in 1536 a wind from the Euxine Sea brought such vast numbers into Podolia, that, for many miles round, they destroyed every thing. And "in the year 1650, a cloud of locusts was seen to enter Russia in three different places; and from thence they spread themselves over Poland and Lithuania, in such astonishing multitudes that the air was darkened, and the earth covered with their numbers. In some places they were seen lying dead, heaped upon each other to the depth of four feet; in others they covered the surface like a black cloth; the trees bent with their weight, and the damage which the country sustained exceeded computation." Benson

If this plague upon Egypt is truly the greatest ever seen, imagine the horror of the devastation which must have been wrought.

15 For they covered the face of the whole earth, so that the land was darkened;

This verse could actually mean one of two things. It either means that as they arrived the entire earth was darkened by their blotting out the sun, or that when they arrived, the entire earth was covered with them. Actually though, both would be the case. Albert Barnes notes one example from history of the first case -

"Travelers mention a cloud of locusts extending over 500 miles, and so compact while on the wing that it completely hid the sun. This passage describes a swarm unprecedented in extent."

Charles Ellicott notes one example from history of the second -

“The steppes were literally covered with the bodies of these insects. . . . The whole face of nature seemed to be concealed as by a living veil.”

The locusts over Egypt were numerous enough to blacken out the sun as they flew and they were numerous enough to cover the land completely as they rested. And the word used for "cover" in the Hebrew shows that either is possible.

When the flood of Noah covered the earth, the same word was used. Likewise, in the 147th psalm the word is used to indicate clouds which cover the earth. Therefore, this is certainly speaking of the entire cycle of the visit of the locusts, both over and on the land.

15 (con't) and they ate every herb of the land and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left.

The Pulpit commentary notes that -

"....if these terrible columns stop half an hour on a spot, for everything growing on it, vines, olive-trees, and corn, to be entirely destroyed. After they have passed, nothing remains but the large branches and the roots, which, being underground, have escaped their voracity."

The locusts in Egypt were certainly famished from the long flight and were thus ready to devour everything that they came to. I don't suppose that unless we actually saw such a sight, that we could even imagine how utter the devastation must have been.

And as we think about it, we have to keep reminding ourselves that 1) this was purposed by God to show His power over Egypt and Egypt's false gods, 2) that it was His intent through this to secure the release of His people, and 3) that it could have been avoided if Pharaoh simply yielded to the demand of the Lord.

And for each of these points, we can look both to parallels in the end times and what will occur there, and also to individual instances in every life on earth. God shows His power for exactly the same reasons in both of these.

What is amazing is that even though this is true, and we have the written record of it from the past, most people in the world fail to see it in themselves, and the world of the end times will collectively fail to see it as they head off to their own doom.

15 (con't) So there remained nothing green on the trees or on the plants of the field throughout all the land of Egypt.

Verse 15 shows the victory of the Lord over the false Egyptian gods Nut, the sky goddess, and Osiris, god of crops and fertility. Nut was unable to stop the advance of the Lord's locust army, and Osiris was unable to save the crops and the fruit trees from their complete devastation.

In chapter 9, the Lord said, "...at this time I will send all My plagues to your very heart, and on your servants and on your people, that you may know that there is none like Me in all the earth" (Exodus 9:14). The Lord spoke and He continues to demonstrate that His spoken word is true.

How can anyone be as obstinate as Pharaoh?

Who could continue to harm himself and not relent?

One plague after another, and he still won't let Israel go
Will he continue until the Lord's arrows are all spent?

His quiver is full and will never grow empty
And it is only we who suffer as we fight against His word
But He is gracious and forgives, hoping we will see
And acknowledge that He alone is the Lord

Let us not be like Pharaoh and continue to fight
But instead let us respond to His loving call
Take advantage of the day, for soon comes the night
Now is the time and in heaven there is room for us all

II. The West Wind Brings Relief (verses 16-20)

16 Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron in haste,

Something new is added into this call. It reads that he called for them "in haste." The word is mahar and it means "hurriedly" or "quickly." Unlike the previous summons, there is a sense of true urgency in the action. It is as if he has finally been terrified enough to rush towards relief.

At this point he could only imagine what it looked like under the covering of the locusts, but he probably figured there was something left to save. Thus he sends for them hurriedly. He really has no idea just how bad it already was. This is important to consider later when he hardens himself again.

No matter what though, he now calls for Moses and Aaron. The Geneva Bible insightfully and correctly states that -

"The wicked in their misery seek God's ministers for help, even though they hate and detest them." Geneva

Maybe this has happened to you as well, but I cannot tell you how many times someone has emailed me with a request for prayers or advice who are either unsaved or who are believers who are not living for the Lord. Sure enough, when things go bad, the first thing they do is email or call, looking for me to intercede to God for them or to give them advice as to what they should do.

Very few, if any, ever accept the advice and act on it, and always they want to go back to doing exactly what they were doing before the troubles came. Literally, I don't think I could count the number of times I've seen this. And frequently it will happen multiple times with the same person.

Jesus says that a dog will return to his own vomit, and that a sow will return to her wallow after having been washed. I've had both dogs and pigs and so I can say that's true. And I've seen it in humans enough to know that His words are vindicated in the people He created.

16 (con't) and said, "I have sinned against the Lord your God and against you.

His words here improve on what he said during the plague of hail. Then he said "I have sinned this time. The Lord is righteous, and my people and I are wicked." Now he doesn't try to blame anyone else. He is the leader and the responsibility for the sin is his alone.

He also notes the double fault. He sinned against the Lord by not obeying what he was commanded to do, even after having been given sure proofs of the Lord's deity. And he sinned against Moses and Aaron for first promising action and then refusing to hold to his spoken word.

This is now the fourth time he has asked for a plague to be ended, but the Lord who reads the heart and who knows the man, already knows what the outcome will be once this plague is removed as well.

His words here are almost identical to those used in the Parable of the Lost Son in Luke 15. Let's look at them side by side -

"I have sinned against the Lord your God and against you." (Pharaoh)

‘Father, I have sinned against heaven and in your sight, and am no longer worthy to be called your son.’ Luke 15:21

In both accounts, mercy is granted, but we can only hope that the end turned out better for the lost son than what we will eventually see in Pharaoh. The Lord is gracious and merciful, but He is not a cosmic pushover. All wrongs must be judged and a persistent belligerence towards him will eventually end badly for the offender.

17 Now therefore, please forgive my sin only this once,

This is now the fourth time that Pharaoh has asked for Moses to intercede to the Lord for him. So far he has yielded and asked for relief from the frogs, the flies, and the hail. Now the locusts have brought him to this point once again.

In his words, he says "forgive my sin only this once." Sure enough, he is using his only free pass and he knows it. With just two plagues to go, he will never be recorded as asking for the removal of a plague again.

17 (con't) and entreat the Lord your God,

Pharaoh again acknowledges the name Yehovah and that He is their God. And not only that, he acknowledges that He has the power to remove what has come upon him. In other words, he knows that the Lord is the initiator of the action and that He also has the power to end it.

In this is the implied understanding that the Lord has once again defeated the false-gods of Egypt. What is beyond odd is how he continuously vacillates between accepting this knowledge and then fighting against it. But it is, as I mentioned earlier, not that uncommon among many people.

They cry out for relief with the understanding that a higher power has the ability to fix the problem, and then they completely walk away from Him when the problem is solved. I see it so often that as I was typing this sermon, name after name and face after face came to mind of people who have done exactly as Pharaoh is shown to do here.

17 (con't) that He may take away from me this death only."

"This death," or literally "the death" is a way of personifying the tragedy which surrounds him. The fruit trees are being destroyed, the crops are being destroyed, and in turn, the livelihoods and maybe even the lives of the people are being destroyed.

Death is permeating the land as a live force which, if not stopped, will eventually consume all life, either directly or indirectly. He feels certain that if this death is removed then life will be restored. If it is not, all will be lost.

18 So he went out from Pharaoh and entreated the Lord.

We should note here that no promise of release was given. Pharaoh simply asked for the ending of the plague and admitted his sin, but he never said to Moses that Israel will go. It may be that he was hoping Moses would simply believe this was implied, or it may be that he was so overwrought with the locusts that he just never brought it up.

Either way, Moses never asks for the release, knowing that such a promise wasn't to be trusted anyway. He knew that the Lord had a plan and that the Lord would direct his steps through the execution of it. And so there was no need to belabor the point.

He therefore magnanimously turned away without any rebuke or accusation and complied with Pharaoh's request. As John Lange says about this -

"It is, first, an expression of divine forbearance; secondly, the attestation of the miracle displayed in the plague of locusts." John Lange

The Lord is again the great victor and he is also known to be the merciful pardoner of sin. As His representative, Moses simply went out from Pharaoh and entreated the Lord. And the Lord graciously responded...

19 And the Lord turned a very strong west wind,

By the direction of the Lord, an east wind blew them into Egypt and by the direction of the Lord, they are blown out of Egypt. The word translated here as "west wind" here is ruach yam; literally "wind of the sea." A very strong sea breeze came up as directed by the Lord in order to effect His purposes...

19 (con't) which took the locusts away and blew them into the Red Sea.

The wind was so strong that the locusts were literally licked up into it. With their bellies full and with nothing more to be eaten, they responded to both the divine call and the natural forces of the winds and they blew toward the Red Sea.

The Hebrew word for "blew" is taqa. It is a word which indicates a resounding thrust, such as a sword, or a noise such as a clap, a blow, or a blast. It is what a trumpeter would do when blowing out a signal on a trumpet. It is used to describe the noise of the trumpeters as they circled Jericho. In this, the symbolism is marvelous.

Just as armies are called to formation and led into or out of battle by such a blast, the Lord's locust armies are also directed toward the ending of their mission with such a blast. And their final destination is the Red Sea.

Without a continued wind, the locusts will eventually drop into the sea, exactly as the Bible describes here. A man named Pallas notes that in 1799, "Great numbers of them were carried [from the Crimea] by northerly winds into the sea, where they perished, and were afterwards washed on shore in heaps."

One mighty army has now met its end in the Red Sea. It is almost a foreshadowing of the destruction of Pharaoh's own armies in that same place in their not too distant future. The patterns are rich and they are exciting.

19 (con't) There remained not one locust in all the territory of Egypt.

As unlikely as this may seem, it is known that locusts travel in ranks and with this, combined with the immense west wind, the locusts would have risen together and departed to wherever they were being led. Confirming this, Solomon bears out the orderly nature of the locust in Proverbs 30 -

"The locusts have no king,
Yet they all advance in ranks." Proverbs 30:27

There is no reason to assume that this is unreasonable.

20 But the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he did not let the children of Israel go.

The Hebrew reads, "And hardened the Lord the heart of Pharaoh..." Again as always, this needs to be evaluated from the surrounding narrative. One might assume that the Lord has actively hardened his heart, but there are a few things to consider.

The first is that Pharaoh would only now see that it was too late for the vegetation. By the time the call was made, everything was gone, before that though everything was covered with locusts. There would be no way to tell the extent of the damage until the locusts were gone.

Now that there were no more crops or trees or grass, Pharaoh would consider that there was nothing further which could be taken from him. So it didn't matter if he kept the Israelites; he had nothing to lose. Thus, the action is active by Pharaoh and passive by the Lord.

Secondly, as we saw, there was no promise of release. Therefore, he couldn't be considered as a liar once again when he said nothing one way or another. Again, it is an active hardening by Pharaoh and a passive one by the Lord.

And third, the very words from Pharaoh's mouth acknowledged that the plague of locusts was from the Lord. It is he who is now rejecting what he already knows to do. This is exactly the same as those who would email or ask for prayers or advice from the Bible and then turn around and ignore one or both, even after things are resolved.

It isn't the Lord who turns them away from Him, it is they who turn. The Bible says that exactly the opposite is true of the Lord -

"The Lord is not slack concerning His promise, as some count slackness, but is longsuffering toward us, not willing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance." 2 Peter 3:9

It is impossible that the Lord would contradict Himself, even for a stubborn fool like Pharaoh. And so the hardening is an active one by Pharaoh in response to the Lord's promptings, just as it is with all those who act in the same manner around us.

Even though the Lord knows how Pharaoh or any other person will respond, it doesn't mean he is to blame for that response. It is up to us to open our hearts to Him and to be reconciled to Him. He has already made the offer in the sending of His Son. What more does He need to do? What He expects is that we now respond to that offer and receive that Gift. If you have never taken this most important step, please let me tell you what you need to know...

Closing Verse: "The end of a thing is better than its beginning;
The patient in spirit is better than the proud in spirit." Ecclesiastes 7:8

Next Week: Exodus 10:21-29 (The Plague of Darkness)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Plague of Locusts

Then the Lord said to Moses, "Stretch out your hand
Over the land of Egypt for the locusts, in this be deft
That they may come upon Egypt the land
And eat every herb of the land—all that the hail has left

So Moses stretched out his rod over the land of Egypt
And the Lord brought an east wind, on the land it was focused
All that day and all that night the wind whipped
When it was morning, the east wind brought the Locust

And the locusts went up over all the land of Egypt that day
And rested on all the territory of Egypt; they were very severe Previously there had been no such locusts as they Nor shall there be such after them, in days distant or near

For they covered the face of the whole earth
So that the land was darkened; of light it was bereft
And they ate every herb of the land, bringing terrible dearth
And all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left
So there remained nothing green
On the trees or on the plants of the field
Throughout all the land of Egypt
The locusts continued, refusing to yield

Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron hastily it's true
And said, "I have sinned against the Lord your God and against you
Now therefore, please forgive my sin, I'm such a clod
Only this once is my plea
And entreat the Lord your God
That He may take away this death only, from me

So he went out from Pharaoh and entreated the Lord
And the Lord responded to Moses' entreated word

And the Lord turned a very strong west wind that day
Which took all of the locusts away
And blew them into the Red Sea
There remained not one locust in all of Egypt's territory

But the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart
And he did not let the children of Israel go
Just as the Lord knew from the very start
A process which you and I very well know

It is our hearts which condemn us when we fail to heed
When we hear but ignore God's precious word
But if we at some point acknowledge our great need
That is when we will finally bow to the Lord
And He is merciful and will freely forgive
When we call on Jesus, He will save our wayward soul
At that moment is when we truly do begin to live
And we are inscribed on heaven's glorious scroll

Thanking You Jesus for your gracious saving hand
And opening to us wide the gates of Your heavenly land

Hallelujah and Amen....

EXODUS 10:21-29 (THE PLAGUE OF DARKNESS)

The Bible uses countless natural things to teach us spiritual truths. The finger, a rock, a door, the almond, water, types of grain, and on and on... God created these things and so completely understanding them in every way, He uses them to teach us spiritual truths.

Man does the same thing as well. We may use the word "book" as a metaphor for knowledge, or we might use "glasses" as a metaphor for clear sight. However, we may use things in a way which isn't intended by God. Instead we twist their intent and form it into an idol of our own making.

The sun can reflect spiritual truths and in the Bible it does just that, but the Bible also reveals that the sun can and has been made into a false god. We rob the Creator of the honor He is due for creating the sun, and instead we give the honor to the creation.

Egypt worshipped the false god of the sun call Ra. It was one of their principle deities. However, God was able to deny Egypt their false god in a way which would have been rather frightening. Does anyone here know what nyctophobia is?

How about lygophobia? Or scotophobia? Or what about achluophobia? They are all the same phobia - fear of darkness. I went through quite a few lists of rankings concerning of phobias that people had compiled and every one of them included a fear of darkness.

Most admit that this is something children are prone to and it diminishes with age, but some people never get over it. What goes bump in the night is truly a scary thing to them. My guess is that when the plague of darkness ended in Egypt, there were a lot more people with nyctophobia than there were when it started. This was real darkness; a groping darkness.

Text Verse: "For behold, the darkness shall cover the earth,
And deep darkness the people;
But the Lord will arise over you,
And His glory will be seen upon you." Isaiah 60:2

I experienced darkness like what came upon Egypt once. I'll tell you about it in a few minutes. I can tell you that nothing is so terrifying. The senses strain, the mind reels, and the heart beats very fast in such a circumstance. Imagine living through three full days of this!

The Rolling Stones wrote a song in the mid sixties called Paint it Black. At the end of the song it says -

I wanna see it painted, painted black
Black as night, black as coal
I wanna see the sun blotted out from the sky
I wanna see it painted, painted, painted, painted black

The words reflected a spiritual truth in the person. His life was black and he wanted creation black around him as well. If only he knew what that true blackness was like, he would probably do a closer self-examination and long for the Light. Eternal "outer darkness" is how Jesus describes hell.

He says it is a place of weeping and gnashing of teeth, and He teaches us that it is a real place where real people really will be sent. But being sent there is actually a voluntary choice. He has offered us light, life, and peace in place of that. Jesus took all of the darkness of the world upon Himself so that we could see the true Light of God once again.

Think on these things as we evaluate today's verses concerning the ninth plague upon Pharaoh. Consider where you will spend eternity as we once again look into His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Darkness That Can be Felt (verses 21-23)

21 Then the Lord said to Moses, "Stretch out your hand toward heaven,

Arriving now at the ninth plague we should look back and remember that the first nine plagues are divided into three distinct groups. Advance warnings are given to Pharaoh in the first two of the plagues of the specific group, but when the third plague comes, it is without previous notice.

That was the case with the third plague of lice, the sixth plague of boils, and now the ninth plague of darkness. And so without telling Pharaoh what is coming, Moses is instructed to stretch his "hand toward heaven." Where the hand and the rod are directed is where the plagues come from.

The same is true with this plague also. The hand is stretched toward heaven and the plague which will result will come as a covering from there as well. After the sixth plague of boils, and just before the seventh plague of hail, we read this -

"Thus says the Lord God of the Hebrews: 'Let My people go, that they may serve Me, 14 for at this time I will send all My plagues to your very heart, and on your servants and on your people, that you may know that there is none like Me in all the earth.'" Exodus 9:13, 14

The hail, the locusts, and now the coming plague of darkness would come in rapid sequence, and so even without prior notice, Pharaoh would understand that this plague was more than a natural occurrence, but divinely directed as well.

21 (con't) that there may be darkness over the land of Egypt,

This darkness is not explained in any further detail in the Bible, and so it leaves open many possibilities as to its nature. However, what is most likely is that it is another naturally occurring event. The locusts of a couple years ago in 2013 came in the springtime, the same time of year that the locust plague in Egypt occurred.

This year, 2015, has had an exceptional amount of such events similar to the plague of darkness around the world - also during the spring. This is the expected time for them to occur. They are known as khamasin, which is an Arabic term derived from the word "fifty" because the winds blow sporadically over a fifty-day period.

Though the Arabic term is khamasin, the Egyptians call it khamaseen, and in Israel they are known as sharav. The Biblical term for the khamasin is ruakh qadim, or "east wind." They are dry, hot, and sandy. In North Africa and the Arabian Peninsula, they normally blow in from the south.

In Egypt, they come normally between March and May and they bring in immense amounts of sand and dust from the deserts. The winds will blow up to 85 miles an hour and the temperatures can rise as much as 65 degrees in just a couple of hours.

Like I said, this phenomenon has been happening around the world this year. In mid April, the sand winds have covered much of China to even as far as Belarus which went from sunny to pitch black in mere minutes.

For those in Egypt, it would not be an unexpected event and yet because it has occurred in conjunction with the other plagues, and because of its duration, it could also be considered supernatural. Once again, God is using a plague which is notable enough to catch Pharaoh's attention, but natural enough to further harden his heart.

Regardless of what Pharaoh will think about the plague, it will be so intense that it is described with an exceptional expression of hyperbole...

21 (con't) darkness which may even be felt.”

The Hebrew here reads, v'yamesh khoshekh. The Pulpit Commentary translates this literally as, "and one shall feel, or grasp, darkness." It is a darkness that causes one to grope about because no light at all can get into their eyes.

To move about with only using ones hands and feet as guides would lead to a bumped head, chipped teeth, and maybe a poked out eyeball or a broken shin. But if this darkness is coming from an unusually heavy sandstorm, then it could also literally be felt.

Reports of sand filling houses through every crack are common. The winds are so strong, and the dust is so fine that it literally fills every minute space. The darkness would be complete and the sensation could literally be felt.

This plague would carry the same meaning to Pharaoh and to the Egyptians that the other eight had. It is an attack upon their gods as much as a punishment for abusing and refusing to release Israel. This plague is to be an attack on Ra, the sun-god; Horus, a lesser sun-god; Nut, the sky-goddess; and Hathor, another sky-goddess. Charles Ellicott notes this -

"Ra, the sun-god, was among the principal objects of their worship, especially in the Delta, where Heliopolis and Pithoni were cities dedicated to him. Darkness was a creation of Set—the Evil Principle, the destroyer of Osiris—and of Apophis, the Great Serpent, the impeder of souls in the lower world. It would have seemed to the Egyptians that Ra was dead, that Set had triumphed over his brother, that Apophis had encircled the world with his dark folds, and plunged it in eternal night. Hence Pharaoh's early call for Moses, and permission that the people should depart, with their families." Ellicott

Although this might be a normal conclusion of Pharaoh, I have to disagree with Ellicott's assessment. Pharaoh would not at all be concerned with a battle between the gods of Egypt. He has been introduced to Yehovah, God of the Hebrews, and he is fully aware of the promise of continued plagues from Him.

Further, his coming actions demonstrate that he is not at all concerned with an internal struggle between these supposed gods, but rather his concern is that the Lord would remove His hand from Egypt and grant them release from the plague.

22 So Moses stretched out his hand toward heaven,

Again as has been the case after the first few plagues, Aaron is not mentioned as taking the action. Rather it is Moses who, in obedience to the Lord, stretches out his hand toward ha'shemayim, or "the heavens."

22 (con't) and there was thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days.

The term of the last verse is explained in this one. "Darkeness which may even be felt" is given the intensive Hebrew term koshekh aphelah - "an obscurity of darkness." (Pulpit) It is the deepest darkness of all. It will be so dark that it will seem that darkness itself has been obscured.

The senses will be overloaded with it to the point that they will be unable to reason in their normal way. I personally experienced an event almost identical to this when I was mining gold in Alaska in the late 90s. I worked at a little miner's camp with a couple of other guys on the 40-Mile River along the Canada border.

It is the remotest place I've ever been. One day when it was clear blue skies, it suddenly started to get dark from a forest fire. Within only a few minutes, it was so dark that you couldn't hold your hand an inch from your eyes and see even a shadow of it.

We had to grope to simply find our way to a tent and then grope to find matches and a lamp. But even when lit, the darkness immediately consumed the light so that we could barely see. There was so much smoke and ash that it simply swallowed up the light.

And so there we sat, not knowing where the forest fire was in relation to us, or how we would get away from it if it came. It was truly a terrifying experience. And then, as quickly as the darkness came, it disappeared completely. The sky was blue and the visibility was once again unlimited.

It was darkness which could be felt and it was complete in its ability to consume the light around us. If that instance were an example of the intensity of the plague in Egypt, then this was an astonishingly terrifying plague for those who had to endure it. Three days of this would leave one in a state of complete misery.

The plague then is one directed specifically to punish Pharaoh the man and Egypt's false gods. Matthew Henry notes the connection between the physical nature of the plague and the spiritual nature of the reason for it -

"It continued three days; six nights in one; so long the most lightsome palaces were dungeons. Now Pharaoh had time to consider, if he would have improved it. Spiritual darkness is spiritual bondage; while Satan blinds men's eyes that they see not, he binds their hands and feet, that they work not for God, nor move toward heaven. They sit in darkness. It was righteous with God thus to punish. The blindness of their minds brought upon them this darkness of the air; never was mind so blinded as Pharaoh's, never was air so darkened as Egypt." Henry

This plague on Egypt is given as a punishment for the spiritual darkness of Pharaoh and his kingdom, but a similar plague is coming again in the future. It is prophesied in Revelation 16 at the pouring out of the fifth bowl -

"Then the fifth angel poured out his bowl on the throne of the beast, and his kingdom became full of darkness; and they gnawed their tongues because of the pain. 11 They blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and their sores, and did not repent of their deeds." Revelation 16:10, 11

The throne of the beast will receive a like judgment to that of Pharaoh. It will consume the light and it will send them into an even further degraded state of spiritual darkness. The world of the future will be a bleak and sorrowful place to behold.

And it is all a result of self-inflicted wounds brought about by turning from God and from the true Light of the world, Jesus Christ. Oh, if the world would just wake up to the truth of what He has done! They would be spared the miseries which are sure to come in the days ahead.

23 They did not see one another; nor did anyone rise from his place for three days.

The Hebrew here reads lo rau ish eth akhiv - "man did not see his brother." If the darkness here is as intense as what I experienced in Alaska, then there is no reason to not accept it as written. Even if a light was on in the house, only a shape could be seen in the light, but one couldn't distinguish who the shape was.

It was literally so dark, and the darkness was literally so consuming of the light from our lamp, that to walk a short distance from it would have left one completely lost. The light would be totally swallowed up in a matter of just a few feet.

The only thing you could do in such a case would be to lie down on the ground and not move. Anything else could lead you into a tree, stumbling over a rock or into a small gorge, or maybe into a bear that was waiting out the dark too. The only source of comfort, at all, was that simple little lamp with the slowly fading fuel in it.

The people of Egypt that had oil lamps or torches could light them and move around the house, but it would be beyond foolish to walk outdoors without at least one or two others carrying lamps in case one went out. The only true option would be to sit in the dark, hope for relief to come, and ponder the nature of God who has such immense power. This sentiment is beautifully reflected in Hannah's prayer in 1 Samuel 2 -

"For the pillars of the earth are the Lord's,
And He has set the world upon them.
9 He will guard the feet of His saints,
But the wicked shall be silent in darkness." 1 Samuel 2:8, 9

23 (con't) But all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings.

The same distinction which has been explicitly noted in several of the other plagues is noted again here. Many commentaries on this verse go beyond what the intent is by overstating what is trying to be said. The intent here is that in Goshen, where Israel dwelt, there was light.

This isn't speaking of individual dwellings individually lighted; rather it is speaking of the collective dwellings having light. The reason for the distinction is explained well by John Lange -

"The judgment of darkness doubtless expresses more specifically the fact, that the wisdom of Egypt has become transformed into a spiritual night, in which the night of death soon to follow is pre-announced, whereas the light in Goshen in contrast with it may signify the dawn of a higher wisdom which finally brings freedom." John Lange

In this, the miraculous nature of the plague is seen first in the arrival of the plague at the time of Moses' action in calling it to occur, and secondly in the intensity of it over Egypt while the lack of it over Goshen.

Matthew Henry again gives a poetic look into the significance of what has occurred -

"It shows the particular favour he bears to his people. Wherever there is an Israelite indeed, though in this dark world, there is light, there is a child of light. When God made this difference between the Israelites and the Egyptians, who would not have preferred the poor cottage of an Israelite to the fine palace of an Egyptian? There is a real difference between the house of the wicked, which is under a curse, and the habitation of the just, which is blessed." Matthew Henry

But there is a question that one could consider in the coming of this plague. As the Lord has controlled it, and as Egypt is completely debilitated from it, then why didn't the Lord have Moses call Israel out of bondage during this time?

They could easily have marched away and towards Canaan if the Lord directed them. In this, there are a few reasons. One is that the Lord had not yet judged all of the false gods of Egypt, nor had he sufficiently multiplied His wonders in the land.

There was another plague which needed to be executed upon Egypt, and there was yet more for Israel to record and memorialize for their future instruction and remembrance. Secondly, God is orderly and precise. The number 10 has significance in Scripture. Ten is one of the perfect numbers. As EW Bullinger notes

It "...signifies the perfection of Divine order, commencing, as it does, an altogether new series of numbers. ... Completeness of order, marking the entire round of anything, is, therefore, the ever-present signification of the number ten. It implies that nothing is wanting; that the number and order are perfect; that the whole cycle is complete." EW Bullinger

The ten plagues of Egypt will lead Israel to the Ten Commandments at Sinai. In each there is a stamp of Divine completeness which the Lord is showing as He works through these redemptive programs.

Third, it is the Lord's intent to lead Israel out, not be stealth as if they were fleeing from a greater foe, but to lead them out in triumph in the face of a foe-defeated. Whereas Pharaoh has had a high hand against the Hebrew people, they would be led out by the high hand of the Lord.

Through such a display, it will be a memorial to them for all time of the great work of the Lord. And as these plagues only picture the greater work of Christ, it is fitting that the exodus would occur in the sight of all people with the Lord leading the way.

Darkness has come upon the land

A pall so heavy that our eyes cannot see

And it came about at the Lord's command

Such a plague, such a burden! How can it be?

The very light from our lamps is consumed by the air

Even a short walk from it would lead to disaster

We have to simply sit and with our eyes stare

At the dark, gloomy shadows from the lamp on the wall's plaster

Oh to be rid of the burden of Israel!

To see them go so that we could just find some relief

Will Pharaoh finally release them? Only time will tell

Surely he will yield, and in the Lord he will acknowledge belief

This time certainly we know, that Pharaoh will let them go

It must be that his heart has softened; surely it is so

II. To Serve the Lord our God (verses 24-26)

24 Then Pharaoh called to Moses and said, “Go, serve the Lord; only let your flocks and your herds be kept back. Let your little ones also go with you.”

From this, we can see that even if Pharaoh was aware of such times of darkness from previous sandstorms, this one was of such a magnitude that it was surely a supernatural occurrence. It came at the call of Moses and it stayed an inordinate amount of time. Further, its effects were absolute in their scope.

If the Lord could do this once, He could do it again. And He could also do it for whatever duration He chose. Pharaoh wants no more of such a display. Matthew Henry challenges us to contemplate such misery ourselves -

"Let us dread the consequences of sin; if three days of darkness were so dreadful, what will everlasting darkness be?" Henry

I have lived through a very short span of such darkness. Three days would have been unimaginable. And so to contemplate facing such a plague of infinite days is impossible to even consider. For Pharaoh now though, he is ready to make a deal.

The status of the plague of darkness isn't given. Was Moses summoned during the darkness, or was he summoned after it ended? It doesn't say explicitly, but no matter what, it appears that the preparations for the tenth plague which are found in chapter 12 actually predate the meeting which is now held between them.

When this meeting is over, there is a guarantee that the two will not meet face to face again. In chapter 11, as that meeting is ending, Moses warns Pharaoh that about midnight death would come to Egypt. And in the middle of chapter 12, it says that at midnight it occurred.

So Moses was well aware of what would transpire before meeting Pharaoh and the people of Israel had used their time of light, while Egypt was in darkness, to prepare for the marvelous events which lay ahead. For now though, Pharaoh is willing to yield further than in the past. After the promise of the eighth plague, but before its coming, this exchange was seen -

"So Moses and Aaron were brought again to Pharaoh, and he said to them, 'Go, serve the Lord your God. Who are the ones that are going?'"

9 And Moses said, 'We will go with our young and our old; with our sons and our daughters, with our flocks and our herds we will go, for we must hold a feast to the Lord.'

10 Then he said to them, 'The Lord had better be with you when I let you and your little ones go! Beware, for evil is ahead of you. 11 Not so! Go now, you who are men, and serve the Lord, for that is what you desired.' And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence." Exodus 10:8-11

Finally, Pharaoh has granted release of all of the people. He has slowly had his resolve squeezed out of him. But he still wants both to afflict Israel and to ensure that they will return without force being necessary. And so he offers what on the surface is a compromise. All can go, but the flocks and herds must stay.

But this is really no compromise at all. First, Egypt's own flocks and herds have been reduced to nothing. It is obvious that after a seven-day journey Egypt would have completely plundered the flocks which had been left behind.

Secondly, it is absurd to think that such a large contingent of people could survive in the wilderness without flocks and herds to milk and to eat along the way. And thirdly, the very notion of a sacrifice to the Lord implies that animals were needed for the offerings.

This is actually as much of a slap in the face as it is an offer of favor. He may be hoping that Moses will be fooled by the offer and excited at the prospects of it, but he would be wrong...

25 But Moses said, "You must also give us sacrifices and burnt offerings, that we may sacrifice to the Lord our God.

It appears that Moses immediately understood the intentions of Pharaoh concerning the flocks and the herds. There is nothing stated here that the Egyptians would plunder them, but the way Moses responds shows that Pharaoh was looking at the flocks as his own.

He says, "You must also give us sacrifices and burnt offerings..." He doesn't say that they need to take their animals as he did in the past. Nor does he even say that they need to be allowed to take their animals. Instead, his words are chosen to highlight the situation as he perceives it. It is as if Pharaoh thinks the flocks are already his, but Moses responds to the contrary...

26 Our livestock also shall go with us;

They are not Pharaoh's livestock and he is not the one to control the decision as to whether they will stay or go. The demand was made before and it is repeated now. And the demand is absolute in its scope as we see with his continued words...

26 (con't) not a hoof shall be left behind.

This is a proverbial saying; an idiom. It means not the smallest fraction of something. Every animal will go and nothing will be left. It's also the first time that a hoof is mentioned in the Bible.

The word is parsah which comes from paras, meaning to divide. Hence you have the logic of the idiom - "Even that which can be divided will not be left behind." And the reason for this will no longer be withheld from Pharaoh. If he had missed the reason in his thinking before, it would now be explicitly given to him...

26 (con't) For we must take some of them to serve the Lord our God, and even we do not know with what we must serve the Lord until we arrive there."

The animals are for the worship in the wilderness to Yehovah, the same God who has laid waste the land of Egypt and the same God who is their God. He is to be served and the scope of the service is not even known to those who will serve. Hence the pronoun "we" in the term, "and even we do not know" is emphatic.

Moses is hiding nothing, but openly explaining that they have no idea what lies ahead when they gather before the Lord. Until they arrive and assemble, they are as much in the dark concerning the details of the offerings as Pharaoh is. Hence, every animal must go. Moses is adamant and the Geneva Bible explains why -

"The ministers of God should not yield one iota to the wicked, in regards to their mission." Geneva

What a good lesson for us to consider even now. We have been given directives in the Bible concerning our faith and practice, but we don't have all of the details. If the Lord tells us that homosexuality is not to be condoned in the church, we are not to yield an inch in regards to that issue.

Whatever the issue is, it is our responsibility to the Lord which takes precedence. Far too often, the world wants us to yield to their demands or their personal mores and to abandon an inch or two of our faith to them. But we are the ones who will stand before the Lord and give an account of our actions.

What the world wants is ir...relevant in relation to what our faith and practice demands of us.

We are responsible first and foremost to the Lord our God

We will not yield to you what to Him along belongs

Pharaoh, you have once again proven to be a giant clod

Would you deprive the Lord of offerings, praises, and songs?

How long will you fail to perceive what your eyes have seen?

How long will you fight against our great Lord?

From the first to the last and in everything in between

You have bucked against Him and against His word

If you don't agree to our terms you will regret the choice
Another plague will come which will destroy your heart
But when it is over Israel will rejoice
Our redemption draws nigh, to you this warning I impart

III. Words to be Regretted (verses 27-29)

27 But the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he would not let them go.

It is an almost exact repeat of verse 20 at the ending of the eighth plague. The same word for "hardened" is used. The only real difference is that it says "them" instead of "the children of Israel." From the context it is obvious that this is again a self hardening of the heart by Pharaoh.

The action by the Lord is passive. He has instructed Moses concerning the words to use which will have the greatest effect on this stubborn soul. He has also used plagues which have defeated Egypt's gods, one by one. But He has done it with means which are otherwise natural, even though the supernatural is involved.

Pharaoh has been weighed and measured, and he has been found wanting. His arrogance has trapped him in a web which is impossible for him to escape. And yet, it is a web which he himself has spun. The Lord simply provided the means for him to spin it.

He had offered a concession over the last meeting by allowing the children to go with the men, but that offered grace was marred by the stipulation that the flocks couldn't go. When Moses rejected that, he allowed his pride to once again step in and take over.

And that despite the emphatic statement by Moses that they didn't know what was required in the service of the Lord. How much like Pharaoh are so many! They are given the directives, but not the details. "How long will I have to serve the Lord?" "What claim might He lay on me in the future?" "Will He ask me to give up home or family or life at some point?"

For those whose hearts are soft, the answers aren't necessary. But for those whose hearts are hard, the very notion of obeying the Lord in an unknown capacity is oppressive and tedious. And so they would rather continue the fight against Him than yield to His obviously superior will.

28 Then Pharaoh said to him, "Get away from me! Take heed to yourself and see my face no more! For in the day you see my face you shall die!"

His words reflect a violent outburst which shows how truly enraged and yet anguished he was. He is literally frantic about the situation. It's obvious that he is outmatched and he knows it. But it's also obvious that he doesn't want to admit defeat in the face of what is plainly total defeat.

He is like the army general who has seen his ranks decimated and yet he pushes them on, unwilling to accept that the battle is over. It reflects an intense pride which has been the downfall of many. And because he can't face the reality of the situation, he throws a... temper tantrum, threatening the messenger of the One he fears.

His defiance though seals his own fate. Moses may never again come into his presence, and yet Moses is the only mediator for the One who controls his ultimate destiny. As Daniel says about the antichrist of the end times is true of Pharaoh here -

"...yet he shall come to his end, and no one will help him." Daniel 11:45

29 So Moses said, "You have spoken well. I will never see your face again."

There is a difference between speaking correctly in a logical sense and correctly in a moral sense. Sometimes they overlap, sometimes they don't. Moses is not saying that Pharaoh has spoken in a morally proper manner, but in a logically correct one.

He has already been informed, as we will see in the coming chapters, that the final plague is coming and it will be that very night. The people would be immediately released and therefore there was no need for them to ever meet face to face again.

Moses knew this and so he stated that what Pharaoh said was logically correct. As Matthew Henry says about this -

"Vain malice! To threaten him with death, who was armed with such power! What will not hardness of heart, and contempt of God's word and commandments, bring men to!" Henry

And so ends Moses' time in Pharaoh's courts. For the Hebrews, encounters with Pharaoh began 430 years earlier when Abraham journeyed to Egypt. About 215 years later their forefather Joseph was taken out of prison to appear before Pharaoh.

In his meeting, he went from prisoner to the second highest authority in the land. After his death though, he and what he did for Egypt, was forgotten.

But the plight of the Hebrews wasn't. In time, Moses was born and was adopted into Pharaoh's house where he grew until the age of 40 when he went into a type of exile. Then another 40 years later, he appeared before Pharaoh once again in order to secure the release of his people.

Now, 430 years after the original promise to Abraham that He would give the land of Canaan to his descendants, Moses has the last encounter with Pharaoh before their departure. There is symmetry in these encounters which reveal patterns which are both precise and astonishing.

Everything the Lord has done to this point has been for the benefit of His people, even if it seems that He had forgotten them He hadn't. And each of these stories has brought us pictures of the greater redemptive workings of the Lord in history. Israel is about to experience the Passover from their land of bondage.

But we are figured into this story as well. Christ came to deliver us from bondage to sin and death and to lead us to His holy mountain. He became our Passover Lamb to secure this for us. The pictures will continue and every one of them details the marvelous work of the Lord for His people, both in actual occurrence and in prophetic picture.

In Him, the spiritual darkness is replaced with God's marvelous light. The surety of hell and separation is abolished and the promise of heaven and friendship is restored through His wonderful work!

Let us never stop looking into this word. As long as there is breath in our lungs, let us continue forward, searching out its mysteries, rejoicing in its marvels, and basking in the warm stream of love and life which proceeds from it. It is all about the love of God which is found in Jesus Christ.

If you have never received this greatest of all Gifts, please let me tell you how you can today, even now...

Closing Verse: "That they may know from the rising of the sun to its setting
That there is none besides Me.

I am the Lord, and there is no other;
7 I form the light and create darkness,
I make peace and create calamity;
I, the Lord, do all these things." Isaiah 45:6, 7

Next Week: Exodus 11:1-10 (Announcing the Final Plague) (31st Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

It would be good to consider before we close that Jesus Christ went into the tomb of darkness for 3 days, just as Egypt was plunged into 3 days of darkness. He took for us what we deserve. Let us thank the Lord for calling us out of spiritual darkness into His marvelously wondrous light.

The Plague of Darkness

Then the Lord to Moses said

“Stretch out your hand toward heaven, I say

That there may be darkness over the land of Egypt instead

Darkness which may even be felt this day

So Moses stretched out toward heaven his hand
And there was thick darkness three days in all of Egypt the land
They did not see one another
Nor did anyone from his place for three days rise
One could not tell who was his brother
But all the children of Israel had in their dwellings light for their eyes
Then Pharaoh called to Moses and said
“Go, serve the Lord
Only let your flocks and your herds be kept back instead
Let your little ones also go with you, so is my word
But Moses said, “You must also Give us sacrifices and burnt offerings too
That we may sacrifice to the Lord our God, you know
It is the thing we are required to do
Our livestock also shall go with us
Not a hoof shall be left behind as we trod
For we must take some of them
To serve the Lord our God

And even we do not know with what we must serve the Lord
Until we arrive there and only then receive His word
But the Lord hardened Pharaoh’s heart as we know
And he would not let them go
Then Pharaoh said to him in a manner sore

"Get away from me!" He did cry
Take heed to yourself and see my face no more!
For in the day you see my face you shall die!
So Moses said, "You have spoken well
I will never see your face again
This is the account that the Bible does tell
Of the consequences of the hardened heart of men
We get tripped up in pride; a sad, sad state
And it causes us grief and pain to come our way
This is a lesson the Bible does relate
And the message it does to us portray
But there is a cure to this disease called pride
It is to humble ourselves before the Lord
And with Him to walk in each and every stride
And to meditate upon His word

The change will come to each of us
When we willingly call out to Him for terms of peace
When we humble our hearts and received Jesus
The grief will end and the warring will cease
Thank You O God for Your wondrous saving grace
Thank You for the promise of eternity with you in Your heavenly place

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 11:1-10 (ANNOUNCING THE FINAL PLAGUE)

On August 2nd, 1990, Iraq invaded Kuwait with about 100,000 troops. On August 8th, they announced the annexation of Kuwait. Three months later, on November 29, the U.N. Security Council passed Resolution 678 setting a deadline for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait before January 15, 1991, or face military action.

Talks began in Geneva between U.S. Secretary of State James Baker and Iraq Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, but by 9 January of 1991, they ended with no progress. On 12 January, the U.S. Congress passed a joint resolution authorizing the use of military force to drive Iraq out of Kuwait.

By this time, and with this final action, there was only a "when" not an "if" as to whether there would be a war or not. Some things are simply going to happen and there is nothing that will stop them. Time marches on, heads are often self-willed and obstinate, and hearts get harder, not softer, when faced with confrontation.

Some scholars have claimed that if Pharaoh had simply agreed to let Israel go after having this final plague was announced, the Lord would have relented and not brought the plague on Egypt. But this is not correct. The structure of chapter 11 takes care to understand the timeline of events that occur.

The words of Moses which announce this plague are actually a continuous thought from the meeting started in Chapter 10. Pharaoh hardened his heart, refused to let Israel go, and ordered Moses' dismissal. Moses agreed, but after that, during the same meeting, the last plague is announced.

There is no option as to whether Pharaoh can relent or not. Instead, there is only the absolute assurance that the plague will come and that it will be the Lord who executes the action. There is a point where bargaining is ended and only inevitable punishment will result.

Saddam Hussein found this out. He lost his sons, he lost his army, he lost his nation, and he lost his life, all because of a stubborn, hard heart. The same was true with Pharaoh. History is replete with losers like this.

Text Verse: "Therefore you shall say to them, 'Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: "Drink, be drunk, and vomit! Fall and rise no more, because of the sword which I will send among you.'" 28 And it shall be, if they refuse to take the cup from your hand to drink, then you shall say to them, 'Thus says the Lord of hosts: "You shall certainly drink!"'" Jeremiah 25:27, 28

Judgment came upon the nations which surrounded Israel because of their treatment of Israel and because of their obstinate hearts before the Lord. Sin heaps up in a land until there is simply no more remedy and the only alternative left is judgment.

The world is increasingly obstinate and hard-hearted against the Lord once again. The glories of the church age are quickly fading and this time of grace is coming to an end. Anyone who thinks that God will somehow work differently now than He has in the past is deluded.

We are given these stories to hopefully learn from. Unfortunately, you can't learn from what remains unopened and untaught. Most of the world is at this very point with the treasure of God's superior word. But it is still available to instruct us if we will but look into its hidden riches. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. One More Plague (verses 1-3)

1 Now the Lord had said to Moses, "I will bring one more plague on Pharaoh and on Egypt.

At the end of the previous chapter, these were the final words we looked at -

"Then Pharaoh said to him, 'Get away from me! Take heed to yourself and see my face no more! For in the day you see my face you shall die!'

29 So Moses said, 'You have spoken well. I will never see your face again.'"

But coming up in verse 8 of this chapter we will read -

"And all these your servants shall come down to me and bow down to me, saying, 'Get out, and all the people who follow you!' After that I will go out." Then he went out from Pharaoh in great anger."

From this it is evident that verses 1-3 are parenthetical, having been spoken before the meeting with Pharaoh, which is still ongoing. Due to deficiency in tenses in the Hebrew language, the context drives the translation. In the case of many translations, like the KJV, they incorrectly state here "And the Lord said..." rather than "Now the Lord had said..."

Thus, such translations make it appear that there is a contradiction because it said they would never meet again, but then they do meet once again. Rather, this is one continuous meeting, but a parenthetical thought is now being introduced.

At some point in the past, the Lord had said to Moses, "I will bring one more plague on Pharaoh and on Egypt." This has been the reason for Moses' boldness of speech before Pharaoh. He has the sure word of the Lord that what is coming will be final. Thus his words have been direct and filled with boldness.

The word for "plague" here has not been used before. It is nega which comes from naga, meaning "to touch." This plague is personal and will personally touch those affected. The other plagues affected the people, but the personal nature of this one is highlighted by the use of this word.

It is the same word used in Isaiah 53:8 when speaking of Christ. He, the Son of God, would become our Passover Lamb -

"He was taken from prison and from judgment,
And who will declare His generation?
For He was cut off from the land of the living;
For the transgressions of My people He was stricken." Isaiah 53:8

Already, in the first words of this chapter, we are seeing a picture forming of the work of Christ. Remembering that Pharaoh pictures the ruler of this world and Egypt pictures the fallen world, we are being shown what the Lord would do for us in these types and pictures from 1500 years before His arrival.

1 (con't) After that, he will let you go from here, and when he does, he will drive you out completely.

The Hebrew here for "drive you out completely" is kalah garesh y'garesh etkhem mizzeh - "completely driving out he shall surely drive out you from here." The word "completely" then is speaking of all of the people and everything they own.

As Canon Cook notes, "the meaning is - when at last he lets you depart, with children, flocks, herds, and all your possessions, he will compel you to depart in haste." There will be complete release, just as has been demanded. But more so, it will be not just with Pharaoh's approval, but as if he absolutely insists that they go.

2 Tell the people that men and women alike are to ask their neighbors for articles of silver and gold."

All the way back at the beginning of this journey when Moses stood before the burning bush, the Lord told him this in Exodus 3 -

"And I will give this people favor in the sight of the Egyptians; and it shall be, when you go, that you shall not go empty-handed. 22 But every woman shall ask of her neighbor, namely, of her who dwells near her house, articles of silver, articles of gold, and clothing; and you shall put them on your sons and on your daughters. So you shall plunder the Egyptians."
Exodus 3:21-22

As you can see, at that time the Lord only mentioned the women asking for these items. Now that mandate is extended to men as well as women. All are to ask for such articles. The word for "articles" can mean a whole host of things from weapons to utensils and from cups to plates.

As before, articles of silver and gold are specifically requested, not to enrich the Israelites, but for what the Israelites will do with them in the wilderness. They are being prepared for an organized mode of worship which will continue on until the coming of Christ.

These articles will be used in the construction of the tabernacle and all of the utensils and furniture within that tabernacle. And every part of what they construct will picture Him... every detail of it. God is plundering the Egyptians in order to form worship for His people. This then is ultimately a picture of Christ.

In Christ, God took from humanity in order to build His greater and eternal Temple. He did it in that Christ came from the stream of humanity to be the point of worship and meeting with God. As the tabernacle of the Old Testament, so Christ in the New!

As I noted during the Exodus 3 sermon, the KJV uses the term "borrow" rather than "ask for" these items both there and again here. It is quite possibly the worst possible translation of a word in the history of the world, as most scholars agree.

To borrow implies to return and it is perfectly understood from the situation that returning was not a consideration. The plundering of the Egyptians has brought a lot of criticism on the Bible over the years. People have used terms like "fraud," "theft," "deception," and the like to describe what occurred here.

But what can one expect when a word and a context which surely means "to ask" is mistranslated as "borrow?" These men and women are instructed to ask of their neighbors for the articles they would need and to which they actually had a 215-year right.

3 (The Lord made the Egyptians favorably disposed toward the people,

Exactly as was said in Exodus 3, it is noted here. The Lord had said he would make the Egyptians favorably disposed toward the people and now it is a completed truth here. And these words also show us that the word "borrow" is wholly incorrect.

If the intent was "borrow," there would have been no need for the Lord to have given the Hebrews favor in their sight. People will lend to others even if they don't really like them as long as they know the thing will be returned. Instead, the words are given to show that the Egyptians were favorably disposed to giving them these things.

And finally, the picture of Christ, which these words reflect, would make no sense with the word "borrow." Christ wasn't borrowed from humanity. He came through it and He belongs to it for all eternity as the incarnate word of God.

3 (con't) and Moses himself was highly regarded in Egypt by Pharaoh's officials and by the people.)

These words are a result of the events of the nine previous plagues. When Moses first came, it was with Aaron as his spokesman and with a slowness of tongue which he felt would be a hindrance, not a help. But during the plagues, he amazed and baffled the magicians of Pharaoh.

Then he showed favor to the servants of Pharaoh and the people by announcing the plague of hail in advance and giving them warning to bring their animals in, lest they die. By the time of the plague of locusts, the people were nearly begging Pharaoh to act and release the men for the worship of Yehovah.

Throughout all of the plagues, Moses had shown himself the representative of the God who was greater than their greatest gods. Being the representative of the Lord, he then was greater than the representative of their gods, Pharaoh. This is all implied in these words now.

Just one more plague lies ahead

It will be a final blow, one beyond compare

With it every firstborn son of Egypt will soon be dead
There will be great sorrow; mournful cries will arise from there

When it comes, Pharaoh in haste will drive you out
But before you go, be sure to ask for articles of silver and gold
And as you finally start off, give a resounding shout
For the marvelous deeds you have seen unfold

You will leave this land for another place
One which I have set aside especially for you
There in that land I will bestow upon you My grace
For you My people these things I will do

II. There Will be Loud Wailing (verses 4-7)

4 So Moses said, "This is what the Lord says:

With the parenthetical thought of verses 1-3 now stated, the words of Moses to Pharaoh in their meeting which started in the previous chapter now resume.

4 (con't) 'About midnight

ka'khatsoth ha'layah - meaning "about the middle of the night," the final terrible plague will come upon the land. The time of the plague is announced and it is given in order to have the strongest effect possible upon the hearer. Midnight is when men are tired or even asleep, but the coming of this plague would be something which would deprive them of it.

Further, though the time of day is given, the exact day is not. Would it be tonight? Would it be next week? The suspense of not knowing is intended to wear out the mind of the obstinate man who had challenged the Lord.

From the entire passage of this plague, even we can't be certain whether it was on this same night, and whether the planning for the Passover came before this meeting, or whether the first 28 verses of chapter 12 happened after the meeting with Pharaoh.

What is most likely is that this plague will come upon Egypt on the very same night after this meeting. But for sure, all we know is that the plague is pronounced and it will be at midnight.

4 (con't) I will go throughout Egypt.

The "I" in this verse is emphatic. The Lord has spoken and the Lord will perform. The terminology is similar to what Isaiah writes about concerning a future plague which is coming upon the earth -

"Come, my people, enter your chambers,
And shut your doors behind you;
Hide yourself, as it were, for a little moment,
Until the indignation is past.
21 For behold, the Lord comes out of His place
To punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity;
The earth will also disclose her blood,
And will no more cover her slain." Isaiah 26:20, 21

When judgment is due, the Lord will come out of His place in order to execute that judgment. Pharaoh is warned; we are warned.

5 Every firstborn son in Egypt will die,

The term "firstborn" is applied to males. The firstborn is considered the strength of the man and the continuation of his name. Thus we saw this in the blessing of Jacob upon his sons in Genesis 49 -

"Reuben, you are my firstborn,
My might and the beginning of my strength,
The excellency of dignity and the excellency of power." Genesis 49:3

5 (con't) from the firstborn son of Pharaoh, who sits on the throne,

Pharaoh is the highest official in the land. This is only the second time that the "throne" has been mentioned in the Bible. It properly means "seat of honor." The first time it was seen was in Genesis 41 when referring to the throne of Pharaoh in relation to Joseph. Now it is referring to the throne of Pharaoh in relation to his son.

This son bore the Egyptian title erpa suten sa, meaning "hereditary crown prince." Unless he died before his father, or unless he was removed from this royal position, he would be the one to assume the position and title of Pharaoh after his father.

Thus, this is a direct challenge to the supposed deity of the Pharaonic dynasty. Along with him, several other gods of Egypt are hereby challenged - Min, the god of reproduction; Heqet, the goddess who attended women at childbirth; and Isis, the goddess who protected children.

Each of these, including Pharaoh himself, will be shown as false gods, completely under the power and control of Yehovah, the God of the Hebrews, the God of Israel, and the One true God.

5 (con't) to the firstborn son of the female slave, who is at her hand mill,

In contrast to the firstborn son of Pharaoh, the firstborn son of the female slave would be considered the lowest level in the entire societal scale of Egypt. And in contrast to his throne, is the hand- mill of this maid. While he sat in the place of honor she would squat at the millstones pulverizing the grain.

The term here for her labors is akhar ha'rekhyim - It properly means "behind the millstones." This will take consideration to understand. There are two millstones, thus the plural word is used. One was on the ground and didn't move. The other was on top of it and would have a hole in the middle and a handle on it as well.

In Matthew 24:41, Jesus explains that two women would sometimes work together on such millstones. One woman would hold grain and drop it into the hole. The other would grab the handle and pulverize the grain by spinning the millstone. She is the one "behind the millstone." The harder work would be done by the lower slave. Like a world champion limbo star, this is as low as one can go.

Thus, this verse is an all-inclusive statement. Both Pharaoh in his seat of comfort to this lowest of the lowly slaves, and all in between - together they would be equally affected by what was coming. All will be afflicted by the torment of the horrifying plague. But despite what is coming, there is a note of grace.

In Exodus 1:22, Pharaoh had demanded that all of the males of the Hebrews be cast into the river. Here in response to that edict, which was all but forgotten by them, the Lord sets out to destroy only the firstborn. The words of Habakkuk can be retroactively applied to this account - "In wrath remember mercy." (3:2)

Despite this touch of grace, every family is included and no family is exempted. Heartache, sorrow, and death will touch all alike. But there is yet more...

5 (con't) and all the firstborn of the cattle as well.

The word is behemah and it means properly "beasts," not just cattle. It would include any household pets, from the revered cat, to the friendly dog, and to the exotic monkey. Whatever animals were kept in home, barn, or temple, they would all be affected by this plague.

Thus, it is a complete attack on both domestic and religious life. The beloved pets and their sacred animals would all be shown to be under the authority of the Lord. No god represented by any animal would be able to stop the onslaught which has been ordained by Him and its effects will never be forgotten...

6 There will be loud wailing throughout Egypt—worse than there has ever been or ever will be again.

The word here for "wailing" is tseqah. It means an outcry as if in anguish. Thus "a loud wailing" is a good choice of words. Even today, women in the Middle East continue with the loud wails for which they are especially known. Unlike the west where we often withhold emotional outbursts, there it is common and it is extremely loud.

But unlike a funeral for one person mourned by an isolated group of people, this outcry would be from all people throughout all of the land. Imagine the sound of millions of shrill wailing cries permeating the darkened skies of Egypt. Surely nothing had ever occurred like it before and never since has such a sound been heard.

7 But among the Israelites not a dog will bark at any person or animal.'

This is often thought of as a proverbial expression meaning that there will be only quietness and peace in Israel which is contrasted to the wailing of Egypt. A similar form of expression is found in Joshua 10:21. After a great battle where Israel's enemies were defeated, we read this -

"And all the people returned to the camp, to Joshua at Makkedah, in peace. No one moved his tongue against any of the children of Israel." Joshua 10:21

But there is more to this than a sense of peace and quiet. There is also another noted judgment upon Egypt's gods. The god Anpu, later known as Anubis, is the dog-headed god associated with mummification and also the after-life.

The implication then is that while the dogs were wailing along with the humans, which they are often known to do, no such wailing was to be found among the Israelites. The god Anubis was ineffective in keeping the Egyptians from needed mummification and Yehovah was fully capable of protecting each and every life associated with Israel. And there is a reason for this distinction to have been made...

7 (con't) Then you will know that the Lord makes a distinction between Egypt and Israel.

Israel is to be redeemed from the plague, Egypt will suffer through it. The death of the firstborn is all that will withhold the entire wrath of God in Egypt. Otherwise, they would be utterly consumed. However, in Israel, a substitute will be accepted. A lamb will take the place of the people.

When the plague comes, in that day, the Lord promises to "make a distinction" in the land. The term in Hebrew is yaphleh. It is the third of seven uses of the word palah in the Bible. It means to "set apart," but the word also means "wonderfully" or "wondrously."

And surely this is fitting for what will occur in this plague. There is a distinction and it is found between the redeemed of the Lord and those who refuse to yield themselves to Him. The Lord will work wondrously.

8 All these officials of yours will come to me, bowing down before me

There is more in the Hebrew here than we get in the English. There is a strong play on words which we miss. The words "will come" is the Hebrew v'yaredu, literally "and will descend." It is an idiom which indicates going from a nobler place to one of less grandeur.

And yet, when they get there, they will come "bowing down before me." In other words, these officials would come to acknowledge the true royalty of the land. Though Moses isn't in a palace, they will descend to his place in order to exalt him. It is a fitting parallel to what is said about Christ in Isaiah 52 -

"Kings shall shut their mouths at Him;
For what had not been told them they shall see,
And what they had not heard they shall consider." Isaiah 52:15

8 (con't) and saying, 'Go, you and all the people who follow you!'

Again, there is a Hebrew idiom not seen in the translation. The words say "the people who are at your feet." It is an expression which means those who are willing to obey and follow a leader. Where his feet step, they were willing to follow in kind. They will finally acknowledge him as the leader of his people.

Moses is the human redeemer of Israel. Thus he pictures Christ who is the leader of Israel and those who willingly follow Him. Two comparable passages of note are found in the New Testament which are directed to the Jewish believers -

"For to this you were called, because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that you should follow His steps:" 1 Peter 2:21

These are the ones who were not defiled with women, for they are virgins. These are the ones who follow the Lamb wherever He goes. These were redeemed from among men, being firstfruits to God and to the Lamb."
Revelation 14:4

8 (con't) After that I will leave."

Moses adds in these words to let Pharaoh know that only after the authorities of Egypt come and bow before him will he leave. Thus it is a hard jab directly at the person and position of Pharaoh.

8 (con't) Then Moses, hot with anger, left Pharaoh.

In an extremely unusual burst of emotion, Moses finally turns and leaves once and forever from the face of Pharaoh. The words for "hot with anger" are ba'khori af - "in heat of anger." But, af literally means "nostril." And so we get the mental picture of his nostrils flaring and his face turning red in rage. Ellicott nicely describes the reason for his emotions -

"For once his acquired 'meekness' failed, and the hot natural temper of his youth blazed up. His life had been threatened—he had been ignominiously dismissed—he had been deprived of his right of audience for the future ... Under such circumstances, he 'did well to be angry.'" Ellicott

For those I have redeemed, there will be peace
I will make a separation between them and the world
Between us there will be harmony, all strife will cease
This for My people as their redemption is unfurled

My people will be safe while the land around them dies
To them there will be calm in the midst of woe
Everywhere there will be mournful wailing and cries
Except among My redeemed will it be so

And all of this is a part of an even greater plan
Their joys only picture countless souls in the future's world
From every nation on earth there I will redeem man

Yes, they shall be My people, as the plan of redemption is unfurled

III. The Foolishness of the Hardened Heart (verses 9 & 10)

9 The Lord had said to Moses, “Pharaoh will refuse to listen to you—so that my wonders may be multiplied in Egypt.”

This verse in Hebrew actually begins with the word "and." It is used in order of thought, not specifically in time. And so, unlike some translations, the next words are correct. It should say, "The Lord had said..." rather than, "The Lord said."

This is calling to mind the words which have been spoken several times and in several ways since his encounter with the Lord at the burning bush. It is a final recalling of the events which have led to the place where we now stand, just prior to the actual events of the Passover.

Further, the words "Pharaoh will refuse to listen..." are correct. It's obvious from the entire account of the nine preceding plagues that Pharaoh has willingly and stubbornly refused to listen to the Lord. Yes, the Lord worked on Pharaoh in such a manner that the outcome was assured, but it was only because of the obdurate nature of the man.

When someone taunts or prods another, the outcome will be based on the nature of the one taunted or prodded. Pharaoh was wired as one who would only increase his stubbornness in the face of the Lord's calculated prodding, but it is still he who is to blame for the outcome.

And once again in this verse, the reason for these things coming out this way is given - "so that my wonders may be multiplied in Egypt." Had one or two plagues been enough to secure the release of Israel, the memory of what happened would have been quickly buried in the sands of passing time.

But as it came about, even many hundreds of years after the exodus, the surrounding nations still remembered what occurred and trembled at the name of the Lord. Despite the additional time of suffering in Egypt before their departure, Israel received other benefits from the time of these plagues as well.

1) They could personally see the events unfold before their eyes, thus recognizing the greatness of the Lord and His superiority over all other gods. 2) They were given confidence in Moses as their leader, a confidence that was challenged, but never overthrown by the majority. Instead a sound system of human government lay under the theocratic rule of the Lord. 3) It gave them time to prepare for their inevitable departure, rather than being hastily removed from their longtime dwelling in a haphazard manner. 4) They were free from any type of attack by the Egyptians for well over three hundred years. Thus their southern flank remained secure and they could use that safety to establish themselves in their new homeland, not worrying about attack from that direction. And finally, 5) They were also able to plunder the Egyptians on their way out. Had they not remained during the full time of the plagues, this would not have occurred.

For these and certainly other reasons, the additional stay in Egypt by Israel was an acceptable cost to pay. The Lord wisely determined all things for their ultimate benefit.

10 Moses and Aaron performed all these wonders before Pharaoh, but the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he would not let the Israelites go out of his country.

Again, this verse begins with the word "and" in the Hebrew. It shows with certainty that the previous verse is to be rendered in the past, not the future tense. After the next plague, Pharaoh will in fact not just let them go, but he will drive them out.

Reading and thinking these things through shows us why it is so detrimental to an understanding of the Bible to be captivated by a single, fallible translation.

God's word is not in error, but man's translation of it often is. Those who teach that one translation and no other should be used only set themselves up for faulty theology and a single-mindedness which is harmful, rather than helpful.

This is the last time that the hardening of Pharaoh's heart is noted prior to the exodus. The next time the hardening of his heart is mentioned is after they leave Egypt, but before they come to the shores of the Red Sea. The Lord is not through with Pharaoh yet, but He is done with him for the time being.

And so, the wonders which have been conducted are mentioned and the hardening of Pharaoh's heart to this point is cumulatively chalked up to the work of the Lord. He has worked out His plan exactly as He said it would happen in advance of it happening.

Therefore, the credit for the hardening of Pharaoh's heart is given to the Lord even though it was Pharaoh who actively hardened it each time he was faced with a decision to comply or refuse. The past nine plagues, and the wording associated with them, are a classic study in the nature of man and how he responds to external stimuli.

Unfortunately for Pharaoh and Egypt, they have been used as examples for us at their own loss. From this account, which really happened in history, we can learn how to act as humans and how to respond to the Lord as He unfolds life's lessons before us. Saddam Hussein never bothered with the Bible and he repeated the same type of mistake as Pharaoh.

Someday, the antichrist will follow along this same sad path. And unfortunately, others are lost in their destructive wake. Hundreds of thousands of Iraqis perished because of Saddam; billions of humans will perish because of the antichrist.

In Isaiah 13, the Lord says he will make man rarer than fine gold. This is really coming upon the world, but it can be avoided. God has offered us terms of peace which circumvent the leaders of this world. It is found by calling on Christ. By doing so, we are transferred to His leadership.

Just as he led Israel out of Egypt and through the Red Sea, he can and will do the same for those who call on Him. If you want a part of that heavenly visitation, let me tell you what you need to know...

Closing Verse: "Be merciful to me, O God, be merciful to me!
For my soul trusts in You;
And in the shadow of Your wings I will make my refuge,
Until these calamities have passed by." Psalm 57:1

Next Week: Exodus 12:1-11 (It is the Lord's Passover) (32nd Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Plague on the Firstborn

Now the Lord had said to Moses

“I will bring one more plague on Egypt and on Pharaoh

After that, he will let you go from here

And when he does, he will drive you out completely as you go

Tell the people that men and women alike

Are to ask their neighbors for articles of silver and gold

The Lord made the Egyptians favorably disposed

Toward the people, just as the Lord had told

And Moses himself was highly regarded in Egypt the land

By Pharaoh’s officials and by the people, he was considered grand

So Moses said, “This is what says the Lord:

‘About midnight throughout Egypt I will go

Every firstborn son in Egypt will die, according to my word

And then that I am the Lord, Egypt will surely know

From the firstborn son of Pharaoh, who sits on the throne

To the firstborn son of the female slave, who is at her hand mill

All the firstborn will die as I have shown

And all the firstborn of the cattle as well

There will be loud wailing throughout Egypt

Worse than there has ever been or ever again will be

But among the Israelites not a dog will bark
At any person or animal, with your own eyes this you will see
Then you will know that the Lord as to you I tell
Makes a distinction between Egypt and Israel

All these officials of yours will come to me, it is true
Bowing down before me and saying
“Go, you and all the people who follow you!
After that I will leave, and for this you will be praying
Then Moses, hot with anger, left Pharaoh
Out of his presence he did go

The Lord had said to Moses
“Pharaoh will refuse to listen to you
So that my wonders may be multiplied in Egypt
His heart will be hardened through and through Moses and Aaron performed as the Bible does impart
All these wonders before Pharaoh
But the Lord hardened Pharaoh’s heart
And he would not let out of his country the Israelites go

From this, important lessons we should learn
An entire nation was judged because of one hardened heart
For truth and justice should our souls yearn

And the Lord's great name to others we should impart
Someday what happened to Egypt will happen again
But this time it will come upon the entire world
Great tribulation and plague will come upon all men
As God's righteous judgments are unfurled

And so now is the time to call out for redemption
To receive Jesus and be saved from this great tragedy
Through His shed blood we will receive exemption
At the rapture He will come, our saving remedy
The time may not be far off now
The world is quickly falling apart as wickedness does increase
So let us get the word out to everyone somehow
Before God's mercy upon the world does cease

We thank You Lord that there is saving grace
We thank You Lord for the Gift of Jesus
Someday soon we will see You face to face
Such wondrous things You have done for us!

Praises to You our great and awesome God
Thank You for those heavenly streets we will someday trod!

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 12:1-11 (IT IS THE LORD'S PASSOVER)

Due to the length of this sermon, my opening comments will be short. In just 11 verses, we will see a few points which will form patterns which fill both the pages of the Bible and concepts of redemptive history which first picture, and then are repeated in the work of the Lord Jesus.

Everything fits as it should because it comes from the mind and the wisdom of God. And all of it points to Jesus because it is all about Jesus. This is our Lord; this is our Savior; this is Jesus - the Lamb of God who takes away the sins of the world.

Text Verse: "And I looked, and behold, in the midst of the throne and of the four living creatures, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb as though it had been slain, having seven horns and seven eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God sent out into all the earth." Revelation 5:6

What glory is to be found in His superior word! And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Beginning of Your Months (verses 1 & 2)

1 Now the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron

The beginning of Chapter 12 highlights, once again, that what occurs or is mandated is at the direction of Yehovah. In the past, it has been the call of Moses and Aaron, the announcement of the Lord's intentions for Israel to the people of Israel, the confrontation with Pharaoh, the giving of the signs and wonders, and so on.

Now actual legal matters which are a part of the law itself are to be given. This constant use of the words, "Now the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron" are given to show us that divine authority rests behind both the redemptive process of Israel as well as all of their laws and practices.

This includes the entire spectrum of the body which regulated Israel's affairs - religious, ecclesiastical, and political. Everything which is to govern their society was of divine, not human origin. Further, there is a certain dignity which is given to this particular instruction for the Passover.

Though it is a part of the law recorded at Sinai, its practice actually precedes the other laws which will be given. Thus the Passover is a sign of their redemption. In other words, it precedes the event itself. Further, the naming of Moses and Aaron here shows that these two alone are the recipients of the law.

A special distinction is bestowed upon them as the prophets who will transmit the law. After them, all other prophets who follow will merely work within the confines of that law. And so, in anticipation of the coming Passover, these words were spoken.

Much of this chapter may have actually occurred prior to the ending of the plagues recorded previously, but in order to show the logical progression of the plagues, these words follow after the final meeting with Pharaoh. Therefore, it may be rightly translated, "Now the Lord had spoken to Moses and Aaron."

If so, then when the law was given to Moses at Sinai, the Lord carefully selected all of the details of history, from Genesis 1:1, right through the Exodus account, and put them in the order which follows logically for us to understand the events as they occurred, but in separate sections to avoid them overlapping.

This was seen, for example, in the recorded life of Isaac. His death is recorded in Genesis 35, and yet some events which occur during his life come in later chapters. The same is probably true here. The instructions for the Passover here in chapter 12 may actually predate the events of the ninth plague, that of darkness.

1 (con't) in the land of Egypt, saying,

Later in the law, there will be additional instructions or repeats of these instructions concerning the Passover for the people of Israel. The words, "in the land of Egypt" are stated here to show that a separate instruction on the Passover was given prior to the actual giving of the rest of the law, but that this is included in the law.

Thus it is one harmonious whole even if it was received at a different place and time. We think of the Law being received at Mount Sinai as the one and only giving of the law, but in all, there will be three unique places where the law is derived from. First this portion is in Egypt.

The next will be at Mount Sinai when the people are brought there after the exodus. And the third will be there again using the name Mount Horeb. This will occur after the time of the wilderness wanderings. There the final reception will occur which encompasses the entire book of Deuteronomy.

We can't say that it is merely a repetition of the same law because there are noted differences and additions. As one of many examples, we can look at the fourth of the Ten Commandments. When it was received after the Exodus, the reason for it reads -

"For in six days the Lord made the heavens and the earth, the sea, and all that is in them, and rested the seventh day. Therefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it." Exodus 20:11

However, when it was repeated after the wilderness wanderings, the reason given is different. There it says -

"And remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt, and the Lord your God brought you out from there by a mighty hand and by an outstretched arm; therefore the Lord your God commanded you to keep the Sabbath day." Deuteronomy 5:15

In the first announcement of the fourth commandment, the reason given is based on creation - "...in six days the Lord made the heavens and the earth, the sea, and all that is in them." In the second announcement, the reason given is based on redemption - "...the Lord your God brought you out from there by a mighty hand and by an outstretched arm."

This is a pattern which will continue all the way through Scripture and even to the book of Revelation. Further, the words "in the land of Egypt" show the Lord's dominion even in the midst of the enemies of Israel. In the past, He had established them as a people and then He continued to tend to them in Egypt.

The pattern follows later in history also. Israel was called out of the midst of their enemies, having been tended to during their Babylonian exile. The church was later established in the midst of their hostile Jewish enemies. Later the true church was called out of the false church during the reformation.

And in a marked incident of immense magnitude which has happened in recent years, Israel has once again been called out of exile from among their many enemies and back to her homeland. As the church age is ending, Israel is being prepared for her long anticipated meeting with the Lord. He has carefully tended to them in the midst of their enemies.

Finally, these words show us the anticipatory nature of such occurrences. The giving of the Passover in Egypt anticipates the assurance of redemption from Egypt. The giving of the Lord's Supper before His death anticipated our redemption. And the repeated taking of the Lord's Supper as a memorial anticipates the realization of our redemption. As Paul says in 1 Corinthians 11 -

"For as often as you eat this bread and drink this cup, you proclaim the Lord's death till He comes." 1 Corinthians 11:26

A lot can be discerned from the few words of this first important verse of Exodus 12. One of the things we saw in them is perfectly realized in the next verse, that of creation preceding redemption...

2 "This month shall be your beginning of months; it shall be the first month of the year to you.

Until this time, the Bible has been dated based on the creation model and calendar. The story of Noah, for example, gives specific dates, but they are based on the creation calendar which began in the month of Tishri. Now a new calendar, a redemption calendar, has been instituted by the Lord for His people.

As I said, this pattern of redemption following creation continues throughout the Bible. In the book of Revelation, there are twenty four elders before the throne of the Creator, acknowledging Him as such and falling down before Him with the words -

“You are worthy, O Lord,
To receive glory and honor and power;
For You created all things,
And by Your will they exist and were created.” Revelation 4:11

However, in the next chapter, it notes that that there is a Lamb at the throne whom they fall down before, acknowledging Him for His acts of redemption with the words -

“You are worthy to take the scroll,
And to open its seals;
For You were slain,
And have redeemed us to God by Your blood
Out of every tribe and tongue and people and nation,
10 And have made us kings and priests to our God;
And we shall reign on the earth.” Revelation 5:9, 10

Like the calendars of the Bible, like the reason for the Sabbath in the Ten Commandments, and like the reason for praising God in Revelation, the pattern follows from creation to redemption. And so, in anticipation of the redemption of Israel, Moses is told that this will be the first month for these redeemed of the Lord.

In Exodus 13:4, the name of the month will be given, Aviv. Later in the books of Nehemiah and Esther, the same month is called by its Babylonian name, Nisan. However, it remains the same month regardless of which name is used. The name Aviv means "greenness" or "fresh" and it indicates fresh young ears of barley grain which come forth at this time of year.

In the Bible, this will continue to be the first month of the religious calendar. Tishri will be the first month of the civil calendar.

Understanding when one calendar or the other is used eliminates any supposed contradictions in the dating of the Kings of Israel. What seems like almost horrendous error between the books of Kings and Chronicles is actually perfectly given dates using these two different calendars.

As an interesting pattern, the first sacred month is the seventh month of the civil calendar and the first civil month is the seventh month of the sacred calendar. Understanding this will reveal marvelous patterns concerning the work of Christ which are hidden in plain sight. The story of Noah is a hidden story of the death and resurrection of Christ. By understanding which calendar is used, one will be able to pull out immense riches from this sacred word.

As an interesting note, the Hebrew calendar is unique and follows neither the Egyptian, nor the Babylonian calendars. It is given by God for the people of God in order to reveal the work of Christ in history. During the church age, this calendar has not been used by us because we have been called out of the Gentile world.

However, as we approach the end of the church age, these patterns and seasons are once again coming into focus and greater use. God is preparing the world for the end times and then the return of His Son to rule for a thousand years.

Creation must precede redemption

Just as Genesis precedes Exodus

From the plagues of Egypt, Israel received exemption

By a working of the Lord so glorious

And one more plague will come upon the land

In it Egypt will find itself in a terrible jam

But once again, God will be seen as more than grand
Through the Passover, and the slaying of the lamb

In this plague Israel will finally find its release
From Egypt's bondage and servitude
The long years of toil will finally cease
And out from Egypt will march the Hebrew multitude

II. A Lamb Without Blemish (verses 3-6)

3 Speak to all the congregation of Israel, saying: 'On the tenth of this month every man shall take for himself a lamb, according to the house of his father, a lamb for a household.

What is obvious here is that these instructions were given prior to the tenth of the month. For the Lord to say for this to be done after speaking to the congregation implies that it was spoken at a time in advance of the tenth.

In this verse is the first use of the word edah or "congregation" in the Bible, thus it is the first time Israel is considered as such. The word comes from another word yaad which means "to appoint" or "to meet." They are now a congregation of people involved in a united act according to the commandment of God.

And this commandment is to do a certain thing at a specified time. On the tenth day of the first month, they are told to take a lamb according to the house of the father. This means appropriate to the size of the house. The word "lamb" here is seh and it simply means one of the flock, either a goat or a lamb.

It could also mean any age and of either sex. Later, more specific instructions will be given concerning the animal though. What is also implied is that the people had the ability to either own or afford such a lamb. There seems to have been no one who was extremely impoverished among the people. This tenth day of the first month is the same day which the Israelites crossed the Jordan forty years later. That is recorded in Joshua 4:19 -

"Now the people came up from the Jordan on the tenth day of the first month, and they camped in Gilgal on the east border of Jericho."

4 And if the household is too small for the lamb, let him and his neighbor next to his house take it according to the number of the persons; according to each man's need you shall make your count for the lamb.

This verse is obvious on the surface. If one lamb is too large for a family, then they could unite with another family to have the right sized meal for the number of people involved. Later rabbinic traditions placed the size of the family at no less than 10 people. It is also noted that no more than 20 was considered appropriate.

5 Your lamb shall be without blemish,

Everything about the Passover anticipates Christ Jesus. The lamb will be a Passover sacrifice which will, because of its nourishment, carry the people through the exodus of their redemption from Egypt. Jesus is called the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world in John 1:29.

His life, because of its nourishment, carries the believer through the exodus of our redemption from the world of sin and death, which Egypt pictures. Paul, in the New Testament, explicitly calls Jesus the Passover offering in 1 Corinthians 5:7 -

"Therefore purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new lump, since you truly are unleavened. For indeed Christ, our Passover, was sacrificed for us."

That this lamb was to be without blemish is seen realized in Christ's perfect life. In Luke 23, after his interrogation concerning the Lord, Pilate declared Jesus without fault -

"So Pilate said to the chief priests and the crowd, 'I find no fault in this Man.'" Luke 23:4

In Hebrews 7:26, we read this about Jesus -

"For such a High Priest was fitting for us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners..." Hebrews 7:26

And Peter, writing to the Jews of the dispersion, refers directly to the Passover for his description of Jesus -

"...knowing that you were not redeemed with corruptible things, like silver or gold, from your aimless conduct received by tradition from your fathers, 19 but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot." 1 Peter 1:18, 19

No defect was to be seen in these Passover lambs because they were to picture to the world the perfect, undefiled, and spotless Lamb of God whom they picture.

5 (con't) a male of the first year.

This requirement is given to the Hebrews as a note concerning the lamb standing in place of the firstborn. The firstborn was to be redeemed through the death of the lamb. Thus is it an act of substitution. However, this restriction also looks ahead to Christ.

In the first year, the animal is considered more perfect in terms of innocence and yet it is in the midst of life. Later in Exodus, it will prescribe that such offerings come after the eighth day of their life. This is the same day that a baby is circumcised.

Therefore it pictures the innocent Christ in the midst of life. Not a baby in Bethlehem, and not an old man in Nazareth, but a male in Jerusalem in the midst of His life and yet endowed with innocence, waiting to be made an Offering of redemption.

He was born without original sin, lived without any sort of committed transgression, and was humble, pure, undefiled, and harmless. He is the epitome of what we would think of in such an innocent animal.

5 (con't) You may take it from the sheep or from the goats.

Both animals are used in sacrifices in the Bible for various reasons. This exception here for either a sheep or a goat was probably given to allow the poorer people to buy a less valuable goat than a sheep. The smell of the goat offering is not as sweet as a lamb. Therefore, the goat is used to picture a sin offering. That would picture Christ who, as Paul in 2 Corinthians 5, says -

"For He made Him who knew no sin to be sin for us, that we might become the righteousness of God in Him." 2 Corinthians 5:21

The Lamb, having the finer smell, would picture Christ as Paul's words of Ephesians 5 state -

"And walk in love, as Christ also has loved us and given Himself for us, an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling aroma." Ephesians 5:2

The lamb was generally considered the more likely choice at the Passover and among the people, but either animal ultimately pictures Christ's work. Thus the Lord allowed either for the feast.

6 Now you shall keep it until the fourteenth day of the same month.

This then is a period of five days. If one selects an animal on the 10th day and sacrifices it in the evening of the fourteenth day, it is a total of five days. The animal was to be kept during this period and until the time of the Passover. The reason for this is not that the family could observe it for defects as is often claimed.

Rather, it was selected because it had no defects. Animals with defects were noted and disregarded at the selection of the animal. The reason for this advanced time was to ensure that everyone had an animal ready for the Passover.

This is especially true considering that these instructions probably came before the plague of darkness which lasted three full days. Therefore the selection five days earlier was necessary. In picture, this five-day period is speaking of the timeframe from the evening of Palm Sunday until the evening of the Passover, which the four gospels record as being five full days. In Mark 11:11 it says -

"And Jesus went into Jerusalem and into the temple. So when He had looked around at all things, as the hour was already late, He went out to Bethany with the twelve." Mark 11:11

If one counts five evenings from Sunday evening, they will come to Friday evening. Sunday evening to Monday evening is one. Monday to Tuesday is two. Tuesday to Wednesday is three. Wednesday to Thursday is four. And Thursday to Friday is five.

And if anyone is interested in a detailed breakdown of the four gospels showing exactly this, all they need to do is go to the written update of this sermon at the Superior Word website and I will include it at the very end of the sermon.

The key to understanding the timeline for Christ's day of crucifixion is the term "Preparation Day" which is included in all four gospels. If one follows the timeline and notes that term, they can see the perfection of the timeline given here in Exodus, realized in the harmoniously recorded gospels.

In the greater picture of Jesus' ministry, this early selection - the purpose of it - rather than being a time of inspecting for defect was, as Matthew Henry states -

"...denoting the marking out of the Lord Jesus to be a Saviour, both in the purpose and in the promise." Matthew Henry

Adam Clarke importantly notes that four things which marked this first Passover which were not required again -

1. The eating of the lamb in their houses dispersed through Goshen.
2. The taking the lamb on the tenth day.
3. The striking of its blood on the door posts and lintels of their houses. And,
4. Their eating it in haste.

Succeeding generations did not have these requirements levied upon them. Thus, the original Passover alone serves as the necessary picture of the greater work of Christ.

6 (con't) Then the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it

This is one of the main parts of the Passover that is unlike other sacrifices that are mentioned later for Israel. The congregation itself sacrificed the animal rather than it being done by the priests. This actually looks forward to the words of John in Revelation 1 -

"To Him who loved us and washed us from our sins in His own blood, 6 and has made us kings and priests to His God and Father, to Him be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen." Revelation 1:5, 6

This act in Exodus recognized the priestly status of the people as a nation, just as we have been given priestly status in Christ.

6 (con't) at twilight.

The Hebrew here is ben ha'arbayim - "between the evenings." It seems like a perplexing phrase, but one has to consider biblical time. According to the Bible, a day is divided into "evening" and "morning." Thus there are actually two evenings to be reckoned. The first began after twelve and went through until sunset.

The second evening began at sunset and continued till night, meaning the whole time of twilight. This would therefore be between twelve o'clock and the termination of twilight. Between the evenings then is a phrase which allows the three o'clock sacrifices at the temple to be considered as the evening sacrifice even though to us it would be considered an afternoon sacrifice.

This is the same time-frame that Christ died on the cross, which is recorded in the gospels as three o'clock in the afternoon.

A Lamb, spotless, and pure - without any defect
Will be sacrificed in my place
And looking at that Lamb, I can certainly detect
The greatest love and grace... this I see looking upon His face

Oh! That I could refrain and not see Him die
Oh! If there could be any other way
How could this Lamb go through with it for one such as I?
Oh God! This perfect Lamb alone my sin-debt can pay

Behold the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world!
Behold the sinless One, there on Calvary's tree
He has prevailed and the path to heaven has been unfurled
The Lamb of God who died for sinners like you and me

III. It is the Lord's Passover (verses 7-11)

7 And they shall take some of the blood and put it on the two doorposts and on the lintel of the houses where they eat it.

After the animal was slaughtered, its blood would be drained into a bowl and from there it would be taken to the doorway. Verse 22 will show us that it was to be applied using a bunch of hyssop. The hyssop was to be dipped into it and then it was to be struck to the doorposts and lintels.

The word for doorposts here is mezuzot, the plural of mezuzah. The lintel is a word found only here in the exodus account - mashqoph. It comes from another word, shaqaph, which means "to look down" and so it was probably a latticed window above the doorway. The base of the window would be the door's lintel. The word shaqaph is used in Psalm 85 when speaking of the Lord -

Mercy and truth have met together;
Righteousness and peace have kissed.
11 Truth shall spring out of the earth,
And righteousness shall look down from heaven. Psalm 85:10, 11

I don't want to stretch the meaning of mashqoph too much, but I can't help but see in this word, which is only used three times in the Bible and all are in this chapter pertaining to the Passover, that it appears to be a picture of Christ on the cross, looking down from the eyes which bled in agony the night before at Gethsemane. In fact, it perfectly pictures it because the sprinkling of the blood is again a picture of the Lord. Matthew Henry explains it quite well -

"The blood of the lamb must be sprinkled, denoting the applying of the merits of Christ's death to our souls; we must receive the atonement ... Faith is the bunch of hyssop, by which we apply the promises, and the benefits of the blood of Christ laid up in them, to ourselves. It was to be sprinkled on the door-posts, denoting the open profession we are to make of faith in Christ. It was not to be sprinkled upon the threshold; which cautions us to take heed of trampling under foot the blood of the covenant. It is precious blood, and must be precious to us. The blood, thus sprinkled, was a means of preserving the Israelites from the destroying angel, who had nothing to do where the blood was. The blood of Christ is the believer's protection from the wrath of God, the curse of the law, and the damnation of hell." Henry

As he noted the threshold was not marked with blood. It is an explicit lesson explained in Hebrews 10 -

"Of how much worse punishment, do you suppose, will he be thought worthy who has trampled the Son of God underfoot, counted the blood of the covenant by which he was sanctified a common thing, and insulted the Spirit of grace?" Hebrews 10:29

It would have been a profane act to strike the threshold with blood because it is a profane thing to trample the blood of the covenant underfoot. The picture is clear.

8 Then they shall eat the flesh on that night; roasted in fire,

The Hebrews were given specific guidelines to roast the lamb. The reason for this is that it is the quickest way of cooking the meat. Further roasting would allow the entire animal to be cooked without dividing it. It is a sign and a memorial to us concerning the painful sufferings of Christ.

Christ died for us, assuming all of the divine wrath that we deserve upon Himself. This is pictured in the fire of the sacrifice. There is a picture of purification and sanctity being tied to the fire. But there is one more picture which may be drawn from the roasting process.

Justin Martyr says that the process was accomplished by using two wooden spits at right angles and thus it would extend the sacrifice on a cross. If so and not just a fabled legend, there could be no better picture of the sufferings of the Lord.

Next it notes that this was to be done, as it says, "that night." This would have been on the night of the 15th, the night of the full moon. It is not by accident that the night the Hebrews left Egypt, they would have the full moon to assist them on their journey.

Everything was perfectly planned for this special moment in time. As a side note, by understanding that Jesus died that same afternoon 1500 years later, we can know with 100% certainty that it was not an eclipse which darkened the skies that day.

As the moon is full at night, it is on the opposite side of the earth from the sun. When the sun was out, the moon was hidden. In other words, it is impossible to have an eclipse of the sun during a full moon. So if you see one of the countless videos claiming that this is what occurred and proving it by star charts, you can save your money and not buy it.

Again, it was not by accident that the moon was full at that time. It thus was a sign to the people that it was not a natural occurrence which darkened the skies that day, but rather a supernatural one which reflected the state of the heavens at the death of the Lord.

8 (con't) with unleavened bread and with bitter herbs they shall eat it.

The unleavened bread is later noted as being used because of the swiftness of the exodus out of Egypt. This is certain, but it only supposes that the bread was not to be made until the time of the meal. They had at least five days notice as to what was coming and so the Lord had another reason in mind for this as well.

The unleavened bread or matzah is a picture again of the Lord. Leaven in the Bible pictures sin. It causes bread to be puffed up, such as man is when filled with pride. And leaven is a species of corruption because it is produced by fermentation. In Luke 12, Jesus warned the disciples by saying -

"Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy." Luke 12:1

Later in 1 Corinthians 5, Paul explicitly ties leaven to sin and how we should avoid it -

"Your glorying is not good. Do you not know that a little leaven leavens the whole lump? 7 Therefore purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new lump, since you truly are unleavened. For indeed Christ, our Passover, was sacrificed for us. 8 Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, nor with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." 1 Corinthians 5:6-8

The bitter herbs are certainly a lesson to the Israelites and to us. To Israel, they pictured the bitter bondage that they were about to leave. For us, it is a similar picture. We are to remember the bitterness of our own Egypt, the life of sin that we had once been a part of.

It was a land of torture, bondage, and living under the wicked ruler of this world. The bitter herbs are a memorial of Christ's work to lead us out of that sorry place and to the wonders of eternal life with Him.

9 Do not eat it raw, nor boiled at all with water, but roasted in fire—its head with its legs and its entrails.

These first instructions are given to complement and repeat that the animal was not to be eaten either raw or boiled. It was only to be roasted as a whole animal. And the entire thing, including its head, legs, and entrails were to be cooked.

Later commentators say that the entrails were removed, washed, and returned, but that is only a commentary. What we have is exactly what was expected. This again is a picture of Christ. His whole human nature is infused both in a spiritual sense and an effectual sense into His church.

This is symbolized in the Lord's Supper which He instituted prior to His death. The eating of the entire animal is intended to instill in us the truth that we are expected to have all of Christ, or none of Him.

10 You shall let none of it remain until morning, and what remains of it until morning you shall burn with fire.

There are probably at least two reasons for this particular verse being included. The first is to ensure that nobody would take along any bone or other part of the animal as a talisman or memorial which could later be turned into a talisman. If you don't think this is likely, just do a search through Catholic websites concerning body parts of people which are used for just that.

They have heaps and heaps of them. This Passover was to be participated in and then memorialized in later remembrance feasts, but it was not to be turned into a good luck charm that could be carried throughout one's life.

The second reason is similar to the first. It was to ensure that there would be no putrefaction of anything left behind or any possible use of it by those who came behind the Israelites for profane purposes. In type and picture, we are to carry with us the sacrifice of Christ, not in idols, but in our hearts and in who we are.

We are to honor and revere the God who gave us this great Lamb and who has redeemed us through His death. Concerning the entire Passover meal, Matthew Henry again gives wonderful words of how they picture Christ and our relationship to Him -

"The solemn eating of the lamb was typical of our gospel duty to Christ. The paschal lamb was not to be looked upon only, but to be fed upon. So we must by faith make Christ our own; and we must receive spiritual strength and nourishment from him, as from our food It was all to be eaten; those who by faith feed upon Christ, must feed upon a whole Christ; they must take Christ and his yoke, Christ and his cross, as well as Christ and his crown. It was to be eaten at once, not put by till morning. To-day Christ is offered, and is to be accepted while it is called to-day, before we sleep the sleep of death. It was to be eaten with bitter herbs, in remembrance of the bitterness of their bondage in Egypt; we must feed upon Christ with sorrow and brokenness of heart, in remembrance of sin. Christ will be sweet to us, if sin be bitter."

11 And thus you shall eat it: with a belt on your waist, your sandals on your feet, and your staff in your hand. So you shall eat it in haste.

The words here are given, in advance, for the people of Israel to know that their time of bondage was coming to a close and to be quickly ready to depart from it and into a new part of redemptive history. "A belt on your waist" isn't the greatest translation and it doesn't give the sense of what is going on.

Rather it should say "with your loins girded." The dress of the people was loose. When they wanted to travel, and especially to go in a hurry, they would tighten up the loose clothing so that it wouldn't cause them to trip or get caught up on anything. An example of this is found in 1 Kings -

"Then the hand of the Lord came upon Elijah; and he girded up his loins and ran ahead of Ahab to the entrance of Jezreel." 1 Kings 18:46

In the New Testament, Peter gives us a spiritual application of this for the believer in Christ -

"Therefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and rest your hope fully upon the grace that is to be brought to you at the revelation of Jesus Christ; 14 as obedient children, not conforming yourselves to the former lusts, as in your ignorance; 15 but as He who called you is holy, you also be holy in all your conduct, 16 because it is written, 'Be holy, for I am holy.'" 1 Peter 1:13-16

Having sandals on their feet was completely out of the regular custom. In Middle Eastern homes, sandals or shoes have always been taken off indoors. This would be a sign to them that at anytime they were literally within an instant of being told they were to leave.

The staff in the hand admonition is similar to the shoes. When the people went out, they would grab their staff for the walk. It was used for defense against whatever came along as well as a help over the difficult terrains they would encounter. It's no different today. But when one comes home, the staff is set aside.

The Lord was telling them that they would need their staffs and they would be needed that night. If they didn't have them as they ate, they may have left them behind in the rush that would ensue. Therefore, they were told to be ready at any and every moment.

Thus, they were to eat the meal in haste and in a state of preparedness for a hasty departure. Everything about the words indicates urgency. Probably the best analogy for us concerning this admonition for them to eat in haste and be ready in haste is that all we have is right now for Christ.

We have no assurance of tomorrow and therefore we need to always use today to the fullest. When people need to hear the gospel, we need to be prepared to give it. And when the Lord blows the trumpet to call us home, we need to be prepared for our departure. We in Christ have been redeemed, but only so far as we belong to Him.

Someday that will be realized in the twinkling of any eye. That is what we need to always be ready for - both towards others and as individuals awaiting our exodus from this fallen world.

11 (fin) It is the Lord's Passover.

Pesach hu l'Yehovah - The words are emphatic. It is not just a common meal, nor is it any ordinary sacrifice. As the Pulpit Commentary says -

"The lamb is Jehovah's. It is his pass-sign - the mark of his protection, the precious means of your preservation from death. As such view it; and though ye eat it in haste, eat it with reverence."

The meal then is being used as a metonymy for the entire observance. Everything about what is to occur is tied up in the sacrifice of the lamb. It is a perfect reflection of the work of the Lord. All to do with redemptive history is tied up in His cross.

This is also the first time the term Pesach or "Passover" is used in the Bible. The meaning of the word is debated, but it appears to have two concepts tied into one. The first is that the Lord will pass by rapidly, and the second is that He will spare those who have trusted Him; those who have applied the blood.

And this is exactly what we can expect of Christ on behalf of His church. A time is coming upon the world when great plagues will cut through the masses of humanity. There will be woe and terror everywhere; most will not survive. But before that time comes, the Lord promises an exodus for His people. They will be spared from what lies ahead.

The only way to be a part of the wondrous moment, which will be but a blink in time and then it will be over, is to have the blood of the Lamb applied to your own life. With that seal of surety, you can be exempted from the destruction and taken directly to God's Promised Land. Let me tell you how you can receive this grace...

Closing Verse: For the grace of God that brings salvation has appeared to all men, 12 teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in the present age, 13 looking for the blessed hope and glorious appearing of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ, 14 who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from every lawless deed and purify for Himself His own special people, zealous for good works." Titus 2:11-14

Next Week: Exodus 12:12-20 (Saved Unto Holiness) (33rd Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

It is the Lord's Passover

Now the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron
In the land of Egypt, concerning what to do
Saying, "This month shall be your beginning of months
It shall be the first month of the year to you
Speak to all the congregation of Israel
Saying: 'On the tenth of this month (it will be no bother)
Every man shall take for himself a lamb
According to the house of his father

A lamb for a household
So they shall do as I have told
And if the household is too small for the lamb
Let him and his neighbor next to his house take it
According to the number of the persons

According to each man's need your count for the lamb you shall make it
Your lamb shall be without blemish
A male of the first year
You may take it from the sheep or from the goats
And further directions from Me you will hear

Now you shall keep it until
The same month on the fourteenth day
Then the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel
Shall kill it at twilight; towards the end of the day
And they shall take some of the blood
On the two doorposts it they shall put
And on the lintel of the houses where they eat it
But not on the threshold where is placed the foot

Then they shall eat the flesh on that night
Roasted in fire, with unleavened bread
And with bitter herbs they shall eat it
They shall do all of this as I have said
Do not eat it raw, nor boiled at all with water
But roasted in fire as you have heard
Its head with its legs and its entrails
Do this according to My word

You shall let none of it remain until morning does return
And what remains of it until morning it you shall with fire burn
And thus you shall eat it:
With on your waist a belt
Your sandals on your feet
And your staff in your hand, so that it can be felt

So you shall eat it in haste
It is the Lord's Passover
With which My people have been graced
Lord, thank You for the Lamb of God
The Lord Jesus who takes away our sin
We can have confidence now as we trod
That for us the victory He did win

Help us never to forget the great deeds you have wrought
Help us to fix our eyes always on the Lord Jesus
Who by His precious blood we were bought
He who has done such marvelous things for us!

Praise You O heavenly Father, yes we praise You
And Hallelujah to the Lamb who is ever faithful and true

Hallelujah and Amen...

THE DAY OF CRUCIFIXION AND RESURRECTION

Jesus rode into Jerusalem on a donkey on Sunday, 6 April 0032. This is based on dating from the prophecy of Daniel 9:24-27 and the exemplary work of Sir Robert Anderson.

However, people will still try to find a reason why the crucifixion wasn't on Friday, 11 April 0032. There are a couple reasons why this is disputed, each which certainly results from misunderstanding of biblical terminology. The first is a fear that what's stated in Matthew 12:40 would mean an error in what Jesus said. The second results from a perceived conflict between the gospel accounts in Matthew, Mark, and Luke and that of John.

In the first disputed reason, Jesus is quoted by Matthew as saying, "For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of a huge fish, so the Son of Man will be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." Matthew 12:40

The resurrection certainly occurred on a Sunday and only the most extreme cases dispute this – and they do it without justification. Some folks fear that because He rose on a Sunday and it was "3 days and 3 nights" that Jesus was in the tomb then it was either Wednesday or Thursday that He must have gone to the cross. It's important to note that this verse is from Matthew and is directed to the Jewish people – Jesus as King. Hebrew idioms would have been understood and not needed any clarification or verbal amending. To the audience Matthew was writing to any part of a day is considered to be inclusive of the whole day. It's no different than terminology we use today. If I arrive in Florida on a plane at 11:30pm on 11 April, during a later conversation I would still say I was in Florida on that day. The biblical pattern of "evening and morning" being a day goes back to the first chapter of the Bible and includes an entire day – regardless of what part of a day one is referring to.

The same verse, as recorded in Luke says, “As the crowds increased, Jesus said, “This is a wicked generation. It asks for a miraculous sign, but none will be given it except the sign of Jonah. For as Jonah was a sign to the Ninevites, so also will the Son of Man be to this generation.” Luke 11:29, 30 In this instance, Luke was not writing to only Jewish people, but predominately to non-Jewish people – Jesus as the Son of Man. Therefore, the terminology is amended to avoid confusion. This occurs many times in the gospels and therefore the addressees (or the background of the writers themselves) need to be identified to understand proper terminology.

The second issue to be resolved is that some scholars claim that John “appears” to place the crucifixion on a different date than the other writers. Because of this, an attempt to insert some second type of Passover meal is made. This supposedly helps the Bible out of an apparent problem. However, no such meal is identified in the Bible – at any time. Nor is it necessary to make something erroneous like this up. The Bible identifies the timing of the entire Passion Week, dispelling the problem. The terminology for “Preparation Day” used in all four gospel accounts absolutely clears this up and will be noted below.

Here’s what you need to know:

Paul plainly states that the Feast of Firstfruits is a picture of the resurrection:

“But Christ has indeed been raised from the dead, the firstfruits of those who have fallen asleep.” 1 Corinthians 15:20

The feast of Firstfruits was a Sunday according to Leviticus 23:15 – “From the day after the Sabbath, the day you brought the sheaf of the wave offering, count off seven full weeks.” Note: the Sabbath is a Saturday. We don’t need to go any further there to know this is correct and that Christ rose on a Sunday.

Here is the math from the gospel accounts. It's all there in black and white and very easy to look up –

“Six days before the Passover, Jesus arrived at Bethany, where Lazarus lived, whom Jesus had raised from the dead.” John 12:1 This would have been a Sabbath day (Saturday.)

“The next day the great crowd that had come for the Feast heard that Jesus was on his way to Jerusalem.” John 12:12 This would have been 5 days before the Passover, meaning Sunday (Palm Sunday) as the Passover would have started Thursday night at sundown and run until Friday night at sundown (remember biblical days start at sundown).

The account couldn't be clearer that the next day after the Passover was a Sabbath. This is indicated several times. Some people have attempted to use the terminology in John (it was a “high day” or a “special Sabbath”) to indicate that it could have been a day other than a Saturday. Special Sabbaths are specified in Leviticus and don't necessarily fall on Saturdays. However, the term “Sabbath” as used in the other gospel accounts is indicating a Saturday. There is no indication, anywhere, that there were two Sabbaths in a row on this particular week. In fact, such an analysis does an injustice to the reading of the text. Therefore, the special Sabbath occurred on a regular Sabbath day (Saturday).

From this we can give the entire week's schedule (refer to the cited verses in your own Bible to familiarize yourself with what's being said) –

Sabbath 6 before // John 12:1 - ...six days before the Passover. Bethany/Lazarus.

Sunday 5 before // John 12:12 & Mark 11:10 - The next day... Palm Sunday/Riding the donkey.

Monday 4 before // Mark 11:12 Now on the next day... Jesus cursed the fig tree.

Tuesday 3 before // Mark 11:20 Now in the morning... The withered fig is identified.

Wednesday 2 before // The gospels are silent on what occurred on this day.

Thursday 1 before - Passover starts at Sundown //Mark 14:1 After two days it was the Passover... (this is the first timing mentioned since Mark 11:20 which was Tuesday).

Note: Pay special attention to the fact that in the following accounts Mark is using Jewish time (sunset to sunset and John is using Roman time) -

Mark 14:12 - "Now on the first day of Unleavened Bread when they killed the Passover Lamb."

John 13:1 - "Now before the Feast of the Passover...." Meal, Washing of Feet, Gethsemane.

Christ crucified this same 24 hour period, but it was obviously after the final night at Gethsemane and then the illegal trial. Mark is speaking of this event from sundown, John is speaking of it on Roman time (this is obvious because they use different terminology for the same meal where Judas left to betray the Lord... can't miss this point and get it right.)

6 days before - Saturday

5 days before - Sunday

4 days before - Monday

3 days before - Tuesday

2 days before - Wednesday

1 day before - Thursday

The Day - Friday

The problem with people believing that John was speaking of a different day (as mentioned above) is that they miss the fact that the terminology for the day is different based on the author. To clear up any misunderstanding between the synoptic gospels and the Gospel of John, one needs only to compare the uses for the term "Preparation Day." Once one does this, there are no discrepancies in the accounts –

Matthew 27:62 – "The next day, the one after the Preparation Day, the chief priests and the Pharisees went to Pilate." This was the day after the crucifixion. Matthew says it is the day "after Preparation Day."

Mark 15:42 – "It was Preparation Day (that is, the day before the Sabbath). So as evening approached..." This is the day of the crucifixion. Mark says "It was Preparation Day."

Luke 23:5 – "It was Preparation Day, and the Sabbath was about to begin." This is the day of the crucifixion. Luke says "It was Preparation Day."

John 19:14 – "Now it was Preparation Day of the Passover." This is the day of the crucifixion. John says "It was Preparation Day."

Based on the biblical evidence, there is

No discrepancy between any of the accounts.

Jesus was crucified on a Friday.

Jesus rose on a Sunday.

As a final note, the Bible says 13 times that He was raised “on” the third day. This is mentioned by Jesus himself as well as the apostles. Therefore, it must have been Friday that Christ was crucified.

Please don't believe (as some have claimed) that Christ rode the donkey into Jerusalem on a Saturday instead of a Sunday. This would have been the Sabbath. If He did, He would have violated the law –

“Observe the Sabbath day, to keep it holy, as the LORD your God commanded you. Six days you shall labor and do all your work, but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the LORD your God. In it you shall do no work: you, nor your son, nor your daughter, nor your male servant, nor your female servant, nor your ox, nor your donkey, nor any of your cattle, nor your stranger who is within your gates, that your male servant and your female servant may rest as well as you.” Deuteronomy 5:12-14

There is no need to make the assertion it was a Saturday unless you simply wanted to finagle the dating. There is also no biblical provision for an exemption to the commandment prohibiting working a donkey. As stated above, the work of Sir Robert Anderson in the 1800s clearly demonstrates that Jesus rode into Jerusalem on 6 April 0032. This can be validated in other ways and is the correct year and month for the Lord's crucifixion.

The biblical evidence is quite clear and without ambiguity or total uncertainty...Jesus Christ was crucified as the Passover Lamb on Friday, 11 April 0032 and was resurrected to eternal life on Sunday 13 April 0032.

He now offers eternal life to all who call on Him by faith. Have you accepted His offer of peace?

EXODUS 12:12-20 (SAVED UNTO HOLINESS)

One final plague is coming upon Egypt before the Israelites will be released from their bondage. However, this plague will be unlike anything which has occurred before, both in type and magnitude. It will strike at the heart of every family in Egypt.

The Lord will pass through the land and selectively kill all of the firstborn males, of Pharaoh himself, all the way down to the female servant who is behind the handmill. He will also kill the firstborn of every animal. However, there is a notable difference in this plague in another way as well.

In the previous plagues a distinction was made, either implicitly or explicitly, between the Egyptians and Israel. They didn't need to do anything to be exempt. They simply were. But in the case of this plague, they need to do something; they need to provide a sign or they too will be struck by the plague.

Why was this necessary? The Lord had already showed from the previous plagues that He could tell the difference between the people. And more, the people already had a sign - they had circumcision. Why wasn't this sign acceptable instead of the killing of an animal and spreading its blood on the doorways of their houses?

The answer is that circumcision of the flesh only brought them into covenant relationship with the people of Israel as a collective whole. It is what designated them as a people group. However, it was not a sign of faith from the individual. Rather it was a mark placed upon them before they knew to do right or wrong.

Throughout all of the dispensations in the Bible, the means of salvation remains the same; it is by grace through faith. A person could have simply refused to follow the instructions of the Passover and they too would have suffered the punishment of losing their firstborn.

Paul shows in Romans that being circumcised doesn't save anyone. There needs to be a conversion of the heart or the circumcision of the flesh means nothing. Without faith in God's provision, every external sign and deed in the world won't get a person one step closer to being saved.

And yet there is more. Being redeemed implies a cost. The concept of redemption indicates a purchase is made to buy something back. In essence, there is a clearing of a debt. The blood of the lamb on the doorposts and lintel showed that a price had been paid. A substitute had died in place of those inside the house.

Today we will see what comes after being saved. There is a responsibility that goes along with it. If it isn't acted on, then there are consequences for that failure to act. These stories, and the minute details they contain, show pictures of greater things to come in Christ.

Are you saved? Have you called out to Christ and accepted His death as your price of redemption? If so, then you are now called to a new life and a new direction in that life...

Text Verse: Therefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and rest your hope fully upon the grace that is to be brought to you at the revelation of Jesus Christ; 14 as obedient children, not conforming yourselves to the former lusts, as in your ignorance; 15 but as He who called you is holy, you also be holy in all your conduct, 16 because it is written, "Be holy, for I am holy." 1 Peter 1:13-16

Following immediately after the Passover comes another feast, the Feast of Unleavened Bread. Unlike the other feasts, the Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread were given to Israel prior to their deliverance. What they picture in Christ Jesus was also given prior to the introduction of the New Covenant.

Jesus instituted the New Covenant in His blood, becoming our Passover Lamb. He also imputed His righteousness to us; His sinless perfection, typified by the unleavened bread. Both of these were alluded to prior to His death. As we are granted His sinlessness in a positional way, isn't it right that we act in the manner which we have been called to in an actual way?

Hopefully, we will learn this lesson from the introduction of the Feast of Unleavened Bread in today's passage. This and so many other wonderful pictures of Christ are there, waiting for us to search them out from His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Blood shall be a Sign (verses 12 & 13)

12 'For I will pass through the land of Egypt on that night,

The Lord now promises that He will take the necessary action of this final plague in order to redeem Israel. Their long time of hard service and heavy bondage is finally coming to an end and in anticipation of that great moment, more instructions and details are now provided.

The words "I will pass" are not given as a connection to the name "Passover." They are a completely different word, v'abarti, which simply means "to go through." There is a difference being made here between Egypt and Israel. "Passing through" is meant in judgment; "Passing over" is meant in mercy.

Further, it is the Lord who personally promises to perform this. It is not a designated representative, such as a powerful angel, but rather it is the Lord who will act. The Bible notes elsewhere that salvation is of the Lord, but judgment is as well. Both of these actions at the Exodus prefigure the work of Jesus in the future.

12 (con't) and will strike all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both man and beast;

Some years ago Simcha Jacobovici, the Naked Archaeologist, did a special on the plagues of Egypt. During his less than scholarly work, he found natural reasons for all of the plagues, diminishing them to the point that God was left out of the picture completely. He gave reasons for each plague and pulled a few slight of hand maneuvers in the process, but the most egregious error he made was concerning the plague on the firstborn.

He claimed that the firstborn of Egypt lay on a cot that was lower than all the others as a sign of dignity. Because of this, natural gasses crept in and killed all of the firstborn of Egypt because they alone slept on that honorable bed.

First, there is no such proof of any such sleeping arrangements, and secondly this verse says that the firstborn of both man and beast were affected. Unless the Egyptians made little firstborn pig, monkey, donkey, cow, and goat beds that were lower than the rest, we can be assured that the Naked Archaeologist is as full of hot air as his crummy theories.

There is no possible natural explanation for what occurred on that terrible night of the first Passover. Having cleared that up, in Exodus 4, this promise was first revealed to the ears of Moses -

""Then you shall say to Pharaoh, "Thus says the Lord: 'Israel is My son, My firstborn. 23 So I say to you, let My son go that he may serve Me. But if you refuse to let him go, indeed I will kill your son, your firstborn.'"" Exodus 4:22, 23

Now the time for those words to be fulfilled has come. But to make the plague all the more remarkable, it will include not only the firstborn of the people, but of all of the animals as well. The fifth plague was somewhat of a precursor to this coming plague. In Chapter 9, a distinction was made between the livestock of Israel and that of Egypt -

"And the Lord will make a difference between the livestock of Israel and the livestock of Egypt. So nothing shall die of all that belongs to the children of Israel." Exodus 9:4

Pharaoh failed to heed that remarkable occurrence and pressed on in his stubborn attitude. Now, the final plague will be refined to such a precise extent that it will make the plague upon the livestock seem almost insignificant in comparison.

12 (con't) and against all the gods of Egypt

Although most of us have read Exodus, including these few words here, we probably haven't lost any sleep over them. But scholars vary in their opinion of what they mean, even to amazing degrees. The word "gods" can also mean "princes" and so some say that this means that they will equally suffer in the plague, but that is obvious on the surface. Every household with the blood is exempted, every other will suffer.

It could also mean that the term "gods" is explained by the firstborn of the people and the beasts. In other words, the firstborn of Pharaoh was considered the royal heir to the throne and thus he was a deity. And all of the beasts that were worshipped would have their firstborn killed as well. Thus the judgment is against "all the gods of Egypt" in this sense.

One person changes the spelling of "gods" to "habitations" - "against all your habitations" - by reversing one letter in the Hebrew. Instead of elohe, he changes it to ahley. But that kind of fiddling with the Bible is tenuous at best. Another possibility is that as the Lord went through Egypt, he destroyed their idols.

This view actually has precedent elsewhere in the Bible. In 1 Samuel 5, we read this account about Dagon, the god of Ashdod -

"Then the Philistines took the ark of God and brought it from Ebenezer to Ashdod. 2 When the Philistines took the ark of God, they brought it into the house of Dagon and set it by Dagon. 3 And when the people of Ashdod arose early in the morning, there was Dagon, fallen on its face to the earth before the ark of the Lord. So they took Dagon and set it in its place again. 4 And when they arose early the next morning, there was Dagon, fallen on its face to the ground before the ark of the Lord. The head of Dagon and both the palms of its hands were broken off on the threshold; only Dagon's torso was left of it. 5 Therefore neither the priests of Dagon nor any who come into Dagon's house tread on the threshold of Dagon in Ashdod to this day." 1 Samuel 5:1-5

That is similar to the Indiana Jones movie, Raiders of the Lost Ark, where the ark was stored in a wooden box with a Nazi symbol on it. The symbol was burned right off the box, just as Dagon was knocked off his perch. At least two other times, speaking of Egypt of the future, the Lord is said to literally destroy their idols -

"Behold, the Lord rides on a swift cloud,
And will come into Egypt;
The idols of Egypt will totter at His presence,
And the heart of Egypt will melt in its midst." Isaiah 19:1

"He shall also break the sacred pillars of Beth Shemesh that are in the land of Egypt; and the houses of the gods of the Egyptians he shall burn with fire." Jeremiah 43:14

But all of these options fall short of being correct. What this probably means above all else is what one would assume when reading it without inserting any presuppositions. In Chapter 11, Moses told Pharaoh exactly what was coming by speaking these words to him -

"Thus says the Lord: 'About midnight I will go out into the midst of Egypt; 5 and all the firstborn in the land of Egypt shall die, from the firstborn of Pharaoh who sits on his throne, even to the firstborn of the female servant who is behind the handmill, and all the firstborn of the animals. 6 Then there shall be a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as was not like it before, nor shall be like it again.'" Exodus 11:4-6

Knowing this in advance and then seeing the onset of the plague, Pharaoh and all of Egypt would petition their false gods. But none would be able to save the firstborn. Thus, it would be a complete judgment on each and every god of Egypt in one fell swoop.

They were entreated for mercy, but no mercy would come because they had no ears to hear and no power to stave off the plague. Because of this, the gods of Egypt are therefore judged as false gods. This then would be the same type of judgment as when the Lord accepted Elijah's offering on Mount Carmel.

The god of the worshippers of Baal was judged to be a false god before the Lord, exactly as the people acknowledged after seeing the Lord's fire come down from heaven.

12 (con't) I will execute judgment: I am the Lord.

e'eseh shephatim ani Yehovah - "I Yehovah will execute judgment." It is emphatic that Yehovah would personally attend to the judgment upon Egypt. He alone would work salvation and He alone would work destruction. To Him alone belongs the power and the glory, and to Him alone belongs the fear of His enemies.

13 Now the blood shall be a sign for you on the houses where you are.

What has to be understood is that Israel was not guilt-free. They had worshipped the idols of Egypt and they had not been faithful to their God. But the Lord had called Abraham and made His promises to him. His plan of redemption for mankind was to come through this group of people, guilty as they may be.

But the guilt implied that judgment was necessary. And so in order to atone for their sins, an innocent lamb was sacrificed. It is the blood which atones for sin and which expiates the guilt for the sins of the people. Those who had applied the blood would be exempt from judgment.

If this isn't a clear enough picture of the work of the Lord Jesus and the mercy of God, then you might go back to the beginning and recheck your faith! Every detail of this account shows us pictures of what Christ, the Lamb of God, has done for us. Israel is being used as a microcosm of the greater salvation of all people.

We all stand guilty before God. And yet, by applying faith in the shed blood of Christ to our lives, we are granted mercy and saved from the wrath to come. The doorposts for Israel; Calvary's cross for the world - the blood is the sign for the people of God.

The sign is for us, not for God. He has provided the sign for our assurance of His following through with what the sign represents. Israel will be passed over; the church will be raptured up. And both will be saved from the time of wrath which those around them would have to face.

13 (con't) And when I see the blood, I will pass over you; u'phasakhti alekem - the words are emphatic. "I will pass over you." Here, the spoken word is the guarantee. The Lord spoke a promise to Abraham and Abraham believed. In that act of faith, the Lord counted it to him for righteousness. By faith, Israel was to keep the Passover and the sprinkling of blood. This is what Moses, who represented Israel, was noted for in Hebrews 11 -

"By faith he kept the Passover and the sprinkling of blood, lest he who destroyed the firstborn should touch them." Hebrews 11:28

Likewise, God has given us His word and our belief in what that words says is what counts us as righteous. The blood is the sign of that guarantee. The blood of the lamb in Egypt was the sign to the people. Our reception of the blood of Christ on Calvary's cross is our sign. When the Lord sees the blood, the Lord will pass over.

God will not destroy those who are saved by the blood. It is a picture of our own redemption, certainly a pre-tribulation rapture for the church, and a complete protection for the sealed 144,000 of Israel during the tribulation.

13 (con't) and the plague shall not be on you to destroy you when I strike the land of Egypt.

The word for plague here is negeph. It is the first time it is used in Scripture and it means a mortal blow. The sense of the passage is that when the conditions laid down by the Lord were met, the privilege which he had extended to the people would be granted. If they failed to meet them, it would not be.

Even among Israel, there was always a choice of obeying or disobeying. One way or another, Egypt would be struck, but Israel had been granted mercy. And so it is true with the world. Judgment will fall on all people, but for those who receive the word and accept the sign, mercy will come.

In judgment I will pass through the land
I will destroy those who remain at war with Me
In My anger, I will strike with My mighty hand
A crushing blow for all the world to see

But there is also mercy for those who pay heed
I will not strike those who have faith in My word
When I see the blood, then it is agreed
That I will extend mercy, even I the Lord
Their judgment came in a Substitute
An innocent Lamb for them has died
My righteousness to them I will impute
For to their hearts, the Lamb's blood they have applied

II. An Everlasting Ordinance (verses 14-16)

14 'So this day shall be to you a memorial;

In these words comes the first use of the word zikkaron, or "memorial," in the Bible. The Feast which is now going to be explained was to be a constant reminder to the people of the redemption of Israel and all that it entailed. In order for it to be so, the Lord gives His instructions concerning the celebration...

14 (con't) and you shall keep it as a feast to the Lord throughout your generations.

Besides the Passover, this is the first mandated "feast" or khag in the Bible. Previously, Moses demanded of Pharaoh that the Israelites be allowed to go into the wilderness to observe a feast to the Lord, but that hasn't occurred yet and it was not a mandated feast at that time. Rather it was a request. This, however, is.

From this time on, it was to become an annual reminder of the work of the Lord on their behalf and their responsibilities to Him. All generations of Israelites after this were to observe the feast so that they would never forget His acts on their behalf.

14 (con't) You shall keep it as a feast by an everlasting ordinance.

The term "everlasting ordinance" is khuqat olam t'khaggu. In essence it is a feast which is to be observed for ever. This everlasting ordinance is not necessarily speaking of the Passover, but of the Feast of Unleavened Bread or matsot. The Passover is what makes the Feast of Unleavened Bread possible.

The Passover is one of the annual feasts of the Lord, and eventually the two became united in terminology, but the Feast of Unleavened bread is a separate and distinct celebration with its own picture and fulfillment in Christ and in His church.

15 Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread. On the first day you shall remove leaven from your houses.

The Passover is on the 14th of the month. This feast is held from the 15th to the 21st day of the month. A seven-day week is believed to have been unknown to Egypt at this time, but it was not unknown completely in the world.

Abraham's family observed a seven-day week as was seen in the marriage of Jacob to Leah. Jacob was asked to fulfill his marriage week with her before marrying Rachel. Despite this, there isn't any record of Israel observing a seven-day week until this point.

From here on out, it would be the standard observance of the people. Whatever day of the week the 15th fell on, they were required to remove all leaven from their houses and keep it out for a full week. During this time, they were to eat unleavened bread.

The reason for this was that it pictured the complete removal of the yeast of Egypt from their bread. In the Bible, bread is the fundamental means of sustaining the body - even a symbol of life itself. If one didn't remove the yeast of Egypt, it showed that they longed after that which Egypt provided.

In essence, they had failed to separate themselves from the life they were called to leave. The removal of Egyptian yeast thus symbolized their new life, being purified from their old means of sustaining life.

In general, yeast can be considered in two ways. First it causes fermentation, and thus corruption. But it also causes the bread to rise, thus picturing pride, which itself is a form of corruption. The remembrance of the feast is given for the reason of severing themselves from the wicked practices of Egypt.

However, the picture is given for us to see Jesus and His perfection as well as our obligation to act in a pure and undefiled manner. This is explicitly stated by Paul in 1 Corinthians 5. The Corinthians were having issues with immorality in the church and Paul wrote to them words of correction. In them he identifies both the Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread -

"Your glorying is not good. Do you not know that a little leaven leavens the whole lump? 7 Therefore purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new lump, since you truly are unleavened. For indeed Christ, our Passover, was sacrificed for us. 8 Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, nor with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." 1 Corinthians 5:6-8

First he noted that Christ is our Passover. After this, he notes that we are to "keep the feast." It is not the Passover, but the Feast of Unleavened Bread of which he speaks. The leaven of malice and wickedness are to be removed so that we are unleavened, picturing sincerity and truth.

We have been called out of "spiritual Egypt," meaning the fallen world. If we don't remove the yeast of Egypt, meaning the old immoral ways of the world, it shows that we still long after that which the world provides rather than what Christ has offered. As always, every word we are seeing in the Old Testament is pointing to a much larger picture of redemptive history.

15 (con't) For whoever eats leavened bread from the first day until the seventh day, that person shall be cut off from Israel.

The penalty for eating bread with yeast was for that person to be cut off from Israel. This seems like a harsh penalty, especially when it is a mere observance of something that happened only once in their history. However, it is a picture of a greater truth which is again explained by Paul in 1 Corinthians 5.

What is it that we are to do with those who transgress the commands of the Bible in the church age? The answer is found in what Paul recommends for a man who was living a sexually immoral lifestyle in Corinth -

"...deliver such a one to Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that his spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." 1 Corinthians 5:5

Like the Israelites of old, we are to expel the man living in malice or wickedness. And Paul gives the exact reason why we are to treat a fellow Christian in this manner in Galatians Chapter 5 -

"A little leaven leavens the whole lump." Galatians 5:9

If yeast were allowed in the house of Israel, it would be used, as yeast is used, for leavening the bread. Thus all of the bread would be leavened. If sin is allowed into a church it is bound to infect the entire congregation. It is a lesson our modern church has forgotten. And how quickly we have degraded into the vilest of conduct in many once-faithful denominations!

16 On the first day there shall be a holy convocation, and on the seventh day there shall be a holy convocation for you.

A holy convocation, or miqra qodesh, is called for both the 15th of the month and the 21st of the month. It was to be a gathering of the people for sacrifice, prayer, and fellowship. It may also have included instruction as well. Later, the convocations were called by the blowing of silver trumpets which were directed by the Lord to be made for this purpose.

16 (con't) No manner of work shall be done on them;

This is explained in more detail in Leviticus 23:7, 8 -

"On the first day you shall have a holy convocation; you shall do no customary work on it. 8 But you shall offer an offering made by fire to the Lord for seven days. The seventh day shall be a holy convocation; you shall do no customary work on it." Leviticus 23:7, 8

Customary work means employment or other regular work. This then is not a Sabbath observance which forbid work of any kind, including the cooking of meals. This is seen as we continue...

16 (con't) but that which everyone must eat—that only may be prepared by you.

Food could be prepared on this particular day of convocation and thus it is not a Sabbath. This is important to know and remember concerning the timeline of Jesus' cross. The gospels are very clear that the day following Christ's crucifixion was a Sabbath, not a convocation. In Luke 23, this is what is recorded -

"Then he took it down, wrapped it in linen, and laid it in a tomb that was hewn out of the rock, where no one had ever lain before. 54 That day was the Preparation, and the Sabbath drew near.

55 And the women who had come with Him from Galilee followed after, and they observed the tomb and how His body was laid. 56 Then they returned and prepared spices and fragrant oils. And they rested on the Sabbath according to the commandment." Luke 23:53-56

Therefore, understanding the terminology here and that of the gospels, we can know, along with other assurances, that Christ's cross occurred on a Friday, not a Wednesday or a Thursday.

As a memorial and as an everlasting ordinance
You shall leave behind the life you once held dear
To you there is now to be a new allegiance
And in your life shall a new lifestyle appear

For those who are unwilling to comply with My word
You shall hand them over to Satan as is their choice
This is for their good, so that on the Day of the Lord
Their spirit will be saved according to My voice

I have spoken that all who come to Me will be saved
But the congregation needs to be kept pure and holy
And so for those who have willingly misbehaved
They must in this life suffer their own indignity

III. Let us keep the Feast (verses 17-20)

17 So you shall observe the Feast of Unleavened Bread, for on this same day I will have brought your armies out of the land of Egypt.

To us, the words translated "this same day" would be an unusual expression. They are b'etsem ha'yom - in bone (of) the day. The meaning is "that of the same substance." It goes all the way back to Genesis 2 where Adam said -

“This is now bone of my bones
And flesh of my flesh;
She shall be called Woman,
Because she was taken out of Man.” Genesis 2:23

Adam was declaring the woman to be of the same substance as he. Thus, to say the "bone of the day" is to mean, the day of the same substance as the original. Each year on the same day, the 15th of the first month, the Feast is to be commemorated. It is an interesting idiom that didn't make it into the English language as so many others did.

It is on this same day that the Lord says that He will have brought out Israel's army. It is the third time the word tsaba, or armies, is applied to the people of Israel. The Lord is their Commander and they are His hosts. When they leave, it will not be as a ragtag bunch of people, but as an army bearing dignity and order.

17 (con't) Therefore you shall observe this day throughout your generations as an everlasting ordinance.

Again, they are reminded that this day is to be observed. The repetition has purpose. It is to show that they are to pay special heed to this instruction and never fail to follow through with it. The exodus itself began on this day, the 15th of the month.

This corresponds to our new life in Christ coming after the judgment on our sin and our deliverance from it. In essence, there is our day of adoption which is followed immediately by our journey in being the Lord's adopted. We will never be un-adopted and so we are to conduct ourselves as if this were truly the case.

18 In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month at evening, you shall eat unleavened bread, until the twenty-first day of the month at evening.

In the Hebrew the word "month" is missing at the beginning of the verse, but it is not an unusual form of ellipses. When something is otherwise understood, it is often dropped. Because the word is used two more times in the verse, it is to be understood that it is the first month.

This is a general repeat of verse 15 and it is a reminder that if a person were to eat bread with yeast in it during this period, it would in essence be a denial of the new life in which they were called to live. The generations afterward were to follow suit as a reminder of this same calling.

The entire seven-day period was made holy through the special observances of the first and the seventh days of the feast. These miqra qodeshim, or holy convocations, sanctified the entire period. They therefore stand in place of all seven days. This observance then is realized in our life in Christ.

The eating of the unleavened bread pictures our pursuit of Christ in this new life. His words in John 6:27 point to this -

"Do not labor for the food which perishes, but for the food which endures to everlasting life, which the Son of Man will give you, because God the Father has set His seal on Him." John 6:27

The giving up of regular work is then picturing our having attained true rest in Him. This is seen in Hebrews 4:3, where it says that we who have believed in Christ enter into His rest. A few verses later, the author of Hebrews explains it further -

"For he who has entered His rest has himself also ceased from his works as God did from His." Hebrews 4:10

In Christ, our labors are finished, symbolized by the convocations at the beginning and end of the Feast of Unleavened Bread. Again, these two days stand in place of the entire feast period.

19 For seven days no leaven shall be found in your houses, since whoever eats what is leavened, that same person shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, whether he is a stranger or a native of the land.

Again, this verse appears to be a mere repetition of what has already been said, but it isn't. An addition is made which is that there is no distinction between a native born or a stranger in the congregation. The native of the land in Hebrew is ezrah ha'aretz or literally, "a tree in its native soil." The stranger is the word ger; a foreigner or an alien.

The distinction between the two is important. The native is speaking of a literal descendant of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. The land was promised to them and thus they are considered of the native soil. The stranger is anyone who has joined themselves to Israel and accepted their customs and practices.

This has enormous ramifications both at the exodus, where an immense multitude of foreigners joined Israel and became a part of the collective whole, as well as numerous incidents of foreigners coming into Israel throughout the pages of the Bible. It also includes those non-Israelites who have joined Israel today.

They are all collectively under the same umbrella. And the same is true with those who will live in the land after the tribulation period. Here is what Ezekiel says about them -

"It shall be that you will divide it by lot as an inheritance for yourselves, and for the strangers who dwell among you and who bear children among you. They shall be to you as native-born among the children of Israel; they shall have an inheritance with you among the tribes of Israel. 23 And it shall be that in whatever tribe the stranger dwells, there you shall give him his inheritance," says the Lord God." Ezekiel 47:22, 23

Those who are joined to Israel are to bear the same responsibilities, and they are to share in the same opportunities. This hasn't changed even in modern times with Israel and it is the exact same expectation of those in the church. All are considered on an equal basis in Christ. Paul explains this in Ephesians 2 -

"Therefore remember that you, once Gentiles in the flesh—who are called Uncircumcision by what is called the Circumcision made in the flesh by hands— 12 that at that time you were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world. 13 But now in Christ Jesus you who once were far off have been brought near by the blood of Christ." Ephesians 2:11-13

This is why he uses the imagery of the olive tree in Romans 11. There is the native tree and there is the wild olive. The same conditions are levied upon both and the same honors are granted to both.

20 You shall eat nothing leavened; in all your dwellings you shall eat unleavened bread.*"

These words extend the meaning of what was said about the bread. Not only are they to eat unleavened bread, but they are to eat nothing with leaven in it. No food of any kind was to have any form of yeast in it. Further this prohibition is to go to any dwelling where they reside.

This includes their time in the wilderness, in Canaan, and even during their exiles. They were required to observe this at the same time each year wherever they lived. Having said that, because this feast is fulfilled in Christ, it is also set aside in Christ, as are all of the feasts of the Lord.

He has accomplished everything which was pictured by the Old Testament system, and every law required by that system. In Him alone is found the perfection of God's standard. Now, instead of observing these feasts, we trust in their fulfillment in Christ. Paul explains this several times and in several ways in the New Testament. But he is exceptionally clear about this in Colossians -

"So let no one judge you in food or in drink, or regarding a festival or a new moon or sabbaths, 17 which are a shadow of things to come, but the substance is of Christ." Colossians 2:16, 17

Israel's laws concerning the Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread symbolize their deliverance from Egypt and consecration based on their redemption. Those shadows are now fulfilled in Christ. And so let us keep the feast in Him, not with externals, but with the internal changes which He desires from His people.

We've come to the end of today's verses, but not the end of the story. Much wonder lies ahead and all of it pictures a greater story, that of Jesus. It is through Him that true deliverance from this corrupt world comes about. And it is through Him that heaven's doors are once again opened for the people of the world. If you have never received Jesus as Lord and Savior, please give me just another moment to explain how you can today...

Closing Verse: "...if indeed you have heard Him and have been taught by Him, as the truth is in Jesus: 22 that you put off, concerning your former conduct, the old man which grows corrupt according to the deceitful lusts, 23 and be renewed in the spirit of your mind, 24 and that you put on the new man which was created according to God, in true righteousness and holiness." Ephesians 4:21-24

Next Week: Exodus 12:21-28 (What do You Mean by this Service?) (34th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Feast of Unleavened Bread

For I will pass through the land of Egypt on that night

And will strike in the land of Egypt all the firstborn

Both man and beast will face this plight

And against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment as I have sworn

I am the Lord

This is my spoken word

Now the blood shall be for you a sign

On the houses where you stay

And when I see the blood, by my design

I will pass over you and not come by your way

And the plague shall not be on you to destroy you

When I strike the land of Egypt as I am set to do

So this day shall be to you a memorial

And you shall keep it as a feast

To the Lord throughout your generations

You shall keep it from the greatest to the least

You shall keep it as a feast by an everlasting ordinance

Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread

On the first day you shall remove leaven

From your houses, just as I have said

For whoever eats leavened bread

From the first day until the seventh day

That person shall be cut off from Israel

Thus I have commanded you in this way

On the first day there shall be a holy convocation
And on the seventh day there shall be a holy convocation for you too
No manner of work shall be done on them
But that which everyone must eat—that only may be prepared by you
So you shall observe the Feast
Of Unleavened Bread as I instructed you
For on this same day I will have brought your armies
Out of the land of Egypt as promised to you

Therefore you shall observe this day in your governance
Throughout your generations as an everlasting ordinance
In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month
At evening, you shall eat unleavened bread
Until the twenty-first day of the month at evening
Remember to do as I have said

For seven days no leaven shall be found in the houses of your nation
Since whoever eats what is leavened
That same person shall be cut off from Israel's congregation
Whether he is a stranger or a native of the land
This is what to you I now command
You shall eat nothing leavened, but instead
In all your dwellings you shall eat unleavened bread

These are the instructions as given by the Lord
For Israel's feast as He commanded them to do
And so by His spoken word
They were so charged with His words to carry through
But this feast is only a picture, a mere shadow
Of the greater work of the Lord Jesus
In what He has done, we have come to know
The fullness of what God has done for us

And so let us keep the feast in sincerity
Let us devote our lives to holy living in His sight
We as the Lord's redeemed have been called to purity
And to conduct ourselves in a manner just and right

And so let it be according to His word
That we live this way for all of our days
Pursuing Christ and Christ alone - our precious Lord
And giving to God, through Him, all of our praise

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 12:21-28 (WHAT DO YOU MEAN BY THIS SERVICE?)

The night that I started typing this sermon, I got up at about 12am or so as I usually do to finish the night downstairs. The reason why I do this isn't important, but I can say that when I get down there each night, I do enough things before lying down that I don't fall right back to sleep. Instead, my thoughts will wander through events of the day or whatever else is on my mind.

As I was thinking about the sermon typing of that day, a few thoughts came to mind. As of November 2014, the entire Bible is now translated into 531 languages and 2,883 languages have at least some portion of it. That means that human minds are reading, studying, and contemplating the Bible in all of these languages.

And certainly God is revealing different aspects of His word to different people based on their language. I am convinced that different languages will open the Bible in different ways. Knowing, or at least being able to study, the Bible in the original languages has a unique benefit, but the concepts, pictures, and eternal truths which are drawn out from this book are not limited to those languages.

However, there is a uniqueness in the biblical languages that will reveal things that cannot otherwise be drawn out through other languages. That is why it is important to at least study those original languages. God has hidden marvelous clues concerning His Son, His plan of redemption, and the pictures which point to both in them.

As always, today I will give you highlights of the Hebrew language which are unique and which cannot be discerned from any English translation. And why can I do that? Because they are available to any and all via the internet!

And so as I lay there thinking about His word, I thought, "How blessed we are here today!" We have not just one version in English, but somewhere around 900. We have thousands of tools for studying the word. We have all of the combined commentaries of more than 2000 years of scholars, pastors, and theologians.

This is the most biblically blessed age in all of human history. And yet, modern sermons may expand on biblical truths, but not biblical insights. And many hardly even expand on biblical truths.

The airwaves are awash with feel-good, pre-written sermons which can be bought on line or found in one of a thousand sermon-layout books which have been printed to help pastors not worry about exerting any real effort in their weekly responsibility.

Instead, they take what someone has done, add in a few personal life-applications, and get back to other "more important" things. I was given dozens of sermon prep books before I started preaching and I have never used one. In fact, they went in the recycle.

Going through the Bible one verse at a time is sermon work in and of itself. As I will never go through these particular verses again in my life, I want these sermons to be a record of my love and respect for this eternal gift, the Holy Bible. And your attendance each week is a similar mark of respect for the One who gave us this treasure. May the Lord be glorified through our pursuit of His superior word!

Text Verse: Thus says the Lord:

“Heaven is My throne,
And earth is My footstool.
Where is the house that you will build Me?

And where is the place of My rest?
2 For all those things My hand has made,
And all those things exist,"
Says the Lord.
"But on this one will I look:
On him who is poor and of a contrite spirit,
And who trembles at My word. Isaiah 66:1, 2

Of all of the wonders which fill the universe, there is a certain place where the Lord finds pleasure. Heaven is filled with His glory as He occupies His throne. The earth is adorned with evidences of His tender care. It is a blue pearl in the midst of a swirling universe of majestic wisdom.

And yet, with all of the splendor which is seen here, He calls our home His "footstool." To Him, it is simply a place where He can rest His feet. By His knowledge, all things exist in heaven and on earth, but yes... there is a certain place where the Lord finds pleasure. Where is it? Well, He just told us.

It is in the one who is poor and of a contrite spirit, and who trembles at His word. Imagine that! In all the glorious magnificence of heaven and earth, He regards such a person. This is how important the Holy Bible is to Him. And this is how favorably He regards the one who holds it in high esteem.

Let us never fail to do so. Instead, let us love it, pursue it, cherish it, and tremble at it... just as we would tremble at the sight of His own majestic face. Let us so regard this wondrous gift. Great marvels are to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Hyssop and Blood (verses 21 & 22)

From verse 20 to 21 we have been transported from one time frame to another. In verses 1-20 the instructions anticipated the coming Passover and were probably given before or during the plagues of locusts and darkness. Now in verse 21, we have been forwarded in time to the day of the Passover for the final instructions of this great and momentous event...

21 Then Moses called for all the elders of Israel and said to them,

In verse 3 of this chapter, the Lord spoke these words to Moses -

"Speak to all the congregation of Israel, saying: 'On the tenth of this month every man shall take for himself a lamb, according to the house of his father, a lamb for a household.'" Exodus 12:3

In that verse, Moses was told to speak to all the congregation of Israel. In this verse, he only summons the elders. The implication is that, as often occurs, the representatives of the people speak to the people as mediators.

When the CEO of a company speaks to his staff, they in turn pass the words on to their subordinates and so on down the line. However, he is said to speak to the entire company when he actually only speaks to a handful of people. This is the same way that Moses is speaking to the congregation.

He speaks to the elders, meaning the chiefs of the tribes, and they will in turn speak to those below them. In this way, the entire congregation will quickly get the message that is to be conveyed. And the message contains words which anticipate their release...

21 (con') "Pick out and take lambs for yourselves

The words are mishku uqehu lakhem tson = draw and take to you (the) flock-animal. The Hebrew is ambiguous and it could mean one of two things -

"Go, and take your flock animal," or

"Withdraw from the flock your animal."

If this is the day of the Passover, which the text implies, the first is surely correct. They had been told to have the animal ready on the 10th and then to slaughter it on the 14th. As this is the 14th of the month, the day of the Passover, Moses isn't asking them to go get an animal, but to go get the animal which had been selected.

21 (con') according to your families,

This direction and its explanation was given in verse 12:4 -

"And if the household is too small for the lamb, let him and his neighbor next to his house take it according to the number of the persons; according to each man's need you shall make your count for the lamb." Exodus 12:4

"According to your families" means that the animal which had been selected was designated for a certain number of people which may have included people from other families. The reason for the repetition will be realized in the next verse because it is something that wasn't explained before.

21 (con') and kill the Passover lamb.

Let's do some learning from these few words about Bible translations -

...and kill the Passover lamb. (NKJV)

...and slaughter the Passover animal. (NLT)

...and slaughter the passover-sacrifice; (YLT)

... and sacrifice the Phase. (Douy-Rheims)

...and kill the passover. (KJV)

...and kill the Passover. (World English Bible)

...and kill the Passover lamb. The NKJV inserts the word "lamb" for what they believe is clarity. But the word for "lamb" in the earlier part of this verse is tson. It means an animal of the flock and so it could be a lamb or a goat. They have made an assumption that they believe adds clarity, but it is not wholly correct. Further, as we will see, the word "Passover" is used in a special way. The insertion does not convey the intent of the verse.

"...and slaughter the Passover animal." The NLT gets the terminology better than the NKJV, because tson is an unspecified animal. It could be a goat or lamb, and so "animal" is clearer. But the insertion is still unwarranted.

"...and slaughter the passover-sacrifice;" Young's literal translation explains the Passover as a sacrifice. Although not incorrect, if one understands the Bible in context, the word "sacrifice" is unnecessary. It is a learning tool which is not inappropriate, but not necessary for one schooled in the feast.

"... and sacrifice the Phase." Douy-Rheims uses an obsolete word for "Passover." The etymology of the word is from the Latin translation of the Hebrew, and so this is not incorrect. The word Phase, which means "phase," "stage," or "aspect" may be tied to the moon, which is full on the night of the Passover.

"...and kill the passover." The KJV terminology is correct. The word "Passover" is applied to the lamb itself. Therefore, the word is put in place for the sacrifice being offered. This is comparable to what is said in 1 Corinthians about the Rock -

"For they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ." 1 Corinthians 10:4

The word "Rock" is substituted for and yet means "Christ." One word is given to mean both. This is the intent here with the word ha'pasach or "the Passover." The word means the animal to be sacrificed, which in turn signifies the entire feast.

However, the KJV is still not complete. The reason is that they wrote it with a small "p" when in fact, it is a proper noun and should be capitalized. And so, let's go to one more translation...

"...and kill the Passover." The World English Bible gets the gold star for literal intent, clarity, and grammar. They capitalized the "P" on "Passover." I hope you enjoyed this minor excursion into Bible translator's preferences and how they can affect other areas of Bible knowledge. And the reason for all this is because of what the Passover symbolizes. The answer is found in 1 Corinthians 5 -

"For Christ our Passover also has been sacrificed." 1 Corinthians 5:7 NASB

The reason for the minute detail of what the Hebrew is actually saying is because of what the Hebrew is actually picturing. In the end, it is all about Jesus. Today, take time to read 1 Corinthians 5:7 in as many translations as you can. There you will see a wide range of variations. I chose the NASB because it most accurately reflects what the original Greek says.

22 And you shall take a bunch of hyssop,

Here is something new which was not mentioned in the earlier verses explaining the ritual. The people are now told that they are to use a bunch of hyssop with which to apply the blood. This was not previously stated.

The word "bunch" is aguddah. It is the first of four uses of this word in the Bible. It means a band as in a band of men. The reason for telling you this is that it wasn't just a single piece of hyssop, but a bunch. The blood was to be heavily spattered on the doorposts and lintel. The directions are specific - the blood is to be evident.

The word hyssop that we use today comes from the Hebrew through the Greek. In Greek, it is hussopos and this is a transliteration from the Hebrew ezov. You can hear the similarity ezov/hyssop. It is an herb native to the Middle East and elsewhere. It has antiseptic, cough relieving, and expectorant properties.

Because of this, it is used as an aromatic herb and for medicine. It's a brightly colored shrub with dark green leaves. During the summer, it produces bunches of pink, blue, or, more rarely, white fragrant flowers.

The hyssop is mentioned only 10 times in the Old Testament, and with but one exception found in 1 Kings 4, it is consistently used in connection with purification. In one of the most moving psalms of the Bible, the 51st, David pours out his heart to the Lord over his sin before the Lord.

He had gone into another man's wife and then had her husband killed to cover up the act when she became pregnant. In complete remorse for his actions, he penned this psalm which includes these words in the 7th verse -

"Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean;
Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow." Psalm 51:7

David understood the significance of the hyssop and included these words, understanding that if he wasn't so purified, he would be cut off from his people, just as his predecessor Saul was. But the Lord looked on his heart with favor and purified him.

However, the hyssop finds its ultimate fulfillment not in the Old Testament, but in the New. The hyssop of the Passover from Egypt only prefigured the hyssop of the true Passover. The words are recorded in John 19:28-30 -

"After this, Jesus, knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, said, 'I thirst!' 29 Now a vessel full of sour wine was sitting there; and they filled a sponge with sour wine, put it on hyssop, and put it to His mouth. 30 So when Jesus had received the sour wine, He said, "It is finished!" And bowing His head, He gave up His spirit."

In Exodus, the hyssop applied the blood to the openings of the door. In John 19, the hyssop was applied to Jesus' mouth, the opening of the Door, as He called Himself. It is a prophetic announcement that the only way to be saved is through Him. The hyssop then is a symbol of His work - His word and His Spirit as explained by Paul in Ephesians 5:25-27 –

"...Christ also loved the church and gave Himself for her, 26 that He might sanctify and cleanse her with the washing of water by the word, 27 that He might present her to Himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that she should be holy and without blemish."

The Passover of Egypt only looked forward to our greater Passover from sin. Thank God for Jesus Christ, our true and eternal purifier from all iniquity and unrighteousness.

22 (con't) dip it in the blood that is in the basin, and strike the lintel and the two doorposts with the blood that is in the basin.

The word "basin" here is saph. It means a cup or bowl, but it also has the secondary meaning of threshold. This is the first time that it is used in the Bible and it is used twice in this verse. The repetition of the word has intent.

The cup holds what is in the cup. In Zechariah 12, the same word is used to describe Jerusalem as a "cup of drunkenness." In Jerusalem will be God's fury against the nations -

"Behold, I will make Jerusalem a cup of drunkenness to all the surrounding peoples, when they lay siege against Judah and Jerusalem." Zechariah 12:2

The same thought is found in the exodus account. The cup holds the blood and the blood is what withholds God's wrath. Therefore, the cup and what it contains, is not only symbolic of protection for those who possess it, but they are symbolic of God's wrath for those who don't.

The war against Jerusalem of the future is in no small way depicted here in the book of Exodus. The secondary meaning of this word, saph, is threshold. The word is used in the same way as it is here in Exodus as it is in the book of Zephaniah -

"Flocks will lie down in her midst,
All beasts which range in herds;
Both the pelican and the hedgehog
Will lodge in the tops of her pillars;
Birds will sing in the window,
Desolation will be on the threshold;
For He has laid bare the cedar work." Zephaniah 2:14 (NASB)

Therefore, we are being shown that. "Theologically, it becomes a symbol of God's presence in holy power or judgment." (HAW) Through the use of the blood in the basin, there at the threshold of the house, God's power to save and His righteous judgment are being depicted.

22 (con't) And none of you shall go out of the door of his house until morning.

This is the second new addition from the earlier explanation of the Passover and it explains why the words "according to your families" were repeated. Whoever came into the house to share in the meal was expected to stay in the house and not leave. They were not to go back to their own house after eating, but to stay put.

Those who were selected to join the family meal were considered as a part of that house until the plague was accomplished. What it should indicate to us is that any redeemed by the Lord should be considered as close to us as our own family. They have been passed over and are now a part of a greater family. Unfortunately, this isn't yet realized among believers and it won't be fully so until the day when we stand in the presence of the Lord and forget all of our petty differences.

Those who awaited the Lord's deliverance in Egypt, and those of us who await its fullness now, can both take the advice of Jeremiah that he gave during the destruction which occurred all around him -

"It is good that one should hope and wait quietly
For the salvation of the Lord." Lamentations 3:26

The world is falling apart around us and we need to hope and wait quietly and among our true family until we have been brought out from this place of trouble.

The sweet smell of hyssop fills the air
A bright crimson stain of blood surrounds the Door
Testimony that a Lamb has died there
From His undefiled body the blood did pour

Innocent and pure! Why did the Lamb have to die?
Wasn't there any other way for us to be free?
O God, my heart out to you does cry
How could the precious Lamb have died for one such as me?

Where can such love be found? How can it be true?
Did the Creator really send His own Son to Calvary
To bring back to Himself people such as me and you
Where can such love be found? Tell me, how can it be?

II. For You and Your Sons Forever (verses 23-25)

23 For the Lord will pass through to strike the Egyptians;

Based on the coming words of this verse, scholars will say that the Lord doesn't actively destroy the firstborn of the Egyptians, but this portion of the verse is clear. Moses says that Yehovah, the Lord, will pass through to strike them.

Thus, there is no reason to think that He merely passed through to strike and then gave the job of striking to another to actually accomplish. Rather, the Lord struck the Egyptians, He struck Israel when they were in disobedience, and He will strike the nations when He returns at the second coming.

23 (con't) and when He sees the blood on the lintel and on the two doorposts, the Lord will pass over the door

It is the blood and only the blood which can protect those in the house. The Lord would pass over any door with the blood. If a family of Israel didn't believe it was necessary, they too would suffer in the plague. Nothing but the blood can save. It is an eternal truth concerning Christ which is pictured in this ancient event.

Without receiving Christ through belief in His work, there can be no redemption; only the fear of death and condemnation.

23 (con't) and not allow the destroyer to come into your houses to strike you.

The words "the destroyer" are ha'mashkhit. The word shakhat means "destroy." The definite article ha in front of it is what brings it to life, ha'mashkhit - "the Destroyer." Scholars attempt to find every possible way of disassociating "the Destroyer" from the Lord. But there is no reason for this. As the Pulpit Commentary notes and as I have already said -

"...it is to be noted that elsewhere Jehovah himself is everywhere spoken of as the sole agent." (Pulpit)

This is correct and evidence for it is found in the New Testament. In 1 Corinthians 15:26, it says, "The last enemy that will be destroyed is death." However, there is a definite article in front of "death" there as well. It says, "The death." Paul is personifying death, showing that it is a result of an action.

This then takes us all the way to the end of the Bible where in Revelation 20 it says -

"The sea gave up the dead who were in it, and Death and Hades delivered up the dead who were in them. And they were judged, each one according to his works. 14 Then Death and Hades were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death." Revelation 20:13, 14

There, in both instances, death is again personified, just as it is here in Exodus. The destroyer is death, the result of the Lord's judgment. It is not an entity itself, but the result of a work-accomplished.

Not intending to change the word of God, but so you can understand the intent, we could paraphrase it by saying, "The Lord will pass over the door and not let the Death which is in the land of Egypt come into your houses to strike you."

24 And you shall observe this thing as an ordinance for you and your sons forever.

The ordinance here is not speaking of the sprinkling of the blood. That was never repeated again. Rather, it is speaking of the precept of the blood of the sacrifice and the observance of the Passover as a commemoration of redemption.

As curious as it may seem, Moses has been speaking in the plural form all along, but he suddenly changes to the singular form in the middle of this verse. "You (plural) are to do this and you (plural) are to do that." However, it now says, "You (plural) shall observe this thing as an ordinance for you (singular) and your (singular) sons forever.

The only commentator who even mentioned this said, "Perhaps, we are to understand that Moses insisted on the perpetuity of the ordinance to each of the elders severally." (Pulpit) But that doesn't make any sense because he is talking to all of them.

Instead, it is a picture of individual salvation. What is being said is, "You (people) shall observe this thing as an "ordinance-to-you" (a 'personal-ordinance') and your (every individual) sons... In the Hebrew, there is a dash, known as a maqqeph, between the words "as an ordinance" and "for you."

This dash unites the two words so that they become one in intent. Every person individually must participate within the group. In other words, it is a personal ordinance within the collective; each person is obligated to observe the feast. It is a picture of our salvation. In the church we have to personally receive Christ.

There are no tag-along Christians united through the family, but not through Christ. Even the Old Testament gives us hints as to how God operates towards His people. It is by grace and through faith that we are saved, in all dispensations.

25 It will come to pass when you come to the land which the Lord will give you, just as He promised, that you shall keep this service.

The Passover was to become a perpetual memorial, every year at its time. After they entered Canaan, which was promised to them through their fathers, they were to continuously and faithfully observe the rite. Assuming control of the land didn't end the need for the Passover, instead it necessitated it.

The Lord was to be proven faithful in the grant of land and therefore the people were to be faithful in the keeping of the ordinance. Should they go into exile from the land, they would still be obliged to perform the Passover because even in exile, they were promised to again receive the land.

Therefore, the annual rite was never to be neglected, but it was to be a reminder and a tutorial for the next generation concerning the work of the Lord on their behalf. The rite of the Passover is the longest continually observed such rite in the world today. It has carried Israel as a people for 3500 years.

And yet, it is an observance which they missed the significance of when it was fulfilled in Christ. As Matthew Henry says -

"The keeping of this solemnity every year was, 1. To look backward, that they might remember what great things God had done for them and their fathers. Old mercies, to ourselves, or to our fathers, must not be forgotten, that God may be praised, and our faith in him encouraged. 2. It was designed to look forward, as an earnest of the great sacrifice of the Lamb of God in the fulness of time. Christ our passover was sacrificed for us; his death was our life." Matthew Henry

For every Jew who comes to know the Lord, the observance takes on a new and wonderful dimension to them. And for every son of Christ in the church, we look to the cross and observe it as our true Passover. Redemption has come, Behold the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world!

When I see the blood, I will pass over you

When proof that the Lamb died is properly applied

Then My promise which is faithful and true

Will be kept, and in you I will be glorified

My child, redeemed of the Lord

You have faithfully adhered to My word

And so the consequences of sin are gone at long last

The time when death had its hold has now passed

You have moved from death unto new life

From the bars of iron and the chains of brass I have set you free

Between us is ended all enmity and strife

Through My Son, the Lamb, you are reconciled to Me

III. Recounting the Deeds of the Lord (verses 26-28)

26 And it shall be, when your children say to you, 'What do you mean by this service?'

The rituals of the Passover were both explicit and unusual. Every sense would be affected by its observance. The smell of the lamb, the taste of the bitter herbs, the sight of the set table, the sound of the cracking matsah bread, and the physical sensations associated with conducting the rite - into the night - would all be impressed upon every mind who participated.

Eventually, the children would get old enough to want to know why they were observing the rite - "Papa, what does it all mean?" It was the intent of the Lord that it would be held infrequently enough to not get caught up in the ordinary and yet frequently enough to allow Israel to be eager in anticipation of its return.

The memories of the previous year would be just fresh enough for the children to say, "We have done this some time before and now we're doing it again." It is comparable to our own observances throughout the year. We learn to eagerly anticipate them because they are not too frequent to get tired of, but not too distant that there is no hope of the day finally arriving.

And when the days arrive, we have stories to explain their origin and why we observe them. If we talk about them in secular holidays, such as the 4th of July, how much more should we talk about them on the more important, Christ-centered ones.

And with each observance, the details shouldn't be overlooked. If they are, then the true nature of the observance gets replaced with unhealthy traditions. Christmas has lost much of its meaning because we have failed to pay heed to what it originally meant.

To the Jews, the Passover never took on its proper significance because it became to them an observance of how the Lord loved them instead of how they should have loved the Lord. Only in the cross of Christ can the Passover take on its fullest meaning. Matthew Poole warns us about losing our religious heritage by not being wise in our spiritual observances -

"God expects this even from the Jewish children, and much more from Christian men, that they should inquire and understand what is said or done in the public worship or service of God, and therefore not to rest in dumb signs, whereof they neither inquire nor know the meaning, or in the service of God in a language which they understand not." Matthew Poole

In the years leading up to the reformation, rites were conducted in Latin and dumb signs had replaced directed love and devotion. The reformation brought the church back to Christ, but once again He is being lost to so many. He has become an idol of prosperity, licentiousness, and social reform to many instead of being our holy sacrifice and our means of purification from sin and impurity.

27 that you shall say, 'It is the Passover sacrifice of the Lord, zebakh pesakh hu l'Yehovah - "Sacrifice Passover, it to Yehovah." This is an emphatic statement and it is the most formal and precise description of it which has been given. But the question is, "What does "it" describe?" Is it speaking of the whole ritual or the animal of the ritual?

The answer must be the animal. The term "sacrifice" is what draws out the meaning. There are formalities associated with any sacrifice, but it is the sacrifice which defines the formalities, not the other way around.

The Passover sacrifice had its formalities; the sin-offering had its own as well. Each sacrifice was meant for a certain purpose and the formalities were given in conjunction with the sacrifice. A life will be taken as a substitute. When the proof of the death of the animal is presented, there will be a result which follows...

27 (con't) who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt when He struck the Egyptians and delivered our households.”

Every detail of the Passover rite has pictured the greater work of Christ. Not a detail has been given which fails to show forth what He did. Israel was to slaughter an animal and eat it after putting its blood on the doorposts and lintels. We have been instructed by the Lord to "...take and eat, this is My body" once we have applied the blood of the cross to our own lives.

Israel was passed over in mercy; Egypt was struck with a mortal blow. We are passed over in mercy; the world who rejects Christ will perish. The Passover animal stopped being sacrificed when the temple was destroyed. For 2000 years, the Jews have observed the Passover without it.

However, the ordinance of the Lord's Supper has been faithfully observed by true believers in a continuous manner for those same years. There have been no gaps in the true praises of God among His people. But they have come from different lips and different hearts during the wanderings of the Jews.

The final, ultimate Passover Lamb died so that we could continue to sing His praises for all eternity. Soon, our time here will be finished and Israel will come to know what they had missed. Salvation is of the Lord and the Lord is Jesus.

27 (con't) So the people bowed their heads and worshiped.

"The people" here at first seems to imply the elders who came before Moses. These people surely went back through and told the masses and the worshipping must have flourished in Goshen like flowers in the springtime. This is the first time that this sentiment has been seen since all the way back in Exodus 4:31 -

"Then Moses and Aaron went and gathered together all the elders of the children of Israel. 30 And Aaron spoke all the words which the Lord had spoken to Moses. Then he did the signs in the sight of the people. 31 So the people believed; and when they heard that the Lord had visited the children of Israel and that He had looked on their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshiped." Exodus 4:29-31

There was a time when they believed the word of the Lord and the message from Moses, but they fell away because of their hard bondage. Now, with the very hour of the deliverance at hand, they once again bow their heads and worship.

This act, among other things, surely signifies their agreement to the annual ordinance, thankfulness for their coming freedom, gratitude for the surety that they were God's people and that He had been faithful to His promises to them, and joy at the anticipation of all that the exodus implied. Are these also traits that each one of us stores in our own hearts as we come to the Lord's Table?

These things were fulfilled in an earthly sense for Israel and they are fulfilled in a greater, spiritual sense for us. Their redemption was for relief from pains of the body. Ours is for relief of the pains of the spirit.

Their redemption came about by a meal involving an earthly animal; ours comes in partaking in the body and blood of the heavenly Lord. Their redemption allowed them to go from bondage in Egypt to freedom in Canaan. Ours has brought us out from the bondage of sin and death and it guarantees eternal freedom in heaven.

In all ways, the Passover of Christ is superior to the Passover of Moses, a Passover which only looked forward to that of Christ. Therefore, let us be loyal to the One who directs us through His word, filled with thanks for the freedom we possess, grateful for the bond which exists between our Creator and us, and filled with joy at the anticipation of our heavenly calling and assured eternal walk in His presence.

28 Then the children of Israel went away and did so; just as the Lord had commanded Moses and Aaron, so they did.

The disbelief which permeated the people after their initial meeting with Moses has been replaced with absolute certainty in Him after seeing the nine great plagues which had by this time fallen on Egypt. The stubborn defiance by the officers of the Hebrews toward Moses is now replaced with gratitude and certainty.

The people who complained about their hardships are now reveling in the prospect of freedom. This is the Passover! This is the time of God's favor! Today is the day of salvation! The bondage has come to an end! This is the message that the Hebrews had received, and they were ready to follow up on that message with action.

They would slaughter the Passover, apply the blood, and await their release. And here we are today, finding out that the Passover of Israel is only a picture of a greater Passover for each of us. The Lamb that was slain is Jesus. The blood that was applied evidenced His death. And the judgment which rightly should have fallen on us was taken out on Him.

Only Jesus can take us out of spiritual Egypt and restore us to the presence of God. This is the message of the Bible and this is the word which has gone forth. If you have never received this gift of God's love and grace, be sure to do so today. Now is the time of God's favor! Today is the day of salvation! Let me tell you what you need to know in order to be saved from the wrath to come...

Closing Verse: "By faith he kept the Passover and the sprinkling of blood, lest he who destroyed the firstborn should touch them." Hebrews 11:28

This closing verse is from Hebrews 11, the great hall of fame of faith found in the Bible. God acknowledged Moses' faith because of the sprinkling of the blood. And He will do so in your life as well if you will but receive His Gift. Do it today! Receive Jesus Christ as your Lord and Savior.

Next Week: Exodus 12:29-36 (The Plague on the Firstborn) (35th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

What Do You Mean by this Service?

Then Moses called for all the elders

Of Israel and said to them

“Pick out and take lambs for yourselves
According to your families, and kill the Passover lamb
And you shall take a bunch of hyssop
The blood that is in the basin, you shall dip it in
And strike the lintel and the two doorposts
With the blood that is in the basin

And none of you shall out of the door go
Of his house until morning as I have instructed so
For the Lord will pass through to strike the Egyptians
And when the blood there He sees
On the lintel and on the two doorposts
The blood which His holy wrath does appease

The Lord will pass over the door as He said He would do
And not allow the destroyer to come into your houses to strike you
And you shall observe this thing, forgetting never
As an ordinance for you and your sons forever

It will come to pass when you come to the land
Which the Lord will give you
Just as He promised, please understand
That you shall keep this service, just as He has instructed to do

And it shall be, when your children say to you
"What do you mean by this service, tell me this?
That you shall say, "It is the Passover
To the Lord it is a sacrifice we are never to miss
He passed over the houses of the children of Israel
In Egypt when He struck the Egyptians, leaving many dead
And delivered our households as we today continue to tell
So the people worshipped as each bowed his head

Then the children of Israel did so after they went away
Just as the Lord had commanded Moses and Aaron
So they did on that day
The story of the Passover is a truth found in God's word
But it only is a picture for us to see so much more
It was meant to look forward to Jesus our great Lord
When His sacrifice once again opened heaven's door

Israel was brought out of bondage in Egypt the land
But we too have been brought out from sin's strong hold
By the work of Jesus, a deed mighty and grand
It is a story which will forevermore be told

How can we but praise You, our majestic King!
How can we but share the wondrous gospel story!

Forevermore the redeemed of the Lord will sing
Of our sweet Savior, clothed in light and splendid glory

Yes, we praise You now, O God, and even for all eternity
Our hearts long to see You Lord, in all of Your majesty

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 12:29-36 (THE PLAGUE ON THE FIRSTBORN)

For the second and last time in Exodus, the kneading bowls of the people will be mentioned. The first time was during the plague of frogs which filled the kneading bowls of the Egyptians. This time it will be contrasted with the kneading bowls of the Israelites which will be filled with dough and then wrapped in cloth to keep out contamination.

The only other time these kneading bowls are mentioned is in the book of Deuteronomy - once in Israel's expected blessings for obedience, and once in their expected curses for disobedience. A kneading bowl is something personal to the household. It is where the bread is made.

The bread is prepared and it is brought to the table. The table is where the meal is. And the meal is where life's most tender moments with family and friends often occur. We can think of our kitchen counter as today's kneading bowl. We keep it clean and we prepare our meals on it.

Nobody would consider eating food that was prepared on a counter filled with roaches or mold... well maybe roaches - no probably not. We take good care of where we prepare our meals because we want to stay healthy and because we want to eat food which tastes good and which doesn't have bugs in it.

When we go into a house which isn't clean in this way, we will find any excuse for not eating what is offered. But in considering this, do we make as much effort in our spiritual house? Is our spiritual bread prepared without contamination?

How carefully we tend to our physical food, but how carelessly we often tend to our spiritual food! Do we take time to read God's word? And if we do, do we simply read it in order to say we've read it, or do we savor it as a meal of the purest sort?

And in what other areas do we neglect to live in a spiritually pure manner? Do we eat the bread of immoral images? Do we consume greed or envy over possessions? Do we drink up bitterness by the mug full? What is it in our lives that we can correct for in our spiritual meal?

Adherence to the word carries great benefit. Failing to adhere to it carries great consequences. Israel as a nation found this out, and each individual will find it out as well. Some are blessed and realize it in this life. Others won't find out until it's too late. Let's be sure that our kneading bowls are filled with unleavened bread as we walk in this life we have been granted.

Text Verse: "Cursed shall be your basket and your kneading bowl." Deuteronomy 28:17

A cursed kneading bowl is a kneading bowl that is defiled and unsuitable for use. It could also be an empty kneading bowl that leaves one staring at it wondering when they will eat their next meal. Either way, it is useless to be used for what it was designed.

The kneading bowls of Pharaoh and Egypt were defiled, but they failed to pay heed. Now, eight plagues later, they will suffer the greatest plague for having not learned the lessons of the past. It will be such a terrible thing that they will urge Israel to leave.

Let us learn the lesson of the kneading bowl and keep ours clean and undefiled. Let us keep our lives holy and our doctrine pure. A little leaven leavens the whole lump. Let us partake only of the true Bread, the pure and unleavened Bread of Christ which is revealed in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Go, Serve the Lord as You have Said (verses 29 & 30)

29 And it came to pass at midnight

Nine plagues have come upon Egypt. Nine times they have been afflicted by the hand of the Lord. The land has been ruined and death has been seen. And with the distinction being made between the Egyptians and Israel, the plagues would have been all the more wondrous.

Several times, Pharaoh seemed ready to relent and release captive Israel, even speaking aloud that it would happen. But because of his stubborn heart, he always found a reason to back off from actually following through with his words.

His heart was hard and it only grew harder through the carefully timed wonders which the Lord sent into the land. Now, for several days there has been darkness in the land. The people would have been beside themselves as they sat in their houses, not being able to even tell if it was day or night.

Here at midnight on the 15th of the month of Aviv, the worst terror of all would come upon the people of Egypt. Being the 15th of the month, it would be a full moon, the most propitious time of all for the Exodus of Israel. They would have the moon to illuminate the land as they picked up their belongings and headed out of Egypt.

But for the Egyptians, midnight would make the plague all the more horrifying. The people would have slept, waking to hear the sounds of death consuming their loved ones. Their minds would have been dull and the darkness would only make the calamity more terrible. Would the death strike others? Might it even... even strike me?

And Pharaoh would have the overwhelming horror that he had been told in advance that the plague was coming. In their final meeting, Moses told him that midnight was the hour for it to occur. Whether he believed it possible or not then, he now realized the truth of the statement. Death had come at midnight.

29 (con't) that the Lord struck all the firstborn in the land of Egypt,

Unlike all of the other plagues which could possibly be seen as natural, this one cannot. The death of the firstborn only is unique and cannot be ascribed to anything except a targeted attack. There is a purposeful, willful intent behind the action. Nature does not act in such a way, ever.

No amount of speculation concerning what type of natural phenomena will ever adequately resolve what occurs here. Attempts to find them have only proven the one so speculating to be foolish. The attack will come against all people in all living conditions and even against the animals.

But more than that, those with the blood applied, even if in the exact same neighborhood, will be spared. The impossibility of this being a natural event is assured. Let us accept the narrative at face value and not attempt to undermine the magnificence of what occurred on that sacred midnight in the land of Egypt.

Be advised though that there are so-called scholars who would so attempt to weaken the account. The liberal scholars at Cambridge state as they often do that the text has been manipulated. Here are their words -

"This particular form of the tradition (Sage) evidently first arose partly through the influence of the Isr. spring-offering of the Passover, partly through that of the Isr. custom of dedicating the first-born, which together brought into the tradition the sparing of the houses and first-born of the Israelites, and transformed the Egyptians who perished in the plague into first-born." (Liberal and perverse "scholars" at) Cambridge

May they be judged appropriately for their lack of faith in the surety and truthfulness of God's holy and superior word!

And yet, as straight forward as these words appear, there is room for some argumentation. Concerning those targeted, they have been interpreted in a multitude of ways. Is this speaking of only the firstborn son, or the firstborn who opens the womb, regardless as to whether it was a male or a female?

Does it mean all the firstborn in a house? Because if so, it could mean the grandfather who was a firstborn of his mother, the father who was the firstborn of his mother, and so on. If it includes women, then it could include an aunt or a mother.

Some scholars say the word "firstborn," which is bekor implies a male only. Others disagree. Some even argue that the word, which can mean "chief" or "most" can be speaking in a superlative sense, such as the "most favored." Little agreement is found among those with such diverse opinions.

However, the narrative itself, as well as the pictures found throughout the Bible, gives us the proper answer. Exodus 1:16 details Pharaoh's words which said -

"When you do the duties of a midwife for the Hebrew women, and see them on the birthstools, if it is a son, then you shall kill him; but if it is a daughter, then she shall live." Exodus 1:16

A few verses later, in verse 22, Pharaoh gave another command -

"So Pharaoh commanded all his people, saying, 'Every son who is born you shall cast into the river, and every daughter you shall save alive.'" Exodus 1:22

Pharaoh had ordered the killing of Israel's sons and the Lord would now slay the firstborn sons of his land. And as a certainty of this, In Exodus 4:22, we read these words -

""Then you shall say to Pharaoh, "Thus says the Lord: 'Israel is My son, My firstborn. 23 So I say to you, let My son go that he may serve Me. But if you refuse to let him go, indeed I will kill your son, your firstborn.'" Exodus 4:22, 23

In these verses, the word ben or "son" is used in conjunction with bekor or "firstborn." This was targeted only at the males. Whether it means the males of all generations or only those of the youngest generation is not specified, but if Pharaoh himself were a firstborn, then it would mean only the youngest, because he didn't die. If not, then we can't know.

No matter what, because of their treatment of God's firstborn son, called the Israelites, they would now be so treated. As Jamieson-Faucett-Brown notes -

"They were made, in the justice of God, to feel something of what they had made His people feel." Jamieson-Faucett-Brown

29 (con't) from the firstborn of Pharaoh who sat on his throne

The highest seat in the land was not exempt from the punishment of the plague. And in fact, he was the most deserving of it, having sat in the royal seat, overseeing the unjust laws and crimes committed against the people of the Lord.

He had been given his warning before the first plague that this day would come and he refused to heed it. With each subsequent plague, the day of this judgment drew nearer, and yet he continued to stubbornly refuse to pay heed to the words he had heard and the marvels he had beheld.

29 (con't) to the firstborn of the captive who was in the dungeon,

Curiously, these words do not read the same as the warning given in Exodus 11. There it said -

...and all the firstborn in the land of Egypt shall die, from the firstborn of Pharaoh who sits on his throne, even to the firstborn of the female servant who is behind the handmill, and all the firstborn of the animals. Exodus 11:5

There is a possible reason for the change which can be answered by the fact that elsewhere in the Bible captives worked at a grinder while in prison. This is seen in Samson who was taken captive by the Philistines. In Judges 16, it says -

"Then the Philistines took him and put out his eyes, and brought him down to Gaza. They bound him with bronze fetters, and he became a grinder in the prison." Judges 16:21

However, this doesn't explain why the change was made, only a possible answer for it. And so I would suggest that this change is to point us to the work of Christ. In Exodus 11:5, it says -

"...the firstborn of the female servant who is behind the handmill."

Grammatically, this could be saying that the firstborn is behind the handmill or the female servant is behind the handmill. However, my friend Sergio notes that -

"Context wise, it continues a sentence where in the first part it uses the exact same language and reference: firstborn of Pharaoh who sits on his throne to firstborn of the maidservant who is behind the handmill."

He goes on to say that, "I understand that Pharaoh was the one who sits on the throne, not his firstborn. Only when Pharaoh dies, then his firstborn takes his throne."

In the exodus, we have to remember that the lamb was sacrificed in place of the firstborn. I don't think it would be stretching it to say that Christ died for all people and this is reflected in Him in the words of Exodus 11. He truly was the Firstborn behind the stone in His grave, represented by the millstones.

And yet at the same time He is the Firstborn of the female servant. Mary called herself "the maidservant of the Lord" in Luke 1, she being the mother of the Lord. Thus in the ambiguity of the wording - He fills both roles.

In Exodus 12, He was the "Firstborn of the captive in the dungeon" meaning the Firstborn of fallen man, and yet he was the "Firstborn in the dungeon" meaning the grave. The same word for "dungeon" here, ha'bowr, was used in Genesis where it was called "the pit." In those sermons, it was clearly a picture of Christ in His death.

Finally, the continuity in the ability to mean both things extends to the phrase "from the firstborn of Pharaoh who sat on his throne." In the Joseph sermons, Pharaoh which means "Great House," pictured God on His throne. And so the same ambiguity in the wording can be applied here also. It can read either "Pharaoh who sat on His throne," or "the firstborn who sat on His throne."

Jesus sat on the throne of heaven, but condescended to come to earth where He died as the Firstborn Son of God. This is seen in Colossians 1 -

"He is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn over all creation. 16 For by Him all things were created that are in heaven and that are on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions or principalities or powers. All things were created through Him and for Him. 17 And He is before all things, and in Him all things consist. 18 And He is the head of the body, the church, who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead, that in all things He may have the preeminence." Colossians 1:15-18

He is also the Firstborn who sat on His throne as is spoken of numerous times in the New Testament. One which fits this perfectly is found in Hebrews 1 -

"But to the Son He says:

Your throne, O God, is forever and ever;

A scepter of righteousness is the scepter of Your kingdom." Hebrews 1:8

I do believe this evaluation is correct. It is showing us that there has been an exchange made. The firstborn of God, the firstborn of the maidservant, and the firstborn of the captive are all picturing the Lord and His wondrous work for the people of the world.

Because of what He has done, we may now join Him as the firstborn registered in heaven, as the author of Hebrews tells us -

"But you have come to Mount Zion and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, to an innumerable company of angels, 23 to the general assembly and church of the firstborn who are registered in heaven, to God the Judge of all, to the spirits of just men made perfect..." Hebrews 12:22, 23

God did not cause the people of the world to suffer unjustly. And there is nothing that has happened to us that He was not willing to endure Himself.

29 (con't) and all the firstborn of livestock.

The word here should be translated as YLT states it, "and every first-born of beasts." This word is behemah, which means any beast, whether livestock, a family dog or cat, the camel at the hitching post, or any other beast in the land. There is a reason for this particular judgment.

Due to Egypt's animal worship, the Lord was showing that all animals were under His authority, even those which had not yet been named in any judgment. If they had made an idol of Rover, he would now be shown as a false god. If they had made an idol of Fifi the cat, it would now be proven false as well. The Lord created, and the Lord has judged.

30 So Pharaoh rose in the night, he, all his servants, and all the Egyptians;

Whether it was the sounds of death which awakened the living, or whether it was the sounds of the living who knew of the death which awakened all others, everyone in Egypt was aroused from their sleep because of what had transpired.

Only the deaf would lay in a peaceful slumber unless they too were awakened to mourn their own dead. Egypt had been crushed before, but never had it received such a punishing blow which reached to the very heart of all people...

30 (con't) and there was a great cry in Egypt,

Pharaoh was warned of exactly this in Chapter 11 -

"Then there shall be a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as was not like it before, nor shall be like it again." Exodus 11:6

Ancient travelers of past ages have recorded the habits of the Egyptians when death came near to them. Compiling several scholars' notes on this, Adam Clarke gives the following summary for us to consider -

"No people in the universe were more remarkable for their mournings than the Egyptians, especially in matters of religion; they whipped, beat, tore themselves, and howled in all the excess of grief. When a relative died, the people left the house, ran into the streets, and howled in the most lamentable and frantic manner." Adam Clarke

With a culture known for such outlandish mourning over the dead, the term tseaqah gedolah, or "great cry" probably should be considered an understatement. Words would fail to describe the sounds emanating in the darkness of night in the land of Egypt.

30 (con't) for there was not a house where there was not one dead.

If, as I suggested earlier, only the firstborn son of the house was destroyed, then these words might be taken as hyperbole. Not every house would have a firstborn son, but every house with one would suffer the plague and have dead among them.

But even in houses without a firstborn son, there still could have been firstborn animals. If someone had a favorite monkey that they idolized, or a precious puppy that they loved, they too would have been afflicted by the plague, even if it were less painful than a human child.

And considering that everyone would know a house with a firstborn son, then everyone would have been personally touched by what occurred. The plague would have afflicted every person in the land and the mourning sounds would have been beyond our ability to put into words.

In one final mighty blow upon man and beast
The Lord came through Egypt the land
From the greatest even to the least
No family was exempt from His punishing hand

Except those who had applied the blood
The precious blood of a lamb, innocent and pure
For those there was safety from the deathly flood
Behind the doors, they were safe and secure

Judgment has been rendered upon Egypt's sin
Upon Pharaoh and all his subjects in the land
Their rebellions had finally done them in
No family was exempt from the Lord's punishing hand

II. Be Gone! (verses 31 & 32)

31 Then he called for Moses and Aaron by night,

There is again argument and dissension among scholars what these words mean. Did Pharaoh call for Moses and Aaron to come before him? If so, then it would seem to violate what was said in Chapter 10 -

"Then Pharaoh said to him, 'Get away from me! Take heed to yourself and see my face no more! For in the day you see my face you shall die!'

29 So Moses said, 'You have spoken well. I will never see your face again.'" Exodus 10:28, 29

However, scholars attempt to argue that because of the urgency of the situation, he called for them to appear before him again. However, Chapter 11 answers this and shows that to not be the case. Moses, knowing in advance what would occur said these parting words to Pharaoh -

"And all these your servants shall come down to me and bow down to me, saying, 'Get out, and all the people who follow you!'" Exodus 11:8

Speculation is unnecessary. Pharaoh sent his messengers while he mourned over his dead. He was unwilling to personally go and beg for them to leave.

31 (con't) and said, "Rise, go out from among my people, both you and the children of Israel.

Exactly as Moses had said would come about, Pharaoh now fulfills, imploring not only Moses and Aaron, but all of the people of Israel to leave. And he gives the reason for the order, finally realizing what he ignored throughout the entire period of the plagues...

31 (con't) And go, serve the Lord as you have said.

This was the original request made in the first meeting between these three back in Chapter 4, "...let my son go that he may serve Me. But if you refuse to let him go, indeed I will kill your son, your firstborn." All of the pains, all of the destruction, all of the death and misery could have been avoided if Pharaoh had simply allowed Israel to go.

But when one doesn't know the true God he is just another of many gods, or he may even be considered a false-god or no-god at all. Unfortunately, when we don't recognize the Creator, we cannot anticipate what He is capable of. Israel forgot their Lord and they were all but destroyed, twice.

The world has, like Egypt in these verses, all but forgotten the Lord, and the plagues of Egypt will come on a global scale. When it is all said and done, there will be little left. And all of this is because of a failure to serve the Lord, just as He has requested since the beginning of time.

32 Also take your flocks and your herds, as you have said, and be gone;

Not only were they granted leave, but they have been granted absolute leave. Everything they possessed was to go with them, exactly as the Lord said in Exodus 11 -

"I will bring one more plague on Pharaoh and on Egypt. Afterward he will let you go from here. When he lets you go, he will surely drive you out of here altogether." Exodus 11:1

Not only is the word from Pharaoh a grant to go serve the Lord, it is a petition begging them to go, even directing them to go. His thoughts were so overwhelmed with the events of the past months and of what occurred that night, that he could only long for them to be gone. But in their going, he looked for release from any further plagues by speaking the continuing words of verse 32...

32 (con't) and bless me also."

u'berekhtem gam oti, "and bless me also." The words are plural, "you (plural) bless me also. Imagine the emotion of the man which would cause him to utter these words to his great foes. The last time they stood face to face, Pharaoh threatened their lives if they ever came before him again.

And yet now, the broken man can only beg for a blessing. No other words could so exactly show forth his complete submission to the Lord. In Genesis 47:7, the first thing that Jacob, who is Israel, did when coming into the presence of Pharaoh was to bless him. In Genesis 47:10, the last thing he did before leaving Pharaoh's presence was to again bless him.

Now 215 years later, the last thing that is requested by Pharaoh of Israel's representatives, is a blessing. It is a nice touch tying the two stories together in a unique way. Jacob voluntarily blessed Pharaoh in the past. Pharaoh now begs for more.

"Bless me also!" cried the people who wouldn't repent

"Bless me also!" cried those who persecuted the people of the Lord

"Bless me also!" they cried when the plague was sent

"I know now I should have paid heed to His word

"Bless me also!" cried the arrogant leader of the land

"Bless me also!" he cried after leading in wickedness

"Save me from any further punishment from God's hand

No more curses please! Instead I implore you to bless

How can we ignore the Lord every single day?

How can we ignore Him year after year?

And then ask Him to bless us when things don't go our way

We humans are incurably dull I do fear

III. The Plundering of the Egyptians (verses 33-36)

33 And the Egyptians urged the people, that they might send them out of the land in haste.

The word for "urged" here is khazaq. This same word has been used nine times already in Exodus in relation to Pharaoh. Eight of them were concerning the hardening of his heart. One was concerning his continued holding of them instead of letting them go. Now it is used concerning the Egyptians urging Israel to go.

The irony in the use of this word now is amazing. The same word which has been used concerning their continued bondage in Egypt is now being turned around as an urgent appeal to get them to leave... immediately. And the reason for the urgency of their request is in the continued words of the verse...

33 (con't) For they said, "We shall all be dead."

kulanu metim - "We.all.dead." Their alarm at what had transpired was so great that they were certain their own death was at hand. As Benson notes -

"When death comes into our houses it is seasonable for us to think of our own mortality." Benson

Having helped out in the mortuary in Japan while in the service, I can testify that this is true. When you're around the dead in an enclosed space, you will inevitably think of your own mortal state. In the case of the Egyptians, they could only think that the death would transfer to them as well.

It was as if a sentence of death hung over their heads, calling to them because of the presence of the Israelites. They wanted Israel gone so that the sentence would be commuted.

34 So the people took their dough before it was leavened,

Because of the urgency of the moment, the dough that had been prepared for the exodus was not leavened when they left. There is no contradiction in this and in the instructions found in the earlier verses of this chapter. There it said -

"So this day shall be to you a memorial; and you shall keep it as a feast to the Lord throughout your generations. You shall keep it as a feast by an everlasting ordinance. 15 Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread. On the first day you shall remove leaven from your houses. For whoever eats leavened bread from the first day until the seventh day, that person shall be cut off from Israel." Exodus 12:14-15

Those verses I just read were in anticipation of the exodus and were to be a memorial. There is no reason to think that the general populace knew of these instructions. They simply made bread day by day and added the yeast in before they baked it.

In the case of the Israelites on this night, they waited to leave, but had no idea that they would nearly be forced out in a moment. The Lord knew what they didn't and anticipated the annual ritual in advance of the actual circumstances which precipitated it.

The dough or batseq comes from the verb batseq which means to swell. It implies that dough swells through fermentation, but in the case of this dough, it was not yet leavened and would not swell.

34 (con't) having their kneading bowls bound up in their clothes on their shoulders.

As I said earlier, this is the second of only four times that the mishereth, or kneading trough, is mentioned in the Bible. The first was during the plague of frogs where it said that the frogs went into the kneading troughs of the Egyptians. They were small elongated wood or wicker troughs where dough was made.

They were lightweight and could be easily carried as described here. Wrapping them, or anything else like this, was a common way of carrying things. In parts of the world, it still is. This is what Ruth did when she left Boaz on the night of their meeting at the threshing floor.

She used her shawl as a way of carrying the barley that he gave her to take home. When I lived in Japan, my wife did this for me every day with my lunch. She'd wrap it in a large piece of cloth, usually one of my bandanas, and I'd carry it to work. Even thirty years later, my friends that I served with still bring that up from time to time.

If I were to look for a reason for the inclusion of this verse, which on its surface seems unnecessary to the account, it would be that it is a picture of Christ. The lamb died in place of the firstborn. In Christ, He died in place of the sinner.

He is sinless, just as the dough was unleavened. Sin results in death, leaven results in corruption. He, being the sinless Bread of life, is carried by the Lord's people in their Exodus from the world of sin. Like Israel who carried heavy burdens for the Egyptians, we carried a heavy burden in spiritual Egypt, but we carry a light one in Christ. He referred to this in Matthew -

"Come to Me, all you who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. 29 Take My yoke upon you and learn from Me, for I am gentle and lowly in heart, and you will find rest for your souls. 30 For My yoke is easy and My burden is light." Matthew 11:28-30

35 Now the children of Israel had done according to the word of Moses, and they had asked from the Egyptians articles of silver, articles of gold, and clothing.

As was seen before in reference to this, the King James Version blindly followed after the Geneva Bible and used the term "borrowed" instead of "asked." It is the most unfortunate of translations which has led to all kinds of scandalous remarks concerning the Lord and the Lord's people.

If they "borrowed" and didn't intend to return, then they stole. Such is the nature of a mistranslation. It has led to many accusations being levied against the soundness of the account. The people asked and the Egyptians gave.

The word for "articles" here can mean a whole host of things from weapons to utensils and from cups to plates. Articles of silver and gold and also garments are requested, not to enrich the Israelites, but for what they will do with them in the wilderness.

They are heading out and will soon develop an organized mode of worship which will continue on until the coming of Christ. These articles will be used in the building of the tabernacle, every detail of which pictures Jesus. God is plundering the Egyptians in order to form this worship for His people.

Likewise, in Christ, God took from humanity in order to build His greater and eternal Temple. He did it in that Christ came from the stream of humanity to be the true Ark of that temple. And He has done it from His people who have become living stones in His temple. Every detail is given to show us hints of the glory to come in Christ.

36 And the Lord had given the people favor in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they granted them what they requested.

All of Egypt would have been aware of the plight of the Israelites and they would have known that the Lord had judged Egypt because of them. They would look on Israel with fear, yes. But they would also look on them with a sense of realizing the wrongs that had been committed against them. As Matthew Henry says -

"Thus the Lord took care that their hard-earned wages should be paid, and the people provided for their journey." Henry

Today, people continue to send money to Jewish causes and for the return of those who want to make the move back to the land of Israel. They do it because they perceive the injustices that have been committed against them in the past.

If each person in Egypt were given a single gold ring, a single silver cup, and a one nice garment, it would come out to an immense amount considering the number which is recorded as departing. If one person decides they will no longer go to Starbucks or Disney World because they don't want to support the gay agenda, it may only mean $100 a year in lost revenue.

But if all Christians were united in this effort, it would deprive them of hundreds of millions of dollars a year, maybe more. Such is the nature of accumulated wealth. When the tabernacle is to be built, Moses will ask the people for donations for the effort. However, after a while this will be seen -

"Then all the craftsmen who were doing all the work of the sanctuary came, each from the work he was doing, 5 and they spoke to Moses, saying, 'The people bring much more than enough for the service of the work which the Lord commanded us to do.'

6 So Moses gave a commandment, and they caused it to be proclaimed throughout the camp, saying, 'Let neither man nor woman do any more work for the offering of the sanctuary.' And the people were restrained from bringing, 7 for the material they had was sufficient for all the work to be done—indeed too much." Exodus 36:4-7

In the end, the extraordinary amount carried out collectively was individually a moderate repayment for many hard years of service, and a just recompense for harsh injustices against them.

36 (con't) Thus they plundered the Egyptians.

Each individual Egyptian was glad to have helped in a small way, but the Egyptian economy as a whole was severely harmed in a big way. It is like the common adage, "I went broke saving money" when buying many items that were on sale. Egypt was plundered one small donation at a time.

The Pulpit Commentary provides us with a graphic explanation of the sight of Israel ready to depart -

"The result was that the Israelites went forth, not as slaves, but as conquerors, decked with the jewels of the Egyptians, as though they had conquered and despoiled them." Pulpit

Everything about this final plague on Egypt speaks of the work of Christ. In the greatest sense, God judged the world's sin through His own Firstborn. There is a price for redeeming. In Egypt, it was with the firstborn of the people of the land, or with an innocent lamb.

In the world we live in, it can only be from the Firstborn of God, who also is the Lamb of God. Every picture of the past goes both ways, and both ways point to Christ. It is all about Him. Imagine that... we have been purchased by the very Creator of all things through the most precious life, that of Jesus.

How can we turn away from so great a salvation? How could we escape God's wrath if we did? Nothing but the blood... nothing but the blood of Jesus Christ can wash away our sin. If you have never called out to Him for healing and restoration, please do so today. Let me tell you how you can...

Closing Verse: "Blessed shall be your basket and your kneading bowl."
Deuteronomy 28:5

Next Week: Exodus 12:37-51 (The Exodus) (36th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Plague of the Firstborn

And it came to pass at midnight
That the Lord struck all the firstborn
In the land of Egypt, showing His might
And how the land did mourn!

From the firstborn of Pharaoh
Who sat upon his throne
To the firstborn of the captive who was in the dungeon
And all the firstborn of livestock, man and beast did moan

So Pharaoh rose in the night from his spot
He, all his servants, and all the people of Egypt
And there was a great cry in Egypt, for there was not A house where the life of one wasn't stripped

Then he called for Moses and Aaron by night
And said, "Rise, and out from among my people go
Both you and the children of Israel
And go, serve the Lord as you have said, yes even so

Also take your flocks and your herds, as you have said
And be gone; and bless me also, now that my son is dead

And the Egyptians urged the people
That they might send them out of the land in haste
For they said, "We shall all be dead."
Hurry! There is no time to waste

So the people took their dough
Before to it they could leaven impose
Having their kneading bowls as we know
Bound up on their shoulders, in their clothes

Now the children of Israel had done as tasked
According to the word of Moses, he did tell
And they from the Egyptians had asked
Articles of silver, articles of gold, and clothing as well

And the Lord had given the people favor
In the sight of the people of Egypt
So that they granted them what they requested
Thus they plundered the Egyptians; their wealth was stripped

With this final plague, Israel is ready to leave
After many years of hard bondage the time is spent
And while the people of Egypt moan and grieve

Israel will take part in the great exodus event

And each of us who has called upon the Lord
Has likewise been brought out from hard bondage too
When we heard the message of Jesus, the spoken word
He revived our spirit; in Him we have been created anew

Wonderful stories of times gone by
And yet they are relevant to the lives of each one of us
And so with our voices to Him let us shout aloud and cry
All hail the glorious name, the exalted name of Jesus!

Thank You for the new life You have granted to us
Thank You O God, for our Lord, our Savior, our precious Jesus

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 12:37-51 (THE EXODUS)

Today we finally come to Israel's wonderful moment of release. For generations they had been afflicted and burdened by Egypt. And for the final year or so, they had seen Egypt suffer great punishment from the Lord in order to weaken their resolve, and also to magnify the Lord in the eyes of the people.

The Passover has come and gone, the firstborn of the Egyptians have died, and now the time to depart has come. A week before typing this sermon, my wife found a ceramic plate that my grandmother made depicting the time of the Passover and the exodus out of the land.

We already have many of her works of biblical art here at the Superior Word, but now we have one more, lost for many years, and yet found just in time to be put on display in His church and among His people during these exodus sermons. In the depiction is Moses carrying his staff in one hand and a lamb in another.

There he stood with a precious lamb that would be the means of their redemption, picturing the true Lamb who redeemed Israel and who continues to redeem His people 3500 years later. Hallelujah to this precious Lamb of God, our Lord Jesus! Through Him, we have been united to the commonwealth of Israel.

Text Verse: "Now, therefore, you are no longer strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God, 20 having been built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief cornerstone, 21 in whom the whole building, being fitted together, grows into a holy temple in the Lord, 22 in whom you also are being built together for a dwelling place of God in the Spirit." Ephesians 2:19-22

Our sermon today will be a tad bit longer than most, but just a tad. Everyone will be home in time for dinner tonight. But I hope you will truly enjoy some of the wonderful insights which are given to us in these precious words. And, you can't search out the word unless you open it and read it. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. From Rameses to Succoth (verses 37-39)

37 Then the children of Israel journeyed from Rameses

Verses 37-42 in our look into the exodus today are so filled with connections to other portions of the Bible, that to fully plumb the depths of what is involved in them would take many long hours and yet we'd still miss much.

This first portion of verse 37 is given to us to show the literal locations of the Exodus until the first stopping point, but the names have been selected by God to show us something more, something future. The entire scope of the plagues on Egypt was given to show us what really occurred in history, but it was also given to show us parallels and pictures of Israel's salvation in the end times.

Now, instead of the name "Goshen" being used, it says the children of Israel journeyed from Rameses. Why would the Lord interchange these names as he has in both Genesis and Exodus unless He is trying to show us a picture of something else?

Goshen means "drawing near" or "approaching." That name is no longer used because it no longer applies. The time is not approaching, it has arrived. Israel is delivered and so Rameses is used. The name Rameses means "son of the sun" or "child of the sun." In Psalm 84, the Lord is represented by the sun -

"For the Lord God is a sun and shield;
The Lord will give grace and glory;
No good thing will He withhold
From those who walk uprightly." Psalm 84:11

In Malachi 4, Jesus is called the Sun of Righteousness and that passage is one which appears to telescope between His first and Second Advent. Listen to how these verses mirror what occurred during the plagues on Egypt and now their freedom from it -

"For behold, the day is coming,
Burning like an oven,
And all the proud, yes, all who do wickedly will be stubble.
And the day which is coming shall burn them up,"
Says the Lord of hosts,
"That will leave them neither root nor branch.
2 But to you who fear My name
The Sun of Righteousness shall arise
With healing in His wings;
And you shall go out
And grow fat like stall-fed calves.
3 You shall trample the wicked,
For they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet
On the day that I do this,"
Says the Lord of hosts. Malachi 4:1-3

Rameses, rather than the name Goshen, is used here because it is speaking of the state of those who have come near to salvation, to those who are now saved. In the end times, God cares for Israel during the tribulation right through until their final reunion with Christ. Israel is the son of the Sun, Jesus.

This is evidenced by the Lord's declaration of Exodus 4:22 where he called Israel His "firstborn son." They were called this when Moses, picturing Christ the Redeemer, was told to speak to Pharaoh, the afflicter of Israel. What is being seen here is perfectly detailed, not just of actual events of the past, but of actual events in Israel's future.

The name Rameses is used here to show us that Israel is the son of the Sun, exactly as the Bible has described them both. Israel the s-o-n of Jesus the S-u-n. The changing of the name from Goshen to Rameses is exacting and purposeful. It is given to help us weave together these amazing patterns of redemptive history.

37 (con't) to Succoth,

The name Succoth means "tabernacles." In the life of Jacob, after meeting his brother Esau, he traveled to a place with the same name, Succoth, and he stayed there. That was a picture of the sixth dispensation in redemptive history, the age of the gentile church; the age of grace. It pictured God dwelling, or tabernacling, in man.

The mentioning of Israel traveling from Rameses to Succoth is given for the exact same reason. The Israelites have just observed the Passover, having applied the blood of the lamb and been saved from the plague. These people now, and the places they travel to, picture those who have been brought out of the tribulation period.

They are those who have been saved by the blood of the Lamb and are brought out of spiritual Egypt. The Holy Spirit now dwells in them, just as He did for those in the church age. The pictures are exact when compared to the book of Revelation and the names here are given to show us this. This is alluded to in Psalm 105 -

"He also brought them out with silver and gold,
And there was none feeble among His tribes.
38 Egypt was glad when they departed,
For the fear of them had fallen upon them.
39 He spread a cloud for a covering,
And fire to give light in the night." Psalm 105:37-39

The cloud and the fire picture the presence of the Holy Spirit among God's people. It is where the Lord has "spread His cloud of fire over them for a covering."
(Poole)

37 (con't) about six hundred thousand men on foot, besides children.

The numbers here are a general counting, rounded down to the nearest 100,000. This same general number is given by Moses again in Numbers 11:21 when speaking to the Lord. But in Numbers 1, an exact counting of the people is made, there it says -

"So all who were numbered of the children of Israel, by their fathers' houses, from twenty years old and above, all who were able to go to war in Israel— 46 all who were numbered were six hundred and three thousand five hundred and fifty." Numbers 1:45, 46

This number includes those 20 and above who could go to war. However, this didn't include the Levites of this age. They were counted later in Numbers 4 and were 8580 between 30 and 50 years of age. And so the total number of men of fighting age was about 613,000.

These numbers didn't include the children, the older people, or the women. In all, many scholars generally reckon them at about 2,000,000 people. Interestingly, there are about 6 million Jews in the land of Israel right now and the Bible shows us what will happen to them in the book of Zechariah -

And it shall come to pass in all the land,"
Says the Lord,
"That two-thirds in it shall be cut off and die,
But one-third shall be left in it:
9 I will bring the one-third through the fire,
Will refine them as silver is refined,
And test them as gold is tested.
They will call on My name,
And I will answer them.
I will say, 'This is My people';
And each one will say, 'The Lord is my God.'" Zechariah 13:8-9

The approximate number of Jews who departed at the exodus is essentially the same number who will make it through the tribulation period if it is in the near future as I suspect it will be. God is repeating the numbers of history, just as He is repeating the symbolism of names and places.

The numbers here are in no way unimaginable when compared to the arrival of Jacob which is recorded in Genesis 46 and Exodus 1. In those genealogies, 70 people are named. However, during those sermons, it was noted there were hosts of servants who would have arrived in Egypt with them.

Over the years in Egypt, they would have been assimilated into the group known as Israel, just as was seen in the life of Jacob upon his return to Canaan from Padan Aram with two companies. The faith of Israel constituted the nationality, just as the nationality constituted the faith.

There is abundant precedent for this, both in the Bible and in extra-biblical recorded history. The numbers in growth are not only acceptable, they are exacting. God has recorded them not as hyperbole, but as a fact of history.

Having said this, many liberal scholars do their best to dismiss the biblical record, stating that this exodus account is a dishonest fabrication. Here are what the dolts... I mean the scholars, at Cambridge say -

"The figures do not come to us from eye-witnesses; and tradition, in the course of years, greatly exaggerated the numbers of the Israelites at the Exodus." Dolts at Cambridge

If your commentary reflects this general sentiment, put a big fat red X through it. The numbers are both possible and reliable.

38 A mixed multitude went up with them also,

This is a continued fulfillment of the promise made to Abraham all the way back in Genesis 12:3 -

"I will bless those who bless you,
And I will curse him who curses you;
And in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed." Genesis 12:3

This "mixed multitude" comprises anyone who is not of the stock of Israel. They may have been Egyptians or people of other ethnicities who lived in Egypt, serving Egypt just as the Hebrews did. They saw the opportunity to join with Israel and to follow the God of Israel and they took it.

There are a few possibilities as to their numbers. The first is that they are included in the number of the Israelites in the census I mentioned earlier. This would make sense because Moses will later say that the number of capable males under him is the same as we see in this chapter.

The second option is that they are simply an innumerable number that came along and are not included in the census of Israel. At least in picture of future events, this is a more appropriate fit.

The third option is that they are mentioned separately to picture a separate number, but they are actually counted in the total during the census. Thus, the reality of the numbers is correct for all, but the picture of who they represent is maintained. Whichever is correct, they are mentioned as they are for a reason. But before I give that reason, I want to read you Numbers 11:4 -

"Now the mixed multitude who were among them yielded to intense craving; so the children of Israel also wept again and said: "Who will give us meat to eat?" Numbers 11:4

Scholars almost unanimously agree that this group mentioned in Numbers 11:4 is the same group as mentioned here in Exodus. They call them names, say the set a bad example for Israel, and give other generally negative views on them. And these scholars are completely wrong.

The word used to describe the people here in Exodus is erev. It means, literally, a mixture. It is the same term used in Nehemiah 13:3 to indicate foreigners. The word in Numbers 11 to describe those miscreants is asaphsaph. It means "rabble" and comes from the word asoph which means "storehouse."

From that we get the idea of a collection of like-minded things. There is no reason to assume this "rabble" was the mixed multitude we see here. Instead, it is identified as containing a group of like-minded people who were whiners, regardless of who they were - whether of Israel or of foreigners.

In picture, this mixed multitude is mentioned now for a specific reason. They are those people who will join Israel during the tribulation period, from all people groups around the world who will enter into the millennial reign of Christ. They are mentioned in Revelation 7 and then again in Revelation 19 -

"After these things I looked, and behold, a great multitude which no one could number, of all nations, tribes, peoples, and tongues, standing before the throne and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, with palm branches in their hands, 10 and crying out with a loud voice, saying, 'Salvation belongs to our God who sits on the throne, and to the Lamb!'"
Revelation 7:9, 10

The same mixture of people is spoken of in the book of Zechariah -

"Thus says the Lord of hosts: 'In those days ten men from every language of the nations shall grasp the sleeve of a Jewish man, saying, "Let us go with you, for we have heard that God is with you."'" Zechariah 8:23

Their mention here in Exodus in this vague way, and their mentioned as simply a "great multitude" in Revelation, is given to show us that in the tribulation period many will come to a saving knowledge of the Lord by joining with the people of the Lord, Israel. The picture is exact.

38 (con't) and flocks and herds—a great deal of livestock.

Along with the people, all of the flocks and the herds of the people departed with Israel. It was these animals which Pharaoh refused to let go of and which resulted in the ninth plague, darkness. But after the final plague, Pharaoh simply exhorted the people to go and so they did, with all of their possessions, including the millions of animals they possessed and which he failed to confiscate.

Flocks and herds in the Bible are mentioned a multitude of times to reflect people groups. These animals are probably given here as a picture of the nations who will be gathered together after the tribulation for judgment - the sheep and goat nations who are mentioned in Matthew 25.

39 And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough which they had brought out of Egypt;

Two different words are used to describe the bread here. The first is matsot, which is unleavened bread. The second is ugot, which is the cake itself. The International Standard Version does an excellent job of translating these words -

"They baked the dough that they brought out of Egypt into thin cakes of unleavened bread." (ISV)

In the Middle East, it is common for the people to make bread by simply mixing flour with water and then cooking it. If no oven is available, they will put the cakes into ashes of a wood fire and cover it over with embers for a little while.

39 (con't) for it was not leavened, because they were driven out of Egypt and could not wait, nor had they prepared provisions for themselves.

The bread had been prepared in advance as it often was, but when the call went out to depart, they simply picked up and left, joining the ranks of the people in the great exodus. The bread was left unleavened and it was carried in the kneading troughs covered by a garment to keep it pure.

The Bible's specificity in this verse concerns the picture it is making - that of the Feast of Unleavened Bread. In the church age, Paul calls us just that, unleavened -

"Therefore purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new lump, since you truly are unleavened. For indeed Christ, our Passover, was sacrificed for us." 1 Corinthians 5:7

This same picture now extends to those who went through the tribulation period and came out of it through their faith in Christ. Thus, they have become a part of the true Passover and are also a new lump, truly unleavened. Again, the symbolism is exact. That which has been will be again.

History continues to repeat itself, in the exodus, in the church, and in the tribulation saints. It is showing us that God is consistent and His means of salvation, by grace through faith, is a unified concept which transcends all ages and dispensations.

Israel departed from Rameses to Succoth

Finally free from the bondage of Egypt

This first leg of the journey is worthy of note

Because the power of Pharaoh from them is stripped

Out from Egypt in the darkness of the night

And yet a full moon to help guide their way

Out from Egypt by the moon's soft light

Continuing their walk throughout the next day

At Succoth, unleavened bread they did eat

The people having been purified, acceptable to the Lord

There at Succoth they enjoyed freedom so sweet

Just as was promised, so He kept His word

II. Precisely Timed (verses 40-42)

40 Now the sojourn of the children of Israel who lived in Egypt was four hundred and thirty years.

This is surely one of the most mistranslated and most misunderstood verses in the entire Bible. Listen to the following two translations and see how they differ -

"Now the length of time the Israelite people lived in Egypt was 430 years." (NIV)

"Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years." (KJV)

If the translation says unambiguously that they dwelt in Egypt for 430 years as the NIV does, the translation is wrong. The KJV uniquely offsets the words "who dwelt in Egypt" and so it can mean something entirely different. The reason why this is important is that they did not dwell in Egypt 430 years.

The facts revealed in the Bible show that they actually dwelt in Egypt 215 years. At least the NIV and some other translations footnote that other manuscripts say they dwelt in "Canaan and Egypt" instead of just "Egypt." And this is the correct rendering. It should say "Canaan and Egypt."

The reason why these words were changed for the Masoretic text may be sinister - to hide a 215 year period in order to obfuscate the truth that Jesus is the Christ. By hiding these years, the Jews have hid from the eyes of their people who He truly is. The 430 years goes from the time of Abraham until the Exodus.

An argument against this is that the "sons of Israel" didn't exist at Abraham's time and therefore the words cannot mean from him until the exodus. But this is the Bible's way of using an all-inclusive term for the people of Israel who lived in him even before they were born. These are our difficulties, not the Bible's.

Following the timeline as we did through Genesis; following the promise made to Abraham; following the patterns laid down in the Bible; and following the words of the New Testament from the hand of Paul all lead to the understanding that it was 430 years from the Lord's promise to Abraham until the Exodus.

Referring to the promise made to Abraham in Genesis 12:3, Paul in Galatians 3 says -

"Now to Abraham and his Seed were the promises made. He does not say, 'And to seeds,' as of many, but as of one, 'And to your Seed,' who is Christ.

17 And this I say, that the law, which was four hundred and thirty years later, cannot annul the covenant that was confirmed before by God in Christ, that it should make the promise of no effect. 18 For if the inheritance is of the law, it is no longer of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise."

That promise was made to him when he was 75, in the year 2084AM. That was 430 years after the Flood of Noah. Paul tells us that another 430 years after that, the law was received at Mount Sinai, which is just 50 days from the exodus.

In the life of Jacob, he traveled with his family to be with Joseph in Egypt exactly 215 years after the promise to Abraham in the year 2299AM. The people of Israel then spent another 215 years in Egypt and are now departing in the year 2514AM.

God has laid history out in the pages of the Bible with absolute perfection, allowing us to feel perfectly secure that we have placed our eggs in the right basket.

41 And it came to pass at the end of the four hundred and thirty years—on that very same day—

There is no reason to assume that the term "on that very same day" isn't speaking of an exact day, meaning that the promise made to Abraham came about on the same day as the Exodus, 430 years earlier. If so, as it seems to imply, then that promise was made to him exactly 154,800 days earlier.

Such precision is found elsewhere in the Bible and so there is no reason to assume that it means anything other than this. The same day that Abraham was given his great promise 430 years earlier, is the same day that Israel was freed, as we see in the continuation of verse 41...

41 (con't) it came to pass that all the armies of the Lord went out from the land of Egypt.

The word here for "armies" is tsaba. It is often translated as "hosts," as in armies united for warfare. This is the third time it is used to describe the people of Israel as a united force under the Lord. The people are, in this sense, being portrayed as those who will fight the Lord's battles.

If one thinks of the Lord as their Head, then it takes on the picture of a great warrior leading His armies as they go. It is not in defeat or fear, but in honor and bravery that they are now leaving the land of Egypt. The picture for the church should be no less wonderful.

The Passover had just taken place, picturing Christ's death on the cross. In that act, Christ has led His people out of the bondage of slavery, not in defeat or fear, but in a spirit of freedom and honor. Paul alludes to this in Romans 8 -

"For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are sons of God. 15 For you did not receive the spirit of bondage again to fear, but you received the Spirit of adoption by whom we cry out, 'Abba, Father.'" Romans 8:14, 15

Every time that a person receives the gospel message and trusts Christ, they participate in the same freedom that all others have who have been redeemed by the Lord. We have been brought from bondage into son-ship. We go from being enemies of God to being united with Him as one of His innumerable hosts.

42 It is a night of solemn observance to the Lord for bringing them out of the land of Egypt.

The words "night of solemn observance" in Hebrew are lel shimmurim. This word shimmur is used only twice in the Bible, both in this verse, and it is in the plural, as in a "night of watchings" or in "much observance."

These observances are said to be "to the Lord." And the reason is explicitly given as "for bringing them out of the land of Egypt." If we can equate these words to a New Testament passage, I would say that Colossians 1 fits this perfectly -

"He has delivered us from the power of darkness and conveyed us into the kingdom of the Son of His love, 14 in whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins." Colossians 1:13, 14

Paul's Jewish heritage allowed him to see with exacting detail the parallels between the Passover feast he had celebrated year after year, and the fulfillment of that observance in Christ. Unfortunately, for the Jewish people in general, this rite has been less about the Lord and more of a cultural observance.

But every time a Jew comes to know their Lord, and when the corporate body of Israel comes to know Him some wondrous day, great things occur as they come to realize the true significance of these mandated observances.

42 (con't) This is that night of the Lord, a solemn observance for all the children of Israel throughout their generations.

There is an emphasis in these words which calls out for remembrance. Everything about them is intended to draw attention to the reader to pay heed. "This is that night of the Lord." It is to be "a solemn observance." It is "for all the children of Israel" and it is to be "throughout their generations."

And yet, they are words which only find their true meaning in what they picture - the cross of Christ and the freeing of His people from the yoke which has bound them. Ellicott makes the connection simple for us to see -

It is "...when a yoke heavier than that of Egypt was broken from off our necks, and a land better than that of Canaan set before us. That was a temporal deliverance, to be celebrated in their generations; this an eternal redemption, to be celebrated world without end!" Charles Ellicott

It was a long time, four hundred and thirty years
From Abraham until the exodus out of Egypt the land
But when it came, there were certainly many cheers
As the people beheld the marvel of the Lord's powerful hand

And for all generations thereafter it came to be
That people would each year on that night recall
The marvel of the exodus; and of the Lord's majesty
A Passover Seder each year at the nightfall

A solemn observance for the children of Israel
A time to remember the great acts of the Lord
A time to relate the story to the next generation as well
To repeat this marvelous account recorded in His word

III. One Law for All (verses 43-51)

43 And the Lord said to Moses and Aaron,

From the text, it would appear that these instructions were given at Succoth, after the Passover. However, it could be that they were given at Sinai when the law was received. Or, they could have been given to them prior to the Passover and that foreigners participated in the Passover. Thus everything from verse 11 until now has been an insert.

I believe that the last option is correct. It would mean that the mixed multitude that left with Israel was circumcised before they partook of the Passover and departed at the Exodus. This would fit with what will be said in the coming verses concerning their status within the corporate body. It would also be another reason why they selected the lamb five days earlier - to allow healing time for those circumcised.

No matter what, the instructions are given to ensure the meal would not be defiled through inappropriate observance.

43 (con't) "This is the ordinance of the Passover: No foreigner shall eat it.

The first instruction is that no foreigner is to eat of it. The term is ben nekar or "son of a stranger." It's a general term which includes all who were aliens to the people and to the covenant of Israel. However, if they were brought into the people and the covenant by circumcision, then they were no longer considered strangers.

This is often violated today when Jews invite Gentiles over to share in their Passover. The Passover was intended only for those who are a part of the redeemed of the Lord. This then equates directly to the Lord's Supper.

There is no point in a non-believer coming forward because it has no true significance for them. The intent of the Lord's Supper is to proclaim His death until He comes. If someone hasn't received what His death signifies, and if they don't believe He is coming again, then it makes no sense for them to participate.

44 But every man's servant who is bought for money, when you have circumcised him, then he may eat it.

The second instruction concerns servants. If a person obtained a servant with money and became their property, according to Genesis 17:12, 13, they were to be circumcised. There were no exceptions to this. It is implied that if they refused circumcision, they were to be cut off from the congregation.

Once they were brought into the house and circumcised in that manner, they had all of the rights of a citizen of Israel, although they were still the property of their owner. If nothing else, this shows that it is a dedication to the Lord and to the covenant which brings one into Israel, not natural descent from Abraham.

This is especially true in the world today when there are different sects of Jews from different traditions - Sephardic and Ashkenazi in particular. They can both claim title to the nation of Israel. However, they cannot claim to be the true Israel if they aren't circumcised in their hearts to the Lord Jesus.

Therefore, until they call out to Him, they are not truly completed Jews of good standing in Israel in the biblical sense.

45 A sojourner and a hired servant shall not eat it.

In contradistinction to an owned slave, a person might have a day-laborer who was a foreigner. Or he may have someone staying at his house as a sojourner for a given amount of time. Such a person was not allowed to participate 46 In one house it shall be eaten; you shall not carry any of the flesh outside the house, nor shall you break one of its bones.

The general consensus of the reason for these words is that it points to unity. It is through the lamb that the people were united in the Passover, and it is through Jesus that believers are united in our freedom from the bondage of sin. Therefore, none of the flesh was to be taken outside of the house.

Further, none of the bones were to be broken, again, implying unity. The flesh was eaten, but the bones were to remain whole. This unity of the bones points directly to the unity of the church- universal which is found in Christ and in Him alone.

The Passover lamb of the Hebrew nation was made to correspond to the antitype which He fulfills. The completion of this picture is found anticipating Christ in Psalm 34:20 and realized in John 19 which speak of Him on the cross -

"For these things were done that the Scripture should be fulfilled, 'Not one of His bones shall be broken.'" John 19:36

He died prior to the need for the soldiers to break His bones in order to expedite His death. This was anticipated 1500 years earlier in the giving of these instructions.

47 All the congregation of Israel shall keep it.

As there is unity in the house pointing to unity in Christ, there was to be unity throughout the congregation, again pointing to unity in Christ. There is one Lord, one faith, and one baptism.

48 And when a stranger dwells with you and wants to keep the Passover to the Lord, let all his males be circumcised, and then let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as a native of the land. For no uncircumcised person shall eat it.

This is plain on its surface and it follows through in many examples in the Bible. When a stranger sojourned among the Israelites and wanted to participate by keeping the Passover, they were to circumcise any males and they were then allowed to keep it. From that point on, they were to be incorporated into the people of Israel with no further distinctions among them.

In addition to accounts which follow this in the Bible, there is extra-biblical evidence for this as well. Speaking of the descendants of Edom, known as the Idumeans in the New Testament times, we find in the writings of the Jewish Historian Josephus that about 129 BC John Hyrcanus –

“...subdued all the Idumeans; and permitted them to stay in that country, if they would circumcise their genitals, and make use of the laws of the Jews; and they were so desirous of living in the country of their forefathers, that they submitted to the use of circumcision, and of the rest of the Jewish ways of living; at which time therefore this befell them, that they were hereafter no other than Jews.”

If we are to take this in a New Testament context, it shows that we cannot withhold the gospel from any person or group of people and exclude them from Christian fellowship. This follows through in position, status, color, ethnic origin, amount of wealth, or for any other reason. Jesus is the Christ of the nations and He is to be open to all who will receive Him. No non-believer carries the benefits of Christ; no believer is excluded from those benefits which are His alone to endow upon His faithful.

49 One law shall be for the native-born and for the stranger who dwells among you.”

One law is given for all people within the covenant community regardless of their birth status. Again, it points to the unity of the people which is derived from being joined to the Lord, not from being joined through a birthright. The birthright is from God to His adopted children, without regard to their genetic make up.

There would seem to be exceptions to this which are found in Deuteronomy 7, where it says that certain people groups were to be utterly destroyed and with whom no intermarriages or covenants were to be allowed.

But... people from some of those very groups are found later in the Bible as participants in the provisions of this verse. One, for example, is Uriah the Hittite whose wife, Bathsheba, became a wife of David.

50 Thus all the children of Israel did; as the Lord commanded Moses and Aaron, so they did.

The law was given from the Lord and the people complied. The inclusion of these words seems to imply that the instructions were, in fact, given prior to the Exodus, but they have been recorded now to show that those who came out as a mixed multitude were considered as a part of the whole; all were now reckoned as Israel.

Thus the counting of the people in the census is inclusive of them as being brought into the tribes. They are one united people.

51 And it came to pass, on that very same day, that the Lord brought the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt according to their armies.

This verse repeats the substance of verse 41. It shows us that it is the Lord who brought Israel out. He did it on a precise schedule, that it included His redeemed people, that they were redeemed from the bondage of Egypt, and that they were brought out according to their armies - in other words in ranks and in dignity.

Everything about this closing verse shows that there was a plan and that plan was worked out exactly as it should have been, including the assimilation of non-Israelites into the body of Israel. It is then a picture of the greater assimilation of the church which now exists, and of the assimilation of the tribulation saints of the future. All are one in the body of Christ who is the Lord.

We are, through the blood of Christ, brought into the commonwealth of Israel. We are saved unto the ages of the ages. God's love for His children is an eternal love because we are "in Christ" His Son. He could love us no less than He loves His beloved Jesus.

If you have never received that great love which can only come through God's adoption of you as His child, please give me a moment to tell you how you can participate in it today...

Closing Verse: "Therefore remember that you, once Gentiles in the flesh—who are called Uncircumcision by what is called the Circumcision made in the flesh by hands— 12 that at that time you were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world. 13 But now in Christ Jesus you who once were far off have been brought near by the blood of Christ." Ephesians 2:11-13

Next Week: Exodus 13:1-10 (The Feast of Unleavened Bread) (37th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Exodus

The children of Israel then

Journeyed from Rameses to Succoth

About six hundred thousand men on foot besides children

Certainly a host of considerable note

A mixed multitude went up with them also

And flocks and herds—a great deal of livestock with them did go

And they baked unleavened cakes

Of the dough which they had brought

Out of Egypt; for it was not leavened

For in a hurried exodus they were caught

Because they were driven out of Egypt
And could not wait
Nor had they prepared provisions for themselves
Such they did not accumulate

Now the sojourn of the children of Israel
Who lived in Egypt
Four hundred and thirty years was the spell
Before Pharaoh finally flipped

And it came to pass at the end, finally at last
Of the four hundred and thirty years—
On that very same day—it came to pass
That all the armies of the Lord went out from the land of Egypt Surely with great cheers

It is a night of solemn observance to the Lord
For bringing them out of the land of Egypt according to His word

This is that night of the Lord
A solemn observance in participations
For all the children of Israel as they have heard
Throughout their generations
And the Lord said to Moses and Aaron
“This is the Passover's ordinance

No foreigner shall eat it thereon
You must adhere to this observance
But every man's servant who is for money bought
When you have circumcised him
Then he may eat it as you have been taught

A sojourner and a hired servant shall not eat it
In one house it shall be eaten, there you will partake
You shall not carry any of the flesh outside the house
Nor any of its bones shall you break

All the congregation of Israel shall keep it, according to my word
And when a stranger dwells with you
And wants to keep the Passover to the Lord
Let he and all his males be circumcised too

And then let him come near and keep it
And he shall be as a native of the land
For no uncircumcised person shall eat it
From this law you shall learn and understand

One law shall be for the native-born and also too
For the stranger who dwells among you
Thus did all the children of Israel

As the Lord commanded Moses and Aaron
So they did as the word does tell
And it came to pass, on that very same day
That the Lord brought the children of Israel
Out of the land of Egypt according to their armies
As the Lord in His word did foretell

Great things the Lord has done for His people
Those who are brought into His own fold
They come from every nation to worship under the steeple
We are the redeemed of the Lord as His word foretold

It is because of Jesus! Hallelujah to His name!
God loved us enough to send His Son to rescue us
And now let our lips His holy name proclaim!
Yes, for all the ages of ages, we will proclaim Jesus

Thank You, O God for precious Jesus our Lord
And thank You for revealing Him to us in Your holy word

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 13:1-10 (THE FEAST OF UNLEAVENED BREAD)

You've heard the sermon text read and you're not looking forward to hearing the same thing preached now that we just heard just four sermons ago. While I was reading, I saw you flipping back to chapter 12 and I heard you mutter, "We just read the same thing in verses 14-20. I mean, there are some differences, but why does the Lord keep repeating the same things?"

Next time, don't mutter so loudly because all of that muttering is going to sound like a plane flying overhead when I put the sermon on You Tube. I hear you. I hear you. And I can almost sympathize with you. I read the Bible front to back once a week or so for a couple years when I owned an import business down the road.

The repetition would make me wonder what was up. Why does the Bible keep saying the same things? Well, there are quite a few reasons. One is that these repetitions often form amazing poetic patterns. Some of you are aware of them - chiasms, parallelism, and so on.

They are useful tools for memorization. They are also a way of revealing wisdom which says, "These words aren't arbitrary. There is design behind them." Scholars who say the Bible is merely a hodgepodge of people adding things in over time must shut up when such patterns are revealed by those who find them.

The repetition also can show the advancement of a thought either through time or in depth. In time, sometimes something is said, and then it is stated later in the order of the Bible, but when researched, it is found to be a part of something that actually happened at a different time where it aligns with the previous thought.

Thus there are inserts between repetitions which develop a theme for a specific purpose. In depth, repetitions are often used to build a theme in a different way.

Information is given, and then information is repeated with slight changes or additions.

Thus a command or a precept may start out simple and grow into something more detailed. As an example, you could write a story about an annual celebration called The Beach Party. Friends get together and they celebrate it each year. When writing the story about it, the author wants to develop the theme and so he writes -

"In 2015 we all went to the beach and had a great time. While we were there, we took a lot of pictures, but unfortunately none of the pictures survived the party."

Some time later in the story, we read, "In 2015, while at the party on the beach, everyone took photos with their own cameras. It was a great time, but we felt bad about losing the memories because none of the pictures in any of the cameras could be saved."

This type of addition on the same theme develops the idea. When we get to the reason for the loss of pictures, it all becomes clear. "At the end of the party in 2015, everyone posed for a group picture. All the cameras were set on a timer and everyone posed together. As each camera clicked the photo, the camera stopped working. We realized that Charlie had snuck into the photo and his appearance caused all the cameras to break. Thanks a lot Charlie."

The Lord also develops ideas through repetition and addition at times. We see this in similar and yet somewhat contrasting accounts in the gospels quite clearly. When the stories are combined, a whole picture is realized.

And then of course, there is the fact that we have hard heads. Repetition is often used to beat into our heads a precept, a command, or a doctrine which is of unusual importance. Repetition is one key to memory retention. I'll say it again - repetition is one key to memory retention. Should I say it again?

All this opening to tell you that this passage is similar to that of Exodus 12, but it also has differences. It has been given to show us a sequence of events, the development of a concept - specifically the Feast of Unleavened Bread, and it has been given to hopefully help us to remember what we have heard a little better.

For these and certainly other reasons, we will take our time and go through these verses in detail. In fact, I have planned to preach this exact same sermon next week too, just to make sure you remember it. Ok... that's not true. You can get that horrified look off your face.

Text Verse: "Then Jeremiah took another scroll and gave it to Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah, who wrote on it at the instruction of Jeremiah all the words of the book which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burned in the fire. And besides, there were added to them many similar words." Jeremiah 36:32

The Lord had Jeremiah write a scroll with words of judgment against Israel, against Judah, and against all the nations. When he did, the scroll was taken to the king of Judah who heard it read. While it was being read, he cut off the portions that were read and threw them into the fire.

Eventually, the Lord instructed Jeremiah to recite the same words to his scribe again and add more words into them. Thus the Lord developed a theme for the king of Judah whether he listened or not. The account is also recorded for us. Even though we only have the one account, we can mentally discern the repetition of the words of Jeremiah.

A theme was developed through this repetition. It has become a memorable passage that is actually hard to forget - if not the details, at least the overall thought which was relayed. When you see repetitions in the Bible, don't let them trouble you. Rejoice in them. Seek to find out why they are there and what the Lord is trying to tell you.

We'll do just that today with the instructions for the Feast of Unleavened Bread. It is a feast which has already been partly described and it will be mentioned a few more times in the books of Moses. Each time, something new will come out for us to see.

What a wonder is His superior word. It's waiting there for us to open it and check it out! And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Consecrate to Me All the Firstborn (verses 1-4)

1 Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying,

As happens from time to time, the words, "Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying..." are set off as their own verse. Normally they are combined with the first thought spoken afterwards, but for whatever reason, they are occasionally made to be their own verse.

As I believe that even verse divisions are inspired, one reason for this could be to have the chapter be a verse longer than it otherwise would have been, thus making some numerical pattern. Or, for whatever other reason, these words are set off by themselves, begging for us to prepare for what lies ahead and also to reflect on the when and where of their utterance.

The first words are v'dabber - "and spoke." The word "then" is the translator's preference for clarity, and it appears acceptable because verse 3 will tell us a time-frame in relation to the words. It is after the departure from Rameses. The "where" of this passage then is certainly at Succoth as was seen in chapter 12 -

"Then the children of Israel journeyed from Rameses to Succoth, about six hundred thousand men on foot, besides children." Exodus 12:37

There at Succoth then, the Lord now conveys his message to Moses. "He who draws out" has lived up to his name, having drawn out his flock from their home of 215 years and onto a journey towards the Land of Promise via Sinai. This would be in fulfillment of Exodus 3:12 -

"I will certainly be with you. And this shall be a sign to you that I have sent you: When you have brought the people out of Egypt, you shall serve God on this mountain." Exodus 3:12

2 "Consecrate to Me all the firstborn, whatever opens the womb among the children of Israel,

The first directive of the Lord after the Passover and their subsequent departure from bondage is to "consecrate" to the Lord all the firstborn. Thus it is specifically based on the Passover. "Firstborn" is the word bekor and based on the context it indicates a firstborn male.

The words "whatever opens" are translated from the word pater - It is the first of 12 times it will be seen in the Old Testament, all in Exodus and Numbers with one exception found in Ezekiel 20:26. It indicates a firstling, open, or such as opens, and can indicate either children or animals. It comes from the verb patar - to open, remove, or set free.

The two words together in this one verse are explained by Harris, Archer, and Waltke -

"Regarding the institution of primogeniture in the OT, there are two distinct conceptions. First, there is a socio-legal one which assigns special responsibilities to the first male of the paternal line (bekor). Second there is a cultic conception which assigns special responsibilities to the first male issue of the maternal line (peter). This one is dedicated to God. If it is a sacrificial animal it must be sacrificed. Otherwise, the firstborn must be redeemed." HAW

This verse is given now, in connection with the delivery of the people from both the death which occurred in Egypt and from Egypt itself. The firstborn was saved by the blood of the lamb and so the directions are given for their consecration in accord with that. However, this can't be all that is tied up in this.

The reason why is that all of Israel was delivered through the death of the firstborn of Egypt and the saving of the firstborn of Israel. In Exodus 4:22, the Lord called the whole nation of Israel "My son, My firstborn." Israel's election as God's people was a prerequisite for the exemption of the death of the firstborn through the blood of the lamb.

It must be then that the firstborn is declared as belonging to the Lord as representative of the entire nation of people. In this, we can see the Lord Jesus once again. He is the true Firstborn who is the representative of all of God's people.

Another reason Israel is given these instructions just as they depart is so that it will be a memorial of the historical account, firmly to be fixed in the collective mind of Israel. Of course, it is ultimately given to show us a picture of Christ, the Lamb who died to deliver His people from bondage.

When Jesus was born, Luke is careful to show that He was so consecrated to the Lord -

"Now when the days of her purification according to the law of Moses were completed, they brought Him to Jerusalem to present Him to the Lord 23 (as it is written in the law of the Lord, 'Every male who opens the womb shall be called holy to the Lord')." Luke 2:22, 23

2 (con't) both of man and beast; it is Mine."

It needs to be understood that the firstborn who opens the womb of the mother is speaking of a male. If a female had a female first and then later a male, that male was not considered devoted to God because it wasn't the firstborn. Also, if it was a male that came first, from the woman, it was considered the firstborn of the mother, even if the father had other males from other wives.

This firstborn was not the property of the parents, but of God. If a human, it was to be presented to God and then redeemed. If it was an animal then other directives were to be followed. These will be explained later in this chapter, and then further refined after that.

Because the firstborn was considered the representative of the whole, this setting apart the firstborn is then a picture of the Lord who represents all of His people who are now, like Israel was under the Old Testament, to be considered the firstborn of God. The author of Hebrews gives us the words of this confirmation -

"But you have come to Mount Zion and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, to an innumerable company of angels, 23 to the general assembly and church of the firstborn who are registered in heaven, to God the Judge of all, to the spirits of just men made perfect, 24 to Jesus the Mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling that speaks better things than that of Abel." Hebrews 12:22-24

3 And Moses said to the people: "Remember this day

These words show us that the passage was spoken to Moses at Succoth on the first day of the Exodus after their arrival and settling in. It is the 15th of the month and he in turn instructs the people zakhor eth ha'yom hazzeh - "Remember the day (the) this."

3 (con't) in which you went out of Egypt, out of the house of bondage;

It is literally "the house of slavery." The people were slaves and now they were free. To understand the picture in the greater panorama of redemptive history, we can go to the words of Jesus in John to see how this delivery of Israel from Egypt only mirrors man's delivery from sin as accomplished by Christ -

"Most assuredly, I say to you, whoever commits sin is a slave of sin. 35 And a slave does not abide in the house forever, but a son abides forever. 36 Therefore if the Son makes you free, you shall be free indeed." John 8:34, 35

Paul explains what occurred in detail in the book of Romans. In chapter 6, he gives this explanation -

"For if we have been united together in the likeness of His death, certainly we also shall be in the likeness of His resurrection, 6 knowing this, that our old man was crucified with Him, that the body of sin might be done away with, that we should no longer be slaves of sin. 7 For he who has died has been freed from sin. 8 Now if we died with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with Him, 9 knowing that Christ, having been raised from the dead, dies no more. Death no longer has dominion over Him. 10 For the death that He died, He died to sin once for all; but the life that He lives, He lives to God. 11 Likewise you also, reckon yourselves to be dead indeed to sin, but alive to God in Christ Jesus our Lord." Romans 6:5-11

If we can keep mentally inserting Christ and the church into the overall exodus account, we can really get a good grasp of the marvel of what Jesus did for us. We were in bondage and Christ drew us out from it.

3 (con't) for by strength of hand the Lord brought you out of this place.

The term "strength of hand" uses the noun form khozeq of the more traditional verb or adjective form khazaq. This noun is only used 5 times in the Bible and three of them are in Exodus 13. The term here is more emphatic than when the verb or adjective is used.

It is always used in the sense of military or conquering prowess. In these three uses in Exodus 13, it is always used in connection with a plural pronoun. We are being given reminders that it is by the hand of the Lord from which our collective deliverance comes.

But the collective is made up of individuals which make up the whole. And so it is a reminder of our own state before Him. We are saved by His grace and not our own works. There is no boasting in what we have done because everything has been accomplished by Him for His people.

And because of this, specific directions are given...

3 (con't) No leavened bread shall be eaten.

As a memorial of the work of the Lord and the hasty departure from Egypt, there was no leavened bread eaten. It is again a picture of our position in Christ. In his explanation of our deliverance from sin, Paul told us that as Christ died once for all to sin, we should likewise reckon ourselves "to be dead indeed to sin, but alive to God in Christ Jesus our Lord." Romans 6:11

4 On this day you are going out, in the month Abib.

In Exodus 12:2, the Lord told Moses, "This month shall be your beginning of months; it shall be the first month of the year to you." The calendar of redemption was to begin at the time of the Passover and now that month's name is given for the first time - Aviv.

The word Aviv is used only eight times in the Bible, all in the books of Moses. Six times it is used to describe the month and twice to describe fresh ears of grain. It means "greenness" or "fresh" and it indicates fresh young ears of barley grain which come forth at this time of year.

In the Bible, this will continue to be the first month of the sacred or religious calendar, but eventually it will be known as Nissan, using the Aramaic name instead of the Hebrew name. As a mark of grace upon Israel, this month was selected because according to JFB -

"It was the best season for undertaking a journey to the desert region of Sinai, especially with flocks and herds; for then the winter torrents had subsided, and the wadies were covered with an early and luxuriant verdure." Jamieson-Faucett-Brown

It is the time of year when it is not too hot and not too cold. Instead it would be the perfect weather for the trip.

The Firstborn of the womb is Mine, He in place of all
For all in My flock have been redeemed in reality
The Firstborn is set apart according to My call
Of your own redemption it is a reminder constantly

In My church the Lamb died as your holy Substitute
But He was also the Firstborn of His mother's womb
And He the Firstborn over all of creation, righteousness He does impute
Because He was also the Firstborn from the tomb

Because of Him you have come to Mount Zion
And to the city of the living God
You are the church of the firstborn, who I keep My eye on
I shall watch over you always as in My presence you trod

II. Seven Days You Shall Eat Unleavened Bread (verses 5-7)

5 And it shall be, when the Lord brings you into the land of the Canaanites and the Hittites and the Amorites and the Hivites and the Jebusites,

When God promised the land to Abraham in Genesis 15, ten people groups were mentioned. In Exodus 3, when the Lord first spoke to Moses, six people groups were mentioned. Now only five are mentioned. At other times, seven or eight are mentioned.

It isn't certain why the names are stated sometimes and overlooked at other times, but God has His reasons, even if they aren't plainly evident. In the end though, the general word "Canaanite" is used as a metaphor for all of the descendants of Ham who occupied the land of Canaan.

In the words now, it is taken as a foregone conclusion that the Lord will, in fact, bring them into the land of Promise.

5 (con't) which He swore to your fathers to give you,

The land was originally promised to Abraham. Isaac was the inheritor of that right, and from him Jacob was given this promise. From Jacob, all of the sons of Israel, including his two adopted sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, were included in the inheritance.

God swore and now He is ready to fulfill the promise that was originally made over 400 years earlier.

5 (con't) a land flowing with milk and honey,

This is the third of 20 times that this expression will be used in the Bible. The last time will be in Ezekiel 20 where it is also called "the glory of all lands." A land flowing with milk and honey implies richness and fertility.

Milk comes from cows and so it means there will be abundant pasture lands. Honey comes from bees which pollinate flowers and so it implies all sorts of fruit trees, herbs, and flowers. Deuteronomy 8:7-10 describes the land -

"For the Lord your God is bringing you into a good land, a land of brooks of water, of fountains and springs, that flow out of valleys and hills; 8 a land of wheat and barley, of vines and fig trees and pomegranates, a land of olive oil and honey; 9 a land in which you will eat bread without scarcity, in which you will lack nothing; a land whose stones are iron and out of whose hills you can dig copper. 10 When you have eaten and are full, then you shall bless the Lord your God for the good land which He has given you."

One more point about the term "a land flowing with milk and honey" is that it isn't just speaking of the physical abundance of the land, but also of the spiritual abundance. It is the land of God's word and the people through whom that word has come.

The word of God is said to be sweeter than honey. It is also equated with milk which nourishes. Thus, this is a reference to that as well. The Land would literally flow with milk and honey for sustaining Israel's physical lives. It would also flow with milk and honey for sustaining their spiritual lives.

5 (con't) that you shall keep this service in this month.

This is a close repeat of the words from Exodus 12:25 when the instructions for the Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread were first given. Moses is repeating the instructions to the people now that their deliverance has come, to remind them of what was expected of them before it had occurred.

The first admonition was in expectation of deliverance; the second is given as confirmation that they have received it. The Lord promised and the Lord fulfilled. The first time, Moses instructed the elders, now he repeats the commandment for all the people.

6 Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread,

This is explicit. For seven days, unleavened bread was to be eaten. It doesn't say "You may not eat bread with leaven for seven days." Instead it says "Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread." This is again repeated in Leviticus 23:6 and elsewhere.

It is not a negative command, which means that they could abstain from any bread as long as they didn't partake in leavened bread. Instead it is a positive command. They were to eat unleavened bread during the entire feast. This goes in picture to what we should actually fulfill according to Paul's words in 1 Corinthians -

"Therefore purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new lump, since you truly are unleavened. For indeed Christ, our Passover, was sacrificed for us. 8 Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, nor with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." 1 Corinthians 5:7, 8

Not only are we to not partake of sin, but we are to actively live our lives in "sincerity and truth." It is not that we can abstain from the whole if we abstain from one; it is that we are to abstain from one while partaking in the other.

6 (con't) and on the seventh day there shall be a feast to the Lord.

In Exodus 12:14, it said that the entire seven days was to be a feast to the Lord. Then in 12:16, it noted that both the first and the seventh days of the Feast of Unleavened Bread were to be "holy convocations." On those days, no work was to be done. Now, in addition to that, another detail is given concerning the seventh day.

It is to specifically be a khag, or a "feast" to the Lord. Israel was to not merely abstain from work, but they were to actively celebrate the work of the Lord. The entire week was to be a feast, but the seventh day was to be a feast unto itself as a festive termination to the entire feast.

Some Christian scholars attempt to align the resurrection of Christ with the day that Israel was conducted through the Red Sea. However, this would not align with the table of stops recorded in Numbers 33. But, the Jewish calendar reckons this seventh day of the Feast of Unleavened bread as that day.

Accordingly, the final day of the Feast would be the day they passed through the waters of the Red Sea. The Bible is not specific that either is the case, but of the two, the Jewish tradition would be correct. And there is a reason for this which will be explained when we get to that passage.

7 Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days.

The mandate is repeated yet again. This is the fourth time in 2 chapters that they are not only told to "not eat" leavened bread, but that they are "to eat" unleavened bread. Again, this is a positive command in addition to the negatives that are given.

The repetition is not unnecessary, but rather it is critical to fully understanding the New Testament fulfillment of the feast. As we are "in Christ" we are to not only "not eat" of the bread of wickedness, but we are "to eat" of the bread of sincerity and truth.

Otherwise, our abstention from the first still leaves a void in what others see. It is not uncommon to see unsaved people avoid sin. If this is all that is seen in us, it doesn't truly set us apart. Only when we act like Christ do we resemble the One who makes us Christians.

7 (con't) And no leavened bread shall be seen among you, nor shall leaven be seen among you in all your quarters.

And yet, the opposite is true as well. Not only are we to act in a positive manner, but we are also to refrain from negative actions. Just as no leaven was to be seen among the people of Israel during their feast, no leaven is to be seen among us in our life in Christ.

Holy and pure is how you are to conduct your life
Abstaining from all malice and from wicked ways
Keeping yourselves from backbiting and from strife
Instead, living out your lives properly all your days

Because you truly are unleavened in My eyes
Having called on Jesus, you are free from your sin debt
You reached out in your need and took hold of the prize
Receiving Jesus as your Savior, all My conditions met

Therefore, walk holy just as you are already reckoned
Walk in a manner worthy of your heavenly call
For you responded when My Spirit beckoned
Because My Son Jesus, has broken down the wall

III. As a Sign and as a Memorial (verses 8-10)

8 And you shall tell your son in that day, saying, 'This is done because of what the Lord did for me when I came up from Egypt.'

In Exodus 12, it was taken as a given that the children would ask what the memorial of the Passover service was for. In verse 26, it said -

"And it shall be, when your children say to you, 'What do you mean by this service?'" Exodus 12:26

The same is implied here, after being fed unleavened bread for several days in a row, it would be natural to ask what was going on. The parents were to be ready with their answer. "It is because of what the Lord did for me when I came up from Egypt."

And one of the most common questions to faithful Christians from their children or those around them who don't know of the works of the Lord is, "Why do you believe and act as you do?" The answer should be your testimony based on "What the Lord did for me when I came up from a life of sin and bondage."

We are to remember His acts of goodness to us so that others may hear about them and believe what has really come about in our lives. They should be able to see a difference in who we were, who we are now, and how we are different than the world around us.

9 It shall be as a sign to you on your hand and as a memorial between your eyes,

In Matthew 23, Jesus speaks of the scribes and the Pharisees in a most negative light. His words equate their treatment of the common people with that of Pharaoh and Egypt towards Israel. He then notes their ostentatious displays of life, including the wearing of phylacteries. Here are His words concerning them -

"Therefore whatever they tell you to observe, that observe and do, but do not do according to their works; for they say, and do not do. 4 For they bind heavy burdens, hard to bear, and lay them on men's shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers. 5 But all their works they do to be seen by men. They make their phylacteries broad and enlarge the borders of their garments. 6 They love the best places at feasts, the best seats in the synagogues, 7 greetings in the marketplaces, and to be called by men, 'Rabbi, Rabbi.' 8 But you, do not be called 'Rabbi'; for One is your Teacher, the Christ, and you are all brethren." Matthew 23:3-8

The practice of wearing arm bands and phylacteries can be traced back to this verse and verse 16 of this same chapter which repeats and enlarges the thought given here. They and observant Jews to this day, have taken these words which contain a spiritual meaning and have given them a physical application.

They are externally worn symbols for others to see and fawn over. "Oh, look at those observant Jews. They must be the cat's meow to God because of their obvious piety." But what Moses says to the people was meant in an analogous way.

The words, "as a sign on your hand" are meant to show that the active obedience to the Lord through the observance of the mandated ritual was to be as evident as the hand accomplishing a feat. Anyone watching a person at work will see the hand as it carries out its task.

The word "sign" is owth. It indicates something which points to something else. The observance is carried out to show obedience to the Lord who mandated the observance. When a person raises their hand in an oath, it is a sign of their faithfulness to the one in whose name the oath is taken. Thus, it is a sign of fealty to the one to whom they have pledged allegiance to.

The "memorial between your eyes" is the personal remembrance of the observance which then points to the personal obedience to the Lord who mandated it. Between the eyes is where the forehead is. It is the symbolic place of memory and it is also the symbolic place of acknowledging and avowing the Lord's authority over the individual.

One makes the mental assent of being obedient to the Lord and thus a memorial is between the eyes at all times. It is as a personal seal to the higher authority. This verse and verse 16 have nothing to do with external badges of piety which others can see.

Instead, they have everything to do with actual accomplishments of allegiance which can be observed, and by which the individual attests to the authority of the one over him. This is borne out elsewhere in the Bible. Several passages in Proverbs use the same type of terminology as what Moses uses here -

Let not mercy and truth forsake you;
Bind them around your neck,
Write them on the tablet of your heart, Proverbs 3:3

My son, keep your father's command,
And do not forsake the law of your mother.
21 Bind them continually upon your heart;
Tie them around your neck. Proverbs 6:20, 21

These proverbs, along with the fact that nowhere else in the Old Testament are phylacteries actually mentioned, show that the words here are to carry the same significance as a mark either branded or tattooed on the hand or on the forehead.

This then is in contradistinction to the mark of the beast which is found in Revelation 13:16. That is a mark of allegiance to the antichrist of the end times. That verse reads -

"He causes all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and slave, to receive a mark on their right hand or on their foreheads, 17 and that no one may buy or sell except one who has the mark or the name of the beast, or the number of his name." Revelation 13:16

The rejection of that mark is to be a mental assertion that one has allied himself with the Lord. Such an alliance with Him is not an external box upon the head or a wrapping upon the arm. Instead it is a rejection of the mark of the beast and is a sign and a memorial that they have received instead the authority of the Lord over them. All of this is verified in the next words of verse 9...

9 (con't) that the Lord's law may be in your mouth;

The sign on the hand and the memorial between the eyes is specifically connected to the fact "that the Lord's law" would then be in "your mouth." Nobody takes this portion of verse 9 literally. You just don't see observant Jews walking around with scrolls of the Torah in their mouth.

To say that two physical applications then equates to one metaphorical application, or even one literal application where someone continuously repeats verses from the law, does injustice to the intent of the entire verse.

The hand is to act upon, and the mind is to contemplate, the feast so that the Lord's law might be in the mouth of the observer. "This is what you are to do. You have seen it in my actions and my words now confirm that to you, dear son."

9 (con't) for with a strong hand the Lord has brought you out of Egypt.

Again it is repeated that the Lord has accomplished the task. This time, instead of the noun form, "strength of hand," it uses the adjective "strong hand." It is as if we are being told in this verse that we were each in a pit and the Lord reached down and pulled us up out of it.

All were in the pit and he reached down, individually, and pulled us out until the whole group was safe. It is a touching note of a personal deliverance by which we have been saved. And because of this we have a personal obligation to respond...

10 You shall therefore keep this ordinance in its season from year to year.

I should note that in verses 3 and 4, Moses spoke to the people using plural pronouns - in essence "you all." But since verse 5, he has been speaking in singular pronouns. He opened his speech to the people as a whole, but he quickly made it a personal lesson for each individual.

Go back later and read these 8 verses again and you can then more fully grasp what this means. There has been a collective work of the Lord on behalf of His people. And with that came a collective command to be obedient to the Feast of Unleavened Bread. And yet, there is an individual aspect to this feast as well.

If we look at the church, we can see the same concept. The Lord did a collective work for all of the people who would come to Him. It is He who performed the miracles. It is He who gave the signs. And it is He who did the work, dying for all on Calvary's cross. As a church, we are responsible to observe our lives to Him.

And yet, there are individual responsibilities within that collective whole. His miracles, His signs, and His work were all on behalf of you... just you. Thus the admonitions to act in certain ways and to be responsible towards telling one's child about His deliverance are a personal responsibility.

It doesn't take a village to instruct our children. Instead, it takes our personal, individual lives which include our actions, our obedience, and our teaching about the Lord and His ways. What belongs to the collective church also belongs to the individual.

And the responsibility in each of us individually is to ensure that we act properly and within the confines of what the Lord has done individually and for us collectively. At the beginning of the sermon, I mentioned the similarity between the corresponding passage in Exodus 12. It was verses 12-20, but especially verses 14-20.

Those 7 verses were all addressed using plural pronouns. Despite seeming to be saying the same thing, they weren't. That passage was written to the Superior Word... for all of our ears to collectively hear. The passage we've look at today has been mostly addressed to each person filling a seat... for all of our ears to individually hear.

Let's pay heed to the word, collectively and individually, and let's apply these lessons to our lives, ever striving to be truly unleavened - filled with sincerity and truth and putting behind us the leaven of Egypt - that of malice and wickedness.

And finally, as I do each week, I'd like to tell you in simple terms why Jesus came and how it is relevant to you. If you have never received Him as your Lord and Savior, it is the most important decision you could ever make....

Closing Verse: "And these words which I command you today shall be in your heart. 7 You shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you sit in your house, when you walk by the way, when you lie down, and when you rise up." Deuteronomy 6:6, 7

Next Week: Exodus 13:11-22 (Their Sign) (38th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Feast of Unleavened Bread

Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying

“Consecrate to Me all the firstborn, to you I do tell

Whatever opens the womb, I am relaying

Among the children of Israel

Both of man and beast; it is Mine

This command you shall not decline

And Moses said to the people: “Remember this day

In which you went out of Egypt, out of the house of bondage

For by strength of hand the Lord made the way

He brought you out of this place, all the assemblage

No leavened bread shall be eaten

On this day you are going out

In the month Abib

Is when your deliverance came about

And it shall be, when the Lord brings you

Into the land of the Canaanites and the Hittites too

And the Amorites and the Hivites and the Jebusites

Which He swore to your fathers to give you

A land flowing with milk and honey as I have said

That you shall keep this service in this month, as to my word

Seven days you shall eat unleavened bread
And on the seventh day there shall be a feast to the Lord
Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days
And no leavened bread shall be seen among you
Nor shall leaven be seen in any ways
Among you in all your quarters too

And you shall tell your son in that day
Saying, 'This is done because of what came about
Of what the Lord did for me which I now relay
When I came up from Egypt; when He brought me out
It shall be as a sign to you on your hand and also
As a memorial between your eyes no doubt
That the Lord's law may be in your mouth wherever you go
For with a strong hand out of Egypt the Lord has brought you out

You shall therefore keep this ordinance
In its season from year to year
When you from Egypt received your deliverance
And so in the Lord alone you shall fear
Great are the stories of the Lord
Of His mighty acts undertaken for His flock
Precious is the holy writ, His superior word
Let us read its contents and its mysteries unlock

Let us cherish it more than our necessary food
And share it with our children and their children as well
So that they too will be imbued
With the wisdom of the bubbling well

And Lord, direct our steps, keep us close to You always
And help us to fix our eyes on You alone all of our days

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 13:11-22 (THEIR SIGN)

You've heard the verses for today's sermon. Like other highlights of the book, such as the burning bush, the parting of the Red Sea, and the giving of the law at Sinai, the pillar of cloud and the pillar of fire is a truly noteworthy and memorable thing.

Unlike some of the other highlights though, the pillar of cloud and fire was actually prefigured all the way back during the life of father Abraham. In Genesis 15, at the time of the covenant, this was recorded -

Now as for you, you shall go to your fathers in peace; you shall be buried at a good old age. 16 But in the fourth generation they shall return here, for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet complete.”

17 And it came to pass, when the sun went down and it was dark, that behold, there appeared a smoking oven and a burning torch that passed between those pieces. 18 On the same day the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying:

“To your descendants I have given this land, from the river of Egypt to the great river, the River Euphrates— 19 the Kenites, the Kenezites, the Kadmonites, 20 the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Rephaim, 21 the Amorites, the Canaanites, the Girgashites, and the Jebusites.” Genesis 14:15-21

The smoking oven and the burning torch represented the presence of the Lord at the giving of that covenant, a covenant which involved a set time-frame until his descendants would be returned to the same land in which he dwelt. The pillar of cloud and fire in Exodus represents the presence of the Lord among the Israelites. The time had come and the Land of Promise lay ahead of them.

It would be a reminder to them of the faithfulness of the Lord to His covenant promises, and it would be a sign to them that He would continue to be with them until He had fulfilled all He had said He would do.

The presence of God will continue to be seen at various times in cloud and in fire throughout the Bible. It is recorded as a comforting reminder that God had remained faithful to His people throughout the ages. And it is a sign to us that He will continue to be faithful until the end of the age.

Jesus ascended in a cloud, He will come for us in the clouds, He will come to Israel in the clouds, and with Him is the fire of His purifying judgment. These are just a few instances which speak of His presence in this way. We are so blessed to have this imagery so that we can remember His faithfulness to His people.

Text Verse: "Moreover You led them by day with a cloudy pillar,
And by night with a pillar of fire,
To give them light on the road
Which they should travel." Nehemiah 9:12

We'll be a few minutes longer than normal in today's sermon, but these twelve verses are simply filled with interesting information and with wonderful pictures of Jesus - His work for us and in us. It's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... may God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Recounting the Work of the Lord (verses 11-16)

11 "And it shall be, when the Lord brings you into the land of the Canaanites,

Our first verse of today brings us again to the anticipation of the promise that was first made 430 years earlier. The "land of the Canaanites" is an all-encompassing term. Though other groups of people were there, the land was known by this term and it continued to be known as Canaan throughout the Old Testament.

It is this land, known as "the land of the Canaanites" that the Lord promised they would be brought into. Not "if," but "when."

11 (con't) as He swore to you and your fathers, and gives it to you,

After his arrival in the land, in Genesis 12, we read this concerning Abraham -

"Abram passed through the land to the place of Shechem, as far as the terebinth tree of Moreh. And the Canaanites were then in the land.

7 Then the Lord appeared to Abram and said, 'To your descendants I will give this land.' And there he built an altar to the Lord, who had appeared to him." Genesis 12:6, 7

Later in Genesis 13, a more comprehensive explanation of the land grant was given to him -

"And the Lord said to Abram, after Lot had separated from him: "Lift your eyes now and look from the place where you are—northward, southward, eastward, and westward; 15 for all the land which you see I give to you and your descendants forever." Genesis 13:14, 15

The promise continued to be explained and expanded on both to Abraham and the generations who followed him. The amount of time and the number of generations before it would come about were explained. The chosen son who would receive the land was explained. That the 12 sons of Israel were all included in this was explained. Eventually, the Lord spoke these words to Moses -

"And God said to Moses, 'I AM WHO I AM.' And He said, "'Thus you shall say to the children of Israel, 'I AM has sent me to you.'" 15 Moreover God said to Moses, "Thus you shall say to the children of Israel: 'The Lord God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, has sent me to you. This is My name forever, and this is My memorial to all generations.'"" Exodus 3:14, 15

The name of the Lord who would accomplish this is I AM. But His name is also explained as "the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob." He isn't just the God of Abraham. Nor is He the God of Abraham and Isaac. He is "the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob." The land belongs to this group of people.

We cannot go back to Abraham and thus include Ishmael and his descendants. Nor can we stop at Isaac and include the Edomites. These people could come under the umbrella of the larger group if they met the Lord's requirements, but they don't automatically have a right to the land, apart from what God will do through Israel.

12 that you shall set apart to the Lord all that open the womb,

This takes us right back to Exodus 13:1 & 2 -

"Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying, 2 'Consecrate to Me all the firstborn, whatever opens the womb among the children of Israel, both of man and beast; it is Mine.'"

At that time, the word for "consecrate" was qaddash. In verse 12, the word for "set apart" is abar. The idea is that they were to be separated from the rest of the flock so that they wouldn't be mixed in with those which were "not sanctified." A picture is being given for us to see.

God is using animals to show us pictures of us as believers. First it was of Israel, later of the people of His church. As Paul says in 2 Corinthians 6 -

"Therefore

'Come out from among them
And be separate, says the Lord.
Do not touch what is unclean,
And I will receive you.'

18 'I will be a Father to you,
And you shall be My sons and daughters,
Says the Lord Almighty.'" 2 Corinthians 6:17, 18

It needs to be noted that immediately after verses 1 & 2, which detailed the consecration of the firstborn, the instructions for the Feast of Unleavened Bread were given, which we looked at in detail last week.

The instructions in verse 3 & 4 were addressed with plural pronouns, but verses 5-10 were singular. Now, as soon as those verses are complete, we again come back to the setting apart of the firstborn.

The Lord is then showing us that the two accounts are tied together. The sanctification of the firstborn is related to the sanctification of the people who will observe the Feast of Unleavened Bread. This is obvious, but it will become even more obvious when we arrive at verse 16.

This general expression "set apart to the Lord all that open the womb" will be more fully itemized and explained as well. There will be three distinct categories noted. The first is found in the continuation of verse 12...

12 (con't) that is, every firstborn that comes from an animal which you have; the males shall be the Lord's.

Although not explicitly stated yet, this first category is considered as the oxen, sheep, and goats which are considered clean domestic animals. Later, animals that are considered clean or unclean will be specified. However, for now only the general term behemah or "beast" is given.

The word for "that comes" as in "every firstborn that comes" is the word sheger. This is its first of only five uses in the OT. The other four are all in Deuteronomy. It generally means "increase." It is this firstborn of the increase which specifically belongs to the Lord. However, there is a qualifier. It only applies to the firstborn which is a male.

Later in Exodus 22, it will state that the animal wasn't to be given to the Lord until the eighth day after the birth. Then in Deuteronomy 15, it will again be modified to state that any animal with any defect, such as being blind or lame or any other serious defect, was not to be sacrificed. Instead, it could be eaten at home.

13 But every firstborn of a donkey you shall redeem with a lamb;

The donkey here is given as the example of an unclean animal. This is the second distinct category of firstborn. Such a domestic animal was not to be given to the Lord. Instead, in its place a lamb (or a goat - it is a general term that is used here), which is a clean animal, was to be given to Him.

This is the first time that the word padah, or "redeem" is used in the Bible. It will be used four times here, three in verse 13 and again in 15. It can mean to rescue, ransom, deliver, etc. It is given as a way of purchasing a life from death or servitude.

The donkey belonged to the Lord, but it was an unclean animal. Nothing unclean was to be given to the Lord and so an exchange needed to take place - a life for a life. If you're not seeing Christ and the people of the world in the three verses we've looked at so far, you're not looking very hard. An important point concerning this substitution is noted by John Lange -

"The substitution of a sheep or kid for the ass is a proof that the unclean beast signifies not the evil, but the profane, that which is not fitted to serve as a religious symbol." John Lange

His words are correct and they strike at the heart of what is known as "original sin." Just because something or someone isn't evil, it is still profane. It is unacceptable to be in the Lord's presence or to be used as a vessel for the Lord. Until something or someone goes from profane to consecrated, it remains profane.

What happens with the land, what happens with the animals, and how these things relate to the Lord and where the Lord's people are heading, are all tied up in the work of Christ. A life for a life is demanded. If that didn't take place in order to redeem, then something else had to happen...

13 (con't) and if you will not redeem it, then you shall break its neck.

If no lamb was offered as a substitute, it was to have its neck broken. The verb for "break its neck" is araph which comes from the noun oreph, or the "back of the neck." This is the first of six uses of it in the Bible. It is the root of where the name Orpah comes from. She was one of the principles in the book of Ruth.

Understanding her name and what she did is all tied up in the use of this word in this verse. Seemingly unimportant words carry throughout the Bible and unveil beautiful pictures of the work of the Lord for the people of the world.

In the case of the donkey, breaking its neck might seem harsh to our sensibilities, but there is a reason for it. And if we think about it, the little lamb still had to die in its place if the donkey's neck wasn't broken. The difference between a knife at the throat of a lamb, or the snapping of the neck of the donkey is really irrelevant.

In the end, dead is dead. The owner of the animal was given the choice, "Do I want to keep the donkey and sacrifice the lamb, or do I want the lamb and kill the donkey." A donkey would be considered more valuable than a mere lamb because it was a beast of burden. Again, it is a picture of Christ. What great value is placed upon the soul of a man! Jesus said in Matthew 16 -

"If anyone desires to come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me. 25 For whoever desires to save his life will lose it, but whoever loses his life for My sake will find it. 26 For what profit is it to a man if he gains the whole world, and loses his own soul? Or what will a man give in exchange for his soul?" Matthew 16:24-26

Believe it or not, what we are seeing in these otherwise seemingly obscure verses is the heart of God calling out to us. The words are reflective of a choice every single one of us must make. We will either be redeemed by the Lamb and remain in the Lord's presence, or we will die apart from the Lord. The firstborn is given as a picture of the whole. As Matthew Henry clearly states -

"The firstlings of beast not used in sacrifice, were to be changed for others so used, or they were to be destroyed. Our souls are forfeited to God's justice, and unless ransomed by the sacrifice of Christ, will certainly perish." Matthew Henry 13 (con't) And all the firstborn of man among your sons you shall redeem.

If the pictures of the animals aren't clear enough, these words should be. "The firstborn of man" are the words bechor adam. It is the same word adam used to describe the first man, Adam. Of the sons of Adam, or man, the firstborn was to be redeemed. What this implies - what it even shouts out, is that man is unclean and must be redeemed.

This redemption is later clarified in Numbers 3. The Levites were to be taken in place of the firstborn and they were to be dedicated to the Lord. After that, each firstborn beyond the number of Levites was to be redeemed for five shekels according to the sanctuary currency. Here are those directions -

"Then the Lord spoke to Moses, saying: 45 'Take the Levites instead of all the firstborn among the children of Israel, and the livestock of the Levites instead of their livestock. The Levites shall be Mine: I am the Lord. 46 And for the redemption of the two hundred and seventy-three of the firstborn of the children of Israel, who are more than the number of the Levites, 47 you shall take five shekels for each one individually; you shall take them in the currency of the shekel of the sanctuary, the shekel of twenty gerahs. 48 And you shall give the money, with which the excess number of them is redeemed, to Aaron and his sons.'" Numbers 3:44-48

Two key points should be deduced from these words concerning the firstborn male. The first is that the firstborn merely represented all of Israel at their birth.

Thus the entire nation was to be consecrated to the Lord and it was to be considered a priestly nation in this firstborn consecration.

The second key point I've already given, but it needs to be repeated. Men are unclean by nature. If the firstborn, who represented the whole needed to be redeemed, then it follows that all men need to be redeemed. Israel was selected to be a kingdom of priests and a holy nation, as is anticipated in this chapter. The Lord told them this specifically though in Exodus 19:5, 6 -

"Now therefore, if you will indeed obey My voice and keep My covenant, then you shall be a special treasure to Me above all people; for all the earth is Mine. 6 And you shall be to Me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation.' These are the words which you shall speak to the children of Israel."

This right transfers to the church, the people of the Lord now. This is noted in these words from Revelation 1 -

"To Him who loved us and washed us from our sins in His own blood, 6 and has made us kings and priests to His God and Father, to Him be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen." Revelation 1:5, 6

Christ, the perfect and unstained Lamb of God redeemed us, fallen and unclean, and set us apart, consecrated us, and even exalted us. Not because we deserve it, but because of His great love with which He has loved us.

14 So it shall be, when your son asks you in time to come,

The word "time to come" is makhar - literally tomorrow. It is an interesting way of saying that whenever the question is asked, an answer should be ready, because he may ask "tomorrow." When the question is asked, the answer is to be ready on the lips...

14 (con't) saying, 'What is this?' that you shall say to him, 'By strength of hand the Lord brought us out of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

Listen to the similarity between this and verse 8 from last week -

"And you shall tell your son in that day, saying, 'This is done because of what the Lord did for me when I came up from Egypt.'" Exodus 13:8

Again, a clue and a hint are given tying the setting apart of the firstborn with the Feast of Unleavened Bread. The two are inseparable. One will not exist without the other. We must be redeemed in order to be unleavened, and if we are redeemed, then we truly are unleavened. Paul tells us this in 1 Corinthians 5 -

"Therefore purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new lump, (1) since you truly are unleavened. For indeed (2) Christ, our Passover, was sacrificed for us." 1 Corinthians 5:7

Next, he tells us how we should respond because of our status -

"Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, nor with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." 1 Corinthians 5:8

In this verse is the second of five uses of the noun khozeq or "strength of hand" to be found in Scripture. It is the stronger form of the more commonly used verb khazaq. It will be used again in verse 16, and not again until Amos 6:13 which we will get to in the year 2165. So enjoy its two uses today.

15 And it came to pass, when Pharaoh was stubborn about letting us go, that the Lord killed all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both the firstborn of man and the firstborn of beast. Therefore I sacrifice to the Lord all males that open the womb, but all the firstborn of my sons I redeem.'

As is found throughout Scripture, we see in this verse the concept of "recounting the works of the Lord." What He has done is to be remembered and to be repeated. And then in response to that recounting should be a "therefore." "Because of what the Lord has done, I therefore..."

A classic example of this is found in Acts 26. Paul first recounted the work of the Lord in his life from verses 12-18. He then gave an "I therefore" from verses 19-23. So it was with Israel, so it was with Paul, and so it should be with each of us.

One other point about this verse, it says here that "Pharaoh was stubborn" about letting the people go. The word here for "stubborn" is qashah. It was used only one other time in relation to Pharaoh. That was in Exodus 7:3 which said -

"And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply My signs and My wonders in the land of Egypt." Exodus 7:3

This might seem unimportant, but it is one final clue, of the dozens we saw concerning Pharaoh, that the hardening of Pharaoh was a passive one by the Lord and an active one by him. The only reason I bring this up is to remind you again that the Lord hints all the way through this account that free-will in man is a principle and correct tenet of theology.

16 It shall be as a sign on your hand and as frontlets between your eyes, for by strength of hand the Lord brought us out of Egypt."

Again, listen to the similarity of verse 16 to that of verse 9 from the instructions for the Feast of Unleavened Bread -

"It shall be as a sign to you on your hand and as a memorial between your eyes, that the Lord's law may be in your mouth; for with a strong hand the Lord has brought you out of Egypt."

This verse explicitly ties the consecration of the firstborn to the consecration of all of the people as is represented by the Feast of Unleavened Bread. The firstborn is given for the whole. Of interest though, there is also a contrast to this verse in the Bible.

The word "frontlets" is totaphoth. It is the first of only three times it is used in the Bible. It is also in Deuteronomy 6:8 and 11:8. It means "frontlets" as in something which is in front. This word was to be taken as a metaphor, not a literal thing. Now, note that this is verse 13:16. Let's place it side by side with Revelation 13:16 -

"It shall be as a sign on your hand and as frontlets between your eyes, for by strength of hand the Lord brought us out of Egypt." Exodus 13:16

"He causes all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and slave, to receive a mark on their right hand or on their foreheads." Revelation 13:16

This shows us, with all certainty that these words in Exodus are not to be taken as literal signs and frontlets as the Jews became in the habit of wearing. Rather, they represented the state of the person before the Lord. They are a mental acknowledgment of the work and lordship of Yehovah which is followed by an obedient action.

The words "and it shall be" refer to the words imparted to the son which are, "Therefore I sacrifice to the Lord all males that open the womb, but all the firstborn of my sons I redeem." That is what the sign and the frontlets were to be.

Likewise, the mark of the beast on the right or on the forehead is an acknowledgment of the work and lordship of the devil which is followed by an obedient action. They have acknowledged him and have taken either a vow, represented by the right hand, or an oath of assertion, represented by the forehead, to the antichrist. The mark may be visible, but it represented the setting apart of the individual to the devil.

This Lamb has taken my place
His life was given instead of mine
But because of this, I can look upon God's face
In a heavenly land, ever so sublime

What a cost, what a high price indeed
That God would pay with the Lamb's shed blood
O God, from the foundation of the earth it was decreed
That I would be a part of that cleansing flood

Redeemed! Saved and on the heavenly highway
Where that Lamb I shall finally see

Through His death, my pardon He did pay
And through the resurrection there is joy eternally

II. So God Led the People (verses 17-19)

17 Then it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God did not lead them by way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, "Lest perhaps the people change their minds when they see war, and return to Egypt."

This verse now takes us all the way back to verse 12:37 where the last note of travel was made. There it said that "the children of Israel journeyed from Rameses to Succoth." The narrative begins again, but it is still somewhat of a parenthetical thought.

Their first stop being Succoth, it would make sense that if they were heading to Canaan, that they would go by the way of the land of the Philistines because it was such a short, direct way to travel. It was a distance of about 200 miles and they could arrive in around 10 days to 2 weeks.

However, it says that God didn't allow this route. The Israelites had been in bondage for a long period, they probably were not well trained in war, and more probably they had either no weapons or very few with which to wage war. If they were to face war, they would become disheartened and would then rather turn back to Egypt than die in battle.

This is the explicit reason given and it may have been what was communicated directly to Moses, but as we will learn there were more reasons than this which will be forthcoming. 1) The people, including Moses, would be tempered through their reliance on the Lord. 2) The Lord would be magnified through the events at the Red Sea and the destruction of Pharaoh and his armies. 3) They would be brought to Mount Sinai in fulfillment of the promise made to Moses in Exodus 3:12. 4) They would be prepared as a commonwealth of people and as a religious nation with a body of law and a tabernacle for worship and meeting with God. 5) They would see the consequences of sin and rebellion against God. 6) They would be molded and prepared for entry into the Land of Promise. 7) They would be able to understand the bounty from personal labor because of the times of dependence on God when they could not work.

For these and certainly many other reasons, the longer and more difficult way through the wilderness was chosen to lead Israel out of the bondage of Egypt.

18 So God led the people around by way of the wilderness of the Red Sea.

It should be noted that the term Lord, meaning Yehovah, is mentioned 15 times in this chapter, but only once in these final 6 verses. On the other hand, the term "God" or elohim is used 4 times and all are in these last 6 verses. The last time the term "God" was used was back in chapter 10 - 7 times and always in conjunction with the term "Lord."

There is in this then an indication that what occurs in these verses is by the eternal counsel of God and that it was determined to come about as a part of the redemptive plan before creation itself. God personally supervises the details of this movement with, as we will see, the Lord leading the way.

Instead of being taken by way of the Philistines, it says that they are taken by "the way of the wilderness of the Red Sea." The Red Sea, or yam suph, was first mentioned in chapter 10 during the plague of locusts, but now we are entering into the account of the exodus where it will be mentioned three times.

And so it is a good time to look at the meaning of the words yam suph. Many translate this as "the sea of reeds" because suph means "reed." Because of this the account of crossing through the Red Sea is often denied and instead it is said that Israel simply passed through a shallow marsh or one of the bitter lakes.

This is nonsense. The word suph as a verb means "end," such as in the termination of something. Thus, the sea could be known as "the sea at the end," which could be in relation to the land of Israel where the land ends at one of the fingers of the Red Sea. This is seen in 1 Kings 9:26 which, uses the same term yam suph -

"King Solomon also built a fleet of ships at Ezion Geber, which is near Elath on the shore of the Red Sea, in the land of Edom." 1 Kings 9:26

The locations Elath and Edom show without a doubt what this means. Further, one would not build a fleet of ships for sailing in the ocean and place them in a marshy sea of reeds. And finally, there is only the simple job of going to the New Testament and reading the account of the exodus in Greek where the term Erythran Thalassan, or Red Sea, is used.

Thus it was always understood to be the Red Sea, not a swampy marsh of reeds. And, the name could even be a pun. The plague of locusts ended in the Red Sea and Pharaoh and his army will find their end there as well.

18 (con't)And the children of Israel went up in orderly ranks out of the land of Egypt.

The wording here is precise - they went up in "orderly ranks." It is an adjective plural word khamushim and it means specifically "battle array." It's used only four times in the Bible - Exodus, Joshua, and Judges.

Unlike paintings and movies which depict a hurried bunch of rag-tag people, the Bible actually depicts them as a well-ordered group in lines as if prepared for battle. The picture is marvelous and it gives one the sense of the Lord passing before His armies as they march to His lead.

19 And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him, for he had placed the children of Israel under solemn oath, saying, "God will surely visit you, and you shall carry up my bones from here with you."

This verse is given in fulfillment of Genesis 50:26 where Joseph prophesied that exactly this would occur. Of all of the notable deeds of Joseph, this was what he was most noted for. In Hebrews 11:22, this was written about him -

"By faith Joseph, when he was dying, made mention of the departure of the children of Israel, and gave instructions concerning his bones."

The words were spoken in faith, and the words were fulfilled by God who ensured that His people carried out what was spoken. Along with his bones, it appears from Acts 7:15, 16 that the bones of the other sons of Israel were also brought back with his. But the words here are expressly given to show the fulfillment of the oath.

God, from eternity past had a plan
Even before the world came to be
He would step out of eternity, Jesus the Man
So that the world His love could clearly see

He alone has led man out of the bondage of sin

And into the wonder of His glorious light
Yes, it's true; we were all but done in
But He stepped out of eternity to make all things right

Such a God! Such a Creator who would do this thing!
How my heart yearns to know Him more
And for all my days, His praises to sing
Someone please start the score

Let us sing a song of joy to Him now and forevermore
Won't someone please start that wonderful score!

III. The Lord Went before Them (verses 20-22)

20 So they took their journey from Succoth and camped in Etham at the edge of the wilderness.

At this verse, the parenthetical thought of the previous verses ends and the narrative of the exodus travels continues. From Succoth, Israel went to a place called Etham which is said to be at the edge, or literally "the end," of the wilderness. The name Etham could have one of quite a few meanings - with them; their plowshare; fortress; their sign; their strength; and maybe others.

Each scholar has attempted to define the name based on the meaning of the letters as they are structured - either from a Hebrew or an Egyptian context. None I read seemed to connect the meaning to the text itself. However, if we do that, the name seems likely. The name Succoth was given to us for a reason. Etham, like Succoth, doesn't have to be the name of the place at the time of their arrival, but the name given to the place upon their arrival.

They went from Succoth, meaning "tabernacles" and its meaning was intended to show the state of Israel at the time. Now Etham is mentioned and it must be for the same reason. If the account drives the meaning, then the next verse explains the meaning...

21 And the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of cloud to lead the way, and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light, so as to go by day and night.

Albert Barnes says a fire and smoke signals were used by Greeks and Persians in their marches. One ancient papyrus is said to call the commander of an Egyptian army "A flame in the darkness at the head of his soldiers." As he says, "By this sign then of the pillar of cloud, the Lord showed Himself as their leader and general."

Israel is at the edge of the wilderness, camped and ready to move on, but now for the first time it mentions this new development. The term "Lord," meaning Yehovah, is now reintroduced into the narrative instead of elohim or "God." It is with this marvelous description - the cloud and the pillar of fire that He is described.

The introduction of the manifestation of the Lord is being tied to the name Etham. And so Etham means "Their Sign" because it is what is being portrayed. He is their sign to move, where to move, and when to move. He is their sign of comfort and reassurance, He is their sign that He is with them.

If Etham is pointing us to the manifestation of the Lord and it means "Their Sign" then Paul's words in 1 Corinthians take on a much more meaningful sense -

"Moreover, brethren, I do not want you to be unaware that all our fathers were under the cloud, all passed through the sea, 2 all were baptized into Moses in the cloud and in the sea," 1 Corinthians 10:1, 2

The people were baptized into the cloud as well as the sea. Thus it is a sign to the people of the process of their redemption. As always, this is a literal account which is prophetically picturing the work of the Lord Jesus on behalf of His people. This is with all certainty because Paul says in 1 Corinthians that it is Christ who led them in the wilderness.

22 He did not take away the pillar of cloud by day or the pillar of fire by night from before the people.

Both Numbers and Deuteronomy show that the pillar of cloud and fire remained with Israel all the way through their years of wilderness wanderings. In Exodus 14, it notes that the pillar is both fire and cloud at the same time. The fire would be evident at night and the cloud would obscure the fire during the day.

Psalm 105 shows that the cloud not only directed them, but it also provided a covering for them -

"He spread a cloud for a covering,
And fire to give light in the night." Psalm 105:39

And this same manifestation is referred to in Isaiah 4 as being there for the people in the millennial reign of Christ, after the tribulation period. Here are those wondrous words -

"And it shall come to pass that he who is left in Zion and remains in Jerusalem will be called holy—everyone who is recorded among the living in Jerusalem. 4 When the Lord has washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion, and purged the blood of Jerusalem from her midst, by the spirit of judgment and by the spirit of burning, 5 then the Lord will create above every dwelling place of Mount Zion, and above her assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day and the shining of a flaming fire by night. For over all the glory there will be a covering. 6 And there will be a tabernacle for shade in the daytime from the heat, for a place of refuge, and for a shelter from storm and rain." Isaiah 4:3-6

Everything about the words today - even all of Exodus 13 - show us, time and again, the work of Jesus Christ on behalf of His people. The people must be redeemed, the people must be consecrated and sanctified, and the people who are will then be accepted by the Lord and will be led by Him.

And to get a better mental picture before we finish, we can again consider the stupid donkey and the innocent lamb. The value of a donkey is figured greater than that of a lamb, and yet a donkey had to be redeemed by a lamb.

The world looks at the value of Jesus as very little, but without the shedding of the blood of that holy Lamb, the greatest man on earth cannot be redeemed. What a great thing God has done for us! How marvelous are His ways! And once redeemed, He is there to lead us every step of the way.

We may feel we are at the edge of the wilderness, or even completely swallowed up in it, but the Lord is there... the Lord is there. Let us not fear! The Lord is there. If you haven't yet committed to this wondrous, beautiful Savior, please let me tell you how you can today - even right now...

Closing Verse: "Thus says the Lord, your Redeemer,
The Holy One of Israel:
"I am the Lord your God,
Who teaches you to profit,
Who leads you by the way you should go." Isaiah 48:17

Next Week: Exodus 14:1-9 (The Lord is Watching) (39th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Their Sign

And it shall be, when the Lord brings you
Into the land of the Canaanites, as He swore
To you and your fathers to do
And gives it to you, these directions do not ignore
That you shall set apart to the Lord
All that open the womb, that is, every firstborn
That comes from an animal which you have, heed my word
The males shall be the Lord's, I now warn
But every firstborn of a donkey
You shall redeem with a lamb
And if you will not redeem it with that fee

Then you shall break its neck according to this program
And all the firstborn of man's bloodstream
Among your sons you shall redeem
So it shall be, when your son asks you
In time to come, saying, 'What is this?'
That you shall say to him, 'By strength of hand it is true
My following words do not miss...

The Lord out of Egypt us He brought Out of the house of bondage
This great deed He wrought
And it came to pass
When Pharaoh was stubborn about letting us go
That the Lord killed all the firstborn
In the land of Egypt, even so

Both the firstborn of man and the firstborn of beast
From the greatest of them, even to the least
Therefore I sacrifice to the Lord
All males that open the womb, it would seem
According to His divine word
But all the firstborn of my sons I redeem
It shall be as a sign on your hand
And as frontlets between your eyes

For by strength of hand the Lord brought us out of Egypt the land
While Egypt was filled with mournful cries
Then it came to pass on that day
When Pharaoh had let the people go
That God did not lead them by the way
Of the land of the Philistines that was near although

For God said, "Lest perhaps the people their minds do change
When they see war, and return to Egypt
And for freedom, instead bondage they exchange
So God led the people around by way
Of the wilderness of the Red Sea
And the children of Israel went up that day
On orderly ranks out of the land of Egypt, hooray and yippee!

And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him
For he had placed the children of Israel under solemn oath, saying
"God will surely visit you, and you shall carry up my bones
From here with you as I am now relaying
So they took their journey from Succoth
And camped in Etham at the edge of the wilderness
And the Lord went before them by day as we note
In a pillar of cloud to lead the way, the means of egress

And by night in a pillar of fire to give them light
So as to go by day and by night, following the glorious sight
He did not take away the pillar of cloud by day
Or the pillar of fire before the people by night
The Lord is there to always lead the way
In the path which is just and right

Such a wonderful story God has given to us
To tell of His wondrous redemption plan
And it is all focused on Jesus
And what He has done for each of us, fallen man

Thank You, O God for Jesus Christ our Lord
Our precious Savior, Your eternal word

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 14:1-9 (THE LORD IS WATCHING)

Today's sermon was one of my favorite to type in a long time. It went quickly, it gave me some fun challenges as far as names and such, and it continues to bring us ever closer to that wondrous story that has been told and retold for thousands of years.

Like the Passover, what lies ahead of Israel is something that really identifies them as a people. No other group has ever been brought through the deep waters of an ocean as if on dry land. It is an honor and it is a responsibility. Unfortunately, throughout their history, they have forgotten the honor and they have neglected the responsibility.

But haven't we all? How often do we forget that these stories picture our own process of salvation? And that occurred, obviously, in our own lifetime. And yet, at times we act as if it either never happened, or that it doesn't really have the significance of walking.... through a deep ocean.

But I tell you that the cross of Jesus Christ was infinitely more significant than the death of a mere lamb. And being led to the point where a deep ocean lies in front of us is nothing compared to the span we will travel at the rapture. Let's keep these things in perspective, huh!

One of the places we will hear about today is called Baal Zephon. I will identify that with Lord when we get to that verse. But most people think of baal as a bad word... we can't tie that in with the Lord, can we? Actually, baal simply means "master" or "lord."

And so when we get to that verse, I want to prepare you with another place in Scripture where the word baal is ascribed to the Lord. That way you don't panic when I give you my thoughts.

Text Verse: "So David went to Baal Perazim, and David defeated them there; and he said, 'The Lord has broken through my enemies before me, like a breakthrough of water.' Therefore he called the name of that place Baal Perazim." 2 Samuel 5:20

See, that wasn't so tough. David named the place Baal Perazim because it is the Lord, Yehovah who broke through his enemies like a breakthrough of water. Great stuff from another great story! Let's get into today's story now. Times a'wasting and those verses won't evaluate themselves now, will they?

All kind of great stuff is to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Wilderness Has Closed Them In (verses 1-3)

1 Now the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

Chapter 14 begins with the first thought being divided into two separate verses, off-setting the introduction into its own verse. Although not uncommon, dividing verses this way is the exception rather than the rule. In fact, it is the only time a verse is divided this way in all of chapter 14.

As always, I try to highlight these unusual divisions because they lengthen the number of verses in a chapter and thus the number of verses in the Bible. And yet, looking at patterns which run through the Bible based on verse divisions, it becomes apparent that these offset sections of single sentences were necessary to form those patterns.

It shows wisdom behind the structure of the Bible which is far more than mere chance could ever allow. In this verse, scholars debate as to whether this should say "Now the Lord had spoken to Moses," or "Now the Lord spoke to Moses."

From the context, it can't really be determined if these words came before their departure or during the journey and it doesn't substantially change the narrative in any way to translate it either way.

2 “Speak to the children of Israel, that they turn and camp before Pi Hahiroth,

Depending on the map one chooses to believe concerning the route of the exodus, one may say that the crossing of the Red Sea was merely crossing through a shallow marsh in the area of the Bitter Lakes. Or, it could be a crossing of the western finger of the Red Sea between Egypt and the Sinai Peninsula.

Or, more recently others will claim that the travel that we are looking at in this verse would lead us all the way down to the southern tip of the Sinai Peninsula and that the crossing is in the east finger of the Red Sea and into where Saudi Arabia is today.

Each trek is adamantly adhered to by those who believe they are right, no matter how wrong they really are. The first option is utter nonsense. It was not a shallow marsh that consumed the entire Egyptian army. That will become obvious when we get to that sermon.

The third option, although very popular today, is unlikely at best. It is supposedly based on Paul's words of Galatians 4:25 which say that Mount Sinai is in Arabia. However, Arabia of today does not reflect the entirety of the same area known as Arabia in the past.

The Sinai Peninsula is known as Arabia Petraea and so there is no reason to believe that Mt. Sanai is in what is known as Saudi Arabia today, despite many wild claims which are wholly unsubstantiated.

Additionally, the distance from Egypt to the southern tip of the Sinai Peninsula is over 200 miles. As only three stops are recorded from Rameses to the edge of the Red Sea, it is not to be believed that 2 million people would walk that distance in a mere 72 hours.

Rather, the route of these journeys would have taken them down the west side of the west finger of the Red Sea to a point known as Pi Hahiroth. The first route was to the south-east, with the Bitter Lakes to their left, still within the borders of Egypt.

Eventually, the route which we are given in this verse moves them from south-east to heading south, with the Red Sea on their left, but still within the borders of Egypt. As they moved without the Egyptians harassing them, there would have been no reason to worry as they followed the pillar of cloud and fire.

That this route is obviously the correct one is that Pharaoh would know they were still in his territory and were completely cut off from any avenue of escape or even defense. His words later will confirm this and it is the reason why, once again, his heart becomes hard. The Lord is setting up a marvelous miracle to occur.

Understanding this, the words for the children of Israel to turn and camp before Pi Hahiroth are clear. In essence, "Go south along the western edge of the Red Sea to a place called Pi Hahiroth. The Hebrew reads v'yakhanu liphne pi ha'khiroth - "and camp in the face of the mouth of Hahiroth."

The word pi means "mouth" and ha'khiroth means "the gorges." It comes from the feminine plural of a noun which then comes from the word khor which means "hole." Thus the picture is that they will camp in the face of the mouth of the gorges.

This then forms an exciting mental picture of what is happening. The Lord has directed the children of Israel south with the Red Sea at their left to a place of encampment that has gorges facing them from the west. In other words, they will be completely hemmed in.

There will be no way to escape to the east, or to the north. Being on foot, continuing south along the Red Sea would only end in futility as it would eventually run into more mountains and garrisons. Should someone come attacking them, they would be literally hemmed in with their backs to the ocean. It appears that only death and destruction would be possible in such a place.

2 (con't) between Migdol and the sea,

Migdol comes from the word gadal which means to "grow up" or "become great." Thus Migdol means "tower." The location for the encampment was between the sea and a place with a large natural or man-made tower.

This would probably have been manned as an outpost and word of their travels would have easily been dispatched from there to Pharaoh. It seems intentional that Migdol is mentioned for this very purpose. It is meant to show us that a report made it back to Pharaoh that this giant contingent of people had taken up camp on the shores of the Red Sea.

2 (con't) opposite Baal Zephon;

Like Pi Hahiroth and Migdol, the location of this place cannot be identified. All three of them are lost to time, but it could be that the names were simply names given at the time that they were used by the Israelites, not as specific names of known locations.

Baal Zephon means either Lord of Darkness, Lord of the North, or Lord of the Watch. The third seems appropriate. The root for this word is sapa, which "conveys the idea of being fully aware of a situation in order to gain some advantage or keep from being surprised by an enemy" (HAW).

It is exactly what the Lord is doing here, he is fully aware of the situation and He will certainly gain advantage of it. Further, He is in no way surprised by the coming enemy. In fact, He is merely awaiting their arrival. This place, Baal Zephon, would be on the opposite side of the Red Sea from Pi Hahiroth.

2 (con't) you shall camp before it by the sea.

The directions here are specific; the Israelites are to camp on the shore of the sea, across from, or "before," Baal Zephon on the other side of the sea. From a survey of Google Maps, there is a place at the northern tip of the west finger of the Red Sea known today as Ataqah which has a jutting beachhead big enough for several million people to camp.

Across from it is another jutting beachhead, a little to the north and the east of it. It is close to the area where the Suez Canal now ends. But it is also believed that the Red Sea went further north in the past and so it could be that the Exodus occurred in what is now dry land. But that is unlikely because the land is flat with no gorges to the west.

The scholar Lange agrees that this account is in the area of Ataqah. It very well matches the description. From this location, you can see directly across the Red Sea to Sinai. In reality, it is close enough to have been reached in three stops. No matter what, it is enticing to look at real images of the area and to speculate.

3 For Pharaoh will say of the children of Israel, 'They are bewildered by the land; the wilderness has closed them in.'

From these words, it is apparent that Pharaoh was instructed by his outposts of the location of the Israelites. It also shows that he knew their position was unfavorable for them to get away. With this verse, we can dismiss the possibility that they were already in the Sinai Peninsula and heading for modern Saudi Arabia.

They were certainly within the borders of Egypt and along the west side of the western finger of the Red Sea. The word for "bewildered" is buk. It's used only here, in Esther, and in Job. It means "confused."

The "wilderness" of this verse is speaking of the area between the Nile valley and the Red Sea. It is, even today if you look at it on Google Earth, a vast, empty wilderness. Even at Pharaoh's time there would have been a highway along the sea, but with the mountains and wadis, deserts, and garrisons it would be impossible for such a group of people to easily head west.

What he sees as confusion is actually a trap for his hard heart to be ensnared by.
The temptation is too great for this hardened fool.

Baal Zephon is on the other side of the sea

Why did the Lord even mention that to me?

Here we are at Pi Hahiroth, and between us is plenty

And I mean plenty of water, an entire sea

I was told to camp here, between Migdol and the sea

Opposite Baal Zephon is the place that He instructed me

The folks in that watchtower don't have intentions so friendly

But we are here because we were told to camp before it by the sea

Trust and obey, this is what the Lord has directed me

And so here we are, camping by the sea

The Lord is Watching, I say that quite confidently

As we sit across from Baal Zephon just as the Lord instructed me

II. I Will Gain Honor Over Pharaoh (verses 4 & 5)

4 Then I will harden Pharaoh's heart, so that he will pursue them;

Again, as has been seen in every mentioning of the hardening of Pharaoh's heart in the exodus account, it is obvious from the context that by the things the Lord has caused to occur the hardening of Pharaoh's heart is only passive by the Lord.

The previous verse shows us this with clarity. It said, "For Pharaoh will say of the children of Israel, 'They are bewildered by the land; the wilderness has closed them in.'" The events have been orchestrated by the Lord, Pharaoh has hungrily lusted after the events, and Pharaoh has willingly yielded to his lusts.

We have not found one instance of the hardening of Pharaoh's heart where the hardening has been active by the Lord. It would be good to remember this as a guide and a lesson to each of us concerning our theology. We are responsible for our actions, even if the events around us prompt us to make them.

In the end, through good times or evil, we must be willing to keep our hearts soft to the things of God and ready to accept His divine will for us, even if we find it contrary to what we desire.

4 (con't) and I will gain honor over Pharaoh and over all his army,

We have to remember and not forget that these words are being spoken to Moses. He may not yet know what will occur, but he knows that whatever the Lord has in mind, it will come to pass. He has already seen Egypt defeated and now he is given a promise that the Lord will gain honor over Pharaoh and over all his army.

The term for "and I will gain honor" is v'ikabedah. It is a verb which signifies heaviness or weight. In the context of the Lord's action then, it means that He will be glorified over Pharaoh by His actions.

4 (con't) that the Egyptians may know that I am the Lord."

Verse 4 is a close parallel to what the Lord said to Moses in Chapter 7, just prior to his first meeting with Pharaoh. There we read these words -

And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply My signs and My wonders in the land of Egypt. 4 But Pharaoh will not heed you, so that I may lay My hand on Egypt and bring My armies and My people, the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt by great judgments. 5 And the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord, when I stretch out My hand on Egypt and bring out the children of Israel from among them."

Unfortunately, this concept of someone knowing that He is the Lord carries with it an often sad connotation. The book of Ezekiel in particular shows us what it really means. Around 60 times in that book, He says that so and so will "know that I am the Lord."

Almost always it is in conjunction with just one of two thoughts - divine judgment or divine mercy. In the case of Egypt, they will come to know that He is the Lord through the former when they are destroyed in the Red Sea. The implication is that they will know who He is only after their fate is sealed. The reality of that occurrence becomes assured with the final words of verse 4...

4 (con't) And they did so.

Knowing the obstinate nature of the man, the ploy worked. Report came to Pharaoh that the Israelites were apparently lost and hemmed in, and so he followed his natural instinct, taking along with him his forces. As Adam Clark comments on this verse -

"...without any farther restraining grace, God permits him to rush on to his final ruin, for the cup of his iniquity was now full." Adam Clarke

5 Now it was told the king of Egypt that the people had fled,

This is the first time that Pharaoh has been called "the king of Egypt" since Exodus 6:29, 22 sermons ago. From that verse until now, the title "Pharaoh" has been used 72 times. Now he is again called "king of Egypt."

During all of those verses the Lord gives the stubborn individual a marvelous display of His power and majesty, showing him who the true King is. However, as soon as the displays are behind him, he once again reverts to his previous arrogance, and the Bible portrays him as attempting to bring himself up to the level of the true King.

The contrast is being made between the two peoples, Israel and the Egyptians. He is the king of Egypt, but he is not the king of Israel. However, this verse implies that he thinks he is because they are called "the people," not "the children of Israel."

Only in the second half of the verse do we come to see Israel named and it is in the context of their service to Egypt. It is following simple words like this that we find wonderful hidden nuggets of gold in the Bible's pages.

5 (con't) and the heart of Pharaoh and his servants was turned against the people; and they said, "Why have we done this, that we have let Israel go from serving us?"

Almost all scholars look at this as Pharaoh realizing that Israel would not come back to Egypt after their sacrifices which entailed a three-day journey into the wilderness. They say that when Pharaoh made this realization, he then pursued after them.

This is entirely incorrect. A three-day journey into the wilderness implies a 7-day trip if only one day were to be for sacrifice and worship. Israel has had three stops - Succoth, Etham, and now Pi Hahiroth - seven days haven't passed yet. Pharaoh had simply dismissed Israel and now he had simply changed his mind.

After a couple of days of seeing the loss of labor by several million people, it would have suddenly become apparent to him that they had made a mistake. As he says with his own mouth, "Why have we done this, that we have let Israel go from serving us?"

Also, the NKJV makes it sound like the hearts of Pharaoh and his servants were turned against their own people. This isn't the intent. Rather, it was changed towards Israel. The NIV makes a clearer translation in this matter -

"When the king of Egypt was told that the people had fled, Pharaoh and his officials changed their minds about them and said, 'What have we done? We have let the Israelites go and have lost their services!'" (NIV)

Pharaoh and his officials had not only let Israel go to sacrifice, but they had let them go, period. Now they have had a change of heart in that decision. Matthew Henry gives us a good look into their pitiful state -

"They who never truly repented of their sins, now heartily repent of their only good action." Matthew Henry

Why have I let Israel go? I must have been nuts for sure

With my son buried, right reason has returned to me

For sure one thing I know, this situation cannot endure

And I hear that Israel is out camping by the sea

This time I can whoop up on them; I am Egypt's god!
Yehovah has spent His last arrow, now I will find victory
This land is mine, everywhere that I may trod
And that includes Israel's camp, there beside the sea

After I'm done with my whooping up on Israel
I know what I will do, and it just tickles me
Before heading back, this to my troops I will tell
Well done guys! Let's all take a swim in that sea...

III. And the Lord Hardened the Heart of Pharaoh (verses 6-9)

6 So he made ready his chariot and took his people with him.

The Hebrew is more descriptive than the English here. Using the word asar, it says that he "bound" his chariot. It means that the chariot was bound to horses and prepared for battle. The English simply makes it sound like he checked the air pressure in the tires, made sure the windshield was clean, and was then ready to go.

This is only the second time this word for chariot has been used. The first was at the burial of Jacob in Genesis 50. There in the 9th verse, it says that chariots and horsemen went in attendance as his body was taken back to Canaan for burial.

The word for "chariot" is rekev. It comes from the verb rakav, meaning "to ride." In modern lingo, we could say that "he readied his ride." And along with him, he took his people. All would be prepared for intimidating Israel back to their home in Rameses at the least. Should that be refused, they would be prepared for battle.

The Pulpit Commentary gives a description of the chariot Pharaoh would have used -

"The Egyptian monarchs, from the time of the eighteenth dynasty, always went out to war in a chariot. The chariots were, like the Greek and the Assyrian, open behind, and consisted of a semicircular standing-beard of wood, from which rose in a graceful curve the antyx or rim to the height of about two feet and a half above the standing-beard. The chariot had two wheels and a pole, and was drawn by two horses. It ordinarily contained two men only, the warrior and the charioteer." Pulpit Commentary

7 Also, he took six hundred choice chariots,

In verse 7, there is a distinction being made which isn't apparent in many of our translations. These first six hundred chariots are called "choice chariots." These were probably the king's special guard. Nothing more is said about them to describe their style or their function. However, the second group is more descriptive...

7 (con't) and all the chariots of Egypt with captains over every one of them.

These would be the rest of the army of chariots. These would have had three riders in each. Adam Clarke details their make-up -

"According to the most authentic accounts we have of war-chariots, they were frequently drawn by two or by four horses, and carried three persons: one was charioteer, whose business it was to guide the horses, but he seldom fought; the second chiefly defended the charioteer; and the third alone was properly the combatant." Adam Clarke

The way we can know that this is a correct evaluation is that the term "captains" in Hebrew is shaliyshim. It is the first use of the word "shaliysh" in the Bible and it comes from the word shalosh, or three. This word shaliysh is used then as an officer of the third rank. He would be the highest over the chariot.

As you can see, it is not "just" 600 chariots going after Egypt. It is 600 choice chariots and an unknown number of troop-carrying chariots. Flavius Josephus, the Jewish historian says that along with them went fifty thousand horsemen, and two hundred thousand foot-men, all armed. Whether this amount is true or not, it still would be an imposing force hurtling towards Israel.

8 And the Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt,

This is the last time that the full title "Pharaoh king of Egypt" will be used when speaking of this man. He is being set in direct contrast to the Lord who is the King of Israel. The people are separated by the distance and a battle will ensue between them.

But more to reality, it will be the Lord who fights against Egypt and it will be He who will prevail. As we will see in the coming verses, Moses will tell the people -

“Do not be afraid. Stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord, which He will accomplish for you today. For the Egyptians whom you see today, you shall see again no more forever. 14 The Lord will fight for you, and you shall hold your peace.” Exodus 14:13, 14

In anticipation of that awesome moment, we are told again that the Lord has hardened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt. All of the events have unfolded for this marvelous purpose. The Lord is not only the Redeemer and Deliverer of His people, but He is also the Destroyer of those who fight against Him.

As the Lord does not change, it is with all certainty that the world of today has miscalculated this particular role of Jesus. Yes, He is our Redeemer and Savior. He is the One who will also deliver us. But while He does those things, He will also come with a strong and punishing hand to destroy those who have not pursued Him.

8 (con't) and he pursued the children of Israel;

This portion of the verse is not to be taken as one group running as another chases it. It simply means that Pharaoh left his domain in pursuit of Israel. They are already at Pi Hahiroth and the message has already been transmitted to him. He is simply heading there to recapture the people who had departed.

8 (con't) and the children of Israel went out with boldness.

Unless these words are being used in the past tense to show what happened on the night of the Passover, the translation doesn't make any sense. In the coming verses, it will show that Israel is more than fearful when they see the Egyptians coming.

What makes much more sense would be one of two other translations. The ISV says -

"The LORD made the heart of Pharaoh, king of Egypt, stubborn, and he defiantly pursued the Israelis as they were leaving." ISV

This makes the defiance an act of Pharaoh. The only other translation that would make any real sense is that of the Douay-Rheims Bible which says -

"...and he pursued the children of Israel: but they were gone forth in a mighty hand." Douay-Rheims

In other words, it would be speaking of the strength of the Lord in contrast to the multitudes who are now coming against Him. It is not speaking of the confidence of Israel. Either way, this has much less to do with their confidence than it has to do with the showdown between the Lord and Pharaoh, as is evidenced by the next verse...

9 So the Egyptians pursued them, all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, his horsemen and his army,

One thing about this verse is that it confirms that not only chariots went to recapture Israel, but the cavalry and the army followed them as well. The force Pharaoh had mustered would normally be sufficient to handle whatever lay before it, knowing that the Israelites would not have been well armed and that they were encamped in an area which was impossible for them as a defensive battleground.

However, there is more than an arm of flesh to defend Israel. During the reign of Hezekiah, king of Judah, Sennacherib king of Assyria came against Jerusalem. Probably remembering this very account of the exodus of Israel, he spoke these words to encourage the people who had to defend against the overwhelming Assyrian force -

“Be strong and courageous; do not be afraid nor dismayed before the king of Assyria, nor before all the multitude that is with him; for there are more with us than with him. 8 With him is an arm of flesh; but with us is the Lord our God, to help us and to fight our battles.” 2 Chronicles 32:7,8

In response to the boastings of Sennacherib and his attack against Jerusalem, we are told that the Lord went out and in a single night killed 185,000 Assyrians. Because of this, the Assyrian king packed up and left. Like Pharaoh and like Sennacherib, Matthew Henry provides wise words for those who fail to give the Lord the honor He is due -

"All men being made for the honour of their Maker, those whom he is not honoured by, he will be honoured upon." Matthew Henry

9 (fin) and overtook them camping by the sea beside Pi Hahiroth, before Baal Zephon.

Exactly where they were told to camp, Israel stopped and made camp. One can see the children splashing in the ocean and picking up curious rocks or shells. The majority of them had probably never seen the ocean in their life. Instead of the hard bondage of Egypt, they could sit and relax, enjoying the cool breeze of the spring winds off the sea.

Instead of hands and bodies agonizingly covered in mud, there would be bodies joyfully covered in sand. The harsh sun beating off the dull-colored mud flats would be replaced with the wonderful, blissful sun reflecting off the beautifully blue waters.

There they were... the multitudes of Israel, camping and relaxing in the presence of a new aspect of God's splendor, even reveling in it. And yet, they didn't know that danger was heading in their direction. The carefree attitude of freedom and ease would soon be replaced with another dreadful moment of fearful angst.

They had not had long to cherish their freedoms and so they would not know how to handle the feelings of trepidation they were soon to encounter. But if you think of it, even this fits so marvelously into God's plan. One can only truly rejoice in deliverance when they have tasted the contrast between the bondage and the ease.

A couple sermons ago, I mentioned that some Christian scholars attempt to align the resurrection of Christ with the day that Israel was conducted through the Red sea. However, this would not align with the table of stops recorded in Numbers 33. But, the Jewish calendar reckons the seventh day of the Feast of Unleavened bread with that day.

Accordingly, the final day of the Feast would be the day they passed through the waters of the Red Sea. If this is so, and it most probably is, then it means that Israel was camped at Pi Hahiroth for several days. It was surely a merry moment in the life of Israel and it would fit well with a seven-day feast which was ordained for the generations to come.

Here we have a serene picture of Israel camping for several days by the Red Sea, not suspecting that amazing things lay ahead of them, culminating in their seventh day of what would be true freedom - a day which would be remembered for all time.

It is the Lord who brought them into a place from which no known human power could deliver them. But the Lord could. The name Pi Hahiroth means "mouth of the gorges" and it gives the sense of their being swallowed up by something massive and overwhelming.

But on the other side from them was a place called Baal Zephon - "The Lord is Watching." Nothing would swallow His treasured possession, Israel. Instead, He would lead them right through Yam Suph, "the Sea of the Ending" and into a new beginning. A beautiful picture of the rapture of the church is seen in this crossing.

Oh! How the Lord loves His people. Those who have called out to Him for salvation, He will in fact save. He will deliver them from every trouble and woe and into a marvelous new beginning. We who are the redeemed of the Lord, be assured and know this. It is as certain as the air we breathe.

But someone listening today may not know the joy of this certain hope. You may still have a wall between you and the Creator; an infinite wall which is impossible to pass. Let me tell You about how to overcome even the impossible. Let me tell you about Jesus...

Closing Verse: "Thus I will magnify Myself and sanctify Myself, and I will be known in the eyes of many nations. Then they shall know that I am the Lord." Ezekiel 38:23

Israel forgot the great deeds of the Lord and they twice went into captivity for their forgetfulness. But the Lord has returned them, and Ezekiel 38 and 39 shows us that they will come to know their Lord as will the nations which surround them.

Here we are, waiting on the next big moment in redemptive history for Israel and for our next big moment at the rapture. I can tell you with all certainty that for those who know the Lord now, and who will be spared the great battles prophesied for our future, that we have the better deal. Your faith is worth more than fine gold.

Hold fast to it and be willing to share it with others. Our time is short and the church age is coming to its end. Pray for Israel, pray for the lost, and let the redeemed of the Lord say so.

Next Week: Exodus 14:10-20 (Stand Still and See the Salvation of the Lord) (40th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Lord is Watching

Now the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

“Speak to the children of Israel

That they turn and camp before Pi Hahiroth as I am relaying

These instructions to you I do tell

There between Migdol and the sea

Opposite Baal Zephon; you shall camp there

Before it by the sea, I tell you plainly

Worry not; in your heart have not a care

For Pharaoh will say of the children of Israel

‘They are bewildered by the land

The wilderness has closed them in, very well

I intend to go down there and make a stand
Then I will harden Pharaoh's heart
So that he will pursue them as I said
And I will gain honor over Pharaoh, as stated from the start
And over all the army of that knucklehead

That the Egyptians may know that I am the Lord
And they did so, according to His word
Now it was told the king of Egypt
That the people had fled
And the heart of Pharaoh and his servants
Was turned against the people; and they said

"Why have we done thus?
That we have let Israel go from serving us?
So he made ready his chariot and took his people with him
Also, he took six hundred choice chariots too
And all the chariots of Egypt
With captains over every one of them, a very large crew

And the Lord hardened the heart
Of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and as we would guess
He pursued the children of Israel
And the children of Israel went out with boldness

So the Egyptians pursued them
All the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, a great company
His horsemen and his army so many men
And overtook them camping by the sea

Beside Pi Hahiroth, before Baal Zephon
He probably thought such luck would go on and on What a tragic thing to have a hardened heart!
Terrifying it is, to the bone's very marrow
One should look for a different path and thus depart
From the horrendous mistakes that we see in Pharaoh

God has shown us in His precious word
That being obstinate toward Him can only harm us
Instead, we need to bow to our glorious Lord
Giving honor and respect to Christ Jesus
Help us in this Lord, this we implore
Our hearts are so easily turned away
Give us of Your Spirit to overflowing and even more
So that we will bring honor to you always, yes every day

And to You we give all of our highest praise
And to You we shall look for eternal days

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 14:10-20

(STAND STILL AND SEE THE SALVATION OF THE LORD)

In America, at least to this point, Christians have been safe and secure in their religious life. We have been allowed to worship freely, believe in the exclusivity of Jesus Christ as the only way to salvation, and to openly proclaim that anywhere and everywhere.

Now of course, with our current leadership, that is quickly changing. Our president is hostile to our faith and he is hostile to the values which established this country which are based on our faith. For us, the road will probably become difficult and we may face times of great trouble if we are willing to continue in our walk with the Lord.

His treasonous acts aside, this has been the standard for many of the world's Christians all along. They have had to choose between Christ and death and between the kingdom of Christ and that of the world. And for many the choice was easy - "I choose Jesus."

For others, their religion is only as strong as the next threat they face. In the movie, The Kingdom of Heaven, the Bishop and Patriarch of Jerusalem was faced with death as the muslim forces under Saladin came against the city. His words to the knight defending the city were, "Convert now, repent later." The knight's response was, "You've taught me a lot about religion, your Eminence."

Today's verses partially encompass a chiasm I found about seven years ago. The middle, or anchor, of that chiasm contains the words, "Let us alone that we may serve the Egyptians." Israel had seen the ten plagues, they had received release from their bondage, they had been directed by a pillar of cloud and fire, and yet, as soon as they start to face a minor threat in comparison to the works they had seen, they lose faith and begin to accuse Moses.

Is this the strength of your faith? To what extent are you willing to stand up for Jesus Christ? Millions and millions of Christians have been willing to die for Him and they will receive their reward. They continue to be slaughtered even now around the world due to the outright negligence, and belligerence against the Christian, by the president of the US.

And if he gets his way, we will soon face the same under him in our own land. What will be your answer? Will you be like the Bishop of Jerusalem and say, "Convert now, repent later?" Or will you be like Clint Eastwood and say "Go ahead, make my day!"? Me, "Send me home to Abba! Go ahead, make my day!"

Text Verse: "Salvation is of the Lord." Jonah 2:9

Salvation is of the Lord - from the beginning to the end. This is what the Bible proclaims. He saves us despite ourselves, and He continues to save us despite ourselves. And... He will carry us to His heavenly home. All who come to Him will be saved. Have faith in that and should your faith be tested, even to death, tell them to "Bring it on - I have a promise which is found in God's superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Salvation of the Lord (verses 10-14)

10 And when Pharaoh drew near, the children of Israel lifted their eyes, and behold, the Egyptians marched after them.

The last verse we looked at last week said -

"So the Egyptians pursued them, all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, his horsemen and his army, and overtook them camping by the sea beside Pi Hahiroth, before Baal Zephon." Exodus 14:9

This then explains the layout of the situation to us. They are at the Sea at a place called "the mouth of the gorges." What this means is that there was a body of water too large to traverse to the east. There were gorges to the west, implying a mountain range. And even if there was a highway which continued down along the banks of the Red Sea, it would have been narrow.

A flight for 2 million or so people would have meant that they would be cut down by the pursuing Egyptians as they fled. Further, there are eventually mountains which come right up to the sea along the coast. And so they would be blocked from a further flight south. This is the setting and the battle conditions in which they found themselves.

In all ways, they had their proverbial backs against the wall and the Egyptian army was coming. In other words, under normal circumstances, it is an impossible situation. There would be no exit and there would only be the expectation of death or re-capture.

10 (con't) So they were very afraid,

One question that some scholars have thrown out in order to diminish the truth of the Bible concerning the recorded numbers of people that the Exodus accounts claim is, "How could a group of people consisting of 603,550 fighting aged men be 'very afraid' of an army which could be no more than a third that size?"

Supposedly, there would actually be no comparison in the size of the force and it would seem that Israel would easily overcome and destroy Egypt. There are a multitude of reasons why this is more than an unsound attack against the narrative.

First, it is Israel who is boxed in with no real means of escape. Secondly, Israel is hampered by the fact that they have children, the aged, women, animals, and supplies to deal with.

Third, Israel would have been unarmed, Egypt would have been heavily armed, wearing military garments, and possessing chariots. Fourth, Israel was unaccustomed to battle; the Egyptians were highly trained soldiers, prepared for war.

The history of warfare is replete with smaller forces destroying larger forces because of training, available weapons, and experience. As I said, under any normal circumstances this was an impossible situation. But these were not normal circumstances as the next words show us...

10 (con't) and the children of Israel cried out to the Lord.

The very fact that Israel "cried out to the Lord" shows that they felt these were not normal circumstances concerning their plight. Rather, they were normal circumstances concerning their faith. Their plight was completely under control; their faith was completely out of control.

Those who knew that the Lord was capable of helping took advantage of the moment to call on Him. Those who didn't cried out to Him in anguish. As Matthew Henry says about this -

"Some cried out unto the Lord; their fear led them to pray, and that was well. God brings us into straits, that he may bring us to our knees." Henry

Crying out to the Lord doesn't always mean that strong faith is present. It simply means that there is nowhere else to cry out to. It is no different than the atheist who cries out "O God" when their child is dying at the scene of a car accident. Sometimes, the straits we face are a means of molding the little faith we do have.

Apparently though, Israel did not learn this, but instead redirected what should have been faith in God into anger at God's messenger.

11 Then they said to Moses, "Because there were no graves in Egypt, have you taken us away to die in the wilderness?"

There is an irony in these words which needs to be considered. Egypt was steeped in the worship of the dead. The bodies of the Egyptians were mummified as a means of obtaining eternal life. The graves of the Egyptians then were considered the place where life continued.

Egypt was a land full of tombs, and there was a necropolis in every city. Rather than such a place of burial in the "land of the tombs," Israel felt they would perish in the wilderness. It shows a forgetfulness of the promises made to the patriarchs and those which were repeated to them by the Lord through Moses.

It also shows the absurd nature of having brought up the bones of the patriarchs from Egypt. If it was the great place of hope and promise that they are implying, then it would have been better to leave the bones there.

Further, it cannot be said that they have faith in the Lord but lacked faith in Moses because of his bad choice of leading them to their present location. Scholars attempt to find this a reasonable explanation, but it is not. In Exodus 13, it said -

"And the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of cloud to lead the way, and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light, so as to go by day and night. 22 He did not take away the pillar of cloud by day or the pillar of fire by night from before the people." Exodus 13:21, 22

In just a few more verses, it will acknowledge that the pillar is still there with them at this time. The Lord is leading Moses and Moses is following Him ahead of the people. An attack on Moses then is an attack against the leading of the Lord.

Although a seeming diversion from the present plight, it is not unjustified to say that those who rebel against the properly taught word of the Lord are really only rebelling against the Lord. If for no other reason than to ensure that you know your Bible, it is a good enough one there to soberly consider doing so.

11 (con't) Why have you so dealt with us, to bring us up out of Egypt?

These words show a complete failure to remember the events of the previous days. They observed the Passover; they were entirely spared and yet Egypt collectively suffered and mourned. While they were leaving the land in the moonlight, the shrieks and howls of death would have permeated the night air.

At that time, the joy of ending the pain, toil, and bondage was fresh on their minds. Now, just a couple days since then, they have forgotten that they willingly marched with Moses and did so with all their possessions and with the promise that the Lord would be with them. And He was, as evidenced by the pillar they followed.

12 Is this not the word that we told you in Egypt, saying, 'Let us alone that we may serve the Egyptians'?

Lange says, "The exaggeration of their recollection of a doubt formerly expressed reaches the pitch of falsehood."

In other words, the people are mis-remembering and even lying concerning the situation. In Exodus 4 when Moses presented himself to the people with the signs from the Lord, this was recorded -

"So the people believed; and when they heard that the Lord had visited the children of Israel and that He had looked on their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshiped." Exodus 4:31

It is true that after that, times became difficult, but there is no record at all of them asking Moses to leave them alone in order to serve the Egyptians. There were times when they wouldn't heed Moses. Another time, the officers were angry with him, but they are never recorded as desiring to continue to serve the Egyptians.

As a point of interest, this portion of verse 12 is obviously very important to understand because a chiasm centers on its words. I came across this one in 2008 and it shows a picture of those who would rather serve the world than the Lord.

In other words, it is a classic picture of those who are called, who turn back to the world, and yet whom the Lord still delivers because of His immense love and mercy -

Exodus 13:21-14:20 – In the Wilderness (4/23/08)

Miracles and Complaints

a 13:21, 22 The pillar of cloud/fire led the way.

b 14:4 Harden Pharaoh's heart to gain honor over him.

c 14:9 Israel lifted their eyes and were very afraid.

d 14:11 ...to die in the wilderness

e 14:11 Why have you so dealt with us, to bring us up out of Egypt?

f 14:12 Let us alone that we may serve the Egyptians

e 14:12 It would have been better for us to serve the Egyptians

d 14:12 ... we should die in the wilderness.

c 14:13 Do not be afraid. Stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD.

b 14:17 Harden Egyptians hearts to gain honor over Pharaoh and all his army.

a 14:19, 20 The pillar of cloud went behind them.

12 (con't) For it would have been better for us to serve the Egyptians than that we should die in the wilderness."

For those who do not know Christ, service to the devil appears better than death in obscurity. The Lord needs to remove this from them. If His miracles and wonders on Egypt were enough to convince them of who He is, then bringing them to their present straits would not have been needed.

But the people still lacked resolve in following the Lord because they still lacked sound faith in Him. When one knows the Lord, even death in obscurity is but a sweet moment of rest. Better to die in the wilderness than to continue life in Egypt. But the Lord intends neither for these people at this time...

13 And Moses said to the people, "Do not be afraid.

In contrast to the cries and complaints of the people, Moses stands firm and provides a series of thoughts which resonate throughout the rest of Scripture. He first gives words of fortitude, al tirau - "Do not be afraid."

The first time these words were spoken was by the Lord to Abraham in Genesis 15:1. They are spoken time and again throughout both Testaments, and are spoken the last time to John when he received his vision from the Lord in Revelation 1:17.

Throughout the Bible, the people of God are admonished to not be in fear, but to trust the Lord. Moses repeats these words now to the fearful masses of Israel.

13 (con't) Stand still, hityasvu - "stand still." The words here are intended to refocus the individual away from self to something or someone else. Instead of necessary action by the person, there will be peace for them while action is taken for the person. There was no need to flee away or to move towards action. They could simply stand fast...

13 (con't) and see the salvation of the Lord, ureu eth yeshuat Yehovah. This is now the second time in the Bible that the word yeshua has been used. The first time was in Genesis 49 during Jacob's blessing of his sons. There, after blessing Dan and before blessing Gad, he cried out -

"I have waited for your salvation, O Lord!" Genesis 49:18

Jacob anticipated Yeshua, now Moses promises Yeshua. Salvation would come and it would come from the Lord. The word Yeshua is the Hebrew name of Jesus. Thus, this verse is both a prophetic picture and a prophetic pun.

In picture, the Lord would work salvation for Israel - a salvation which Paul explains in 1 Corinthians pictures the work of Christ. In prophetic pun, these words say, "...and see the Jesus of Yehovah." It is an anticipation of the incarnation of Jesus Christ when the Lord came to dwell among men.

13 (con't) which He will accomplish for you today.

The promise is made - there would be no defeat in a hopeless battle, there would be no long siege against the people, and there would be no putting off for later what was coming. The Lord would act and it would be hayom - "today." The act would come and it would be complete in its scope...

13 (con't) For the Egyptians whom you see today, you shall see again no more forever.

The promise here is better worded as Young's translates it - "As ye have seen the Egyptians to-day." In other words, "You shall never see the Egyptians in the same way" again (Barnes). The reason for this is that they will see the Egyptians again. They will see them dead on the shores of the Red Sea, and they will encounter Egypt in the future, but they will never see them in this manner again.

Israel will be perfectly delivered from Egypt once and forever, and it would be without any further delay.

The faith of Moses in this verse is repeated by King Jehoshaphat of Judah many hundreds of years later. In fact his words to the people before a great army which was coming against them are so similar to those of Moses that it seems he was recalling this very account of the Exodus to inspire the people. These are his words -

"You will not need to fight in this battle. Position yourselves, stand still and see the salvation of the Lord, who is with you, O Judah and Jerusalem!' Do not fear or be dismayed; tomorrow go out against them, for the Lord is with you." 2 Chronicles 20:17

Jehoshaphat trusted the Lord with the same faith as Moses and he was rewarded for that faith. The enemies were destroyed and the people of Judah, without having engaged in the battle at all, were able to plunder the dead of an immense amount of wealth.

14 The Lord will fight for you, and you shall hold your peace."

Moses promises that while Israel stands still, the Lord will act on their behalf. The Hebrew word for "shall hold your peace" signifies not just silence in speech, but a complete cessation of action as well. Everything about the words in verses 13 and 14 shows that salvation is of the Lord, from the beginning to the end.

Moses has shown them that they will not participate in their salvation, and that the Lord will work independently of any help of any kind. There is no part in the honor of what happens to be ascribed to the people. Instead it is a work of the Lord alone.

These two verses for Israel picture the process of salvation in the individual believer in Christ. They can be summed up perfectly in the words of Paul found in Ephesians 2 -

"For by grace you have been saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, 9 not of works, lest anyone should boast."

Ephesians 2:8, 9

Israel did nothing to merit the favor of the Lord and they did nothing to secure their salvation from the bonds of Egypt. Instead, He did everything, thus setting the pattern of salvation for all of humanity.

Israel seemed hemmed in by land, sea, and Pharaoh and yet the Lord delivered them. Humans are hemmed in by sin, corruption, and the devil and yet the Lord is there to deliver us. As Matthew Henry says about this -

"If God brings his people into straits, he will find a way to bring them out."

Matthew Henry

Moses, why have you brought us out here?

We have nowhere to go and the enemy is on his way

This is the end of us now we fear

Yes, our end has come this very day

Were there no graves left in Egypt for us to die there?

Did we need to come to this place to be buried?

We're stuck at this spot by the sea and you don't seem to care

Are there ships coming by which we can be ferried?

Don't not be afraid, instead stand still

See the salvation of the Lord; a marvelous work indeed

The sight you see will be bring the greatest thrill

He shall deliver you and He shall do it with speed

II. So I will Gain Honor Over Pharaoh (verses 15-18)

15 And the Lord said to Moses, "Why do you cry to Me?"

The words here perplex scholars because there is no prayer or anguish noted as stemming from Moses. And yet, these words suddenly appear. And so scholars insert an "unspoken prayer" of Moses, or even a spoken prayer while he was alone talking to the Lord. But I believe this is unnecessary.

There is no reason to assume that the Lord is speaking to Moses about Moses. The word "cry" is singular and so it appears to be Moses who is crying to the Lord, but Moses is the representative of the people. Therefore, their cumulative cry of verse 10 is equated to the singular cry of Moses.

In Joshua 7, something similar appears. One of the people of Israel had committed a transgression and because of it all of Israel was judged through defeat in battle. In verse 6 it says,

"Then Joshua tore his clothes, and fell to the earth on his face before the ark of the Lord until evening, he and the elders of Israel; and they put dust on their heads." Joshua 7:6

Later in verse 10, the Lord spoke to Joshua as the representative of the people -

"So the Lord said to Joshua: "Get up! Why do you lie thus on your face?" Joshua 7:10

Though all of the elders were on their face before the ark, the Lord only spoke to Joshua; it is in the singular. And in order to get them to act, we read this in verse 13 -

"Get up, sanctify the people, and say, 'Sanctify yourselves for tomorrow, because thus says the Lord God of Israel: "There is an accursed thing in your midst, O Israel; you cannot stand before your enemies until you take away the accursed thing from among you.'" Joshua 7:13

The Lord directed Joshua to turn the petitions of the elders into action. The same was true with his predecessor Moses. The two accounts are similar and yet they have contrasts. One was based on a lack of the faith of the people concerning the ability of the Lord. The other was based on disobedience to the word of the Lord.

One was prior to their salvation from the Egyptians and the giving of the law. The other was after their reception of the law and being brought into the covenant. The people's lack of faith could be compared to Peter's lack of faith before the crucifixion. And the willful act of the offender in Joshua could be compared to Ananias and Sapphira after the giving of the Holy Spirit.

Joshua was there to witness both in the Old Testament; Peter was there for both in the New. The two accounts contrast and yet they confirm that when action is necessary, action is expected. Thus the Lord tells Moses to act, just as He will say the same to Joshua later.

15 (con't) Tell the children of Israel to go forward.

The explanation for these words will be realized in the next verse. The congregation was to pack up its camp and march to the very shore of the sea. It is as if they were to expect a fleet of ships to come and pick them up, taking them to safety.

But if that is what they thought, they would be wrong. What would occur would be much more marvelous than the assistance of a fleet of ships from a distant land.

16 But lift up your rod, and stretch out your hand over the sea and divide it.

The rod, or matteh, is the rod of God which Moses has carried with him all along. It was there on the sacred mountain with him, it was later presented to the Israelites and then to Pharaoh. It was used to strike the land, the waters, and the heavens with plagues against Egypt. And now he is asked to stretch it out once again.

This time, it would be over the sea. The rod symbolizes the power of God because it bears the authority of the one it represents. Moses represented the Lord because he bore His rod. Thus the power to effect the miracle was present with him.

In stretching the rod over the sea, the sea would then be divided. The word of the Lord will become a reality through the action.

16 (con't) And the children of Israel shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea.

Of these words, Benson says -

"The same power could have congealed the waters for them to pass over, but infinite Wisdom chose rather to divide the waters for them to pass through, for that way of salvation is always pitched upon which is most humbling." Joseph Benson

Although I agree that the Lord could have congealed the waters so that they could have been walked over, I don't fully agree with his reasoning. It wasn't just more humbling to walk through the waters than over them. It was a miracle 1) which would be remembered more poignantly; 2) it would require more faith to walk between walls of water than over a solid mass; and 3) it is intended to make a picture of the work of Christ. As Paul notes in 1 Corinthians -

"Moreover, brethren, I do not want you to be unaware that all our fathers were under the cloud, all passed through the sea, 2 all were baptized into Moses in the cloud and in the sea" 1 Corinthians 10:1, 2

Above all, baptism is an act of faith - "I believe Christ died for me and I am following Him in His burial." The people required faith in the Lord's continued sustaining power over the walls of water on either side of them.

They were to engage in a type of baptism by walking through the sea as they did. And there is also a parallel here to the creation account itself. The word for "dry ground" is yabbashah. It was first used in Genesis 1:9 where it says -

"Then God said, 'Let the waters under the heavens be gathered together into one place, and let the dry land appear'; and it was so." Genesis 1:9

Out of the chaos of the seas would come the order and firmness of the dry ground through an act of creation. Likewise, out of the chaos of the sea would come order and firmness of the dry ground in an act of redemption. As always in the Bible the pattern is consistent, there is creation and then there is redemption.

17 And I indeed will harden the hearts of the Egyptians, and they shall follow them.

This is the last time that the term "harden" is used in the exodus account. The last time it was used only of Pharaoh in verse 8, but now it is being applied to the hearts of the Egyptians as well. The Lord is stating that He will be the one to harden their hearts.

However, the means of that hardening has to be drawn out from the context of the passage. And it is a context which shows that it is the form of the miracle by the Lord which drew the Egyptians into following Israel.

In other words, it will be an act of the Lord which passively draws Egypt in. They will exercise their own free will, heading into the waters of destruction. The Lord simply knew that they would follow this avenue. And there is a specific reason for this which is again repeated...

17 (con't) So I will gain honor over Pharaoh and over all his army, his chariots, and his horsemen.

The word for "honor" here is kaved. It indicates honor, glory, or acclaim, but it comes from the idea of weight or heaviness. In this then, there is a certain pun going on. The Lord will receive glory over Pharaoh and his people, but it will come from the crushing weight of the seas that come down upon them

18 Then the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord, when I have gained honor for Myself over Pharaoh, his chariots, and his horsemen."

This verse takes us first back to Exodus 7 -

"And I will harden Pharaoh's heart, and multiply My signs and My wonders in the land of Egypt. 4 But Pharaoh will not heed you, so that I may lay My hand on Egypt and bring My armies and My people, the children of Israel, out of the land of Egypt by great judgments. 5 And the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord, when I stretch out My hand on Egypt and bring out the children of Israel from among them." Exodus 7:3-5

This was later further defined earlier in this chapter -

"Then I will harden Pharaoh's heart, so that he will pursue them; and I will gain honor over Pharaoh and over all his army, that the Egyptians may know that I am the Lord." And they did so." Exodus 14:4

The logical progression of what has been spoken is coming to its fulfillment. The Lord has incrementally worked through these many chapters to slowly reveal His glory. It is a marvelous study of wisdom. In fact, it is brilliant. But what else could one expect from the mind and the secret counsels of the Lord!

Moses, get the people up and tell them to go!

Forward! Even to the edge of the sea

There a marvelous miracle to you I will show

A mighty deed which will set the people free

They won't have to swim or sail on a boat

Nor will they walk on the water, that is reserved for Me

But they will cross over... No not with a rubber ducky float

Just lift up your rod and stretch it out over the sea

The waters will be divided and they will pass through

It will be as if on dry ground, don't you believe Me?

A marvelous thing for Israel I will do

By the strength of My hand I will divide the Red Sea

III. From Guide to Guard - Safety in the Lord (verses 19-20)

19 And the Angel of God, who went before the camp of Israel, moved and went behind them;

In Exodus 13:21, it said that the Lord, meaning Yehovah, went before the people in the pillar. Now He is called malakh ha'elohim. Literally, he is called the Angel of

"the" God. There is a definite article in front of God which hasn't been seen for 10 chapters.

There is specificity which is asking to be considered, not passed over. In Exodus 3:2, the Angel of Yehovah appeared in the burning bush. Then in Exodus 3:6 and 3:11 He is called ha'elohim, "the God." The words are not random, but are particularly used to highlight that the Angel of Yehovah is the Angel of the God and that He is Yehovah and that He is God. And finally, we are shown that there is only one God and He is it.

With Israel now placed directly in front of the sea, and with their inability to go forward any further at this time, the "Angel of the God" who is the Lord, now moves behind the camp to protect them from their enemies. When the seas are parted, they will not need Him to lead them as it will be the only means of egress. And instead of their front guide, He now becomes their rear guard.

The same type of interchangeable names and concepts for the Lord are found in the words of Isaiah -

For you shall not go out with haste,
Nor go by flight;
For the Lord will go before you,
And the God of Israel will be your rear guard. Isaiah 52:12

Then your light shall break forth like the morning,
Your healing shall spring forth speedily,
And your righteousness shall go before you;
The glory of the Lord shall be your rear guard. Isaiah 58:8

In those Isaiah verses, He is called both the Lord and the God of Israel, and He is both the One who goes before the people and the One who is their rear guard. In picture, He is Jesus who went before us in death and who will come behind us until we have reached our heavenly shore. We are always cared for as protected people of God because of the presence of the Lord.

19 (con't) and the pillar of cloud went from before them and stood behind them.

Some scholars try to distinguish the Lord from the pillar of cloud by separating the two clauses of this verse. This is not correct. The two clauses are parallel and the entities are synonymous. The Lord is represented by the pillar of cloud.

When the invisible Lord moves, the visible manifestation of His presence moves with Him. This is comparable to the burning bush which Moses beheld. The light which emanated from it was intended for Moses to see and understand. The same is true with the pillar for Israel and against Egypt.

20 So it came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel.

The word "it" should not be used here. The Lord is not an "it" and the context shows that both the Lord and the pillar are being referred to. Rather, the word v'yabo simply means "and came." That may sound nitpicky on my part, but context drives translation and the context is that this is the Lord revealed in the cloud.

It must have been an incredible sight for the Israelites to see the cloud move from the sea to their rear guard and come to rest between them and the Egyptians, but it was another saving grace as they are being prepared for their final step of the exodus.

20 (fin) Thus it was a cloud and darkness to the one, and it gave light by night to the other, so that the one did not come near the other all that night.

This entire verse can be translated without the word "it." Young's does an excellent job in his literal translation of it -

...and cometh in between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel, and the cloud and the darkness are, and he enlighteneth the night, and the one hath not drawn near unto the other all the night." YLT

Young's thoughtful translation of these words shows both a sense of the splendor of the Lord and His ability to use the same medium to work for the benefit of one group and to the detriment of the other. John Lange shows a spiritual connotation to the physical description of the words of this verse -

"That which gives light to the believers constitutes nocturnal darkness for the unbelievers; and that is the irremovable barrier between the two." Lange

This is a truth which is seen more and more in the world today. As the end times have certainly arrived, there is a spiritual darkness which permeates the mind of the unbelievers and yet it is the same thing which provides light to believers. It is the word of God. The dividing line is set and it is found in the word of God - the Bible, which reveals the Word of God - Jesus.

Matthew Henry further explains this thought -

"The word and providence of God have a black and dark side toward sin and sinners, but a bright and pleasant side toward the people of the Lord. He, who divided between light and darkness, Ge 1:4, allotted darkness to the Egyptians, and light to the Israelites. Such a difference there will be between the inheritance of the saints in light, and that utter darkness which will be the portion of hypocrites for ever." Matthew Henry

It is good to know the Lord, to be familiar with His word, and to understand the spiritual darkness which is all around us. But lest we think that we somehow accomplished this salvation on our own, or that someone around us doesn't deserve it, we can look to the words of Paul in Colossians 1. There he tells us that it is the Lord who delivered us -

"giving thanks to the Father who has qualified us to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in the light. 13 He has delivered us from the power of darkness and conveyed us into the kingdom of the Son of His love, 14 in whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins."
Colossians 1:12-14

Because this is so, we need to remember that we were also once in darkness. The world around us maybe be offensive and gross, but the world around us needs Jesus. Let's remember this and pray for the lost, be willing to share the good news, and always be prepared with a defense for why we believe what we believe.

And just in case you have never received the Lord Jesus as your Savior, I would ask for just another moment to share with you how you can move from the spiritual darkness which encompasses you and into His marvelous light...

Closing Verse: "For you were once darkness, but now you are light in the Lord. Walk as children of light 9 (for the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness, righteousness, and truth), 10 finding out what is acceptable to the Lord. 11 And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather expose them." Ephesians 5:8-11

Next Week: Exodus 14:21-31 (The Parting of the Red Sea) (41st Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Salvation of Lord

And when Pharaoh drew near

The children of Israel lifted their eyes

And behold, a sight that brought fear

The Egyptians marched after them, it seemed their demise

So they were very afraid of the coming sword

And the children of Israel cried out to the Lord

Then they said to Moses, in their duress

“Because there were in Egypt no graves

Have you taken us away to die in the wilderness?

Is this how a leader behaves?

Why have you so dealt with us? Our hope is stripped

Since your intent was to bring us up out of Egypt?

Is this not the word that we told you in Egypt... what nerve!
Saying "Let us alone that we may the Egyptians serve
For it would have been better for us to serve without duress
The Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness
And "Do not be afraid" Moses to the people did say
Stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord
Which He will accomplish for you today
I pronounce to you now a prophetic word

For the Egyptians whom you see today
You shall see again no more forever, their trouble will cease
The Lord will fight for you, in a glorious way
And you, you shall hold your peace

And the Lord said to Moses, "Why do you cry to Me?
Tell the children of Israel to go forward, get out by the sea
But lift up your rod, and stretch out your hand
Over the sea and divide it
And the children of Israel shall go on dry land
Through the midst of the sea without getting wet

And I indeed will harden the hearts of the Egyptians
And they shall follow them in
So I will gain honor over Pharaoh

And over all his army, his chariots, and his horsemen
Then the Egyptians shall know
That I am the Lord
When I have gained honor for Myself in a marvelous show
Over Pharaoh, his chariots, and his horsemen; this is my word

And the Angel of God, who went before the camp of Israel
Moved and behind them went
And the pillar of cloud went from before them
And stood behind them; a marvelous event
So it came between the camp of the Egyptians
And the camp of Israel
Thus it was a cloud and darkness to the one
And to the other light it did dispel

So that the one did not come near the other all that night
The Egyptians had darkness, but Israel had light
And such is true with the world, and me and you
If you have Jesus, you have the light
But if you don't unfortunately it's true
You only have darkness; pitch black as the night

But if you call out to Him for His saving grace
Upon you the light will arise and it will shine

The light of God is revealed in His face
Call out to Him now... Say "Jesus is mine!"

In Him there is no darkness, not at all
In Him there is only God's wondrous glory
So on His name, today be sure to call
And be a part of God's glorious gospel story

And we shall as the redeemed praise Him for eternal years
With joy and shouting of heartfelt cheers!

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 14:21-31 (THE PARTING OF THE RED SEA)

Does anyone here know how many times waters are parted for people to cross over in the Bible? The idea of parting something, be it a body of water or a mountain, is given to show the power of God in a unique way. Whether God does it through a natural means or through a miracle which transcends nature, there is always the miraculous associated with it.

The reason is that when the Bible records such an event, it is done in connection with a need or desire of His people, and it is done at a time when it was necessary for that need or desire to be realized. Like the plagues on Egypt, God causes things to occur at specific times to show that He was behind it and it wasn't just arbitrary.

The Red Sea's parting is such an event and it points to other such marvelous events in redemptive history as well. These have been recorded in advance so that when they happen, the people will know that the Lord was behind it. This is the beauty of the Bible. It is a self-authenticating book, filled with wisdom and glory!

Text Verse: Then the Lord will go forth
And fight against those nations,
As He fights in the day of battle.
4 And in that day His feet will stand on the Mount of Olives,
Which faces Jerusalem on the east.
And the Mount of Olives shall be split in two,
From east to west,
Making a very large valley;
Half of the mountain shall move toward the north
And half of it toward the south.
5 Then you shall flee through My mountain valley,
For the mountain valley shall reach to Azal.

Yes, you shall flee
As you fled from the earthquake
In the days of Uzziah king of Judah.

Thus the Lord my God will come,
And all the saints with You. Zechariah 14:1-5

The Red Sea is parted; the Mount of Olives will be rent asunder; and even the great chasm which stood between God and man, opposing our fellowship with Him, has been bridged. A highway has been made for God's people to once again enter His presence.

Marvelous things keep repeating themselves in the Bible to show us that God had it under control, has it under control, and will continue to have it under control for all the ages which lie ahead. Oh,,, and the answer to the parting of waters is four - the Red Sea, the Jordon when Israel finished its wilderness wanderings, the Jordon for Elijah, and the Jordan for Elisha. Just so you know!

All of this wonder is to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Parting of the Waters (verses 21-25)

21 Then Moses stretched out his hand over the sea;

In obedience to the word of the Lord in verse 16, Moses complies and stretches out his hand over the sea. In his hand would be the rod of God which symbolized the power and authority of the Lord. As during the other plagues, the hand here is being used as the principle cause, whereas the rod is used as the instrumental cause.

In the intervening verses since the Lord told him to do this, there was no questioning the Lord or seeming hesitation in his actions. Instead, Moses simply complied. It shows a complete confidence in the fact that the Lord would do exactly as He said He would.

21 (con't) and the Lord caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night,

There is both the sense of the natural and the miraculous in this account. The natural however does not diminish the miraculous at all. And whatever the true location of this event by today's maps, it was an event which cannot be as liberal scholars try to say. They say that it was merely a shallow lake that was crossed.

It very well could be in the region of the Bitter Lakes of Egypt today if they were truly once a part of the Red Sea. Or it could be at a place where the Red Sea itself is today. Either way, it is the Red Sea which was parted, not a shallow sea of reeds.

When the rod was stretched out, a strong wind began to blow, as it says, from the east. However, this could mean anything from a NE to a SE wind. The Greek translation of the passage says it was a southerly wind. Therefore, it was possibly a SE wind which pushed the waters away from a shallow area at Pi Hahiroth and which extended all the way to Baal Zephon.

This same effect can be seen out my back door a few times a year when cold fronts come through in the winter. The wind blows from the north and almost completely drains the bay behind us. What is normally a deep bay which is a mile across can be traversed without getting more than a foot or two deep. Under the right circumstances, an even more complete drying of a sea could occur.

There is no reason to think this account didn't literally happen exactly as stated. The most miraculous part is that there is Israel, hemmed in from all sides and ready to face destruction, but a pillar of cloud and light kept the Egyptians away from them, the wind started blowing exactly when it was supposed to, the location where they were made it possible for the event to occur, and Israel was escorted to safety while Egypt was destroyed.

Regardless of how God does something, the circumstances around the event are often more miraculous than the event itself. But yet, as this account shows, it was miraculous in both the event and its surrounding circumstances. The wind parted the waters to the point where the grounds became dry. It is as if the winds licked up even the moisture from the sandy bottom as we now see...

21 (con't) and made the sea into dry land, and the waters were divided.

The word "divided" here is baqa. It is a common word meaning "to split" but it is often used in the most uncommon of passages. So far it has been used in the breaking open of the fountains of the great deep in Genesis 7 and in the splitting of the wood by Abraham in preparation for burning his son Isaac on the altar of sacrifice in Genesis 22. Now it is used in this third remarkable passage in the dividing of the waters of the Red Sea.

In the use of this word for the biblical events such as the one we are seeing come about, the HAW says, "...the burden of these passages is not simply that God is possessed of such terrible power as to split rocks and waters, etc., but that the possessor of such power is able to redeem a lost creation."

And in fact, each of these accounts so far has shown just that. Noah was redeemed from the destruction of the earth by water; Isaac was redeemed from the destruction of fire and a substitute was given in his place; and now Israel is redeemed from destruction by Egypt by the dividing of the waters and Egypt being destroyed in their place.

It is fascinating how even one word, like this word baqa, can carry such immense theological importance in the overall biblical account. In this one, the waters have been divided, the land has become dry, and a highway has been opened for God's redeemed to march through unto safety and freedom.

22 So the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea on the dry ground,

Jewish tradition has it that Nahshon, the leader of the tribe of Judah, was the first one to enter into the path through the Red Sea and that the tribe of Judah was the first tribe to enter, leading the rest. However, Josephus, the great Jewish historian says that -

"When Moses had thus addressed himself to God, he smote the sea with his rod, which parted asunder at the stroke, and receiving those waters into itself, left the ground dry, as a road and a place of flight for the Hebrews. Now when Moses saw this appearance of God, and that the sea went out of its own place, and left dry land, he went first of all into it, and bid the Hebrews to follow him along that divine road, and to rejoice at the danger their enemies that followed them were in; and gave thanks to God for this so surprising a deliverance which appeared from him." Flavius Josephus

Regardless of the truth, the Bible itself refrains from saying what occurred. It simply says that "the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea." However, in this verse a different word for "dry" is used than in the previous verse.

In verse 21, the word was kharavah. It would indicate ground which is free from water, or drained. In this verse, it is yabashah. This comes from the word yabesh, meaning "dried up" or "withered." Hence, it is saying that the ground was literally free from moisture, or completely dried.

The words have been used in a progressive sense to show the complete preparedness of the path for the children of Israel to make the journey. Not only would the ground be free of water as if walking on a beach, but it would be completely dry as if walking on a desert path.

22 (con't) and the waters were a wall to them on their right hand and on their left.

Care needs to be taken on this portion of the verse to not diminish what it says, or to not make an unfounded deduction concerning what is said. The liberals at Cambridge note in their commentary that this is "A very summary poetical and hyperbolical description of the occurrence."

In other words, they are saying this is just merely an exaggeration, nothing more. However, other scholars take it in another direction and say that the water of the sea "gave up its nature, formed with its waves a strong wall, and instead of streaming like a fluid, congealed into a hard substance" (Kalisch).

This adds into the account something that isn't said. And if in fact the waters were hardened to ice, it would have said just that. The word translated as "wall" here is khomah and it means exactly that, a wall - such as in the wall of a city. However, it can also be metaphorically used to mean "protection." One of many examples is found in 1 Samuel 25 -

"Now one of the young men told Abigail, Nabal's wife, saying, 'Look, David sent messengers from the wilderness to greet our master; and he reviled them. 15 But the men were very good to us, and we were not hurt, nor did we miss anything as long as we accompanied them, when we were in the fields. 16 They were a wall to us both by night and day, all the time we were with them keeping the sheep.'" 1 Samuel 25:14-16

Because of this type of metaphorical use of the word khomah, other scholars say that the waters were a metaphorical defense for Israel. To further strengthen their stand, Exodus 15:8 speaks of this same occurrence in the Red Sea, and says that the waters stood up "like a heap" using another word, ned which means a mound.

However, the fact that the word ned is used there doesn't diminish what is said here. Instead, it bolsters it. There was no need for protection or defense on either side of Israel except for protection from the waters! The only defense they needed was taken care of by the pillar which stood between them and the Egyptians.

Therefore, unless one just dismisses this account as an outright fabrication, the only logical deduction is that the waters were actually a wall, exactly as described. They were supernaturally being held in place, not by a mere natural occurrence, but by that which transcends the natural.

The Lord has taken nature and worked within nature to a point to execute this miracle, but His work transcends the natural after meeting that point. It is truly a work of God in its most marvelous sense. And this brings us to the reason for this display.

In our sermon on the Feast of Unleavened Bread, it was noted that there are two holy convocations which bracket the Feast. One occurs on the first day of the feast and one on the seventh. They stand as representative of the entire period of the feast.

And this feast stands as representative of our time in Christ, from the day of our adoption until we go home to glory, this passing through the Red Sea on the seventh day of the Feast of Unleavened Bread symbolizes our passage from this life into the next.

There is an impossible gulf for us to cross over and yet the Lord has made that way possible. He has taken the natural and combined it with the miraculous in order to allow His redeemed to cross over to safety on the other shore where our heavenly home awaits. This is the symbolism we are given here.

It should be noted that by this time, the full moon of the first day of the feast has become a waning moon. The darkness would have been more pronounced, just as it is in our deaths, but there was still a brighter light to lead them. Matthew Henry notes that "...where God leads us, he will light us; while we follow his conduct we shall not want of his comforts."

The path for our full and complete redemption has been paved through that impossible gulf, every drop of water has been lifted off it and despite the walls which will stand on each side of us, there will be safety as we pass through into His glory. Remember that on the other side of where Israel now stands, and to where they are heading, is a place called Baal Zephon, we can rest in ease. Baal Zephon means "The Lord is Watching." And in fact He is.

The rapture is coming and He is carefully watching over His flock until that day. When the time is right, the infinite gulf will be parted and we, His redeemed, will pass through with ease and safety. However, there is another aspect to this path which will not end with the same results for all people...

23 And the Egyptians pursued and went after them into the midst of the sea, all Pharaoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen.

Since the beginning of Exodus, this dynasty of Pharaoh has pictured both the devil and the antichrist of the future. Egypt has pictured the world of sin. This wicked ruler wanted nothing more than to destroy Israel, the devil wants nothing more than to destroy God's people, and the antichrist of the future - filled with the power of the devil, will want nothing more than to again destroy Israel.

The patterns of history repeat to let us know that the things which lie ahead have already been seen in the past. The army of Egypt now pursues Israel, even into the midst of the sea. There is a marvelous story of redemption which follows the same pattern, time and again.

In the case of Egypt, they foolishly decide to pursue Israel into the midst of the sea. The entire army of Pharaoh has failed to recognize the glory of the Lord who has thus far been slow to anger and even filled with patience and mercy towards the objects of His wrath.

24 Now it came to pass, in the morning watch, that the Lord looked down upon the army of the Egyptians through the pillar of fire and cloud, and He troubled the army of the Egyptians.

In verse 19, it said it was "the Angel of God" in the pillar. Now it says that it is the Lord. These words are used with specificity to show that the Lord is the Angel of God - He is the Messenger of God who works God's miracles and wonders.

With a proper analysis of the Bible, one can come to no other conclusion than the fact that Jesus is God. Time and again, specific terminology is used to show us God's progressive revelation of Himself, finally being realized in Jesus Christ. What a sad thing that people miss this, either through deceit or simply a lack of caring about spending time in His word.

From this verse, unless you understand that the Lord knows everything and is in control of everything, it might sound like the Lord wasn't aware of the pursuing Egyptians until the morning time, but that isn't the case at all. Rather, the Bible is including us in the narrative of the events as they unfold.

He has purposely allowed the Egyptians to pursue Israel into the sea. At the right moment, we are told that He "looked down" on them. This is a way of saying that their time of judgment had come. The Lord is in an elevated place and He can look down in favor or in condemnation. In Egypt's case, it will be the latter.

This is called the "morning watch" which would be between the hours of 2am and 6am. It says at this time that He "troubled" the army of the Egyptians. The word here is hamam. It means "to throw into confusion" and this is its first use in the Bible. The confusion being spoken of here is described in the 77th Psalm -

The clouds poured out water;
The skies sent out a sound;
Your arrows also flashed about.
18 The voice of Your thunder was in the whirlwind;
The lightnings lit up the world;
The earth trembled and shook. Psalm 77:17, 18

Along with this confusion from the Lord came more trouble...

25 And He took off their chariot wheels, so that they drove them with difficulty;

This is one of those wonderful verses that comes up from time to time where translators seem to find pleasure in thinking up new ways of describing what occurred. The NKJV says, "He took off their chariot wheels." Others versions say jammed, twisted, clogged, caused to swerve, took off, made wobble, overturned them grievously, overthrew, or turneth aside."

The word is sur, which means "to depart." It doesn't seem that "took off" would fit here because of the next words - "so that they drove them with difficulty." Rather, it is probable that the water from the rains described in the Psalm saturated the ground causing them to get muddy so that they veered off course because of it. What was a perfectly dry and easy passage for the redeemed has now become a impossible journey for the Egyptians.

25 (con't) and the Egyptians said, "Let us flee from the face of Israel, for the Lord fights for them against the Egyptians."

With the din of the noise and the pursuit getting completely bogged down because of the situation they faced, the Egyptians are no longer the pursuers. Instead they realize that they are now on the defensive. The Lord defended Israel while at the same time He began an awesome work of war against those who wished them harm.

While the Lord protects His people

He troubles those who come to attack and destroy

Be confident you who worship under the steeple

That the Lord will deliver, great weapons He will employ

And though we may die in this temporary jar of clay
We have the surest hope of all, to be raised anew
The Lord will come for His at the rapture, some wondrous day
The Lord who is ever faithful and true

For those who wait for Him, the sea of death will part
And He will lead His people, guiding the way
On the other shore our new life will start
Oh! Even so, come Lord Jesus! Yes, make it today!

II. Not so Much as One of Them Remained (verses 26-29)

26 Then the Lord said to Moses, “Stretch out your hand over the sea,

Just as he had been instructed at the beginning of this great event, he is now instructed at its end. God allows Moses the honor of being seen as the human redeemer of his people. It was thus intended that in their eyes he would be magnified and treated with the due respect he deserved.

26 (con't) that the waters may come back upon the Egyptians, on their chariots, and on their horsemen.”

These words form the center of a chiasm which spans verses 21-31. First, the Lord troubled Pharaoh's army in verses 23-25, here Moses is told to take action which will result in their destruction. And finally, it will be fully realized in verse 28.

Exodus 14:21-31 – Stretch Out Your Hand Over the Sea (4/23/08)
The Great Miracle

a 14:21 LORD produced miracle through Moses.

b 14:22 Through sea on dry ground, the waters a wall to their right and left.

c 14:23-25 Army of Pharaoh troubled

d 14:26 "Stretch out your hand over the sea."

x. The waters may come back upon the Egyptians, on their chariots, and on their horsemen.

d 14:27 And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea

c 14:28 Army of Pharaoh destroyed.

b 14:29 Through sea on dry ground, the waters a wall to their right and left.

a 14:30, 31 Israelites saw the miracle and feared the LORD and Moses.

The attention to these verses is given for us to contemplate our own safety in the Lord. Think of the progression of thought. There was the Passover, and then there was the exodus and the Feast of Unleavened Bread with its beginning and ending convocations.

In Christ, there is our being passed over because of the blood applied to our lives. In that, our Exodus from the world of sin and death is granted. We begin our adopted life in Christ, symbolized by the first-day convocation, and we are brought out fully - with the enemies destroyed behind us, at the end of our time on this earth, pictured by the seventh-day convocation.

Everything fits because it is from the mind of God for His people to see and have confidence in. Chiasms like this short one give us hope that our trust in the Lord isn't futile, and no matter how the devil rages against us, we are safe, secure, and cared for by Him. At the same time, the devil and his minions are destined for doom.

27 And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea; and when the morning appeared, the sea returned to its full depth,

Another portion of the miraculous is seen in these words. Moses stretched out his hand and the waters parted and he stretched them out again and they returned to their place. No ebb tide is so obedient as this, even though they are timed by the movement of the earth and the moon. This was a fitting end to a true miracle.

It must have been a long night for all concerned, but all would be freed from the anxiety of its events. Israel could camp on the other side of the sea, resting and rejoicing in the astonishing deliverance they had participated in. The Egyptians on the other hand would face a different type of rest... that of death.

When they are awakened from that, it will be for judgment and condemnation. That day is still ahead, but it is as sure to come as was the complete deliverance which Israel was granted.

27 (con't) while the Egyptians were fleeing into it.

This isn't the best translation of these words. The idea is that they were fleeing from the sea, not into it. The waters simply caught up with them and overwhelmed them. With a slight change or two, these words could be tidied up a bit. The idea when translating words like this is to add clarity of thought, not confusion. Read several other translations and you will see a better rendering of it.

27 (con't) So the Lord overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea.

Moses was asked to stretch out his hand over the sea in order to bring the waters back to normal. He did as instructed, and yet here it says, "So the Lord overthrew the Egyptians." It shows a remarkable harmony between the two descriptions. Moses was given the honor in the sight of his people and yet the Lord is given glory over the entire account.

This is seen repeatedly in the Bible and in church history as well. Billy Graham preached the word of God according to the call of the Lord on his life, and yet it is the Lord who is glorified through the word that has been preached.

There is a harmony between the Lord and His chosen instruments where both are honored. It shows the amazingly gracious nature of the Lord upon those whom He favors.

28 Then the waters returned and covered the chariots, the horsemen, and all the army of Pharaoh that came into the sea after them. Not so much as one of them remained.

Flavius Josephus gives his commentary on what happened here -

"Showers of rain also came down from the sky, and dreadful thunders and lightning, with flashes of fire. Thunderbolts also were darted upon them. Nor was there any thing which used to be sent by God upon men, as indications of his wrath, which did not happen at this time, for a dark and dismal night oppressed them. And thus did all these men perish, so that there was not one man left to be a messenger of this calamity to the rest of the Egyptians." Flavius Josephus

Many scholars claim that only the chariots and horsemen went into the sea and they argue over the wording of the Hebrew which seems to say this. They say that both the army and Pharaoh were actually excluded from the destruction of the waters, but this is probably incorrect.

The psalms seem to show that Pharaoh and all his army were destroyed. Psalm 106 says that the waters covered their enemies so that not one of them was left. Psalm 136 says that the Lord overthrew Pharaoh and his army in the Red Sea. Therefore, there is no reason to doubt that this is not the case.

The reason why this is relevant is because of what it pictures later in the Bible. During the tribulation period, Daniel explains what will come concerning the antichrist -

"At the time of the end the king of the South shall attack him; and the king of the North shall come against him like a whirlwind, with chariots, horsemen, and with many ships; and he shall enter the countries, overwhelm them, and pass through. 41 He shall also enter the Glorious Land, and many countries shall be overthrown; but these shall escape from his hand: Edom, Moab, and the prominent people of Ammon. 42 He shall stretch out his hand against the countries, and the land of Egypt shall not escape. 43 He shall have power over the treasures of gold and silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt; also the Libyans and Ethiopians shall follow at his heels. 44 But news from the east and the north shall trouble him; therefore he shall go out with great fury to destroy and annihilate many. 45 And he shall plant the tents of his palace between the seas and the glorious holy mountain; yet he shall come to his end, and no one will help him." Daniel 11:40-45

Like Pharaoh and his armies, the anti-Christ will also go out to destroy and to annihilate, but he too will come to his end, and no one will help him. Revelation gives more insights into his end -

"And I saw the beast, the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against Him who sat on the horse and against His army. 20 Then the beast was captured, and with him the false prophet who worked signs in his presence, by which he deceived those who received the mark of the beast and those who worshiped his image. These two were cast alive into the lake of fire burning with brimstone. 21 And the rest were killed with the sword which proceeded from the mouth of Him who sat on the horse. And all the birds were filled with their flesh." Revelation 19:19-21

In Chapter 20 of Revelation, the end of the devil is noted with his being cast into the Lake of Fire. Like the destruction of Pharaoh, both the anti-Christ and the devil will be destroyed while the people of the Lord will be saved. History repeats itself, and each of those who think they can defeat God's plans is, in the end, himself defeated. As Matthew Henry says about this -

"Men will not be convinced, till it is too late, that those who meddle with God's people, meddle to their own hurt." Matthew Henry

This is a truth which will be seen more and more in the world as we head into the end times, both those who persecute Christ's church, and those who come after His people Israel, will find that their actions ultimately harm themselves.

29 But the children of Israel had walked on dry land in the midst of the sea, and the waters were a wall to them on their right hand and on their left.

Repeated again in order to close out the chiasm of these verses, we are told here that Israel was kept safe on yabashah or perfectly dried ground and yet right in the midst of the sea. All the while the waters remained a wall on their right hand and on their left.

Judgment will come on all who have not received Jesus
God has offered terms of peace, but the time will run out
It is up to each and every one of us
To receive Him and His forgiveness, by faith - having no doubt

For those who fail to take hold of this offer
Only judgment and death is the option that remains
By nailed scarred hands the Lord has made the proffer
No other way will allow for the heavenly gains

And so learn the lesson of the armies of Pharaoh
Call out to Jesus and be saved by His blood
The path to the other side is exceedingly narrow
For those who refuse, over them will come the destructive flood

III. So the People feared the Lord (verses 30 & 31)

30 So the Lord saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians,

Though they had observed the Passover and began their exodus from Egypt, it cannot be said that the Israelites were actually saved until this day. Both the Passover and the exodus implied that they were saved, but until they passed through the bonds of the Red Sea and the enemies of Israel were destroyed, there was still a work of salvation ahead of them.

And this is exactly where we are right now. We have observed our Passover in the death of Christ as noted by Paul in 1 Corinthians 5. We are living in our Feast of Unleavened bread as he notes there as well, but we are still in this body awaiting our final deliverance which he speaks of in 1 Corinthians 15.

We are still living in the land of Egypt and we are affected by the spirit of Pharaoh as the world comes against us, but the Lord is with us and our day of deliverance is ahead. This is why Paul so often writes of our salvation as a done deal and yet he writes of it as a future event as well.

In the Lord it is a done deal, but as we wait on the Lord, we look forward to a future event with eager anticipation. This day of being saved out of the hand of the Egyptians was on the seventh day after their departure. It is the day the Lord set aside as their holy convocation to end the Feast of Unleavened Bread.

Our day of departure is pictured in that feast, and may it be soon for all of the people of the Lord.

30 (con't) and Israel saw the Egyptians dead on the seashore.

Like salvation, judgment belongs to the Lord. There are those who are His, and there are those who are not. The world needs to wake up to the fact that these ancient stories are given to show us what lies ahead, not just what happened in the past.

Death will come on a global scale someday for those who have harmed and harassed the Lord's people and for those who have failed to give Him the glory He is due. According to Isaiah, man will become rarer than fine gold on that day.

In this verse, the fact that the dead Egyptians were seen on the seashore provides another level of credibility to the eyewitness nature of the account. It made enough of an impression upon Moses to include the fact which would otherwise be omitted by a later writer of the account. In an interesting portion of the writings of Josephus concerning this event, we read these words -

"On the next day Moses gathered together the weapons of the Egyptians, which were brought to the camp of the Hebrews by the current of the sea, and the force of the winds resisting it; and he conjectured that this also happened by Divine Providence, that so they might not be destitute of weapons. So when he had ordered the Hebrews to arm themselves with them, he led them to Mount Sinai, in order to offer sacrifice to God, and to render oblations for the salvation of the multitude, as he was charged to do beforehand." Flavius Josephus

The reason we should pay heed to this as probably factual is that in the coming pages of the Bible, Israel will go to battle and they will continue in battles until and after they enter into the Land of Promise. It is these weapons which they would be able to use during those battles.

31 Thus Israel saw the great work which the Lord had done in Egypt;

This sentence must certainly be a fitting summary of the entire period of Moses' leadership, from the time he first presented himself to them in Exodus 4 until this moment when the multitude of Egypt's army lay dead at their feet.

Moses had shown them the three signs given to him by the Lord at the burning bush. He had taken them through 10 plagues which utterly destroyed the land. He had marched them out under the full moon while cries filled the homes of the Egyptians.

And yet, they had waffled, they had lost faith, and they had even cast accusations at Moses and thus implicitly upon the Lord. But with the parting of the Red Sea to deliver them and then its closing to destroy Egypt, they saw the "great work" or as the Hebrew reads, ha'yad ha'gedolah - "the mighty hand" of the Lord.

And with the events they saw, a new resoluteness came to them...

31 (fin) so the people feared the Lord, and believed the Lord and His servant Moses.

The "fear" spoken of here is not fear as in dread. Rather, it is a reverential fear. This idea of fearing the Lord in this reverential way is repeated numerous times the Bible. It is saying, "I know He loves me, but I know that His grace and mercy are unmerited. I receive that and return reverence to Him."

It is like our own father. Even if we know he loves us, we will fear to let him down through disobedience. If we do, we would shame the one who loves us. This is the attitude that the Israelites now feel. They have previously let down both the Lord and Moses, but now they have learned to fear the Lord.

Further, they have come to believe in Him. Not only is He given the reverential fear of their hearts, but they have come to know that when He speaks, His words are true and reliable; they can be counted on. Likewise, because Moses is his servant, they have come to know that they can believe him as well.

Before, the two were mentally disconnected by the Israelites. The Lord was "a god" to them and Moses was a person claiming to represent Him, whether that was the case or not. Now, Yehovah is "the God" to them and Moses is His representative.

The entire process has been one which was intended to bring about this result. If only the people would stay as resolute in their thinking at this high point in their history at all other times. But Israel, like many today, believed for a while and then fell away. What we need is to ground our belief deeply in our souls so that we never fail to trust the Lord at all times.

But all trust must have a starting point. And maybe you have never taken the time to simply trust Jesus to deliver you from your present predicament. If not, today's passage is simply a small reflection of a much greater story of redemption, one which you may participate in as well. And all it takes is a simple act of faith.

This is even what the ancients were noted for. In the great hall of fame of faith in the Bible, Hebrews 11, we are told that stepping onto a path in the middle of the Red Sea took real faith -

"By faith they passed through the Red Sea as by dry land, whereas the Egyptians, attempting to do so, were drowned." Hebrews 11:29

In this act, Paul tells us in 1 Corinthians 10 that Israel received their baptism -

"Moreover, brethren, I do not want you to be unaware that all our fathers were under the cloud, all passed through the sea, 2 all were baptized into Moses in the cloud and in the sea..." 1 Corinthians 10:1, 2

If you haven't yet placed your faith in Christ Jesus and received the baptism of the Holy Spirit, let me tell you why you should and how you can, even right now...

Closing Verse: "He has delivered us from the power of darkness and conveyed us into the kingdom of the Son of His love, 14 in whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins." Colossians 1:13, 14

Just so you know. Another parting of waters is anticipated in Israel's future. Isaiah tells us about it -

"The Lord will utterly destroy the tongue of the Sea of Egypt;
With His mighty wind He will shake His fist over the River,
And strike it in the seven streams,
And make men cross over dry-shod.
16 There will be a highway for the remnant of His people
Who will be left from Assyria,
As it was for Israel
In the day that he came up from the land of Egypt." Isaiah 11:15, 16

Great stuff from a great God!

Next Week: Exodus 15:1-10 (The Song of Moses, The Song at the Sea, Part I) (42nd Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

So the People Feared the Lord

Then Moses stretched out his hand over the sea
And the Lord caused the sea to go back as if derided
By a strong east wind all that night, one so mighty
And made the sea into dry land, and the waters were divided
So the children of Israel went Into the midst of the sea on the dry ground
And the waters were a wall to them, one heaven sent
On their right hand and on their left, waters all around

And the Egyptians pursued and went after them
Into the midst of the sea, all Pharaoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen
Now it came to pass, in the morning watch
That the Lord looked down upon the army
Of the Egyptians through the pillar of fire and cloud
And He brought the army of the Egyptians some real harm
(Yes, I made that word up)
And He took off their chariot wheels
So that they drove them with difficulty

And the Egyptians said,
“From the face of Israel, let us flee
The Lord for them against the Egyptians He fights
For them this is their most terrifying of nights
Then the Lord said to Moses
“Stretch out your hand over the sea
That the waters may come back upon the Egyptians
On their chariots, and on their horsemen, so let it be

And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea
And when the morning appeared
The sea returned to its full depth
While the Egyptians were fleeing away, its waters over them reared
So the Lord overthrew the Egyptians completely
There it happened in the midst of the sea
Then the waters returned and covered the chariots
The horsemen, and all the army of Pharaoh
That came into the sea after them
Not so much as one of them remained to shoot an arrow

But the children of Israel had walked
On dry land in the midst of the sea
And the waters were a wall to them
On their right hand and on their left, protecting them completely

So the Lord saved Israel that day
Out of the Egyptian's hand
And Israel saw the Egyptians dead on the seashore... hooray!
A mighty deliverance; ever so grand
Thus Israel saw the great work, promised by His word
Which the Lord had done in Egypt as the account closes
So the people feared the Lord
And believed the Lord and His servant Moses

What will it take for you to believe?
What is it that you have to see?
In order for the Lord Jesus to receive
When will you say, "It is sufficient for me?"
God has shown us so much love and care
Throughout the world His power is seen
His wisdom is on display everywhere
In the skies of blue and in the fields of green

And even more sure is His prophetic word
It is there for us to pick up, study, and believe
It tells us about our great and awesome Lord
Please search it out and then Jesus receive
He is coming again to bring His people home
To a place where there shall no more tears be

We will be content, never from His presence to roam
But walking in His glory for all eternity

Let us pursue Him now and give Him praise from our heart
Let it be today! Yes, it is a good day for us to start

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 15:1-10

(THE SONG OF MOSES, THE SONG AT THE SEA, PART I)

I generally have a pretty good idea of how many verses I will use for any given sermon. I look over the passage, find a logical place to stop, and then start preparing those verses to delight your ears with treasures from the word. And so, on the 13th of July, which is the day I started typing this one, I chose Exodus 15:1-19.

Mom had come by that morning to pick someone up and take them to the airport and I told her that today would be a tough sermon to type. She blew me off, knowing that it would go fine, but I told her, "It's the song of Moses. It's in poem form. I'm not sure what I'll get out of it."

I started organizing it into sections - I chose four. That is rare, but four sections would mean three poems, one before each subsequent section. That would take up a lot of space to make a full length sermon. But by the time I finished the first verse, I had to cut off verses 11-19 and cut it from four sections to two.

The Song of Moses has taken on a whole new meaning to me because of what is tucked away in it. I hope you will enjoy this first half of it as much as I enjoyed studying it. And be advised - this sermon is not 22 or 23 pages long as normal... it is 25.

Text Verse: "But I have trusted in Your mercy;

My heart shall rejoice in Your salvation.

⁶ I will sing to the LORD,

Because He has dealt bountifully with me." Psalm 13:5, 6

David said that his heart would rejoice in the Lord's salvation. Moses says something similar in His song today. I would trust that by the time we finish, you will rejoice in Him as well. Just hearing the words of the Bible come alive as they do in this song is enough to make me want to jump out of my seat.

Great stuff from a wonderful God to the objects of His affection! It's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Lord is His Name (verse 1-5)

¹ Then Moses and the children of Israel sang this song to the LORD, and spoke, saying:

Although not the first poetry recorded in the Bible, it is the first song recorded here. In fact the verb sheer or "sing" is used for the first time in Scripture in these words. And not only is this the first song in the Bible, it is also by some hundreds of years the first recorded song in human history.

The structure of it will be followed closely many times in Scripture after this and, though I'm no specialist on these things, it apparently "bears a close resemblance to the Egyptian religious poetry, with which Moses—and probably no other Israelite of the time—would have been familiar from his early training" (Ellicott).

Because of this, there is absolutely no reason to assume that anyone other than Moses is the true author of the song. And yet, he humbly doesn't take credit for it. Instead he simply says that he and the children of Israel sang it to the Lord.

The song is written entirely in hemistiches, meaning half-lines, which is the normal form of Hebrew poetry. The poem actually divides in a few ways. The first is that from verses 1-12, the words are retrospective. They look back on the deliverance of the Israelites by the Lord.

From verses 13-18, they are prospective, meaning that they look forward to the future results of their deliverance. And yet, even though future, they are written in a past-tense, mission-accomplished style.

But, the first retrospective section logically divides into three subsections - from verses 1-5, then verses 6-10, and then verses 11-12. Each of these divisions begins with a note of acknowledgement to the Lord and each ends with a note of judgment on the Lord's enemies.

But there is more to consider than just the song before us. Even at this early point of chapter 15, and without having entered into the song itself, it needs to be noted that this song is later comparable to the song of the redeemed of the Tribulation Period.

Thus this is a complete confirmation of the many previous sermons which equated Pharaoh first with the devil and later as the antichrist of the end times; Egypt with the world; and the Lord, Yehovah with the Lord Jesus.

Therefore, all three redemptive scenarios follow logically - Israel from Egypt, the church from the world, and the tribulation saints from the Tribulation Period. This Song of Moses is in Exodus 15 and the last is found in Revelation 15 - a nice pattern having been established between the two 15s. There we read these words -

"And I saw something like a sea of glass mingled with fire, and those who have the victory over the beast, over his image and over his mark and over the number of his name, standing on the sea of glass, having harps of God.

³ They sing the song of Moses, the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying:

'Great and marvelous are Your works,
Lord God Almighty!
Just and true are Your ways,
O King of the saints!

⁴ Who shall not fear You, O Lord, and glorify Your name?
For You alone are holy.
For all nations shall come and worship before You,
For Your judgments have been manifested.'" Revelation 15:2-4

The words of this Revelation song follow the same pattern as that of the Exodus song. They open with acknowledgement to the Lord of His greatness, and they end with a note that the judgments of the Lord have been manifest.

Further, in these two songs we can see that the mark of the Passover is to be equated with refusal to take the mark of the beast. Standing by the Red Sea is to be equated with standing by the sea of glass. And the timbrels of the women of Exodus 15:20 are to be equated with the "harps of God" in Revelation 15:2.

Throughout the Bible, we are progressively being shown what will come about in the future by looking at what has occurred in the past. And in that progressive revelation is the truth that God has slowly and methodically revealed Jesus as the Lord who is to be exalted above all else. If we fail to see this, or if we simply refuse to acknowledge it, it is to our own detriment.

The songs of the Bible are recorded to show us the very heart of God in how we are to honor Him, exalt Him, and glorify Him. This being the first, we should attend to it carefully and completely, savoring each line as a cherished possession which will lead us to the very throne of God and the Lamb. And so let us look into this first such expression of the magnificence of God's redemptive workings with a sense of delight and joy.

1 (con't) "I will sing to the LORD, ashira l'Yehovah - This begins the first subsection which recounts the works of the Lord. It is individual and personal rather than as a group - "/ will sing." It is the true calling of each individual within the whole to acknowledge the Lord and sing to Him. Some of us, like me, should probably sing quietly as to not hurt the ears of the Lord or our fellow man, but let us sing! And the reason why is...

1 (con't) For He has triumphed gloriously!

ki-gaoh gaah - literally, "He is gloriously glorious," or "He is exceedingly exalted." This word, gaah, is used only 7 times in the Bible and the first four of them are found in this chapter. The root of the word means "to rise." For emphasis, the word is repeated twice here gaoh gaah. It is first in the finite form and then in the infinitive absolute.

The idea here is that the Lord has "risen up like a wave" (HAW) over His enemies. Therefore, I can't see any reason not to think of these words as, "He rising has risen." It would then make a perfect picture of, and parallel to, exactly what Christ did when He triumphed over His foes in the resurrection.

1 (con't) The horse and its rider sus v'rokevoh - The "horse and its rider" implies the chariots of the Egyptians. They followed the Israelites in but they were destroyed.

1 (con't) He has thrown into the sea!

ramah b'yam - This is a contrast to the "rising like a wave" from a moment ago. He rose like a wave; they were thrown into the sea. It is reflective of the words of Paul which say -

"When you were dead in your transgressions and the uncircumcision of your flesh, He made you alive together with Him, having forgiven us all our transgressions, ¹⁴ having canceled out the certificate of debt consisting of decrees against us, which was hostile to us; and He has taken it out of the way, having nailed it to the cross. ¹⁵ When He had disarmed the rulers and authorities, He made a public display of them, having triumphed over them through Him." Colossians 2:13-15 (NASB)

2 The LORD is my strength and song,

azzi v'zimrat Yah - "My strength and my song is Yah." There is a lot in these few words for us to pull out. Instead of the full name Yehovah, this has the contracted form Yah. It is the first time this poetic form is used in the Bible and it was used to maintain the rhythm of the words.

But, this name, Yah, is not just a nickname or a reason for a poetic matching of sounds. In itself it is a full name. We know this because it is used in conjunction with the full name Yehovah by Isaiah on two separate instances. One is found in Isaiah 12 and it is almost a mirror of the words we now here in Exodus -

"Behold, God is my salvation,
I will trust and not be afraid;
'For YAH, the LORD, is my strength and song;
He also has become my salvation.'" Isaiah 12:2

Adam Clarke notes that the name Yah indicates "He who Is, simply, absolutely, and independently." It is the very basis of the name "I AM" and it is what Jesus was certainly alluding to in John 8 when He said these words -

"Most assuredly, I say to you, before Abraham was, I AM." John 8:58

Despite this being the first use of Yah as a name, the compound form was used earlier in Genesis 22:2 in the name Moriah, or "Bitterness of Yah." It is also the form of His wonderful name that we use every time we say "Hallelujah" or "Praise Yah."

Moses acknowledges here that it is Yah who is azzi v'zimrat "my strength and my song." And if He is our strength and our song, then that will naturally lead to Him being something else...

² (con't) And He has become my salvation;

v'hi-li lishua - "And he has been to me my salvation." The Lord is our strength, our song, and our salvation. Nothing could be more wonderful to consider. We could pull up a thousand verses on this concept. And as you read the Bible, take time to ponder them as your eyes alight upon them.

When we are weak, He is our strength. When we are downtrodden, He becomes the song on our lips to restore our souls. When we are overjoyed with His goodness, He is our song of praise and thanks. And when we need a Savior, He is there to save. This is now the third of seventy-seven times in the Bible that the word yeshuah is used. The first was in Genesis 49 during Jacob's blessing of his sons. After blessing Dan and before blessing Gad, he cried out -

"I have waited for your salvation, O LORD!" Genesis 49:18

Jacob anticipated Yeshua. It was next used just before the parting of the waters when Moses said -

"Do not be afraid. Stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD"

Exodus 14:13

Moses promised Yeshua. Salvation would come and it would come from the Lord. And now in this verse, it says that Yeshua had come. There is a logical progression of the introduction of this word, Yeshua, to show us the coming of Christ - He is anticipated, He is promised, and He has come. It is a picture of the incarnation.

In essence, the words say, "My strength and my song is Yah, and He has become to me my Jesus." It is ancient reference to what the Lord would do in history. He would step out of His eternal realm and become the Man, Yeshua; the Lord Jesus.

Along with Isaiah 12:2, these words are also quoted one more time in Psalm 118:14. We are being given, time and again, hidden references to what God would do in the sending of His Son to redeem man. The Lord is Yah and Yah is Jesus. Such is the wisdom of God to show us these things in advance!

² (con't) He is my God, and I will praise Him;

zeh eli v'anvehu - The term "my God" or Eli is used here for the first time in Scripture. It is a personal touch acknowledging that the Lord is God and not only "a god," but "my God," and because this is so, v'anvehu - "and I will praise Him."

This word, navah, is only used two times in the Bible and it means "home." And so some older translations say "...and I will prepare Him a habitation." However, the root of the word means "beautiful" and so other translations say something like "I will praise Him" or "I will glorify him."

This is most probably the correct sense because the poem is constructed of parallel verses. The next portion says, "I will exalt Him" and so in order to be parallel, the words "I will praise Him" are certainly a better choice than "I will build Him a home."

² (con't) My father's God, and I will exalt Him.

elohe avi v'aromemenhu - "My father's God" means "the God of my ancestors." In other words, it is speaking of the everlasting nature of God who was there before and who is there now. He is the God his fathers called on and now it is his honor to call on this same God. This takes us right back to the words of Exodus 3 -

"Then He said, 'Do not draw near this place. Take your sandals off your feet, for the place where you stand is holy ground.' ⁶ Moreover He said, 'I am the God of your father—the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.'" Exodus 3:5, 6

This same God who received the praises of the fathers is the God who Moses and all of the children of Israel now exalt. There is no gap in the praise of God from generation to generation. When Jesus appeared to His people, His praises continued on in a new group of people who are sons of Abraham because they possess the faith of Abraham. Paul writes this to us in Galatians 3 -

"Therefore know that only those who are of faith are sons of Abraham.
⁸ And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the Gentiles by faith, preached the gospel to Abraham beforehand, saying, "In you all the nations shall be blessed." ⁹ So then those who are of faith are blessed with believing Abraham." Galatians 3:7-9

³ The LORD is a man of war;

Yehovah ish milkhama - The sappy, impotent picture that modern theologians make concerning God is false. From the beginning to the end, God is the one who takes to the battlefield and engages in the battle. It is He who receives the victory as His enemies are destroyed. In the previous chapter, we read these words -

"The LORD will fight for you, and you shall hold your peace." Exodus 14:14

In seemingly countless times throughout Scripture, the Lord is shown to be a mighty warrior and one who doesn't shrink from the battle. In Isaiah 42 we read this -

"The LORD shall go forth like a mighty man;
He shall stir up His zeal like a man of war.
He shall cry out, yes, shout aloud;
He shall prevail against His enemies." Isaiah 42:13

And in Isaiah 63 there is a description of the Lord that is so striking and terrible that if its words are properly considered, they would fill the mind with absolute horror at what they picture. There the prophet writes this most vivid description -

"Who is this who comes from Edom,
With dyed garments from Bozrah,
This One who is glorious in His apparel,
Traveling in the greatness of His strength?—

'I who speak in righteousness, mighty to save.'

² Why is Your apparel red,
And Your garments like one who treads in the winepress?

³ I have trodden the winepress alone,
And from the peoples no one was with Me.
For I have trodden them in My anger,
And trampled them in My fury;
Their blood is sprinkled upon My garments,
And I have stained all My robes.

⁴ For the day of vengeance is in My heart,
And the year of My redeemed has come.

⁵ I looked, but there was no one to help,
And I wondered
That there was no one to uphold;
Therefore My own arm brought salvation for Me;
And My own fury, it sustained Me.

⁶ I have trodden down the peoples in My anger,
Made them drunk in My fury,
And brought down their strength to the earth.'" Isaiah 63:1-6

And lest we make the same error as many modern church-folk that this is just the "wrathful God of the Old Testament" and not the same as the "peaceful and loving God of the New" we have to see the fulfillment of Isaiah's words in the book of Revelation -

Now I saw heaven opened, and behold, a white horse. And He who sat on him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness He judges and makes war. ¹² His eyes were like a flame of fire, and on His head were many crowns. He had a name written that no one knew except Himself. ¹³ He was clothed with a robe dipped in blood, and His name is called The Word of God. ¹⁴ And the armies in heaven, clothed in fine linen, white and clean, followed Him on white horses. ¹⁵ Now out of His mouth goes a sharp sword, that with it He should strike the nations. And He Himself will rule them with a rod of iron. He Himself treads the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. ¹⁶ And He has on His robe and on His thigh a name written:

KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS.

Revelation 19:11-16

The terrifying vision of the Lord that Isaiah saw is actually fulfilled in Jesus Christ. It is He who will stomp out the blood of His enemies, spattering His garments with their blood in the full righteous rage of God who defends His people. Surely the words Yehovah ish milkhama are true - Yehovah is a Man of war.

³ (con't) The LORD is His name.

Yehovah shemo - It is actually unfortunate that the name Yehovah is replaced with "the Lord" in most translations of this poem. We probably use the term "the Lord" to show the obvious connection between the two testaments of Yehovah the Lord and Jesus the Lord. However, we lose some of the sense of the poetry when we substitute the name with the title.

Yehovah is a proper noun, not a title, and so the words Yehovah shemo means, "Yehovah is His name." He is the One who appeared to Moses at the burning bush and explained to him His very nature by the giving of the name.

In our sermon on Exodus 3:14, we went through many long pages of explanation concerning this divine name. Without going into so much detail, we should recall some of its significance now because Moses is tying the victory of the Lord over His enemies to the One whom he met at the bush.

The name Yehovah which is often translated as LORD is derived from the word ehyeh. It means to fall out, to come to pass, to become, or to be. In this, God confirmed that He was to be known to His people by the name Yehovah specifically.

This name Yehovah carries just that meaning - Being, He Is, or He Will Cause to Be. Abraim notes that to a Hebrew audience the name Yehovah may have looked very much like "He Who Causes 'That Which Is' To Be." As He is uncaused, then all things that exist were caused by Him.

He then is the First Cause of all things; the unmoved Mover; and the Giver of existence. In that He is self-existent, and that all things come from Him, then that means that all things are actually encompassed by Him. There is no place where we are, or could be, which is outside of His Being.

The name I AM, or its form Yehovah, implies an absolute uniqueness. If He is the Giver of existence, then there is none other that gives existence and therefore none other like Him. The name also implies eternity.

He is outside of time, having created it, and therefore though He interacts with it, it has no effect on Him, rather it is affected by Him. Yehovah is His name and the promises which He makes will never fail to come to pass. Moses realized this in his words of this song. Yehovah promised to bring Israel out and Yehovah delivered. Yehovah is His name.

⁴ Pharaoh's chariots and his army He has cast into the sea;

markevot parah v'khelow yarah b'yam - The word used here for "cast" means something like "to hurl." It is a verb which often is used to describe "the hurling of a javelin or the shooting of an arrow" (Pulpit). Such is the nature of the mighty

Man of war described in the previous verse. By His hand, he took them and cast them to their deaths - both chariots and army in one fell swoop. But for intensification of the imagery, Moses continues...

⁴ (con't) His chosen captains also are drowned in the Red Sea.

umiv-khar shalishav tubbehu b'yam suph - Not only were the lesser warriors destroyed, but even the chosen captains. The word miv-khar means "the choicest." It is the same as the word used in Genesis 23:6 when Abraham looked for a tomb for Sarah. At that time, the Hittites said -

"Hear us, my lord: You are a mighty prince among us; bury your dead in the choicest of our burial places. None of us will withhold from you his burial place, that you may bury your dead." Genesis 23:6

The word now shows that those who were personally selected by Pharaoh himself as the finest of all of the armies were not spared. They along with the lowest of foot soldiers all perished. If you have been paying attention to these four verses, you may have seen the amplification of the scope of the victory.

It started with the general words "horse and rider" in verse 1. From that, verse 4 broke it down into first his chariots, then his army, and then his chosen captains. It seems Moses was purposely raising the intensity of the words as if he were stepping up to a new level with each description.

The word translated as "drowned" here is taba. It is the first of ten uses of it in the Bible. It specifically means to "sink." It is the same word which is next used in 1 Samuel 17 when the rock from David's sling sunk into the forehead of Goliath. Down went the choice captains of Egypt - a watery grave was their final lot.

With such a massive scope of destruction, particularly the choicest leaders having been removed, Moses could actually have turned around and probably subdued all of Egypt. But the sea behind them was closed and the Lord had no intention of leading them around it and back into that miserable place again.

Instead, He wanted them to share in His glory in another way. In fact, Deuteronomy 17 says that He instructed them to never return that way again. Israel was never to return to Egypt; we are never to return to the world of sin. Jesus Christ has utterly defeated the foe who stands against us, and so why would we go again to trust him or ally with him? Instead, we are to take a new direction and always follow the Lord where He goes.

One final note on this verse is that this destruction occurred in the Red Sea - yam suph. In an earlier sermon, I explained the meaning of suph as a noun means "reeds" but as a verb it means "end." The verb is translated elsewhere as "to be swept away." Thus, there may be somewhat of a play on words here. The armies of Pharaoh sunk in the sea which consumes. They were swept away.

⁵ The depths have covered them;

tehōmōt̄ yekas-yumu - The word for "depths" is a word often used in a poetic sense as if an unfathomable abyss. One of the most memorable uses in Scripture is found in the 42nd Psalm -

"Deep calls unto deep at the noise of Your waterfalls;
All Your waves and billows have gone over me." Psalm 42:7

The tense of the words in Hebrew are as if the floods were covering them in Moses' mind as the poem was being written - "...the floods covering them..."

⁵ (con't) They sank to the bottom like a stone.

yaredu vimsolowt kemow-aben - "They went down into the abyss like a stone." The word "bottom" or "abyss" is different from "the depths." Taken together, the two lines read, "The floods covering them, they went down into the abyss like a stone." It is a great mental parallel to what we read about the antichrist of the future -

"And I saw the beast, the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against Him who sat on the horse and against His army. ²⁰ Then the beast was captured, and with him the false prophet who worked signs in his presence, by which he deceived those who received the mark of the beast and those who worshiped his image. These two were cast alive into the lake of fire burning with brimstone. ²¹ And the rest were killed with the sword which proceeded from the mouth of Him who sat on the horse. And all the birds were filled with their flesh." Revelation 19:19-21

The Lord judged Pharaoh and his armies, and the Lord will judge the antichrist and his. The finality of the words is given to show the terrible end to these wicked foes of the Lord and of his people.

This ends the first subdivision of the poem with the words of judgment upon Pharaoh and his host. It is at this time in the song that the women would probably pick up the refrain found recorded at the end of the song in verse 21 -

“Sing to the LORD,
For He has triumphed gloriously!
The horse and its rider
He has thrown into the sea!”

When the refrain was finished, Moses and the men would continue with the next stanza.

*Great and glorious is the Lord our God
He has cast the horse and the rider into the sea
He is my strength and my song in this life as I trod
And He has even become Salvation to me*

*He is my God and I will praise Him forever
My father's God is He, the One who ever lives
He is a Man of war, from the battle retreating never Yehovah is His name, and upon us His favor He gives*

*He is the same One who then stepped out of the eternal realm
Uniting with flesh and living as a Man to redeem us
He is our Mighty God! Ever at the ship's helm
There to bring us to our heavenly shore; He is Jesus!*

II. The Right Hand of the Lord (verses 6-10)

⁶“Your right hand, O LORD, has become glorious in power;

yeminikha Yehovah nedari bakoakh - This is a second anthropomorphism used to describe the Lord. The first was in verse 3 when He was called a Man of war. Now an attribute of a man is given to Him - the right hand.

It is the first time this phrase is used in connection with the Lord in the Bible, but it will fill Scripture from here on out, especially in the psalms and in the prophets. The New Testament will continue on with the analogy as well. Also, the word "glorious," which in Hebrew is adar, is used for the first of only three times in the Bible. Some translations use "majestic" to translate this word, showing the superlative nature of the right hand of the Lord.

The right hand of the Lord is the place of power, of favor, of divine blessing, and of divine judgment. It is expressive of the finest qualities of tender care, or the harshness of the outpouring of wrath. How the right hand is used in relation to the subject is what determines what the outcome for the subject will be.

It is a lesson from the Bible. We should consider being on the good side of the Lord before the hand is raised. In the case of His enemies, the consequences of being in His disfavor are realized in the following words...

^{6 (con't)} Your right hand, O LORD, has dashed the enemy in pieces.

yeminikah Yehovah tirats owyev - The word translated as "dashed" here is raats. It means "to afflict" and it is only used twice in the Bible. The other time is in Judges 10 -

"So the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel; and He sold them into the hands of the Philistines and into the hands of the people of Ammon. ⁸ From that year they harassed and oppressed the children of Israel for eighteen years—all the children of Israel who were on the other side of the Jordan in the land of the Amorites, in Gilead." Judges 10:7, 8

Knowing the human heart, and seeing it daily in the treatment of people by, for example the muslims of today, we can know for sure that "dashed" is a good word. The Israelites were more than harassed. They were crushed. In like manner, the Egyptians were literally crushed by the right hand of the Lord.

Translators vary on what verbs to use in this verse - "has become glorious/has dashed the enemy," "is glorious/dashes the enemy," and so on. The ESV skips the verb in the first part and makes the second verb present tense. In doing so it gives what I think is proper sense of the verse -

"Your right hand, O LORD, glorious in power, your right hand, O LORD, shatters the enemy." ESV

The verb is in the present but it is of continuance. His hand wasn't just glorious in power in the past, it is simply glorious in power. And Moses wasn't just looking back on what happened, but to what the Lord is capable of at all times. He shatters the enemy as the enemy comes against Him - past, present, and future; always.

⁷ And in the greatness of Your excellence
You have overthrown those who rose against You;

u'verov geownkha taharos gamekha - "Your excellence" is another word used for the first time in the Bible - ga'own. And it is immediately followed up in the Hebrew with another first-time word haras, or "overthrown."

It is a completely different word than that used in chapter 14 where it says the armies of Pharaoh were overthrown. This word gives the idea of picking something up and shattering it to pieces, like a pot of clay being smashed on the ground.

Moses is holding nothing back as time and time again he introduces new or superlative words to describe the Lord and to convey the magnificence of what his eyes had beheld. This Song of Moses is merely the beginning of such majestic poetry about the Lord, but it is an amazing start to it.

The Lord in all of His greatness and majesty overthrows those who rise against Him. Like the previous verse, the verbs indicate something on-going. This is not merely a description of what occurred, but it is an acknowledgement of what occurs in connection with the work of the Lord.

^{7 (con't)} You sent forth Your wrath;
It consumed them like stubble.

teshalah kharonekha yokelemow kaqash - Again, a new word is introduced into the Bible, kharon, or "wrath." It literally says, "Your burning." It is as if a fire went out to consume them, hence the words, "It consumed them like stubble."

Stubble in this verse is the same word, qash, that was first introduced in Exodus 5 when the people went out looking for stubble to make bricks. That which was useless was used in the brick-making process and those who are useless to the Lord are burnt up like stubble in the eternal fires of judgment.

⁸ And with the blast of Your nostrils
The waters were gathered together;

u'veruakh appekha neermu mayim - The imagery here is astonishing. It is as if the Lord put His face down to the water and blew with his nostrils, causing a mighty wind to drive the waters where He wished. With the mighty east wind, the waters were gathered and a highway was made.

The word for "gathered" is aram. It is used only here in the entire Bible. It comes from a primitive root meaning "to pile up" or "to gather together." Moses is using exceptional words to describe the most exceptional of events. The fact that he uses a word such as this shows that this was not a mere ebb tide, but a truly miraculous event which they beheld. And the imagery continues...

⁸ (con't) The floods stood upright like a heap;
The depths congealed in the heart of the sea.

nit-sevu kemow-ned nozelim qaphe-u tehomot b'lev-yam - Again, three words are used here for the first time in the Bible. Ned or "heap," nazal, meaning "to flow," and qapha, meaning "to congeal" have all been introduced into the poem and into Scripture.

Under the inspiration of the Spirit of God, Moses' words reflect the magnificence of the event. The waters were brought to a state of animation as if they were in fear. They stood up at attention as if facing a drill sergeant, and poetically they were said to congeal to a hardened state as if blasted until frozen by a polar wind.

The elements reacted to the prompting of the Lord in order for the people of the Lord to pass through. And surely, no bride ever traversed down the hallway of a church with awed eyes gazing upon her as the people of God did as they passed through the admiring waters of the Red Sea. There went Israel, marching towards their marriage to Lord.

⁹ The enemy said, 'I will pursue,
I will overtake,
I will divide the spoil;

amar oyev erdoph assig ahalek shalal - In what is a departure from the form of poetry thus far expressed, Moses enters directly into the thoughts of the enemy with words which are both extremely beautiful and yet terrifying in their original intent.

He makes abrupt and almost gasping utterances, leaving off the word "and" in between each. It is as if the intent of mind in the Egyptians was set on the goal, leaving no time to even coherently tie the thoughts together.

They were eager to regain the plunder of which they had been plundered. They were eager to take the flocks which would replace those lost in the plagues. They were eager to steal away the women, kill the men, and enslave the children. "I will pursue. I will overtake. I will divide the spoil."

It is the most magnificent of poetry because we can enter into thoughts and feelings which had enticed otherwise rational men to go between walls of water which were as unnatural as a glowing green sky or cat which could fly. In complete disregard to the God who had proven Himself greater than any of their gods, they have become consumed with self. I will, I will, I will...

^{9 (con't)} My desire shall be satisfied on them.
I will draw my sword,
My hand shall destroy them.'

timlaemow naphshi ariq harbi towrishemow yadi - The maniacal thoughts of the enemy continue... "My, I, My!" My desire - the lusts of my angry and coveting heart will be turned against them. I will draw out my sword from its place of rest and I will loose it upon the Hebrews. It will leave its sheath at my side and find a new place of rests in their hearts.

Those who have destroyed my firstborn will be paid double and more. They shall be utterly destroyed by the power of my hand and the rage flowing through my veins.

The terrifying thoughts made them ready to act as they drew nearer with each step through the long tunnel of water. But those angry, lusting thoughts became their own undoing. The Lord was ready to act and the end drew near. Anger would be replaced with horror...

10 You blew with Your wind,
The sea covered them;
They sank like lead in the mighty waters.

nashaphta v'ruakh-a kisamow yam tsalalu ka-o-pheret b'mayim addirim - The first wind was one of divine favor upon Israel. It parted the waters and it brought them out of bondage. The second wind was of divine wrath and it closed the mountainous passage, destroying the afflictors of His people. They were covered in the waters and started their journey to the bottom of the sea.

The word "sink" here is tsalal. This is its only use in Bible. It comes from a root meaning to tumble down or settle by a waving motion. However, two other identical words used elsewhere mean 1) grow dark, and 2) tingle. And so it could be that the intent is that they darkened the waters as they sank, and all that was left was a gurgling sound.

The word ophereth or "lead" is used for the first time in the Bible here. To me, it is striking that instead of again saying they sank like a stone, lead came to Moses' mind. He is celebrating on the shore of the Red Sea with stones as far as the eye could see, and yet he says "lead" instead of "stone."

Two things come to mind because of this. First, Moses was aware of the dense nature of lead. The word shows intent and it shows high intelligence concerning its nature. Secondly, there must be another connection for the Lord to so inspire him to use this word. The word for lead, ophereth, comes from another word, aphar, which means "dust" due to its dusty color.

It is the word used at the creation of man when God took the dust of the earth and created him by blowing the breath of life into his nostrils. Now Moses saw these men of dust, created by God, sinking as if lead, there to return to the dust from which they came. The breath of God gave, and the breath of God has taken away.

It is the most beautiful of symbolism that God is absolutely sovereign. Even a word such as "lead" instead of "stone" shows immense wisdom in the construction of the greater magnificent themes found in the Bible. What a book!

And one last word in today's verses is used for the first time. It is used to describe the waters - addirim. Addir means "majestic" but here it is plural, addirim - "majestics." It is "the mighty proof of the Creator's glory which is furnished by the waves as they rush majestically along." Keil and Delitzsch

Like noble warriors having won a great battle, the waves roooooo along proudly, having prevailed over the foes of the people of God. Every word has been carefully selected by the great man of God while under inspiration of the Spirit to delight the senses and to show forth the majesty and splendor of the Lord as He worked His mighty miracle for His redeemed people.

With the ending of this second stanza, Miriam and the women of Israel would have again picked up their timbrels and sang -

“Sing to the LORD,
For He has triumphed gloriously!
The horse and its rider
He has thrown into the sea!”

What a marvelous beginning to this most magnificent of songs. What treasure and beauty has been hidden in these words for us to read and to delight in. And if this song was written for the redemption of mere temporary physical life, how much more should we endeavor to sing to the Lord for the redemption of our eternal spiritual souls!

Can we really sit and withhold our joy, praise, and exultation from the Lord knowing that we have crossed over a greater chasm than Israel passing through the Red Sea; knowing that a far greater foe has been defeated for us than a mere army of flesh; and knowing that even now we are seated in the heavenly places with Christ because of what He has done for us?

Sing to the Lord! Surely He has triumphed gloriously! The devil is defeated, eternal life is granted, and we are the redeemed of the Lord! And with the mere possibility that you are listening today and have not yet received Jesus, please let me tell you how you can, even now...

Closing Verse: "He sent from above, He took me;
He drew me out of many waters.

¹⁷ He delivered me from my strong enemy,
From those who hated me,
For they were too strong for me.

¹⁸ They confronted me in the day of my calamity,
But the LORD was my support.

¹⁹ He also brought me out into a broad place;
He delivered me because He delighted in me." Psalm 18:16-19

Next Week: Exodus 15:11-21 (The Song of Moses) (The Song at the Sea, Part II)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

I will Sing to the Lord

Then Moses and the children of Israel in joyous praying
Sang this song to the LORD, and spoke, saying:

"I will sing to the LORD,
For He has triumphed gloriously!
The horse and its rider
He has thrown into the sea!
The LORD is my strength and song,
And He has become my salvation;
He is my God, and I will praise Him;
My father's God, and I will exalt Him.

The LORD is a man of war;
The LORD is His name.
Pharaoh's chariots and his army He has cast into the sea;
His chosen captains also are drowned in the Red Sea.
The depths have covered them;
They sank to the bottom like a stone.

"Your right hand, O LORD, has become glorious in power;
Your right hand, O LORD, has dashed the enemy in pieces.
And in the greatness of Your excellence
You have overthrown those who rose against You;
You sent forth Your wrath;
It consumed them like stubble.
And with the blast of Your nostrils
The waters were gathered together;
The floods stood upright like a heap;
The depths congealed in the heart of the sea.
The enemy said, 'I will pursue,
I will overtake,
I will divide the spoil;
My desire shall be satisfied on them.
I will draw my sword,
My hand shall destroy them.'
You blew with Your wind,
The sea covered them;
They sank like lead in the mighty waters.

How wonderful to read the marvelous song
And to contemplate the greatness of the Lord
May we together for eternal ages sing along
And praise Jesus, God's eternal word
Splendid and wondrous things He has done
He has brought us across the great divide

In our Lord the victory is won

And He has brought us to Himself to forevermore reside

We praise You Lord, Yes! Hear the praises from each of us

We exalt You O God, for our Lord, our Savior, our precious Jesus

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 15:11-21

(THE SONG OF MOSES, THE SONG AT THE SEA, PART II)

There is some of the worst artwork on the face of the planet on display in downtown Sarasota. I don't think a person here would disagree with that. Abstract art for the most part isn't art and almost all of the stuff that is along the bay front cannot be called "art" in any real sense.

The metal sculptures would look better as sports cars. Those made of fiberglass would look better as surfboards. And those made of resins of some sort would look better as children's Lego blocks. If any of them are made of wood... well, even a shipping pallet is more pleasing to look at than the junk down there.

But there is one exception, isn't there. Who here knows the name of the one piece of artwork that has true value downtown? That's right... it's the Kissing Statue! It is the one that every person who visits Sarasota loves to see and, of course, it is the only one that the stupid liberals - including the stupid liberal art commission - want to see removed.

And why is this? It is because it brings out the past that they don't want to consider. They hate the nation in which we live and they hate what the Kissing Statue stands for - victory over the enemies of World War II. It was a battle of Good versus Evil and liberals always want evil to win.

Today we will finish the Song of Moses, the Song at the Sea. The Lord won a great victory over Pharaoh and his army. But this victory only pictures a much greater victory in redemptive history. It is the victory over the devil and sin.

Text Verse: "O LORD God of hosts,
Who is mighty like You, O LORD?"

Your faithfulness also surrounds You.

⁹ You rule the raging of the sea;

When its waves rise, You still them." Psalm 89:8, 9

When we see the Kissing Statue downtown, we have a reminder of the once great thing that America accomplished in their triumph over the evil axis powers which threatened the world. There was joy and jubilation in the land as the people wildly celebrated what had been done.

Miriam did some wild celebrating with the other women as they danced and played the timbrels and exalted the great victory the Lord had accomplished for Israel. Let's look at this marvelous celebration together, analyzing it's wonders as we look into God's superior word. It's all to be found there. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Who is Like You, O Lord? (verses 11 & 12)

¹¹ "Who is like You, O LORD, among the gods?"

mi kamoka ba'elim Yehovah - With these words, we now enter the third stanza of the Song of Moses. It is shorter than the first two, but it is marvelous in its form and detail. Moses, as if completely overwhelmed by the thoughts which he has so far penned, turns from narration to question.

It is as if he had to pause and contemplate the utter majesty of the Lord and His wonderful work. His first of two rhetorical questions is "Who is like You, O LORD, among the gods?" This question is parallel to the words of 15:2, 3 -

"The LORD is my strength and song,
And He has become my salvation;
He is my God, and I will praise Him;
My father's God, and I will exalt Him.
³The LORD is a man of war;
The LORD is His name."

In those verses, he described the Lord. Now in this question, he asks who is like Him. The answer is implied in the question, "No one!" All of the gods of Egypt, the greatest nation on earth at the time, were rendered impotent against the hand of the Lord. None could compare to him and all were shown to be false.

Only the Lord was to be exalted because only the Lord is the true God. The words are as valid today as they were when Moses wrote them - allah, buddha, krishna, and on and on... Who is like You, O LORD, among the gods? The answer stands - "None are like the Lord!"

In this question is the germ of the name of the archangel Michael, which means "Who is like God?" You can hear the similarity - mikael and mi kamoka? Who can compare to the Lord?

11 (con't) Who is like You, glorious in holiness, mi-kamoka nadar ba'qodesh - This portion of the verse is parallel to 15:6 which said -

"Your right hand, O LORD, has become glorious in power;"

He asked the question based on these words and the reply again is implied in the question. "Surely there is no one like the Lord who is glorious in holiness!" In all ways, He is far above every being because He is the Creator of them all. Therefore, He alone is holy.

The word "glorious," which in Hebrew is adar, is used for the second time both in this poem and in the Bible. In all, it will only be used three times in the Bible. Some translations use "majestic," thus showing the superlative nature of the One who is "glorious in holiness."

This is the first time that the idea of holiness is ascribed directly to the Lord. Three other times the word qodesh or "holy" has been used. The first was at the burning bush where the Lord told Moses to take off his shoes because he was standing on holy ground. It implied that the Lord is the One who made the ground holy.

The other two times it was used came in conjunction with the Feast of Unleavened bread, where the first and the last days of the feast were to be considered "holy." Now, in the fourth use of the word, holiness is ascribed to the Lord who is "glorious in holiness" by asking this rhetorical question.

11 (con't) Fearful in praises, doing wonders?

nowra tehilot oseh pele - This is the second half of the second question. It is parallel to verses 6-8 -

"Your right hand, O LORD, has dashed the enemy in pieces.

⁷ And in the greatness of Your excellence

You have overthrown those who rose against You;

You sent forth Your wrath;

It consumed them like stubble.

⁸ And with the blast of Your nostrils
The waters were gathered together;
The floods stood upright like a heap;
The depths congealed in the heart of the sea."

Moses described the great works of the Lord and now, in question he asks, "Who else is like this?" Again, the answer is implied in the question. "There is none like the Lord who is fearful in praises, doing wonders!"

He uses three new words in this portion of the verse. The first is emah and is translated as "fearful." It means "terror." The second new word translated as "praises" is tehillah. It means "praise," or a "song of praise" and thus a psalm. It comes from the word halal which means "to shine."

And the third new word is translated as "wonders." It is the word pele. It is the first of 13 uses of this word in the Bible. It is a word found mostly in the psalms to describe the Lord in a manner similar to this song of praise, but probably the most famous use of it is found in Isaiah 9:6 where it describes the coming Messiah -

"For unto us a Child is born,
Unto us a Son is given;
And the government will be upon His shoulder.
And His name will be called Wonderful, Counselor, Mighty God,
Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace." Isaiah 9:6

Again and again Moses draws out new and exceptional words from his Hebrew dictionary to describe the majesty of the Lord who has performed works never seen before. He is to be held in awe, but not just as in an impressive mountain scene. Rather, we are to be in fearful awe of His glorious splendor. He is all powerful and therefore He alone is fearful in praises.

The Lord's wonders in the creation itself as well as how He works through the creation are magnificent. And beyond this, He has proven that He can work beyond the natural order. The final plague, that of the firstborn, transcended the natural. And the parting and closing of the Red Sea did as well.

The Lord is able to suspend nature in order to accomplish his great wonders. It is He who is wonderful in all ways. Moses first recognizes this in written form for the people of the world to reflect on ever since. The author of Psalm 86 appears to have used his words here as a pattern for his own reflections on the Lord -

"Among the gods there is none like You, O Lord;

Nor are there any works like Your works.

⁹ All nations whom You have made

Shall come and worship before You, O Lord,

And shall glorify Your name.

¹⁰ For You are great, and do wondrous things;

You alone are God." Psalm 86:8-10

¹² You stretched out Your right hand;

The earth swallowed them.

yatita yeminikha tibraemow arets - These words are parallel to verse 10 which said -

"You blew with Your wind,

The sea covered them;

They sank like lead in the mighty waters."

But though parallel, there is an addition to what we have seen so far. It says that "the earth swallowed them." It could be as many scholars believe, that this is speaking of the sea as a part of the earth and that Moses is using poetic license in his description.

However, it could be that this implies more than just the waters covering them, but that the earth was rent asunder as well. The 77th Psalm, which details this event, seems to confirm that along with the sea closing, there was also an earthquake -

"The voice of Your thunder was in the whirlwind;
The lightnings lit up the world;
The earth trembled and shook.
¹⁹ Your way was in the sea,
Your path in the great waters,
And Your footsteps were not known.
²⁰ You led Your people like a flock
By the hand of Moses and Aaron." Psalm 77:18-20

The earth and all of its elements are under the complete control of the Lord. The Egyptians failed to see this and they perished. Israel failed to heed Moses' words and they were twice exiled. And the world has forgotten that the Lord is in control and they too will suffer His judgments because of this.

*Who is like You, O LORD, among the gods of the world?
Who is like You, glorious in holiness?
You are fearful in praises, Your wonders unfurled!
Only to You shall my soul bless

You stretched out Your right hand*

*The earth swallowed the peoples
You in Your mercy have led forth your redeemed as planned
So that they can gather to praise You under church steeples*

*The people whom You have redeemed and brought out
You have guided them in Your might
To Your holy habitation, and with a resounding shout
They have been brought into Your glorious light*

II. The Lord Shall Reign Forever and Ever (verses 13-18)

¹³ You in Your mercy have led forth
The people whom You have redeemed;

nahita ba-khash-dekha am zu gaaleta - This is the concluding verse of the third stanza, but it is also the first verse of the second major section of the song. The first 12 verses were retrospective, looking back on the deliverance of the Israelites by the Lord.

Now from verses 13-18, they are prospective; they look forward to the future results of that deliverance. And yet, even though future, they are written in a past-tense, mission-accomplished style. Moses acknowledges that it is the Lord's khesed, or divine favor, which made Him select and covenant with Israel.

In other words, it was a merciful act and not because they had merited His lovingkindness. It is an important point which Moses has incorporated into the song. The Lord covenanted with Abraham and made a promise to his seed. Even in their unfaithfulness, He has remained faithful to the people He redeemed.

And the words of this verse are exactly what the Lord promised all the way back in Chapter 6 -

"Therefore say to the children of Israel: 'I am the LORD; I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians, I will rescue you from their bondage, and I will redeem you with an outstretched arm and with great judgments.'" Exodus 6:6

Just as the Lord promised, so He also fulfilled.

13 (con't) You have guided them in Your strength
To Your holy habitation.

nahalta b'azzekha el neveh qad-shekha - The form of the Hebrew indicates that the guiding of which Moses speaks is on-going. In other words, Moses is looking forward to where they are being led even though it is written as if they are already there.

The Lord had guided them, was guiding them, and would guide them by the power of His strength to His holy habitation. It could be, and it probably is, that this is speaking of Canaan, the Land of Promise, but verse 17 is more specific than that.

Not only would the people be brought into the Land of Promise, but there would be a place in that land where the Lord would dwell. In the end, this is still not only a historical account, but also a picture of those redeemed through the tribulation period of the future who would partake of the millennial reign of Christ as spoken of by the prophets many times.

It is also a picture of the redeemed of the Lord who will eventually be guided even to His heavenly habitation. This is described in Hebrews 12 -

"But you have come to Mount Zion and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, to an innumerable company of angels,²³ to the general assembly and church of the firstborn who are registered in heaven, to God the Judge of all, to the spirits of just men made perfect,..." Hebrews 12:22, 23

In both the temporal and in the spiritual, it is the Lord who guides His redeemed until they arrive at the destination which He has prepared for them. It is marvelous to see how history repeats itself so that we can know that the Lord's hand is involved in what occurs.

¹⁴ "The people will hear and be afraid;

sha-me-u ammim yir-ga-zun - The word "people" in the Hebrew is plural. It is speaking of the various people groups in the land of Canaan, many of which have been named already in the Bible.

They are groups such as those mentioned in Exodus 3 when the Lord spoke to Moses at the burning bush. These included the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites. These many groups, and others as well, would hear and would fear.

This became a reality when Israel finally entered Canaan. When the spies first entered the land, they came to the house of Rahab the harlot and she said this to them, thus confirming Moses words -

"I know that the LORD has given you the land, that the terror of you has fallen on us, and that all the inhabitants of the land are fainthearted because of you. ¹⁰ For we have heard how the LORD dried up the water of the Red Sea for you when you came out of Egypt, and what you did to the two kings of the Amorites who were on the other side of the Jordan, Sihon and Og, whom you utterly destroyed. ¹¹ And as soon as we heard these things, our hearts melted; neither did there remain any more courage in anyone because of you, for the LORD your God, He is God in heaven above and on earth beneath." Joshua 2:9-11

¹⁴ (con't) Sorrow will take hold of the inhabitants of Philistia.

khil akhaz yo-shev-e pelasheth - In Moses' words now though, he specifically singles out the inhabitants of Philistia. He says that "sorrow" would take hold of them. The word "sorrow" in Hebrew is khil. It is the first of seven times it will be used. It specifically means "agony" or "anguish."

The Philistines have been mentioned several times in the Bible, but the territory known as Philistia is now mentioned for the first time. They are thus not just a group of people, but they are a people who have a portion of land identified with them.

It is the coastal area which is still occupied today by a rebellious group of people known as the Palestinians - a term which comes from the Hebrew word used to describe this ancient people. However, the modern Palestinians are actually Arabs with no connection to this group. Thus they could more rightly be called Fakestinians.

Just as the Philistines trembled at Israel in the past, the modern Palestinians do so once again in the present. History continues to repeat itself and the enemies of God and of His people follow the same pattern again and again.

¹⁵ Then the chiefs of Edom will be dismayed;

az nivhalu aluphe edowm - The alluphey, or chiefs of Edom, are mentioned dozens of times in Genesis 36 and then again in the genealogies of 1 Chronicles 1. However, by the time Israel finished its wilderness wanderings, these chiefs were replaced by a king.

Despite being under a kingdom and having become belligerent towards Israel, Moses still warned the people just prior to their movement towards Canaan that despite their fear of Israel, they were to be left alone -

"You are about to pass through the territory of your brethren, the descendants of Esau, who live in Seir; and they will be afraid of you. Therefore watch yourselves carefully. ⁵ Do not meddle with them, for I will not give you any of their land, no, not so much as one footstep, because I have given Mount Seir to Esau as a possession. " Deuteronomy 2:4, 5

^{15 (con't)} The mighty men of Moab,
Trembling will take hold of them;

ele mowav yokhazemow raad - These words are perfectly described as being fulfilled just as Moses wrote them. In Numbers 22, we read this -

"Then the children of Israel moved, and camped in the plains of Moab on the side of the Jordan across from Jericho.

² Now Balak the son of Zippor saw all that Israel had done to the Amorites.
³ And Moab was exceedingly afraid of the people because they were many, and Moab was sick with dread because of the children of Israel." Numbers 22:1, 2

The story which follows this goes from Numbers 22-24 and concerns the story of Moab and Balaam the prophet. It has been a favorite of God's people ever since.

¹⁵ (con't) All the inhabitants of Canaan will melt away.

namogu kol yo-shev-e kenaan - Along with the words of Rahab that I read a couple minutes ago, this prophecy of Moses is exactly fulfilled in the words of Joshua 5 -

"So it was, when all the kings of the Amorites who were on the west side of the Jordan, and all the kings of the Canaanites who were by the sea, heard that the LORD had dried up the waters of the Jordan from before the children of Israel until we had crossed over, that their heart melted; and there was no spirit in them any longer because of the children of Israel."
Joshua 5:1

¹⁶ Fear and dread will fall on them;

tippol alehem ematah v'pakhad - For the second time in both the song and in the Bible, Moses uses the word emah. The first time was in verse 11 to describe the Lord who is "fearful in praises." Now he says that emah, or fear along with dread, will fall on the inhabitants of Canaan.

Though they were more numerous than the people of Israel, they would be no match for them because they knew of His mighty arm which was set on destroying her enemies. Because of this, they would be in both fear and dread of the crushing flood which would come upon them.

16 (con't) By the greatness of Your arm
They will be as still as a stone,

bigdol zerow-akha yid-demu ka-aben - In Exodus 6:6, the Lord had promised to bring Israel out with an outstretched arm. That same symbolism is now used again to show that the arm of the Lord is not shortened. He would go on wielding it for His redeemed against the people they would continue to encounter.

And because of the display of strength His arm would show forth, Moses says that their enemies would be as still as a stone. Again, he brings a new word into the Bible's pages, translated as "still." It is the word damam which means to "cease." The idea is that because of astonishment they would at once be motionless and hushed just like a stone. It is a beautiful metaphor to consider.

16 (con't) Till Your people pass over, O LORD,
Till the people pass over
Whom You have purchased.

ad-yaabor amekha Yehovah ad-yaabor am-zu qanita -

This section of the verse isn't speaking of either the trip out of Egypt, nor passing through the Red Sea. It continues to be prospective, looking forward to the journey into Canaan. In Deuteronomy 29:16, Moses speaks of the nations they passed by during the wilderness wanderings.

They encountered many peoples, passing them by on the way to a better place, a place which had been promised to them over 400 years earlier. The repetition of the words in this verse are used to highlight and magnify the fact that all of those nations remained as still as a stone while Israel passed through them.

It is true that some came against them in battle, but those who did were crushed by Israel, becoming as still as a stone in death. The Lord allowed nothing to impede their march forward except the stubbornness of their own hearts as they rebelled against Him. But even that didn't cause His forward motion to cease entirely.

And the reason is in the word "purchased." Israel was purchased through the destruction of Egypt and the slaying of the Passover. Because they were bought back, He would continue to lead them and fight for them. They had become His possession and therefore the only One who had a right to discipline them was Him.

¹⁷ You will bring them in and plant them
In the mountain of Your inheritance,

t'bi-e-mow v'tita-e-mow b'har nakhalatekha - Moses, taking the rest of the journey toward and into Canaan, as an accomplished fact, says that the Lord will not only bring them in, but that He would plant them. And the word he uses means exactly that, as if to plant a tree. It conveys the idea that they will be firmly fixed in the land.

However, even before they arrive, they will be given advanced warning that just as a tree can be planted, it can also be uprooted. In his warnings to the people, he again spoke to them in a prospective manner, telling them that as certainly as they were to be planted, they would likewise be uprooted when they failed to live up to the standards He set before them -

"Then the anger of the LORD was aroused against this land, to bring on it every curse that is written in this book. And the LORD uprooted them from their land in anger, in wrath, and in great indignation, and cast them into another land, as it is this day." Deuteronomy 29:27, 28

And the reason for both planting them and uprooting them is found in the words, "the mountain of Your inheritance." The land of Israel is equated to a mountain, as it is several times in the Bible. Because it is the Lord's inheritance, meaning the Lord's land, it is up to Him who may live there.

The Lord gave the Land to Israel as their inheritance as well. And so when they remain obedient to the Lord it is their land and they may use it. When they are under the punishment of the Lord, it is their land and they may not use it.

Either way, it is the Lord's land, He has given it to Israel, and He decides when they may dwell in it. This is no different than a father giving to a son a bicycle or a car. Just because it belongs to the son it doesn't mean that he can always use it. Israel is the Lord's child and so He governs the rights of the child.

17 (con't) In the place, O LORD, which You have made
For Your own dwelling,

makon l'shivetekha paalta Yehovah - Again, for the umpteenth time in this marvelous song, Moses introduces a new word to us - makon. It is a fixed or established place; a foundation. The idea is "permanence," and this word, which is used 17 times in the Bible, almost always refers to some aspect of the Lord's earthly temple or His heavenly throne.

Moses' words here put that idea into motion and it will be repeated many times as the idea of permanence is affixed to the Lord's dwelling place.

17 (con't) The sanctuary, O Lord, which Your hands have established.

miqedash adonai konnu yadekha - Interestingly, the name Yehovah or LORD is used ten times in this Song of Moses, but in this one verse the title Lord or Adonai is used instead. Why Moses deferred to the title rather than the name is a puzzle, but having done it this one time makes the song all the more exceptional.

The only commentator I read who even mentioned this change was John Lang who said -

"The centre of this mountain is, on the one hand, the dwelling-place of Jehovah; on the other, the sanctuary of the Lord (יְדֻדָּ) for His people." John Lange

But this isn't correct. The lines of the verse are formed in parallel and are simply conveying the same idea with different words. To me, it is probably because of the meaning of the number ten in Scripture which is that of "...the perfection of Divine order... it implies that nothing is wanting; that the number and order are perfect; that the whole cycle is complete." (Bullinger)

As ten signifies completion and the perfection of Divine order, Moses chose to include this address to the Lord with a title rather than as the Lord with His name.

Again in this verse, we are introduced to a new word - miqedash or "sanctuary." It carries the same meaning as the word qodesh or "holy," but it is applied to the dwelling of the Lord. However, it is the Lord who makes the sanctuary holy.

Therefore, Moses notes that it is "The sanctuary, O Lord, which Your hands have established." The words of Moses, if understood and heeded by Israel, would have saved them from an immense amount of grief throughout their generations.

If the Lord is the one who sanctifies the sanctuary, then those who are disobedient to the Lord will defile it. This occurred throughout their history and twice He saw fit to destroy the very place where He dwelt among them. Ezekiel 5 gives the charges to the people before its first destruction -

"Therefore, as I live,' says the Lord GOD, 'surely, because you have defiled My sanctuary with all your detestable things and with all your abominations, therefore I will also diminish you; My eye will not spare, nor will I have any pity. ¹² One-third of you shall die of the pestilence, and be consumed with famine in your midst; and one-third shall fall by the sword all around you; and I will scatter another third to all the winds, and I will draw out a sword after them.'" Ezekiel 5:11-12

All of this could have been avoided if the people just kept their hearts and their minds directed towards the Lord. But Israel is just a microcosm of the greater world. Like them, the world has failed to pay heed. What came upon Egypt and what came upon Israel will also come on a global scale. All because we fail to pay heed to the word of the Lord.

¹⁸ "The LORD shall reign forever and ever."

Yehovah yimlok l'olam v'ed - The Song of Moses ends with these words of glorious affirmation. They are amazingly simple and the substance of them will be repeated and built upon many times in Scripture, even into the New Testament where we read these words in Revelation 11 -

"Then the seventh angel sounded: And there were loud voices in heaven, saying, 'The kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever!'" Revelation 11:15

Thus, Moses' words here are to be taken as a statement concerning the redeemed throughout all dispensations and even throughout eternity itself. To show that this is a thought which is actually beyond comprehension, He introduces one last new word into the Bible with the very last word of the song - ad or "forever."

By adding it to the word olam, or forever, it adds a superlative sense to its meaning. This dynasty of Pharaoh had come while Israel was in Egypt and it had ended before their very eyes. The waters of the ocean which consumed him dated back to the moment when the Lord created them, and those same waters saw his final end.

Other kingdoms would arise and they too would fall. History would continue on year by year, century by century, and even throughout the millenniums, but the Lord who was there at the beginning will still be there when all earthly kingdoms have passed into oblivion. Only He will reign forever and ever because only He is the Lord.

*How great are Your deeds O Lord our God!
Wonderful! Splendid! Majestic! We cry to You
Our eyes have seen glory as our feet have trod
You have brought us out to a life brand new*

*And You will bring Your people in and them You will plant
In the mountain of Your inheritance*

*There people will dance and to You they will chant
Of Your great deeds for their deliverance*

*In the place, O Lord, which You have furnished
For Your own dwelling we too shall dwell, leaving never
The sanctuary, O Lord, which Your hands have established
The Lord shall reign forever and ever*

III. He has Triumphed Gloriously! (verses 19-21)

¹⁹ For the horses of Pharaoh went with his chariots and his horsemen into the sea, and the LORD brought back the waters of the sea upon them. But the children of Israel went on dry land in the midst of the sea.

This verse is given as a summary of what was said in Chapter 14. With more details there, it said -

"So the LORD overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea. ²⁸ Then the waters returned and covered the chariots, the horsemen, and all the army of Pharaoh that came into the sea after them. Not so much as one of them remained. ²⁹ But the children of Israel had walked on dry land in the midst of the sea, and the waters were a wall to them on their right hand and on their left." Exodus 14:27-29

This then is not a later insert as so many scholars claim. Rather, it is a recounting of why the song was written. The words begin with a conjunction ki which means "for" or "because." The last words of the song said that "The LORD shall reign forever and ever!" The "for" or "because" is explaining that thought.

Pharaoh is no longer a threat to the people of God because the Lord has proven Himself above all gods. This then is a prophetic picture of the comparable redemptive battles to come. From Christ defeating the world of sin and the power of the devil at the cross, to His final defeat of the devil and his demons when they are cast into the Lake of Fire, it is all pictured here.

Because of this marvelous work of the Lord, a spontaneous act came about by Miriam, the sister of Moses and Aaron...

²⁰ Then Miriam the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took the timbrel in her hand; and all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances.

Miriam is formerly introduced by name into the Bible at this time, even though she was seen on the banks of the Nile when her younger brother Moses was placed in the ark made by his mother. Now, some eighty years after that, she has witnessed another miracle of the Lord as that same brother raised his staff to first open the waters of the Red Sea and then to close them over the enemies of Israel.

She is called "the sister of Aaron" rather than Moses, possibly because Aaron is the elder of the two, but more probably because both she and Aaron are considered subordinate to Moses in the narrative before us.

In this verse, she is called a "prophetess." She is the first of five women who are given this designation in the Old Testament. There is also one in Luke 2. Other women are noted as prophesying in the book of Acts.

Here she sets a precedent in the Bible which will be followed by other women. She takes a timbrel, meaning a tambourine, and goes out in dance before the Lord in victory. Other women will follow in this same manner when kings or others come home from victory in battle. They will dance and play the timbrel for the victor.

One of the most noted instances is found in Judges 11 where the daughter of Jephthah came out with timbrels and dancing to welcome home her father after his victory. Unfortunately, things didn't go so well for her after that. It is a sad story despite the victory of Jephthah.

Unfortunately, the meaning of the name "Miriam" is not well agreed upon. However, one possibility for introducing her by name here comes from two separate words marar which means either "bitter" or "strong" and yam which means "sea."

And so her name may mean "Waters of Strength." That would certainly explain why the name is given at this time. The Red Sea crushed the enemies of the Lord as He directed them back to their natural state.

This can only be speculation, so if you make a brain squiggle on that, please include that it is only one possible meaning to her name which happens to correspond with the introduction of her name. And the meaning does fit well with our final verse of the day...

21 And Miriam answered them:

“Sing to the LORD,
For He has triumphed gloriously!
The horse and its rider
He has thrown into the sea!”

The word for "them" in this verse is masculine. Because of this, it is believed that after hearing the first words of the Song of Moses, she picked up that refrain and answered them after each stanza as they went through the song. As she and the other women sang, they played the timbrel and danced.

This is the first time that dancing is mentioned in the Bible and it is almost sad to read Elizabethan era commentaries on this verse. They either say that it was only appropriate in the past, as if somehow dancing should never be allowed among Christians, or they might say something like she and the other women moved "gracefully through a stately and solemn dance" (Ellicott).

Personally, I would imagine the last thing they would be doing is having a slow, solemn dance. Instead, they would be leaping for joy at the work of the Lord. I can't think of anything duller and more boring than a congregation of people who would sit still in an almost catatonic state, quietly playing harps, after seeing what they had seen.

In 2 Samuel 6, it says that David danced before the Lord with all his might as the Ark was brought into Jerusalem. He did this because he understood the greatness of the Lord who had delivered him from all his foes.

And certainly Miriam and the entire congregation of Israel danced their hearts out before the Lord as well. If you're not too old to break something, I don't think the Lord would fault you a bit for doing the same. And considering that Miriam is somewhere around 90 years old at this time, you're probably not too old to do so.

Rejoice before the Lord because He has done great things for us. He has done far more for us than merely bringing us through a deep body of water and crushing an army who was set and determined to destroy us. More than that, He has brought us beyond an eternal chasm, an infinite divide between us and our God.

In the process, He destroyed the power of the devil over us and He has brought us to the safe shores of a heavenly inheritance. That is, assuming that you are one of His redeemed. And how did He accomplish this? Let me tell you in case you have never made a decision to follow Jesus Christ...

Closing Verse: He has shown strength with His arm;
He has scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts.
⁵² He has put down the mighty from their thrones,
And exalted the lowly." Luke 1:51, 52

Next Week: Exodus 15:22-27 (The Sweetened Waters) (44th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Lord shall Reign Forever and Ever

“Who is like You, O LORD, among the gods?
Who is like You, glorious in holiness,
Fearful in praises, doing wonders?
You stretched out Your right hand;
The earth swallowed them.
You in Your mercy have led forth

The people whom You have redeemed;
You have guided them in Your strength
To Your holy habitation.

“The people will hear and be afraid;
Sorrow will take hold of the inhabitants of Philistia.
Then the chiefs of Edom will be dismayed;
The mighty men of Moab,
Trembling will take hold of them;
All the inhabitants of Canaan will melt away.
Fear and dread will fall on them;
By the greatness of Your arm
They will be as still as a stone,
Till Your people pass over, O LORD,
Till the people pass over
Whom You have purchased.
You will bring them in and plant them
In the mountain of Your inheritance,
In the place, O LORD, which You have made
For Your own dwelling,
The sanctuary, O Lord, which Your hands have established.
“The LORD shall reign forever and ever.”

For the horses of Pharaoh went Into the sea with his chariots and his horsemen
And the LORD brought back the waters
Of the sea upon them
But the children of Israel went
On dry land in the midst of the sea
Surely it was a marvelous event

Then Miriam the prophetess, Aaron's sister
Took the timbrel in her hand

And all the women went out after her
With timbrels and with dances, the celebration was grand
And Miriam answered them: "Sing to the LORD,
For He has triumphed gloriously!
The horse and its rider
He has thrown into the sea!"

The Lord won the victory over the armies of Pharaoh
Casting them into the deep waters of the Red Sea
But He delivered Israel; His greatness He did show
And so the Israelites shouted out in victory

The people danced and sang to the Lord
Because of the marvelous display they did see
And we too should feel free to act the same toward
Our great Savior Jesus, who from sin and death has set us free!

Don't just sit there like you're dead in your seat
Instead raise your hands and move those feet
Shout out to Jesus with voices that have truly been set free
Shout about the wonderful things that He has done for you and me

Shout out people! The Lord has won the victory!

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 15:22-27 (THE SWEETENED WATERS)

For every sermon, one must think up an introduction... a little piece of information to make a smooth transition from the previous events of the day into the sermon itself. Today's was easy. On 15 July, just 12 days before I typed this sermon, Jim sent me an email and asked about an account from the Old Testament.

It is found in 1 Kings 6 and it was a part of Jim and Linda's Bible reading for the day. They wanted to know what it was there for. As he said, "Nothing is in the Bible that doesn't belong there, but these few verses sure raise an eyebrow. Can you give me a little insight on what this is telling us.....aside from the obvious that Elisha was gifted through God."

I had never really considered those verses in detail, but I looked them over a bit and nothing came to mind. And so for night after night, I read them and thought about them as I slept. Then when I got to this passage in Exodus, I decided to do a detailed study of the account and add the story in with this sermon because the two accounts are so similar.

We'll get to it at the end of the Exodus verses today. For now though, we'll look at how the bitter waters of Marah became sweet...

Text Verse: And He said to me, "It is done! I am the Alpha and the Omega, the Beginning and the End. I will give of the fountain of the water of life freely to him who thirsts. Revelation 21:6

As always, there are pictures of Christ and His work all the way through the Bible. God uses the natural to reveal the spiritual. Water is given as a picture of life and even of Christ Himself, the true Life of us all. Someday, we will have a perpetual fountain of the water of life bubbling over in us for all eternity.

It is ours now if we but receive it, and it will be realized in us some wonderful day when Christ comes for us. What a great hope we have! What a sure and glorious promise to place our faith in! It's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Bitter Waters made Sweet (verses 22-25^{1/2})

22 So Moses brought Israel from the Red Sea; then they went out into the Wilderness of Shur.

It seems as if a pun is being made in these first words of the day. Moses' name means "He who draws out." And so we are reminded after the great song of victory that "He who draws out" has "brought Israel from the Red Sea."

Many scholars believe that this location is known even today as Ayun Musa, or the "Springs of Moses." Apparently, there are a number of wells and a considerable amount of vegetation there. It is about seven miles south of Suez. If this is that location, it is where the Song of Moses was written and sung.

From there, their steps were directed into the Wilderness of Shur. This name, Shur, is actually shrouded in mystery because of the various possible root words that lead to it, and also that it isn't agreed which root is correct.

But, there is a reason for selecting the name Shur because later in Numbers 33:8, the same area and journey is said to be in the Wilderness of Etham, a completely different name. The three roots from which the name is derived all have the common element of a sudden appearance, and thus the thought "Behold" seems to apply.

And in the context of the passage, that idea fits beautifully. In these verses, both the people of Israel as well as us will behold the healing of the bitter waters.

Shur is the same name of the place where Hagar, the concubine of Abraham and the mother of Ishmael, was fleeing to in Genesis 16. There, the Lord appeared to her at a well which was named Beer-lahai-roi, or the "Well of the One who Lives and Sees Me." At that time, the Lord announced that she would have her son and that he was to be named Ishmael.

That well was not to be found by the Israelites though as they continued their trek after three long days...

^{22 (con't)} And they went three days in the wilderness and found no water.

Regardless of whether the well which Hagar came to was near to them or still a long distance off, unlike her, they found no water. In the desert, water is life. The people would have carried some, but there would not be a great supply. And considering the countless animals that went with them, this could easily become a great tragedy.

The animals would suffer the most and the most quickly. But we have to keep remembering that they are being led. There is nothing to suggest that the pillar of cloud and fire did not remain with them the entire time, guiding them. This then is a trial which has purpose and whether they could see it or not, was intended to instruct them.

²³ Now when they came to Marah, they could not drink the waters of Marah, for they were bitter.

If Ayun Musa is the true spot which they departed from, the next logical spot which corresponds to this description would be a place known now as Huwara. It is approximately 35 miles from Ayun Musa and the entire distance between the two is sand and rough gravel. It would have been a hard, hot walk, even if in springtime.

Regardless as to whether this is the true place they came to, at the time, they called it Marah. The word marah simply means "bitter." It is named because of the waters which were bitter and undrinkable. But there is a small note or germ of grace here.

The name Marah is spelled with a hey or "h" at the end of it. This is the fifth letter of the Hebrew aleph-bet; five being the number of grace. It is the same letter that was added to Abraham and Sarah's name as a sign of covenant grace.

However in the book of Ruth, when Naomi asked to be called Mara, it is spelled without this "h." In calling herself Mara, she was proclaiming her bitterness and it was as if she felt she was outside of the Lord's covenant provision, wallowing alone in her bitterness.

This letter, hey or "h," has the meaning of "look," "reveal," or "breath." And thus, understanding this, the story takes on a greater meaning, a gift of grace will be revealed which will take the people's breath away.

²³ (con't) Therefore the name of it was called Marah.

As I said, the place is named because of the waters. This is probably the case with almost every location which the people will travel to during the next 40 years. Unless they were already named places when they arrived, the places where they stop will be named based on what occurs at the place they stop.

This will be quite common as we travel with them through the wilderness. God will reveal something, or the people will act in a certain way, or some other thing will occur which will bring forth a name for the location.

²⁴ And the people complained against Moses, saying, "What shall we drink?"

The Pulpit commentary notes, "The men who serve a nation best are during their lifetime least appreciated." After three days of walking and coming to a well with bitter waters, the people did what the bitterness seemed to cry out for... they complained against Moses. Interestingly, the word for "complain" here is luwn. It literally means to lodge, as in lodging for the night.

And so it seems a strange word to be translated as "complain" or "grumble" and yet it is translated this way dozens and dozens of times during the wilderness wanderings. It appears that as lodging is a temporary thing, the grumbling is as well. Even though there is hardship in the night, with the Lord there is joy in the morning. The HAW describes this word, luwn, in this way -

"The theological usage emphasizes the brevity of God's anger as opposed to the life-giving power of his abundant favor."

That description actually fits quite perfectly with what happens next. Though the people complained against Moses, he knows where to go for relief...

²⁵ So he cried out to the LORD, and the LORD showed him a tree.

Moses, or "He who draws out," cries to the Lord. In so doing, he draws out from the Lord an answer to their dilemma - the Lord shows him a tree. The word translated as tree, is exactly that, ets or a tree. The word simply means "wood." However, there is a picture being given to us which is more than a piece of wood.

Instead, we are seeing the work of Christ revealed once again, as He has been so many thousands of times already since "Holy Bible, page 1."

^{25 (con't)} When he cast it into the waters, the waters were made sweet.

This is in essence correcting a contrary with a contrary. There is something bad which needs to be fixed and so something else which is bad will fix it. People can't eat a tree, though they may eat what comes from the tree. But it is contrary to think that a tree would heal water in this way, especially on the scale which could satisfy two million people.

Therefore, the tree is actually a sign to the people and not the cure itself. And because it is a sign, it then must also be a pictorial lesson for us.

Having been shown the tree and without any further note of what transpired between the Lord and Moses, we next read that he simply threw it into the waters and with that, they were made sweet. The verb for "made sweet" is mathoq.

This is a word used for the first of just five times in the Bible. Each time it appears it is used to contrast something else. Here, the bitter waters are contrasted with them becoming sweet. In Job 20, the sweetness of evil is contrasted with sourness in the stomach, and even venom –

"Though evil is sweet in his mouth,
And he hides it under his tongue,
¹³ Though he spares it and does not forsake it,
But still keeps it in his mouth,
¹⁴ Yet his food in his stomach turns sour;
It becomes cobra venom within him." Job 20:12

Again in Job 21, the bitterness of life is contrasted with the sweetness of the grave. In the 55th Psalm, the sweet counsel of a friend is contrasted with his later betrayal of him. And in the proverbs, the temporary sweetness of stolen water, is contrasted with the consequences of the action -

"Stolen water is sweet,
And bread eaten in secret is pleasant.'
¹⁸ But he does not know that the dead are there,
That her guests are in the depths of hell." Proverbs 9:17, 18

This is the idea that we are given here. A contrast is made between two things, bitter and sweet. But what is to be remembered is that the original change actually came about because of a tree. It is the lesson of the Garden of Eden.

Where there was ease, comfort, and fellowship, they were lost by a tree, the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil. In their interaction with this tree, came trial, difficulty, and a broken relationship. If it was a tree which caused the rift, then we are being given a picture of a tree which will also heal the rift.

In this story, water is emblematic of life, because without fresh water the people will die. Therefore, the tree is also emblematic of the granting of that life; its restoration. This then is a picture of the cross of Christ - that tree which made our waters sweet once again. As Christ Himself proclaimed -

“Whoever drinks of this water will thirst again, ¹⁴ but whoever drinks of the water that I shall give him will never thirst. But the water that I shall give him will become in him a fountain of water springing up into everlasting life.” John 4:13-14

However, before the well could bring forth the fresh water, there was bitterness. There was bitterness in man who lacked everlasting life, and there was bitterness in Jesus' cross which could only bring us everlasting life through His death. The waters were bitter, but the waters were healed.

Now, through Christ, a fountain of life has bubbled forth, just as happened at Marah when the waters were sweetened.

*The bitter waters of life have stolen all joy
There is no soundness in my bones, I am weak and drained
What can heal the waters, what can I employ?
That will bring life to this body so that health is attained*

*Is there a way to purify this fount?
What can heal these waters, what can I employ?
And because they flow, it would take an ever-lasting amount
What kind of thing could bring this eternal joy?
I behold there a tree, and on it a bitter-filled sight*

*A Man whose life is ebbing away
But I perceive that He will heal the waters of my plight
Through His death the waters are sweetened in a marvelous way*

II. I Am the Lord Who Heals You (verses 25^{1/2}-27)

^{25 (con't)} There He made a statute and an ordinance for them, and there He tested them,

It seems that these words should be their own verse, separated from the previous words of verse 25. So much so is this, that I have started an entirely new thought in today's sermon. And yet, it is right that the words are contained in one verse.

God has shown the people grace in the wilderness. He gave them sweet water in repayment for their complaints. He healed them despite their lack of faith. And now, a threat is implied. In the same verse where grace is bestowed, a statute and an ordinance are given.

The giving of this statute and ordinance would make no sense if He had not healed the waters. But because He had, it became an object lesson for them. He was able to heal the water, and now He was asking for implicit trust in the mandates that He would proceed to give them.

The word "statute" is khoq. It implies something prescribed or owed. The word "ordinance" or mishpat, implies a judgment based on justice. Grace is not based on these things. A law doesn't confer grace: it confers a requirement which is to be obeyed. When it isn't, then one may receive punishment, or they may receive mercy. But either way, grace is excluded.

They received grace in the healing of the waters; they now receive a law to guide them after their healing. In the giving of that law, it then says that "He tested them." It is the word nasah. It was first used in Genesis 22:1 when the Lord tested Abraham by asking him to sacrifice Isaac. Now it is used for the second time in the Bible to test the descendents of Abraham.

In their testing comes a promise, but also a veiled threat...

²⁶ and said, "If you diligently heed the voice of the LORD your God and do what is right in His sight, give ear to His commandments and keep all His statutes, I will put none of the diseases on you which I have brought on the Egyptians.

The word im, or "if," is a conditional word. It implies that if something is in compliance, then there will be one result. If it is not, then there will be another. The Lord promises them now, after this first testing which ended in grace, that further testings will carry rewards or losses.

This is sounding like our own walk in Christ, isn't it! We are saved by grace, with no works on our part. We have walked in a wilderness, we have complained of our situation, and by His unmerited favor, He has given us the life-giving waters.

But after our salvation, and after our being granted eternal life, we are given commandments and statutes. If we comply, things will normally go well for us. If we don't, we only have ourselves to blame. The commands and exhortations from the hand of Paul are many. But they are given for our well being.

The Lord is showing us from this ancient story that His ways are always the better option. And so He first tells Israel, that they should diligently heed His voice with the words shamoa tishma - "listening you shall listen." Pay heed! Take note! Hear the word! And what is it that they should be so attentive to?

1) v'hayashar b'enav taaseh - They should do what is right in His sight. The word is yashar and means "upright." It is the first time it is used in the Bible and it is the Lord imploring them to do what is morally honorable and proper in His eyes, not theirs. He sets the standard; they are to accept it.

Unfortunately, the people failed often, generation after generation found it more suitable to follow their own desires than the will of the Lord. It is the theme of the book of Judges. The very last words of the book repeat the sentiment found throughout the book -

"In those days there was no king in Israel; everyone did what was right in his own eyes." Judges 21:25

2) v'haazanta l'mitsvotav - and give ear to His commandments. The mitsvot are the comprehensive list of laws which form the Law of Moses. They are told to listen to these, not just to hear. We hear things all the time, but we often don't listen. Every week, you come and hear a sermon from Charlie, but you don't always listen...sometimes you drowse and sometimes you nod off.

The Lord will give commandments and they are to be listened to, unlike Charlie's sermons. Many generations later, the Lord spoke to Ezekiel and said that the people had failed to do exactly this -

"So they come to you as people do, they sit before you as My people, and they hear your words, but they do not do them; for with their mouth they show much love, but their hearts pursue their own gain. ³² Indeed you are to them as a very lovely song of one who has a pleasant voice and can play well on an instrument; for they hear your words, but they do not do them."
Ezekiel 33:31, 32

The Lord is warning the people of what lies ahead. A law will be given and there will be consequences for failing to heed that law.

3) v'shamarta kal huqav - "and keep all His statutes." A commandment is something one is to do in obedience to the one in authority. A statute is similar. It is something owed to the one in authority. It is something apportioned to someone to guide them in their societal conduct.

The rest of the Old Testament is replete with examples of the people, both the leaders and the common people, failing to adhere to this admonition. During the giving of the law, the Lord will be very specific concerning the blessings and the curses which will come upon the people for either adhering to these things or for straying from them.

These are recorded in the first person from the Lord in Leviticus 26 - "I will do this and I will do that." They are recorded in the third person by Moses in Deuteronomy 28 - "The Lord will do this and the Lord will do that." It is the Lord who gives the laws, it is the Lord who executes the judgments upon violators, and it is the Lord who heals the people who adhere or who repent. The psalmist understood this -

"I will extol You, O LORD, for You have lifted me up,
And have not let my foes rejoice over me.

² O LORD my God, I cried out to You,
And You healed me.

³ O LORD, You brought my soul up from the grave;
You have kept me alive, that I should not go down to the pit." Psalm 30:1-3

It is the Lord who judges and the Lord heals. He is the Lord...

26 (con't) For I am the LORD who heals you."

ani Yehovah rophékha - It is a title as much as a proclamation. "I am Yehovah who heals you." The healing of the waters was for their physical healing. The Lord promises now that in adherence to His word, there is such healing to be found.

This word, heal or rapha, is used 67 times in the Old Testament and it is often used in exactly the manner that He proclaims here. After much disobedience and a second exile which lasted for 2000 years, the Lord promised that He would a second time heal His wayward people. This is recorded in Hosea 6 -

"Come, and let us return to the LORD;
For He has torn, but He will heal us;
He has stricken, but He will bind us up.
² After two days He will revive us;
On the third day He will raise us up,
That we may live in His sight." Hosea 6:1, 2

It is also the same word which is used to describe the work of the Lord as He went to the cross for our healing -

"But He was wounded for our transgressions,
He was bruised for our iniquities;
The chastisement for our peace was upon Him,
And by His stripes we are healed." Isaiah 53:5

The Lord is telling this group of people, in advance, that what He has done for them at Marah is a part of His nature - He is gracious. But He is also telling them that there are other aspects of who He is - He is just; He is righteous; He is holy.

And in His proclamations, they are to see that there are consequences for violating these awesome attributes that He is revealing to them.

He is their Healer if they will but allow themselves to be healed. For us, the healing of the waters isn't for our physical healing. Rather, it is for our spiritual healing. The fount was poisoned by the devil, but Christ purifies it once again, if we will but trust. It is, in fact, by grace we are saved - through faith.

27 Then they came to Elim, where there were twelve wells of water and seventy palm trees; so they camped there by the waters.

The chapter ends with this most unusual verse. It gives us enough to know that things went well after the next trek, but only enough to tantalize the thoughts, wondering why more isn't given.

This place, here called Elim, is believed to be identified today as the Wadi-Ghurandel. It is an oasis with many types of trees, including palms and which has a stream flowing through it. Barnes notes that it is about a mile in breadth, but in length it stretches out a long way to the northeast.

The name Elim, comes from a root which indicates to protrude or stick out, such as a porch on a house, a ram in a flock, or a large tree. There at Elim the Bible records 12 wells. However, the word in Hebrew it says enot mayim, "eyes of water." And so these are springs, not really wells.

There are also seventy palm trees. The word is temarim, which is the plural of Tamar, the same name as the daughter of Judah who bore his child. The name pictures an upright or righteous person. At this location, it is said that the people camped there by the wells.

I dread leaving verses like this unattended concerning a picture that they are making and there is every reason to believe that the Lord is telling us something with the specificity - 12 springs and 70 palms. What is this referring to?

If Christ is the Water of Life and there are twelve springs, these then picture those who send out the word of the water of life to the people. In Matthew 10, the apostles are given the power to heal, just as the Lord said that He would be Yehovah Rophekha in the previous verse -

"And when He had called His twelve disciples to Him, He gave them power over unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all kinds of sickness and all kinds of disease." Matthew 10:1

And the seventy palms then would represent the 70 disciples, or righteous ones, chosen by Christ in Luke 10, to follow suit -

"After these things the Lord appointed seventy others also, and sent them two by two before His face into every city and place where He Himself was about to go. ... ⁹And heal the sick there, and say to them, 'The kingdom of God has come near to you.'" Luke 10:1 & 9

Again, like the apostles, they were given the power to heal by Yehovah Rophekha, the Lord Jesus. The name Elim is given to show that the work of Christ protrudes out for all to see as the apostles and disciples spread its message to Israel.

Chapter 15 closes with a picture of the Lord and His ministry to the people of Israel. A ministry which was intended for the healing of the people if they would but pay heed to Him and to His words.

*I am the Lord who heals you
I am the One who can take away your pains
In following Me, you are following the Path which is true
And in doing so, are to be found eternal gains*

*I am the Lord who heals you
In Me there is a well bubbling up to everlasting life
I will fulfill every promise as I said I would do
I will end the enmity between us, I will end the strife*

*There is healing in My wings
For I am the Lord who heals you
And I will do marvelous things
For I am ever faithful and true*

III. Bonus Insert (2 Kings 6:1-7)

In the book of 2 Kings, the prophet Elisha performs two miracles, both of which parallel the account which we have just seen. The first is found in 2 Kings 2:19-22 where Elisha throws salt into water to heal it. The second is found in 2 Kings 6:1-7 and deals with him throwing wood into water to raise an axe head.

Although space won't allow us to cover both, or even one in detail, I decided to add in a quick look at the second to round out our time in God's precious word today and to satisfy Jim and Linda's well-directed curiosity. Here are those verses -

And the sons of the prophets said to Elisha, "See now, the place where we dwell with you is too small for us. ² Please, let us go to the Jordan, and let every man take a beam from there, and let us make there a place where we may dwell."

So he answered, "Go."

³ Then one said, "Please consent to go with your servants."

And he answered, "I will go." ⁴ So he went with them. And when they came to the Jordan, they cut down trees. ⁵ But as one was cutting down a tree, the iron ax head fell into the water; and he cried out and said, "Alas, master! For it was borrowed."

⁶ So the man of God said, "Where did it fall?" And he showed him the place. So he cut off a stick, and threw it in there; and he made the iron float.

⁷ Therefore he said, "Pick it up for yourself." So he reached out his hand and took it.

1 And the sons of the prophets said to Elisha, "See now, the place where we dwell with you is too small for us."

The term "sons of the prophets" means those who are of the prophets as disciples. They are a collective group of people who study under the hand of Elisha. Collectively, they come to Elisha and say that the place where they are dwelling can no longer sustain them. Instead, they wish to go to the Jordan to build a larger place to study.

The name Elisha comes from two words - el, meaning God and yasha meaning to be saved. So his name means God is Salvation or God the Savior. To him, they ask nelekha na ad ha'yarden - "Let us go, we pray you, to Jordan."

² Please, let us go to the Jordan, and let every man take a beam from there, and let us make there a place where we may dwell.”

So he answered, “Go.”

The name Jordan is given and therefore it is relevant to the story. It means "the Descender" because it descends from the high mountains of Lebanon all the way to the Dead Sea, the lowest spot on earth. The word for "beam" is used just five times in the Old Testament.

It comes from a word which means to occur or happen, especially that which happens beyond one's control. The idea in a beam is probably that by putting beams together it causes a building to occur. In response to their request, Elisha simply says leku - "go."

³ Then one said, “Please consent to go with your servants.”

And he answered, “I will go.”

Where it says "one said" the term ha'echad is used. It means "the one." One is singled out as making the request. He asks Elisha to come along and calls himself and the others abadekha - "your servants." The request was probably so that the project would be blessed by his presence and for him to oversee the project.

Elisha, seems impressed enough by the man's faith in his ability to be of assistance, and so in response he in says ani elek. "I will go." There is an immense sparseness of verbiage being employed by Elisha in this account. He is direct, his words are simple, and unlike me in my sermons, he doesn't waste any words.

⁴ So he went with them. And when they came to the Jordan, they cut down trees.

Together they all went and came to the Jordan where they cut down ha'etsim or "the trees." The word for "cut" here is gazar. It means to completely divide or separate. It is used when speaking of Christ's death in Isaiah 53 -

"He was taken from prison and from judgment,
And who will declare His generation?
For He was cut off from the land of the living;
For the transgressions of My people He was stricken." Isaiah 53:8

⁵ But as one was cutting down a tree, the iron ax head fell into the water; and he cried out and said, "Alas, master! For it was borrowed."

The person cutting down the tree seems to be the same person who asked Elisha to come in the first place. The term ha'echad, or "the one" is again used, possibly to imply the same person. The term for "cutting down" in this verse is not the same as the previous verse. This word is naphal, not gazar. It means to fall, as if a tree falls.

While in the process of felling a tree, ha'barzel or "the iron" comes off of the axe handle and falls into the water. Charles Ellicott notes that the wording here is unusual. He says -

"The subject of the verb is made prominent by being put first in the accusative. It is thus implied that something happened to the iron." Ellicott

His response to this contains pitiful words, ahah adoni v'hu shaul - "Alas my lord, and it (was) begged." He couldn't afford his own and so he begged to use one belonging to another. He was morally responsible to pay for it, but he could not.

⁶ So the man of God said, "Where did it fall?" And he showed him the place.

Here Elisha is called ish ha'elohim - Rather than "the man of God" it should say "man of 'the' God," thus signifying the One true God. He asks where the iron fell in the water and the man showed him.

^{6 (con't)} So he cut off a stick, and threw it in there; and he made the iron float.

To rectify the situation, Elisha takes the action. He doesn't ask the person to get him a stick, instead he gets one himself. The word for "cut" is another word entirely from the two previously translated as cut. This word is qatsav - to cut. The only other time it is used is in the Song of Solomon when referring to shearing sheep.

Once he had the wood, he threw it in the water. It is the same word, shalak, that was used to describe what Moses did at the waters of Marah. In both accounts, they cast the stick into the water. For Moses, the waters were made sweet. For Elisha, the axe head was made to float.

The word for float is tsuph. It's used only two other times in the Bible. Once when the waters flowed over the Egyptians in the Red Sea, and once in Lamentations 3 when Jeremiah says –

"The waters flowed over my head;

I said; I am cut off!" Lamentations 3:54

Interestingly, Jeremiah uses the same word in Lamentations, gazar, about himself as was used in verse 3 concerning cutting down the trees.

7 Therefore he said, "Pick it up for yourself." So he reached out his hand and took it.

In his normal verbose way, Elisha simply says, ha'rem lakh - "take up to." The word rum that he uses carries the idea of exalting something. By lifting, something is raised up, or exalted. The once-lost axe head has been restored.

So what is this story telling us? To understand, we need to first go back to Deuteronomy 19 and read a something similar about an axe head -

"And this is the case of the manslayer who flees there, that he may live: Whoever kills his neighbor unintentionally, not having hated him in time past— ⁵ as when a man goes to the woods with his neighbor to cut timber, and his hand swings a stroke with the ax to cut down the tree, and the head slips from the handle and strikes his neighbor so that he dies—he shall flee to one of these cities and live ⁶ lest the avenger of blood, while his anger is hot, pursue the manslayer and overtake him, because the way is long, and kill him, though he was not deserving of death, since he had not hated the victim in time past. " Deuteronomy 19:4-6

In this account, the person is legally and morally culpable of an offense even though it was unintentional. The same is true with the man at the Jordan. He is morally and legally responsible to restore what was lost, even if he didn't intentionally lose it.

The axe head is a picture then of fallen man. He has inherited sin through Adam. Even if he didn't do anything intentionally wrong, he still bears the guilt because of simply existing. He is submerged in sin and there is seemingly no hope for him. He is covered by the waters and cut off. This is explained by Paul in Romans 5 -

"Therefore, just as through one man sin entered the world, and death through sin, and thus death spread to all men, because all sinned—"
Romans 5:12

Being morally culpable, whether one knows they have done wrong or not, is a tenet found both in civil life and in the Bible as well. In civil life we use the term, "Ignorance of the law is no excuse." If we break a law, even if we didn't know it existed, we are still guilty. The same is true with spiritual matters. Jesus said -

"And that servant who knew his master's will, and did not prepare himself or do according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes.⁴⁸ But he who did not know, yet committed things deserving of stripes, shall be beaten with few." Luke 12:47, 48

The waters cover fallen man because man is fallen. However, the very waters that cover him are also the medium through which his moral and legal responsibility is reversed. Jordan, or the Descender, pictures the time of Christ's advent, just as it did at the burial of Jacob and at other times when it is mentioned. Christ became a Man. The same medium through which sin came will be used to deal with sin.

Jesus descended from the high mountain, picturing heaven, even to the Dead Sea itself. Elisha, or God of Salvation, is a picture of the work of Christ. Christ bore Calvary's cross Himself, pictured by Elisha cutting the wood Himself.

The wood was cast into the waters, just as Christ was cast into the pit of death. But through that act, the axe head was restored. The legal and moral responsibility was paid by another and it was removed from the offender.

In our baptism is a picture of what we see here. We are immersed in the waters of death with our legal and moral bonds weighing us down, but we are raised to newness of life, free from those bonds.

As in the account with Moses, the tree cast into the waters symbolizes the cross of Calvary and the expiation of our sins. The waters are the Source of life for the believer, Christ. They are the law, which overwhelms us and by which we are cut off, and yet Christ is the embodiment of that Law and so it is through Him and His fulfillment of that law that our sin is removed and eternal life is granted to us.

However, there is the final verse with those instructive words, ha'rem lakh, "Pick it up for yourself." We have to do something, we have to reach out, by faith, and receive back the restored rights. Each of us should do just as the man there with Elisha - "So he reached out his hand and took it."

If you have never reached out your hand to receive God's pardon which is found in Christ Jesus the Lord, do it today! The entire Bible, even these obscure little passages that seem almost quaint, is there to show us of the love of God in Christ our Lord.

The axe head was still in the water, still in Christ, until it was received from Him. The hole in Jesus' side was there for all to see, but Thomas doubted and so Jesus told him to "reach your hand here, and put it into My side. Do not be unbelieving, but believing" (John 20:27).

This is what Jesus asks each of us to do, reach out for the axe head, reach out our hand and take what has been offered, reach out for restoration through Christ. I pray that you will do so today...

Closing Verse: "And the Spirit and the bride say, 'Come!' And let him who hears say, 'Come!' And let him who thirsts come. Whoever desires, let him take the water of life freely." Revelation 22:17

Next Week: Exodus 16:1-8 (Bread from Heaven) (45th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Precious Water of Life

So Moses brought Israel from the Red Sea

Then they went out into the Wilderness of Shur

And into the wilderness they went days three

And found no water; nothing to drink, nothing tasty and pure

Now when they to Marah came

They could not drink the waters of Marah for they were bitter

Therefore Marah was called its name

And the people complained against Moses, saying

“What shall we drink?” Tell us, we are praying

So he cried out to the Lord

And the Lord showed him a tree

When he cast it into the waters

The waters were made sweet, sweet as can be
There He made a statute and an ordinance for them
And there He tested them, and said
“If you diligently heed the voice of the Lord your God
And do what is right in His sight and not wrong instead

And give ear to His commandments and keep all His statutes
I will put none of the diseases on you
Which I have brought on the Egyptians
For I am the Lord who heals you; this I will do

Then they came to Elim
Where there were of water twelve wells
And seventy palm trees, beautiful it would seem
So they camped there by the waters, as the account tells
Such a beautiful story of God's tender care for us!
He took what was bitter and healed it
And if we will just receive His Son, the Lord Jesus
And to Him our souls entrust and commit

We will be saved unto the ages of ages, for all eternity
It is a gift and an offer from our glorious God
How can such love be found! How can it be?
That He would heal us from the sins of our earthly trod

We hail You, O our majestic King!
We praise You glorious Lord Jesus!
Hear our voices as to You we sing!
You who have done such marvelous things for us!

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 16:1-8 (BREAD FROM HEAVEN)

In the Bible, the word lechem or bread is often used synonymously with that which sustains us. That has carried over into English as well. We speak of "breaking bread" together as having a meal. We think of "our daily bread" as a term which encompasses everything we need to sustain us. And when we make money, we often call it "bread" because money is what we deal with in order to buy those things which sustain us.

As bread comes from the earth, we tie our existence to this earthly thing which keeps us going from day to day. Jesus spoke of another type of bread, a heavenly Bread. As this comes from heaven, then it must sustain us in a completely different way - a way that we'll look at more closely in the sermon today.

Bread is one of my favorite parts of any meal, and I love the many varieties of bread that are out there. If my lovely wife serves bread first, I'll often fill myself up on just that and nothing else, leaving her to wonder why she prepared 8 or 10 other dishes for me to look at and ignore.

When I was young and we went out for dinner, my grandfather didn't want us to eat any bread before we had our meal for exactly that reason. He didn't want us to stuffing ourselves on it and then missing out on whatever we ordered. I remember him filling up his coat pockets with all the rolls that had been served but which were ignored during the meal. He was famous for this.

In today's passage, the Lord promises to give the Israelites "bread from heaven." Psalm 78's description of that bread is our text verse for the day -

Text Verse: Yet He had commanded the clouds above,
And opened the doors of heaven,

²⁴ Had rained down manna on them to eat,
And given them of the bread of heaven.

²⁵ Men ate angels' food;
He sent them food to the full. Psalm 78:23-25

Not every stop between Egypt and Sinai is recorded in the book of Exodus, but each stop that is shows us something important that occurred and it is given as a picture of something later in redemptive history. This has been the case up until now and so it is logical to assume that today's verses are no different.

And so let's find out if that is correct by looking a bit deeper into the passage we just read. Isn't it great? I mean, isn't it stupendous that God has given us such marvelous stories that are so filled with wonder! Week by week it's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Whining in the Wilderness (verses 1-3)

1 And they journeyed from Elim,

Chapter 15 ended with the account of the waters of Marah having been made sweet. This was immediately followed by the last verse of the chapter which said -

"Then they came to Elim, where there were twelve wells of water and seventy palm trees; so they camped there by the waters." Exodus 15:27

The name Elim comes from a root which indicates to protrude or stick out, such as a porch on a house, a ram in a flock, or a large tree. There at Elim there were 70

palm trees which protruded out of the oasis, and there were 12 springs which provided water for the people. That was a picture of the work of the Lord in and through His 12 apostles and the 70 appointed disciples.

^{1 (con't)} and all the congregation of the children of Israel came to the Wilderness of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai,

It is rather peculiar to have the words "all the congregation came" unless it means that they didn't all travel together at all times. But this is logical. The main stops where all the people gathered would be big enough to fit two million people.

However, while traveling, they would go through areas that could in no way accommodate such large numbers. And so the congregation would divide at times in order to have sufficient room to lodge along the journey. Also, those who had flocks would want to break off from the others in order to find something for them to snack on.

Occasionally though, there would be a place big enough to accommodate everyone and this is where they would meet up as a whole group. Here in our first verse, it says that they journeyed from Elim and came to the Wilderness of Sin. However, the actual travel log that was filled out by Moses in Numbers 33 includes another stop not mentioned here -

"They moved from Elim and camped by the Red Sea. ¹¹ They moved from the Red Sea and camped in the Wilderness of Sin." Numbers 33:10, 11

Scholars pretty much unanimously say that the stop by the Red Sea is left off here in Exodus because "nothing remarkable happened in it" (Benson, et al). But that is no reason to leave off recording a stop. Rather, each stop in the abbreviated account is given to show us a picture of something. Names always have importance when they are given, even if it isn't plainly evident to us why.

The name Sin means "thorn," as in a thorn bush, and is a shortened form of Sinai. This wilderness of Sin is said to be between Elim and Sinai, which means "Bush of the Lord." This is the first mention of Sinai in the Bible.

In all, it will be named 35 times and all of them except four will be in the books of Moses. It is the same place known by its other name, Horeb. The stop now at the Wilderness of Sin is the eighth stop on their journey.

¹ (con't) on the fifteenth day of the second month after they departed from the land of Egypt.

As the Passover was held on the fourteenth day of the first month, and Israel departed Egypt on the fifteenth day, we know that this is the 31st day of travel. Israel has now been free from their bondage for one month, just one month...

² Then the whole congregation of the children of Israel complained against Moses and Aaron in the wilderness.

Before the Exodus, the people complained against Moses and Aaron because the workload upon them had increased. However, the Lord brought on Egypt all of His wonders while keeping Israel safe from them. Finally, the final plague on the firstborn came about and Israel was released from its 215-year captivity.

But no sooner had they been freed, than they complained against Moses as Pharaoh's army approached by the shore of the Red Sea. Then, after they had been miraculously delivered through its waters, they again complained against Moses at Marah because the waters weren't fit to drink.

Now, for the first time it says that they have complained against both Moses and Aaron. After thirty days, they are no longer content to trust that the Lord who delivered them was capable of continuing to deliver them. He had identified Himself as Yehovah Rapha, the Lord who heals, but instead they complain that His healing is less wonderful than the satisfaction of the stomach...

³ And the children of Israel said to them, "Oh, that we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the pots of meat and when we ate bread to the full!

In this verse, the King James Version reads' "And the children of Israel said unto them, "Would to God we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt." In the Hebrew, there is no mention of God. They followed the translation of the Geneva Bible that inserted this without any support from the text.

However, the expression was probably included to give weight to the complaining of the people. Instead of being grateful for their freedom, the intent of their words is that it would have been better to die by the plagues of Egypt than to die by starvation in the wilderness. Jeremiah gives the same thought as he watched the people dying of starvation during the siege of Jerusalem -

*"Those slain by the sword are better off
Than those who die of hunger;
For these pine away,
Stricken for lack of the fruits of the field."* Lamentations 4:9

It should be noted though that the people still had flocks in abundance as will be seen throughout their time in the wilderness. But not everyone would have flocks and they would be hungry as well. When people started to eat their animals, the others with none would join in and rapidly deplete the entire stock.

After thirty days, anything carried out of Egypt would be consumed and so this would be their only option left. It is probably not an exaggeration that they had plenty to eat in Egypt. Charles Ellicott, noting the ancient historian Herodotus says that - "It was the habit of the Egyptians to feed well those whom they employed in forced labours (Herod. ii. 125), just as slave-owners commonly do their slaves."

(Ellicott)

The question for us, knowing what the Israelites have pictured so far is, "Would we rather be in bondage to sin and yet filled with the things of the world, or would we rather be free from our bondage and suffer physical lack in the process."

There can be no doubt that we are tied to our stomachs. They are a part of us and without filling them, we will eventually waste away. But what price is our freedom from sin by the work of Christ? In the end, even if our bodies die, our soul will live because of Him.

Time and again we are seeing the contrast between the carnal and the spiritual and we are being asked to evaluate ourselves. For every meal we eat, there is actually no guarantee that we will have another. If our last meal will be our last meal, will we still be able to say, "The way of the Lord is worth the suffering?"

As a bonus thought for you, and as a new squiggle for your brain, this is the first time that the word siyr or "pot" is used in the Bible. It also means "thorn." The idea is that a pot is used to boil up something, and a thorn is something that rapidly springs up. So you can see the connection between the two words.

It is of interest to me that the word siyr means "thorn" as does the name of this place, Sin. There is a connection seemingly being made between the full pots of meat for the people, which are now empty, and the location where they now are. The cooking pots of Egypt have become painful thorns in the memory of the people as they impatiently turn their hearts back to the land of their bondage.

If the Wilderness of Sin is picturing the work of Christ, including His crown of thorns, then the picture seems to say, "Do you believe what He did for you is sufficient, or do you want to go back to your old life of sin and bondage, pictured by the pots full of meat in Egypt."

And so I have a question for each of you today - What sin is tempting you from your own past? Don't let what once seemed to be so delightful, but which was so destructive, turn your heart away from the Lord who brought you out from that past life.

³ (con't) For you have brought us out into this wilderness to kill this whole assembly with hunger."

The "you" of these words is speaking of Moses and Aaron. And yet, they are the Lord's representatives and so He must be included in the words. They have just said that it would have been better if the Lord had taken their lives in Egypt, but that didn't happen. They cannot disassociate Moses and Aaron from the Lord.

Further, there is the background truth that the pillar of cloud and fire is still with them. Moses and Aaron are merely going wherever they are led. If they supposedly brought the assembly out to be killed, then the implication is that the Lord is even more to blame.

I didn't get what I wanted for dinner... O! woe is me!

I had to suffer through meatloaf instead of a steak

Why is my life so difficult? How can it be?

Won't life ever give me a break?

I had to walk to work because my car broke down

My job is more than half a mile down the road!

Ten minutes of anguish, and you wonder about my frown

Now leave me alone before I explode

Who cares that the Lord saved me through the Red Sea

Who cares that the bitter waters were made sweet

That was yesterday, it's all about me!

And I am not a happy camper; my misery is complete

II. Bread from Heaven (verses 4 & 5)

⁴ Then the LORD said to Moses, “Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you.

The story of Manna from heaven is one that is forever remembered by God's people. Hearing it just once is enough to solidify it in the memory of the mind for a lifetime. One reason is certainly that food comes from the earth, not from heaven. Just as man was taken from the earth, so our sustenance comes from there as well.

To think that food would come from heaven then means something beyond the ordinary and even heavenly. To be the recipient of such a shower of heavenly blessing would then indicate divine favor. As the people of Israel picture the church of the firstborn of all of God's people, then the bread from heaven is a picture of the divine favor of God upon them.

And as bread is what sustains us in our physical bodies, this is picturing that which sustains us in our spiritual lives. It is exactly why Jesus spoke as He did in John 6. When He was asked what works a person must do in order to do the works of God, we read -

"Jesus answered and said to them, "This is the work of God, that you believe in Him whom He sent."

³⁰ Therefore they said to Him, "What sign will You perform then, that we may see it and believe You? What work will You do? ³¹ Our fathers ate the manna in the desert; as it is written, 'He gave them bread from heaven to eat.'"

³² Then Jesus said to them, "Most assuredly, I say to you, Moses did not give you the bread from heaven, but My Father gives you the true bread from heaven. ³³ For the bread of God is He who comes down from heaven and gives life to the world."

³⁴ Then they said to Him, "Lord, give us this bread always."

³⁵ And Jesus said to them, "I am the bread of life. He who comes to Me shall never hunger, and he who believes in Me shall never thirst." John 6:29-35

Secondly, we are so dependent on food that to think of it coming from heaven gives us the impression of an infinite supply. There is only so much ground and when it has been picked clean, there is nothing left. Where else can one go for food when the ground has yielded its last morsel?

But if something comes from heaven, there is always the possibility that more can come. Just as the bread from heaven was divine favor upon the people of Israel to sustain their physical lives, Jesus is God's divine favor upon His people to sustain our spiritual lives. It is a favor which never perishes and the supply of which will never run out.

However, in the case of this account, the miracle of the bread from heaven doesn't begin with the bread coming from heaven. It begins with the promise of it coming, which is when the promise enters the ear of the hearer. If the words are true, then there will be an antici...pation of their fulfillment. When they are realized, the miracle of the promise will also be realized.

That is no different that our own grant of eternal life. The miracle of eternal life doesn't begin with our resurrection unto eternal life. Instead, it begins with the promise of its coming, which is when the promise enters our ears. As the Bible says, "...faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Romans 10:17

If the words of the Bible are true, then we will longingly wait in anticipation of their fulfillment. When they are realized, so will the miracle of the promise be realized. What Israel will wait a few hours for, some faithful Christians have waited 2000 years for, but the promise is not less true and its sure fulfillment will come in due time.

⁴ (con't) And the people shall go out and gather a certain quota every day,

The Hebrew word translated here as "a certain quota" is devar - literally "word." The idea of a word is a thing, or a matter and the people are told to gather this thing yom b'yommow, or "daily in its day." It is to be an act of faith that each day they would gather what was needed for the day.

If they gathered and there was none the next day, then what they gathered would be their last meal. But by faith, they are being instructed to gather the word, as it is, daily in its day; trusting that there would be another day to gather in its day.

And this is exactly what Paul tells us concerning our spiritual walk. In 2 Corinthians 5, he says -

"So we are always confident, knowing that while we are at home in the body we are absent from the Lord. ⁷ For we walk by faith, not by sight." 2 Corinthians 5:6, 7

Each day is to be a day of trust. Just as Israel didn't gather up an infinite supply of Manna to ensure they would never face deprivation again, we don't simply expend all of our faith on any given day, expecting it to last us forever. Instead, we continue to exercise faith yom b'yommow or daily in its day.

And these two principles, the physical and the spiritual are tied up in the one unified thought of the Lord's Prayer where Jesus said, "Give us this day our daily bread." To be properly functioning believers, we need daily bread for both our physical and our spiritual lives.

4 (con't) that I may test them, whether they will walk in My law or not.

These words follow the last words which were spoken to Israel just a few short verses ago. At the end of the last chapter by the bitter waters made sweet, we read this -

"There He made a statute and an ordinance for them, and there He tested them, ²⁶ and said, 'If you diligently heed the voice of the LORD your God and do what is right in His sight, give ear to His commandments and keep all His statutes, I will put none of the diseases on you which I have brought on the Egyptians. For I am the LORD who heals you.'" Exodus 15:25-26

With the promise of the bread from heaven, the Lord also gave the people a law - to gather a certain quota each day. And He gives them the reason for the law which is to test them. In the Garden of Eden, abundance was promised with the words, "Of every tree of the garden you may freely eat" (Genesis 2:16).

And yet, a law was given as well. It was a law that bore its consequences if disobeyed - "...but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat, for in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die" (Genesis 2:17).

In Genesis 17, Abraham was given a promise of abundance, but along with that promise came a law - circumcision for him and his descendants and all those in his household. Along with that law came a consequence for disobedience - being cut off from the people of God.

Here in Exodus, a promise of abundance, even bread from heaven, is given. But with it is the law that they are to gather a portion yom b'yommow, or daily in its day. And there is also an implied consequence for disobedience - that the plagues of Egypt would come upon them.

The same is true with the covenant at Sinai, there are great promises made to the people in Leviticus 26, but there are also great consequences for disobedience. Time and again, this pattern is seen in Scripture. So why should we think the Lord works any differently towards us now?

He has given us a promise of abundance and He has given us laws which accompany this. But there are also consequences for not adhering to His laws. There are consequences for our earthly bodies when we depart from His precepts, and there is the promise of the loss of eternal rewards in our life to come as well.

It is a pitiful thing to think that every negative thing which we receive from the hand of the Lord is actually a self-inflicted wound. But this is how it is. What is more pitiful is that this is so rarely taught among Christians.

People are told about the showers of Manna that the Lord provides His people, but the law which accompanies the blessing, and the consequences for not adhering to the law, are quickly passed over or completely ignored. Don't waste heaven's eternal rewards for sin's momentary pleasures! This is what I would first and foremost convey to you today.

⁵ And it shall be on the sixth day that they shall prepare what they bring in, and it shall be twice as much as they gather daily."

There are two major differences of opinion on what this verse means. Some scholars take this as a command that the people are to collect enough for two days. Others take it that what is collected on the sixth day will turn out to be enough for both days. The Hebrew seems to more naturally prefer the latter option.

Actually, it could be a combination of the two. Verses 17-21 show that there is a miraculous element tied up in the collecting of the Manna and yet there is also a natural element as well. The people gathered until the Manna melted away. At the end of the gathering, there was the right amount for everyone, even if some collected too much and some collected too little.

Therefore, there is no reason to assume that the amount provided by the Lord was twice as much, or that the time that the Manna melted away was later, allowing more time to gather it. Whatever was the case, twice what was normally gathered would be gathered on the sixth day. And so, each day was to be a day of faith that the next day would be taken care of by the hand of the Lord.

*I will test My people, but with an easy command
In conjunction with My grace, sending them heavenly bread
Surely they will be grateful and not whine or demand
Surely they will give Me praise and thanks instead*

*I will ask of them to collect it day by day
And to trust that it will come each day and on the next as well
Who could complain about that? Who could anything negative say?
I am sure they will be tickled pink and think the deal is quite swell*

*And when I give them the true Bread
When I give My own dear Son
Surely everyone will call on Him instead
The whole world will acknowledge He is the One*

*Actually, I know the wickedness of the human heart
But some will call out to Him, and to them righteousness I will impart*

III. Pots full of Meat and Bread to the Full (verses 6-8)

⁶Then Moses and Aaron said to all the children of Israel, “At evening you shall know that the LORD has brought you out of the land of Egypt.

Moses and Aaron now contradict the words of the people which we saw in verse 2. There they inferred that it was Moses and Aaron who brought them into the wilderness by complaining against them. They now correct them by saying that it will become evident at evening that it was not them, but the Lord who has led them.

Based on what is said in verse 8, this verse seems out of place. The Lord has been speaking of bread from heaven which will come in the morning and yet now Moses and Aaron tell them that that "at evening" they would know the Lord's hand was in it. This is based on the Lord giving them meat to eat; something which hasn't even been mentioned yet.

But the structure of the passage is one based on parallels. It is a common form of Hebrew writing. The quail parallel the evening, and the Manna parallels the morning. The bread is a miracle on a different order than that of the quail.

A flock of quail coming into a camp not far from the ocean could be perceived as a chance occurrence but for the fact that it is announced in advance. And so in order to stave off the killing of any flocks that night, and in anticipation of the truly miraculous event which lie ahead, Moses and Aaron first mention that in the evening something great would take place.

⁷ And in the morning you shall see the glory of the LORD;

Not only will the evening confirm to the congregation that it is the Lord who brought them out of the land of Egypt, but the morning will demonstrate the glory of the Lord in a unique way. The Hebrew word for "glory" here is kavod.

This is the first time that this word is used in connection with the Lord. Based on the parallelism used in these verses, the glory of the Lord spoken about here is not what happens in verse 10 as many scholars state. That manifestation of the Lord's glory is given to confirm the coming manifestation of the giving of the bread.

It is through the bread from heaven that the glory of the Lord will be seen in a special way for the congregation. This then follows on with a chain of thought that will run throughout all of Scripture. There is a glorious aspect of the Lord which is unlike any other. In Isaiah, He claims His glory for Himself alone -

"I am the LORD, that is My name;
And My glory I will not give to another,
Nor My praise to carved images." Isaiah 42:8

And yet, in John 1:14, we read these marvelous words which speak of Jesus -

"And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth."

And to ensure that we know that this isn't speaking of another glory than that of the Father, we read this in John 17 -

"And now, O Father, glorify Me together with Yourself, with the glory which I had with You before the world was." John 17:5

Throughout the epistles and into the book of Revelation, the glory of Jesus Christ is highlighted time and again, often in connection with the glory of God. Thus, from this starting point in Exodus 16, we have another sure example, of the countless others found in Scripture, which testify to the deity of Jesus Christ.

Without either abusing what is written or simply denying the truth of what lies before his eyes, one can come to no other conclusion than that He is the Lord Yehovah of the Old Testament. The glory of the Lord, revealed in the giving of the bread from heaven simply pictures the very glory of God in the giving of the true Bread from heaven, our Lord Jesus.

^{7 (con't)} for He hears your complaints against the LORD.

This is explicit. Verse 2 said that the people complained against Moses and Aaron. Now, it is openly stated that by complaining against them, they have complained against the Lord. A challenge against one's ambassadors is a challenge against the one who made the ambassadorial appointment.

In these words is the first use of the word tluwnah or "murmuring" found in the Bible. It will be used only 9 times in only three chapters of Exodus and Numbers and six of them are in this chapter. Harris, Archer, and Waltke explain this word for us to consider -

"The true nature of this murmuring is seen in the fact that it is an open act of rebellion against the Lord and a stubborn refusal to believe God's word and God's miraculous work. Thus the right attitude in real difficulty is unconditional acceptance and obedience. God's own must never stand in judgment upon him."

HAW

7 (con't) But what are we, that you complain against us?"

Their words to the people show that the complaints have been wholly unwarranted. It has been and it will be evident again that the Lord has led them out and tended to them all along. It is also evident that the Lord is using Moses and Aaron as His chosen instruments for the leadership of the people.

Therefore, complaining against them is a complaint against the Lord. And a complaint against the Lord is certainly known to them to be a futile effort. He destroyed an entire nation's economy, He killed the firstborn of the nation, He parted the waters of the Red Sea, and He made the bitter waters sweet.

What had possessed the congregation to complain against Moses and Aaron when they have simply been fulfilling the Lord's word on their behalf? And the parallel in today's world is therefore all the more astounding.

The Lord has given His word to direct and guide us - His superior word. As it is from Him, it is His representative to each of us. And yet, His people complain against it, either implicitly or explicitly, all the time.

We reject the things we don't like in it, we dismiss the parts which don't fit our warped theology, and we twist it to say whatever we want so that we can feel good about ourselves in congregations which bear little or no resemblance to what the Lord has directed for us. God help us!

If the Lord destroyed the Israelites along their journey to Canaan, can we expect any less as we treat His glory with utter contempt by diminishing this precious treasure we call the Holy Bible?

And so to understand that the severity of these Old Testament passages, even from this one we're looking at today, are given to direct us to a right attitude towards God via His word, let's take a moment and read a few verses from 1 Corinthians 10 -

"Moreover, brethren, I do not want you to be unaware that all our fathers were under the cloud, all passed through the sea, ² all were baptized into Moses in the cloud and in the sea, ³ all ate the same spiritual food, ⁴ and all drank the same spiritual drink. For they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ. ⁵ But with most of them God was not well pleased, for their bodies were scattered in the wilderness.

⁶ Now these things became our examples, to the intent that we should not lust after evil things as they also lusted. ⁷ And do not become idolaters as were some of them. As it is written, 'The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.' ⁸ Nor let us commit sexual immorality, as some of them did, and in one day twenty-three thousand fell; ⁹ nor let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed by serpents; ¹⁰ nor complain, as some of them also complained, and were destroyed by the destroyer. ¹¹ Now all these things happened to them as examples, and they were written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the ages have come." 1 Corinthians 10:1-11

When the people complained against Moses and Aaron, they complained against the Lord. Likewise, when we complain against what is written in the word, we follow that same unholy path.

⁸ Also Moses said, "This shall be seen when the LORD gives you meat to eat in the evening, and in the morning bread to the full;

It should be noted now that this verse contains the first use in the Bible of the word saba, which means to be "sated" or "satisfied." I only bring this up so that when we get to verse 12, we will better understand the timeline of what is going on. We'll get to that verse next week and I'll explain things then.

This verse confirms that the "glory of the Lord" spoken of in the previous verse is talking about the giving of the bread and not that which is seen in verse 10. Verse 6 said "At evening you shall know that the LORD has brought you out of the land of Egypt." And verse 7 said, "And in the morning you shall see the glory of the LORD."

Now the parallel of those two thoughts is given in one verse, meat in the evening and in the morning "bread to the full." In paying attention to the structure of these Hebrew parallelisms, you can more easily identify what's going on in what are somewhat difficult passages. Even some of the greatest scholars have misread what is being relayed here.

^{8 (con't)} for the LORD hears your complaints which you make against Him.

A third parallel line is introduced. In the middle of verse 7, Moses and Aaron said, "for He hears your complaints against the LORD."

^{8 (con't)} And what are we?

Now a fourth parallel is stated using the same words from verse 7, v'nakhnu mah - "And we, what?"

8 (fin) Your complaints are not against us but against the LORD."

And the fifth parallel is seen here. At the end of verse 7 it said, "...that you complain against us?" This is now modified to correct the congregation. Instead of "But who are we that you complain against us?" they are corrected with the words "Your complaints are not against us but against the Lord."

1)

6 At evening you shall know that the LORD has brought you out of the land of Egypt.

8 "This shall be seen when the LORD gives you meat to eat in the evening,

2)

7a And in the morning you shall see the glory of the LORD;

8a and in the morning bread to the full;

3)

7b for He hears your complaints against the LORD.

8b for the LORD hears your complaints which you make against Him.

4)

7c But what are we,

8c And what are we?

5)

7d that you complain against us?"

8d Your complaints are not against us but against the LORD.”

These concluding words of verse 8 have a beautiful New Testament parallel. Just as a complaint against Moses and Aaron was a complaint against the Lord, so a complaint against the Lord is a complaint against God. Jesus said this in Luke 10 -

"He who hears you hears Me, he who rejects you rejects Me, and he who rejects Me rejects Him who sent Me." Luke 10:16

At that time, He was speaking of the word of His representatives, those seventy He had commissioned to speak His word. If nothing else confirms that the picture of Elim from the previous chapter that I gave you was speaking of the apostles and these seventy disciples, this should.

That seemingly obscure verse, right at the end of Chapter 15 was given to show us that the Lord tests us through His representatives. As the word of the apostles has been recorded and is now our New Testament, the word of those men is our point of contact with God.

This account follows directly after that stop in Elim and before they come to Sinai. It therefore follows that the Lord brought them this way in order to show us a picture of this. At Sinai, the Bush of the Lord, the law will be received. That law was received on the same day as Pentecost, 1500 years later.

If the stop at Elim pictured the words of the apostles and disciples, and Sinai is for the giving of the law, picturing the giving of the Holy Spirit to us, then this time in the Wilderness of Sin is given as a precursor to that. The statute and the ordinances of the Lord are given to us to sustain us. They are our daily bread and our meat by which we are fed.

So let's follow the logic - we cannot know God without knowing Jesus Christ. The Bible was given to us by the representatives of Jesus Christ who tell about Him. Therefore, we cannot know Jesus Christ without knowing the Bible. And therefore, we cannot know God without knowing our Bible. It is incumbent on each one of us to study to show ourselves approved, being obedient to this cherished word which has lovingly been passed down to us by our merciful and glorious God.

And above all, we cannot have fellowship with this God unless we fellowship with His Son. As unappealing as this message is to the world we live in, it is a truth which we cannot deny if we accept that this is God's word, and it is.

If you have never received Jesus Christ as your personal Savior, calling on Him as Lord, you stand condemned before God. Let us get that fixed today. Let me tell you how...

Closing Verse: "Do all things without complaining and disputing,¹⁵ that you may become blameless and harmless, children of God without fault in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom you shine as lights in the world,¹⁶ holding fast the word of life, so that I may rejoice in the day of Christ that I have not run in vain or labored in vain." Philippians 2:14-16

Next Week: Exodus 16:11-21 (Quail and Manna) (46th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Bread from Heaven

And they journeyed from Elim
And all the congregation of the children of Israel
Came to the Wilderness of Sin
Which is between Elim and Sinai, as the account does tell
On the fifteenth day of the second month, we understand
After they departed from Egypt the land

Then the whole congregation...

Oh! What a mess
Of the children of Israel complained against Moses and Aaron
In the wilderness
And the children of Israel said to them, in a way not so sweet
“Oh, that we had died by the hand of the Lord
In the land of Egypt, when we sat by the pots of meat
And when we ate bread to the full; rather, we die by the sword

For you have brought us out into this wilderness
To kill this whole assembly with hunger, or so we guess
Then the Lord said to Moses, the thing that He would do
“Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you
And the people shall go out
And gather a certain quota every day around their dwelling spot

That I may test them without a doubt
As to whether they will walk in My law or not
And it shall be on the sixth day
That they shall prepare what they bring in
And it shall be twice as much as they gather daily, I say
Sure enough on the morrow, the process will begin

Then Moses and Aaron said to all the children of Israel
“At evening you shall know
That the Lord has brought you out of the land of Egypt
And has led us everywhere we did go
And in the morning you shall see
The glory of the Lord
For He hears your complaints against the Lord quite plainly
He hears your every uttered word

Also Moses said, “This shall be seen
When the Lord gives you in the evening meat to eat
And in the morning bread to the full
For the Lord hears your complaints, words not so sweet
Which you make against Him
Your grumblings are filled to the brim
And what are we? Tell us your word!
Your complaints are not against us but against the Lord.”

Lord, help each of us to be content with the life you have given
Help us to not complain, but to be grateful instead
Because of Jesus we have a promise of eternal livin'
Because of our Lord, our true and heavenly Bread

May we rest in Him, content and at peace
May we give you the glory and the praise that You are due
May this offering from us never, never cease
But throughout the ages, may we ever be praising You

Thank You, O God, for Jesus our precious Lord
Who You have revealed to us in Your superior word

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 16:9-21 (QUAIL AND MANNA)

When we decided to move off the beach a few years ago, we started looking for a building. When I saw the sign on this place, I called the number and asked about it. The owner told me the price and then asked if I was opening a bar. I told him, "No, a church."

He was so delighted that he immediately started talking himself down on the price! He said that bars had offered much more than the asking price, but being a Christian he refused to sell. But when a church wanted it, he went in the opposite direction to the point where I was worried he would lose on the deal.

As we were getting the place ready, we needed some nice cabinets for the bathrooms. Within just a couple days two, beautiful ones were sitting out by the road waiting for someone to take for free. I could go on and on with such stories, but you get the picture.

The Lord sent us Manna in order to sustain us as a church. He was saying, "Trust me, it will work out as it should." Today, we will see how He did the same for Israel as they wandered in the wilderness.

Text Verse: You also gave Your good Spirit to instruct them,
And did not withhold Your manna from their mouth. Nehemiah 9:20

My friend Tom often says, "The Lord may not give you everything you want, but He will always give you everything you need." He is great in that way! He never fails to meet our needs. And quite often, He sends us the things we want as well. He is the Giver of the extravagant, and He is the Provider of all we need. It is a truth that permeates His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Glory of the Lord (verses 9-11)

⁹ Then Moses spoke to Aaron, "Say to all the congregation of the children of Israel, 'Come near before the LORD,

The word for "before" in this verse is liphne which literally means "face" or "faces" and hence we get the idea of "before." But what is implied is that the people are called together for a special meeting; a face to face meeting.

And not only is it the "people" in general, as if it could imply only the designated leaders of the tribes, but rather Moses has called "all the congregation." Every person is to present their face to the Lord. And there is a reason for this, as the rest of the verse explains...

^{9 (con't)} for He has heard your complaints.'"

The word for "complaints" here is tluwnah. It's a word that was introduced to the Bible in the last sermon and as was explained then, it is only used nine times in the Bible, six times in this chapter and three more in Numbers.

This is the fifth of those six times. It indicates a murmuring or a grumbling, as if the people have a resentment welling up inside of them which they have been sitting around moaning about. It wasn't just a few people but the entire congregation has been whining. It started somewhere and the infection grew throughout the people of the camp. This was seen explicitly in verse 2, which said

"Then the whole congregation of the children of Israel complained against Moses and Aaron in the wilderness." Exodus 16:6

At that time, their reason for complaining was also given -

"Oh, that we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the pots of meat and when we ate bread to the full! For you have brought us out into this wilderness to kill this whole assembly with hunger." Exodus 16:3

But their whining was surely unjustified. Matthew Henry gives his thoughts on the words they spoke -

"We cannot suppose they had plenty in Egypt, nor could they fear dying for want in the wilderness, while they had flocks and herds: none talk more absurdly than murmurers. When we begin to fret, we ought to consider, that God hears all our murmurings." Matthew Henry

The Lord did hear their murmurings and promised to provide for them, again withholding His wrath at their lack of faith. His promise included two things - meat in the evening and in the morning bread to the full. When we looked at the verses from last week, in verse 7 it said this -

"And in the morning you shall see the glory of the LORD; for He hears your complaints against the LORD. But what are we, that you complain against us?" Exodus 16:7

Now, as the congregation is summoned, the glory of the Lord will appear in the cloud before all the people, but as was seen from a breakdown of the structure of the verses, this is not the "glory of the Lord" which verse 7 was speaking of.

Scholars whose commentaries tie the glory of the Lord in verse 7 with that which will now be seen have missed the significance of how the passage is structured and what it is trying to show us.

The pillar of cloud and fire has been with the people since Etham and they were expected to have faith that if the Lord was leading them in this way, that He would tend to their needs in the process. But instead of turning their eyes to the Lord in faith, they turned them inward in complaint.

He is now going to illuminate the cloud with His splendor in an attempt to wake them up and show that that if His glory is there ahead of them, then His glory will also be displayed among them.

¹⁰ Now it came to pass, as Aaron spoke to the whole congregation of the children of Israel,

As was the case with Moses and Aaron before Pharaoh, we see here as well. Aaron was given the instructions to speak by Moses and then he repeated the words to the whole congregation. However, this is probably more for the benefit of Aaron than it is for the sake of Moses' speech impediment.

By having Aaron speak for Moses, it will show that he is, like Moses, a qualified representative of the Lord. The congregation was said to have complained against both of them in verse 2 and so having Aaron speak for Moses will show that their complaints against both of them were unjustified.

¹⁰ (con't) that they looked toward the wilderness,

It is significant that these words are included. The Lord could have appeared directly above them as if He were an authoritarian Ruler lording Himself over the people. He could have radiated to them from the top of a nearby mountain as if He were a King on his throne ready to make a judgment or hand down an edict.

He could have appeared from the direction they had come, as if to say, "I will take you back to your pots full of meat in Egypt, just as you wished." But none of these things occurred. Instead, He will manifest Himself in the direction of the wilderness.

In one sense, He had separated Himself from the people as if to say, "Your grumbling has caused a rift between you and Me. I am separated from you in order to keep from destroying you." Additionally though, it was also a sign that the Lord determined to continue leading them into the wilderness when they broke camp.

That vast and inhospitable area which lay before them would consume them all if they were to simply venture into it without suitable provision. By manifesting Himself there, it was to be a sign to them that He was their provision and that what He would do would be sufficient for them.

The promise had already been made - "meat to eat in the evening, and in the morning bread to the full." Now they would have a visible manifestation of where that promise would come from. By seeing the Lord in this way, in the future they would be reminded of His glory every time they went out to reap what He sowed for them, and to gather what He had graciously left for them.

In this gathering, they were expected to behold the glory of the Lord each day. This then is what it meant in verse 7 with the words, "And in the morning you shall see the glory of the LORD." What they picked up would be from the same Source as what their eyes beheld. The Lord in the cloud was to be the Giver of the bread - a marvelous picture of Christ in both instances.

¹⁰ (con't) and behold, the glory of the LORD appeared in the cloud.

As the cloud was with them throughout the journey, this then must indicate a particular change in the cloud itself. Just as Christ was with the apostles throughout His ministry, there was a time when He more fully manifested His glory to them. That is recorded in all three synoptic gospels. Matthew records it this way -

"Now after six days Jesus took Peter, James, and John his brother, led them up on a high mountain by themselves; ² and He was transfigured before them. His face shone like the sun, and His clothes became as white as the light. ³ And behold, Moses and Elijah appeared to them, talking with Him. ⁴ Then Peter answered and said to Jesus, 'Lord, it is good for us to be here; if You wish, let us make here three tabernacles: one for You, one for Moses, and one for Elijah.'" Matthew 17:1-4

The cloud which had led Israel suddenly burst forth with a glory hitherto unseen. There are certainly a few reasons for this. The first was already alluded to - the Lord was with the people and He would be both their guide and their sustenance in the wilderness.

Further, because he appeared to the people as Aaron spoke, it would revalidate his authority to be a spokesman on behalf of the Lord. In turn, because he spoke according to the instruction of Moses, Moses was likewise distinguished and therefore recognized as the Lord's spokesman.

And finally, it was a visible demonstration of the majesty of the Lord. He wasn't just an invisible entity which was surrounded by a pillar of cloud and fire. Instead, He is a visible entity which was merely concealed by that pillar. It is a picture of Christ.

Hebrews chapter 1 says that Christ is the brightness of God's glory and the express image of His person." It is this brightness which burst forth from the cloud to show that there is more than just a hidden force, but a glorious Being; the God of Israel.

¹¹ And the LORD spoke to Moses, saying,

At least twelve times in this chapter, a verse begins with someone speaking to someone else and it continues on with what that person says. However, in this one instance, the words, "And the LORD spoke to Moses, saying," are set off as a separate verse. In this, the chapter has 36 verses instead of just 35. In turn, the book of Exodus is a verse longer, and in turn the Bible is a verse longer.

Each seemingly random addition like this one leads to a more perfect pattern which is found in the structure of the Bible. And so each time we come to a sentence which is divided like this, I try to highlight it to you in order to remind you that there is true wisdom behind each word and verse found in Scripture.

In addition to that, there is something for us to pay attention to here. Moses is mentioned seventeen times in this chapter, Aaron six times. And all six times that Aaron is mentioned, it is either in connection to Moses or speaking as directed by him.

The Lord has chosen Moses as His representative, and in turn he at times designates Aaron as his spokesman. What we are seeing in words, Israel was to see in person. The obvious nature of the established hierarchy makes the rebellions which are recorded all the more poignant.

Like the fifth commandment which asks us to honor our father and our mother, the Lord establishes hierarchies for a reason. When we complain against them, or refuse to be obedient to them, the result is that we end up harming ourselves and our relationships with them and with the Lord.

And one final point about these words. They should probably read, "And the LORD had spoke to Moses, saying..." rather than, "And the LORD spoke to Moses, saying..."

In time, this verse certainly precedes verse 7. But in order to ensure the proper structure was maintained to show that "the glory of the Lord mentioned in that verse was speaking of the bread from heaven rather than the appearance of the Lord in the wilderness, it is stated to us now.

Hebrew is deficient in tenses and so we have to infer whether something is present tense or past tense. In the case of these words, they are past. They preceded Moses' words to the people and therefore Moses was not being presumptuous in what He said to the people. Instead, he was relaying what was already said to him, even though it is only now recorded.

¹² "I have heard the complaints of the children of Israel.

This is the last use of the word tluwnah, or "complaints" in the book of Exodus. Chapter 16 is at least partly given to show us that the Lord is not unaware of our complaining and that He is not unsympathetic to it.

When we are in need, our needs will be met according to His purposes. However, the next time that this word, tluwnah, is used there will be a different result than what is experienced in this chapter. In Numbers 14, the same congregation will receive very bad news because of their complaints -

"Say to them, 'As I live,' says the LORD, 'just as you have spoken in My hearing, so I will do to you: ²⁹The carcasses of you who have complained against Me shall fall in this wilderness, all of you who were numbered, according to your entire number, from twenty years old and above. ³⁰Except for Caleb the son of Jephunneh and Joshua the son of Nun, you shall by no means enter the land which I swore I would make you dwell in.'" Numbers 14:28-30

The very wilderness where the Lord has now manifested Himself in splendid glory will become the burial place for all of the people who refused to acknowledge Him as their faithful sovereign leader who would certainly provide for them if they would just humble their hearts before Him.

¹² (con't) Speak to them, saying, 'At twilight

The term for "twilight" here is ha'arbayim. It literally means, "between the evenings" and it was first used in Exodus 12:6 at the time of the Passover. This is now the second time it is used. I won't re-explain all the details, but it is used 11 times in the Bible and each time it details the work of Christ; the time of day when He died on the cross.

What we are seeing here in the giving of the quail "between the evenings," and the glory of the Lord being seen in the Manna in the morning, is exactly seen first in the cross of Christ, Him giving His flesh for the sins of the world, and then in His resurrection where the bread of life, the resurrected Christ, comes forth from the grave in the morning. This is the very reason for the Lord's Supper where weekly we say these words -

barukh atah Yehovah elohaynu, melech ha'olam, ha'motzi lekhem min ha'aretz -
Blessed are Thou O Lord our God, King of the universe, who brings forth Bread from the earth.

It was "between the evenings" that Jesus Christ died on the cross, just as these quail will die for the people's meal. And, it was in the morning that the Bread of Life, our Lord Jesus Christ came forth from the grave, just as the Manna miraculously appeared each morning.

^{12 (con't)} you shall eat meat, and in the morning you shall be filled with bread.

Remembering that these words have already been spoken to Moses and we are only now seeing them, we can see why there is the change from verse 4 which only spoke of the "bread from heaven." It is not an arbitrary insert by a fumbling scribe, but a logical progression of thought in combination with a marvelous series of parallelisms which have helped us to determine what is going on.

This is certain because we come to the second use in the Bible of the word saba, which means to be "sated" or "satisfied." The first was in verse 8. Its use shows us that this verse certainly precedes verse 8 and Moses is repeating what he was told.

If the details seem overwhelming, imagine my Monday, 17 August as I went back and forth between verses trying to put together a timeline that would help you grasp what is going on. In the end, Bible study is hard, but the rewards are heavenly.

We are getting a look into the mind of God as He slowly and methodically reveals His word to us. Each verse is selected to show us what happened and how it has a greater fulfillment in Christ the Lord.

Why is it that the Lord chose this chapter of the Bible to introduce the word saba, or satisfied? It is because this chapter pictures the only thing that can truly satisfy – the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. This is exactly what Jesus said concerning these things in John 6:35 -

"I am the bread of life. He who comes to Me shall never hunger, and he who believes in Me shall never thirst." John 6:35

^{12 (con't)} And you shall know that I am the LORD your God."

The term "Lord" or "Yehovah" is mentioned 22 times in this chapter. The word God or elohim is mentioned only once and it is only mentioned in relation to the Lord - ani Yehovah elohekem, "I am the Lord your God."

Notice though that the proclamation is made in connection with the giving of the meat and the bread. Out of all of the 22 uses of "Lord" in the chapter, He chooses this verse with this precept to explicitly remind them and us of who He is. Why would this be?

The answer is Jesus. The word "meat" here is basar. It literally means "flesh." It is the body of a being which is "seen in contrast to the spirit (ruah)" (HAW). The Lord is giving Israel flesh and bread to sustain them. This is exactly what Jesus claimed He was giving to His people.

In John 6, Jesus speaks extensively about the bread from heaven which is detailed in this passage of Exodus. To sum up his words to the people, He says this -

“Most assuredly, I say to you, unless you eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His blood, you have no life in you. ⁵⁴ Whoever eats My flesh and drinks My blood has eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day. ⁵⁵ For My flesh is food indeed, and My blood is drink indeed. ⁵⁶ He who eats My flesh and drinks My blood abides in Me, and I in him. ⁵⁷ As the living Father sent Me, and I live because of the Father, so he who feeds on Me will live because of Me. ⁵⁸ This is the bread which came down from heaven—not as your fathers ate the manna, and are dead. He who eats this bread will live forever.” John 6:53-58

In that passage, He uses both the Greek word for "flesh" which is sarx and the Greek word for "bread" which is artos. This is why this 12th verse of the chapter says, "And you shall know that I am the LORD your God." In the end, it is all about Jesus. Christ gave His flesh and He is the true Bread of heaven. By these, we know that He is the Lord our God.

Take time today to read John chapter 6 from the 22nd verse on and you will better understand the relationship between these two wonderful stories.

You shall know that I am the Lord your God

I will make it evident in the works I do

Be confident that as in this earth you trod

That I have given sufficient evidence to you

I prevailed over the law, which no one else could do

I showed that I am the Holy One of Israel

And then I went to Calvary's cross for you

And so of My works, you are to tell

I proved My sinless life when I broke death's chains

In the resurrection, I proved that I have set you free

Now the only thing which remains

Is that You reach out your heart and receive Me

II. Bread from the Lord (verses 13-16)

¹³ So it was that quails came up at evening and covered the camp,

This is the first of four times that quails will be mentioned in the Bible. The word is actually in the singular, ha'selav, or "the quail." It is as if they came up as one and alighted everywhere at the same time, covering the camp.

I will explain the word selav for a new brain squiggle for each of you. Selav is an orthographical variation on the word shalah which means "prosper." That idea comes from "to be quiet" or "to be at ease." The connection between the words is that quails are fat and slow in flight because of their weight, and so they are given this name.

The other account of quails being given to the people in this manner is in Numbers 11. However, when the people eat of those quails, many will die. From a New Testament perspective of why, we can go to Paul's admonition concerning the Lord's Supper in 1 Corinthians chapter 11.

There in verse 30, Paul told them that because of not discerning the Lord's body, many were weak and sick and many had died. We are to come to the Lord's Table recognizing our state before Him, not arrogantly, but in humility. Israel will fail to do this in the book of Numbers and they will suffer because of it.

Albert Barnes notes this about migrating quail which can be observed even in our modern times -

"This bird migrates in immense numbers in spring from the south: it is nowhere more common than in the neighborhood of the Red Sea. In this passage we read of a single flight so dense that it covered the encampment. The miracle consisted in the precise time of the arrival and its coincidence with the announcement."

Albert Barnes

After spending the winter in Africa, they fly north again. Once they cross the Red Sea, they are utterly exhausted and can be gathered up in enormous numbers with no difficulty at all. As Barnes noted though, the miracle is that they arrived exactly at the time the Lord said they would.

Flesh would be given at the same time that Christ died on the cross - between the evenings. The giving of the quails pictures the giving of the Son of God for the nourishment of our life.

^{13 (con't)} and in the morning the dew lay all around the camp.

The bread from heaven, of which a name has not yet been given, came in the morning with a layer of dew. The word translated here as "lay" is shekavah, which means "an emission." It's a surprising word to show up here, but nothing sexual should be inferred.

This is the first use of the word, and it is used just 9 times in the Bible, all in Exodus through Leviticus. This word shekavah is defined as the "(seed of) copulation" (HAW). This would then imply "that which gives life." If that doesn't perfectly fit with Jesus' words of John 6, I'm not sure what does -

"Most assuredly, I say to you, Moses did not give you the bread from heaven, but My Father gives you the true bread from heaven. ³³ For the bread of God is He who comes down from heaven and gives life to the world." John 6:32, 33

Again, like the giving of the quail, and even the timing of their arrival, the appearance of the dew around the camp is a perfect picture of the Lord Jesus and His work for us. The true Bread of God is what gives life to the world, pictured by the bread in the wilderness that was provided to give life to Israel.

Interestingly, the term "dew" here has only been used in one account prior to this. That was in Genesis 27, during the blessing by Isaac on his two sons, Jacob and Esau. Jacob was blessed with the dew of heaven and Esau's blessing was being away from the dew of heaven (NIV). This picture of the "dew of heaven" is beginning to be realized here in Exodus 16.

¹⁴ And when the layer of dew lifted, there, on the surface of the wilderness, was a small round substance, as fine as frost on the ground.

There is a lot of interesting information in this verse. We have the "dew" mentioned again which was just explained in the previous verse. Once that was gone up from the ground, something wonderful is left behind for the people.

It is a small round substance. The word for "small" is daq. It literally means "thin." The word for "round" here is khaspas, which is used only this once in the entire Bible. It means round, but not round like a ball. Rather it is round like a scale. Its root means to peel like a scale and so we get the idea of a round thing which is very thin.

And the word for "frost" here is kphowr which indicates "to cover" as in the frost covering the ground. This word comes from kaphar, which means to appease, atone, forgive, be merciful, etc. It is again a picture of Christ who covers our sins in His mercy.

Israel's receiving of this bread from heaven is merely looking forward to our atonement and the sustaining of our salvation as we walk in this fallen world. As long as we are here, we continue to rely on the true Bread from heaven to sustain us until we enter the Land of Promise, which is also exactly when Israel's Manna ended.

When they crossed over the Jordan and into Canaan, we read this from the book of Joshua -

"Now the children of Israel camped in Gilgal, and kept the Passover on the fourteenth day of the month at twilight on the plains of Jericho. ¹¹ And they ate of the produce of the land on the day after the Passover, unleavened bread and parched grain, on the very same day. ¹² Then the manna ceased on the day after they had eaten the produce of the land; and the children of Israel no longer had manna, but they ate the food of the land of Canaan that year." Joshua 5:10-12

As the Manna only became visible when the dew had lifted, it is probably an explanation for the enigmatic expression used by Jesus in Revelation 2:17 where He promises those who overcome "some of the hidden Manna to eat." Until the dew lifts, it remains hidden.

¹⁵ So when the children of Israel saw it, they said to one another, "What is it?" For they did not know what it was.

The Hebrew words translated here as "What is it?" read, man hu. Though it would seemingly be easy to translate this, it isn't. The word "what" is not man, but mah. And so some scholars say that it doesn't mean "What is it?" but rather "It is a gift." The Hebrew word manan means "gift" and so they believe that it is a shortened exclamation for that.

Other scholars disagree and say that man obviously means "what" because that is what it means in the Aramaic language. But why would one word from Aramaic be translated this one time in the Bible as "what?"

The KJV avoids the conflict by saying, "It is manna." This doesn't explain anything. Instead, it simply translates what the Hebrew says. But then it causes it to contradict itself because it next says that they named it Manna because they didn't know what it was. That makes as much sense as a football-bat.

I'm sure that the meaning of the word Manna is as clear as mud to you now. And just so you know when you read the Bible, the word is man, whatever man means. I would prefer "gift" because this is exactly how Jesus and His work is described in the New Testament.

^{15 (con't)} And Moses said to them, "This is the bread which the LORD has given you to eat.

Whatever the actual meaning of man is, Moses explains that it is the bread which the Lord has provided for them. It is an exact picture of the words of Jesus in John 6. The Lord has given us the Bread of life to eat and to sustain us for all of the ages to come.

¹⁶ This is the thing which the LORD has commanded: 'Let every man gather it according to each one's need,

Moses' instructions are clear concerning what should be gathered - "according to each one's need." The Hebrew however is much more expressive. It says ish le-pi akelow - "man as his mouth to his eating."

^{16 (con't)} one omer for each person,

An omer for each person. In Hebrew, la'gulgoleth - literally "for every head." Gulgoleth means head or skull and you can hear the similarity to the name of the hill where Jesus died, Golgotha - The Place of the Skull. This is the first of twelve times it will be used in the Bible. For each person reckoned, one omer is designated.

This is an average for what a man would normally eat in a day, an omer per person. It is the first time this measurement is given in the Bible and scholars vary in what they believe it is, from about three to six pints. If it is only three pints, and an average family had four people, then that would be six quarts collected daily.

It is assumed that there were about two million people in the congregation and so this would mean about 93,500 bushels of Manna were collected every single day. If you have ever watched one of the stupid programs on TV that show someone collecting some type of stuff in the desert and claiming it is Manna, now you can see how utterly ridiculous that is

This could be nothing other than a miraculously provided food source. Considering that this went on, day after day, for about 40 years, there is no possible way that what is described on those stupid shows could ever come close to meeting what the account says for even one day, much less for 40 years.

16 (con't) according to the number of persons;

However many dwelt together in each residence, the amount was to be figured according to that.

16 (con't) let every man take for those who are in his tent.”

The directions given are very precise and follow a set pattern - "man as his mouth to his eating; one omer for every head; according to the number of souls." It is this that each man was to take for his tent. And just so you know, the word "tent" in this verse is singular, not plural. The KJV gets a demerit on this verse for translating it as "his tents."

There has been a lot of specificity in these verses, all of it pointing to God's provision in Christ. The people would be tended to and they would even be given an abundance to meet their daily needs. As Matthew Henry sums up these words

"God promises a speedy and constant supply. He tried whether they would trust him, and rest satisfied with the bread of the day in its day. Thus he tried if they would serve him, and it appeared how ungrateful they were. When God plagued the Egyptians, it was to make them know he was their Lord; when he provided for the Israelites, it was to make them know he was their God." Matthew Henry

The flesh which God has sent, it is food indeed

It is sufficient to fill us and give us life anew

And when we have partaken, we will then follow at the lead

Of our Lord, who has given Himself for me and you

*The dew of heaven has left behind a gift for us
There is bread enough for all to eat
And this only pictures the coming Messiah, Jesus
Oh my! How delicious is this Bread... so very sweet*

*Thank You, O God, for filling our souls in such a way
You have granted us life through Your Son
And so we will exalt You through Him, each and every day
Until when at last this earthly life is done*

*Then we shall praise You forevermore O God
As in the heavenly Jerusalem we shall forever tread*

III. Our Daily Bread (verses 17-21)

¹⁷ Then the children of Israel did so and gathered, some more, some less.

What seems to be implied here is not disobedience, but rather initiative. Some people were more inclined to gather, and some less. They gathered what came to their hand until they were done gathering. It follows through then that if the Manna pictures Christ, that we can apply the same to us.

Some of us here gather in a little bit of Christ, some gather in a lot. A preacher or a scholar may struggle over the Bible, searching out its mysteries in order to bring them home to his flock. But the blue-collar worker may read the word cursorily at best and not really intending to find anything other than the surface story which is before his eyes.

Likewise, the rich man in the church may gather in a great deal in order to meet the needs of its expenses while the poor widow may only give 2 small pennies to meet them. And yet, when the two are combined, something wonderful happens...

¹⁸ So when they measured it by omers, he who gathered much had nothing left over, and he who gathered little had no lack. Every man had gathered according to each one's need.

The marvelous result of the gathering of the people resulted in having exactly what was needed according to each one's need. The word "left over" is adaph. It means "excess." This is its first use in Scripture and is only found nine times, and only in Moses' writings from Exodus through Numbers.

A couple things seem to be implied in this passage. One is that this was that the miraculous gathering occurred each day, not just on the first day. And the second thing is that it was all gathered into heaps and then portioned out. What was collected by all collectively met the needs of all individually.

This verse is used by Paul in 2 Corinthians 8 to show exactly this. In the end, every need is met according to the wisdom of God. He had asked the Corinthians to assist in giving to the saints in Jerusalem who were in need. In order to inspire them on in their giving, he wrote these words -

"For I do not mean that others should be eased and you burdened; ¹⁴ but by an equality, that now at this time your abundance may supply their lack, that their abundance also may supply your lack—that there may be equality. ¹⁵ As it is written, 'He who gathered much had nothing left over, and he who gathered little had no lack.'" 2 Corinthians 8:13-15

If we learn nothing else from this verse, we should at least see that the Lord truly has it all under control. This isn't a verse condoning communism. There is nothing here or anywhere in the Bible to suggest that everyone's property belonged to the collective whole.

Rather this is a passage which asks us to realize that the Lord has handed out abilities and gifts to all and that each of these collectively works towards the fulfilling of every need. Some have greater needs, some have lesser, but in the end, every need is met.

¹⁹ And Moses said, "Let no one leave any of it till morning."

This directive is given specifically as one requesting trust. In essence, "The Lord will provide and so you are to trust that He will, in fact, provide." They were to recognize their complete dependence on God, and have sufficient faith that He would meet their needs according to His promises.

In the same chapter of Matthew which includes the words, "Give us this day our daily bread" Jesus seems to remind his audience of this very passage from Exodus

"Therefore do not worry, saying, 'What shall we eat?' or 'What shall we drink?' or 'What shall we wear?' ³² For after all these things the Gentiles seek. For your heavenly Father knows that you need all these things. ³³ But seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added to you. ³⁴ Therefore do not worry about tomorrow, for tomorrow will worry about its own things. Sufficient for the day is its own trouble." Matthew 6:31-34

²⁰ Notwithstanding they did not heed Moses. But some of them left part of it until morning, and it bred worms and stank. And Moses was angry with them.

This is another miracle of the Manna. When we get to verse 24, we will see that when they gathered enough for two days with the approaching Sabbath, it will last both days without breeding worms or stinking.

Further, in verse 33, Moses and Aaron were instructed to “Take a pot and put an omer of manna in it, and lay it up before the LORD, to be kept for your generations.” This Manna was intended to last forever. Thus, the manna was something incorruptible in and of itself, but which became corruptible through disobedience.

This then is an exacting picture of how Paul describes our life in Christ. One's obedience to the Lord, or lack of it, pictured by how the Israelite's treated the Manna, was either rewarded or frowned upon. And it was the light of the new day which showed the results of what occurred.

The manna itself had nothing wrong with it, but how it was treated brought the negative result. Paul says that our work for the Lord is the same. If we act in a positive manner, there will be a reward, if negatively, a loss. Here are his words from 1 Corinthians 3 -

"For no other foundation can anyone lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ. ¹² Now if anyone builds on this foundation with gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, straw, ¹³ each one's work will become clear; for the Day will declare it, because it will be revealed by fire; and the fire will test each one's work, of what sort it is. ¹⁴ If anyone's work which he has built on it endures, he will receive a reward. ¹⁵ If anyone's work is burned, he will suffer loss; but he himself will be saved, yet so as through fire." 1

Corinthians 3:11-15

21 So they gathered it every morning, every man according to his need. And when the sun became hot, it melted.

And now we see another miracle of the Manna. The Manna that wasn't collected melted away under the sun. And yet, we will read in verse 23 that it could be baked or boiled, something much hotter than the sun shining on it, and yet it wouldn't melt away.

The Lord ensured that the Manna wasn't just left on the ground to be trampled underfoot, nor was it left out where people could gather it any time during the day, and nor could any from outside the covenant community come along and partake of it. Instead, they needed to be diligent in gathering it as early and as much as possible in order to be ready for the day ahead.

The Manna was to be a lesson to them that they were dependent on the Lord for their sustenance, and it was to be a way of instilling in them discipline and obedience while still lavishing them with abundant grace.

For us, it is no different. God has shown us that we are utterly dependent on Him for our salvation. We are also dependent on Him for the gifts we possess. We are to use those gifts through discipline and obedience to His glory. If we fail to do so, it is we who will go hungry.

Everything we need is found in Christ and we simply need to reach out, day by day, and receive it. If you have never made a first and heartfelt commitment to this wonderful Lord who is pictured in these verses, please let me introduce Him to you now so you can...

Closing Verse: "And God is able to bless you abundantly, so that in all things at all times, having all that you need, you will abound in every good work." 2 Corinthians 9:8

Next Week: Exodus 16:22-36 (Entering God's Rest - The Hidden Omer) (47th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Quail and Manna

Then Moses spoke to Aaron this word

“Say to all the congregation of the children of Israel

‘Come near before the Lord

For He has heard your complaints as well

Now it came to pass

As Aaron spoke to the whole congregation

Of the children of Israel

Yes the entire nation

That they looked toward the wilderness

And behold the glory of the Lord appeared in the cloud

A sight which did impress

And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying
“I have heard the complaints of the children of Israel
Speak to them, as I am relaying
Saying, ‘At twilight you shall eat meat - get ready for a tasty smell
And in the morning you shall be filled with bread
And you shall know that I am the Lord your God
Just as I have said

So it was that quails came up at evening
And covered the camp of Israel
And in the morning
The dew lay all around the camp as well
And when the layer of dew lifted
There, on the surface of the wilderness all around
Was a small round substance which had been gifted
As fine as frost on the ground

So when the children of Israel saw it
They said to one another, “What is it?”
For they did not know what it was
They didn't have clue, not even a bit
And Moses said to them concerning this tasty treat
“This is the bread which the Lord has given you to eat

This is the thing which the Lord has commanded:
'Let every man gather it according to each one's need
One omer for each person, I am being candid
This is what I have decreed

According to the number of persons, to this extent
Let every man take for those who are in his tent
Then the children of Israel did so
And gathered, some more, some less even though

So when they measured it by omers after they brought it back
He who gathered much had nothing left over, indeed
And he who gathered little had no lack Every man had gathered according to each one's need

And Moses said, "Let no one leave any of it till morning
Notwithstanding, Moses they did not heed
But some of them left part of it until morning ignoring the warning
And it bred worms and stank because of their misdeed

And Moses was angry with them in turn
Because they refused to pay attention and learn
So they gathered it every morning
Every man according to his need

And when the sun became hot, it melted
An impressive lesson for them indeed
Here we are, O God, just like Israel
We complain about every possible thing
Even when we know that surely all is well
Still we let our complaints openly ring

And we fail to heed to Your word
We find it easier to simply disobey
Even in the presence of our Lord
We get up and complain each and every day
Help us, O Lord, to simply trust and obey
Your word has told us that everything will be ok
Give us hearts that are geared toward glorifying you
And eyes that are fixed solely upon Jesus
This is surely the right thing to do
And so grant this kind favor to each one of us!

Thank You, O God, for our precious Lord Jesus
Thank You for leading us each step of the way
Be exalted on our lips; hear the praises from each of us
As we come before you day unto day

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 16:22-36 (ENTERING GOD'S REST, THE HIDDEN OMER)

Anybody want to come up and give evaluating this passage a shot before I do the sermon? All you have to do is think of Christ and it will fall into place. Come up... please!

As I first looked over the passage, a feeling that comes from time to time took hold of me. How am I going to make a sermon out of this? For whatever reason, I figured it would be difficult to find a lot of hidden treasure in it. But as so often happens, I was completely wrong.

Even the last verse, which seemed wholly disconnected to the rest of the account made perfect sense by the time I was done typing. Like the last few verses of the book of Ruth, this verse seemed to be added on for no particularly good reason.

But there is always a perfectly good one when the Lord has determined it to be there. And so, let's jump into the passage and see what wonderful things we can pull out of it.

Text Verse: "I rejoice at Your word
As one who finds great treasure." Psalm 119:162

As happens so often, with each new insight into Christ that showed up in these verses, I literally rejoiced as if having found great treasure. I hope you'll rejoice over each nugget which is found here as well. What a wondrous and superior word! And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. A Holy Sabbath to the LORD (verses 22-26)

²² And so it was, on the sixth day, that they gathered twice as much bread, two omers for each one.

The sixth day of the week is Friday. On this day, one of the miracles of the Manna is evidenced because twice as much Manna was available for gathering than on the other five days. Instead of one omer per person, there was mishneh shnei ha'omer or "double two, the omer." This is what the Lord promised in verse 5 and this is what happened.

It would be unreasonable to assume that this is anything less than a double miracle. The Manna itself was neither natural, in either content or amount. The fact that it came to be twice as much on Friday only added to the miraculous nature of the event.

It should be noted that the Manna is called "bread" here and elsewhere. It isn't merely called "food," nor is it always specifically called by the name that it is given, Manna. Instead, it is called bread. It is a picture and a foreshadowing of Christ, who is the Bread of life.

^{22 (con't)} And all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses.

This is what is recorded in verse 5 -

"And it shall be on the sixth day that they shall prepare what they bring in, and it shall be twice as much as they gather daily." Exodus 16:5

There is one of two possibilities concerning the reaction of these elders. The first is that Moses relayed this information to them and they simply didn't pay attention, or Moses didn't tell them in order to see how they would respond to what happened.

Either way, it seems by their appearing before Moses to tell him about the great harvest that they weren't sure what to do with the surplus. If they kept it, would it stink and be filled with worms in the morning? If they threw it out, would they be held accountable for wasting what the Lord had provided?

Either way, they seemed to be in a conundrum concerning what they should do with the double portion they had received. And so Moses explains, or re-explains, it to them.

²³ Then he said to them, "This is what the LORD has said: 'Tomorrow is a Sabbath rest, a holy Sabbath to the LORD.

This verse contains the first use of the word shabbaton or "rest" in the Bible. Literally, shabbaton shabbat-qodesh Yehovah makhar or "a rest – a holy Sabbath to Yehovah - (is) tomorrow." Scholars are divided on how to present the Sabbath day here. Some argue that the Sabbath is to be considered an eternal institution based on Genesis 2:3 -

"Then God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it, because in it He rested from all His work which God had created and made." Genesis 2:3

Some go so far as to say that there was confusion in the elders about what to do on the Sabbath because they had this double portion on Friday and they were confused about what to do with the second omer on Saturday. Would they be allowed to violate the Sabbath to prepare it?

This is nonsense. Nothing in Scripture shows that the Sabbath existed at all until this point in history. Not a single verse outside of Genesis 2:3 hints at this. And the text itself will disprove this.

Secondly, Genesis 2:3 only became a written fact at the giving of the law through Moses, and it will be written after this account in Exodus. Genesis 2:3 simply describes the fact that God sanctified the seventh day, but it goes no further than that.

There is nothing prescriptive added to the general statement which was made in Genesis. Thirdly, the reason is given for the Sabbath in the presentation of the Ten Commandments in Exodus 20 and in Deuteronomy 5, but the reason for it is different in both. First it is based on Creation, and then it is based on Redemption.

Therefore, the Sabbath was uniquely revealed to Israel at the time of their organization as a nation to show that the Lord is Creator and Redeemer. Until this point, there was no need to mandate the Sabbath to the world. And to demonstrate that this is certain, the Lord told Israel that the Sabbath would be a sign between Him and them, a sign of sanctification. That is found in Exodus 31 -

And the LORD spoke to Moses, saying, ¹³ "Speak also to the children of Israel, saying: 'Surely My Sabbaths you shall keep, for it is a sign between Me and you throughout your generations, that you may know that I am the LORD who sanctifies you. Exodus 31:12, 13

Also, these words directly clue us into this because it says, "Tomorrow is a Sabbath rest." It does not say ha'shabbat, or "the Sabbath." Instead, it leaves off a definite article. If the people were aware of the Sabbath as an institution, it would have said ha'shabbat, "the" Sabbath. It does not. Instead, Moses was made aware of it in connection to the giving of the Manna.

Unfortunately, the KJV utterly mistranslated this verse and added in two definite articles which don't exist in the Hebrew. They say, "To morrow is the rest of the holy sabbath unto the LORD." By adding these in, they have inserted inappropriate theology to the text which I believe has actually been harmful to the church.

And finally, in the same line of thought, Moses gives additional specificity by repeating the words and adding in the word "holy." He says, "Tomorrow is a Sabbath rest, a holy Sabbath to the LORD." The entire phrase smacks of, and implies, uniqueness and thus first-time instruction concerning Sabbath requirements.

The reason why it's important to know this is because of the highly divergent teachings on the Sabbath within Christianity. Those who teach that a Saturday Sabbath is required for Christians will make the claim that it is an eternal standard of God that always existed for humanity. This verse shows that this is not true.

Much of this aberrant doctrine surely arose from the mis-translation of the KJV. Rather, only now is the Sabbath introduced into God's redemptive plans for man. In the giving of the Manna is a picture of Christ. And, in the giving of the Sabbath in connection with the Manna is another picture of Christ. As He is our Bread, He is also our Rest. This is seen explicitly in Hebrews 4:3 -

"For we who have believed do enter that rest. Hebrews 4:3

By faith in Christ, our heavenly Bread, we enter into God's eternal rest, pictured by the giving of the Sabbath. It is only a picture.

^{23 (con't)} Bake what you will bake today, and boil what you will boil; and lay up for yourselves all that remains, to be kept until morning.'"

The Hebrew here is more expressive than our words. It reads "baking you shall bake and boiling you shall boil." In this thought is more than just instruction for the Manna though. There is also a hint as to the unique nature of the substance. It wasn't just something that one would eat uncooked.

It was also something that could be cooked in several ways. It could be baked or boiled. This means that it could be used as a base for other things like the addition of spices or sauces. One can bake bread, but boiling bread isn't something we think of doing.

The nature of the Manna then shows that it could meet many different culinary needs and desires for the people to keep them from getting tired of the same thing. And yet, that is something they will actually complain about in the time ahead.

Moses' instructions here are given for them to do all of the work for Saturday on Friday. In doing so, they would be able to keep the Sabbath holy to the Lord. Everything that "remains" would be kept for the following day. The Hebrew word for "remains" is adaph. It is the second use of it now in the Bible.

The first was in verse 18 and showed that there was no excess after the people gathered the Manna. Now it is used to show that there was not only excess, but an entire day's worth of excess. It is a specific, miraculous exemption to the standard expected for the other five days.

²⁴ So they laid it up till morning, as Moses commanded; and it did not stink, nor were there any worms in it.

Again we see the miracle of the Manna. It was either a miracle that caused the leftovers to stink through disobediently keeping them when they shouldn't, or it was a miracle to keep the leftovers from stinking when they were obedient.

I showed in the previous sermon that it was a miracle that the Manna was caused to stink through disobedience. Thus it would picture our walk with Christ being corrupted through disobedience.

Christ is pure and undefiled. It is we who cause defilement through our sinful actions. Either way, a miracle occurred each week in the cycle of the lives of Israel during the time they received God's bread from heaven. As Matthew Poole comments on this verse -

"So great a difference there is between the doing of a thing upon God's command, and with his blessing, and the doing of the same thing against his will, and with his curse." Matthew Poole ²⁵ Then Moses said, "Eat that today, for today is a Sabbath to the LORD; today you will not find it in the field.

Again, there is no article in front of Sabbath. It simply says, "a Sabbath." However, this is the formal institution of the Sabbath for Israel as will be seen in the next verse, and so it actually precedes the giving of the law. It is implicitly so in several ways. First, through the giving of the name "Sabbath" to designate the day.

Second, because God provided in advance of the Sabbath for the Sabbath. And third, He directed that what was provided on Friday was to be prepared on Friday, in advance of the Sabbath. It is a picture of Christ coming after the giving of the law.

When He came, the law was annulled, and with it, the Sabbath day requirement was annulled. For now, the Lord expected rest when rest was given. The Geneva Bible states it this way -

"God took away the opportunity for their labour, to signify how holy he would have the Sabbath kept." Geneva

It should be noted here that eating is not considered work. That may sound obvious, but fasting which is mandated elsewhere in the Bible has a specific meaning and intent behind it. Israel was not expected to fast each Sabbath, but when they were told to fast, it became an additional precept, wholly unrelated to the Sabbath.

²⁶ Six days you shall gather it, but on the seventh day, the Sabbath, there will be none."

This verse confirms the thought that the first Sabbath wasn't a one-time occurrence. Rather it was to become the standard at all times and as long as the Manna was provided. However, it could be inferred at this point that the Sabbath was then only to be observed during that period when the Manna was given.

It would be an incorrect conclusion, as we know. But at the time, they wouldn't have known this. Hence, at the giving of the law, the Sabbath will be fully incorporated into what was expected of Israel, even apart from the times when Manna was given. Again, we might say now, "Who cares about that?"

But for Israel, all they have is an incremental giving of instructions as the Lord progressively reveals His intentions to the people. If the Manna ceased and no further definition of the Sabbath had been given, then there might be confusion as to whether they still needed the Sabbath or not.

Step by step, the Lord is methodically shaping Israel to become His obedient people. By giving them the Sabbath in connection to the giving of the Manna, He was preparing them for a time when the Sabbath would be required apart from the Manna.

Think about it! Which would have been easier for people to adjust to? Being given Manna and being told to prepare on Friday and then not work on Saturday, or simply being told to prepare food on Friday and not do anything on Saturday when houses were full of things they had stored up for through normal life?

The giving of the Manna for six days and withholding it on the seventh before entering a normal agricultural setting was a valuable preparation for the time when the Manna would no longer be provided. The wisdom of God is written all over this story.

Manna in the morning, what a wondrous sight

Day by day we get up and go into the field

And as occurs again, night after night

More is provided; a heavenly crop, a bountiful yield

And on the sixth day there is something even more

There is double the amount waiting for us to collect

It is a wondrous sight each Friday as we head out the door

Our Sabbath needs the Lord does never neglect

What a great God, one who provides a daily miracle

Our eyes behold what would otherwise not be believed!

*But through the gathering of the Manna, the data is empirical
Any worries about what to eat on the morrow are always relieved*

II. Israel called its name Manna (verses 27-31)

²⁷ Now it happened that some of the people went out on the seventh day to gather, but they found none.

This verse implies one of two things. Either one or more of the elders was negligent in giving the instructions to those below him, or the people didn't listen to the elders when they were instructed concerning what to do. One way or the other, there is either negligence or disobedience involved.

And either way, it is a reflection of the offenders' attitude towards the Lord. We can very easily make this account into a useful example for us. There are churches all over the world whose preachers and teachers fail to convey the proper counsel of the Lord from His word.

That reflects an uncaring attitude by the one who is responsible for the people below him. It also shows disrespect for the sanctity of the word of the Lord. This in turn shows an uncaring attitude about his relationship with the Lord.

Or, it could be that the preacher or teacher is both capable and faithful and he diligently puts forth sound doctrine for those under his care. And yet, there may be some in his flock who simply disregard what they have heard. This shows an uncaring attitude towards the elder and the same towards the Lord and His word.

There are obvious variations on both scenarios, but we should honestly evaluate ourselves in relation to the word of the Lord from time to time. The care we show for His word is reflective of our ultimate concern about our relationship with Him. What a terrible thing to face up to on that great Day when we stand before Him and give an account of how we mistreated His superior word!

Concerning this act of disobedience on this first Sabbath, what is most surprising, and which is the exception rather than the rule, is that with the disobedience against a new commandment, there is no display of wrath upon the offenders. The Lord shows restraint towards these disobedient people. But, the next verse shows us that He, in fact, does care...

28 And the LORD said to Moses, "How long do you refuse to keep My commandments and My laws?"

This is a stinging rebuke framed in the form of a question. The first time the Lord asked such a question was through Moses to the defiant Pharaoh -

"Thus says the LORD God of the Hebrews: 'How long will you refuse to humble yourself before Me? Let My people go, that they may serve Me.'
Exodus 10:3

It is as if the spirit of Pharaoh is dwelling in the people whom He delivered from Pharaoh. And it will continue to be seen in them almost constantly in the pages of the Bible. The next time this form of question is given will be in Numbers, after the giving of the law and as the people are being readied for entry into Canaan -

"Then the LORD said to Moses: 'How long will these people reject Me? And how long will they not believe Me, with all the signs which I have performed among them?'" Numbers 14:11

Because of the rebellion, the Lord sentences the congregation to wander aimlessly in the wilderness until their bodies fall dead. Only two of them over the age of 20 will be spared because they defended the honor of the Lord. All the others perished without ever reaching the Land of Promise.

²⁹ See! For the LORD has given you the Sabbath;

The translation here follows the Hebrew properly. Reu or "see" is exactly what is being relayed. He is telling them that they are to perceive that the Sabbath has been given for a reason. It is for the people because they are His people. As I noted from Exodus 31 earlier, it was to be a sign that they were the people of the Lord.

Even though that hasn't been stated to them yet, it is implicit in the fact that they are there with Him and He has given it to them. The Egyptians aren't there, the Chinese aren't there, and the people of Zimbabwe aren't there. He is with Israel and He has given them ha'shabbat, or "the Sabbath," for a reason.

It is now the first time in the Bible that the Sabbath has been used with a definite article, once again confirming that this is a new thing which has been introduced and which is now specifically defined by the Lord for the people. It has gone from the general to the specific. A new ordinance has been instituted for them.

²⁹ (con't) therefore He gives you on the sixth day bread for two days.

What was implicit is now explicit. It is as if he is knocking on their gulgoleth (their skulls) and saying, "Hellooo, anyone home. I have given you bread for two days for a reason. I even told you the reason and what to do about it. Let's go through this step by step..."

"Did I give you bread for two days any other day? No? Oh. Ok. And did I give you two days of bread on the sixth day? Yes? Good! And did I tell you that I wouldn't give you any bread on the seventh day? Yes. So why would you go out looking for bread on the seventh day? Your new name is Filbert, because you're a nut. Now listen closely Fil, because I have some instructions for you..."

²⁹ (con't) Let every man remain in his place; let no man go out of his place on the seventh day."

Very few translations of these words convey the idea they relay properly. Two different words are translated as "place." The ISV and a few others show the distinction. It says, "Let each person stay where he is; let no one leave his place on the seventh day."

The first word is tahtaw which means "under." The phrase says shebu ish tahtaw - "sitting man under himself." It gives the idea of staying put. The second word is maqom which means "place." It says al yetse ish mimmeqomow - "not let man go out of his place."

There is a spirit and an intent that the people were to rest. However, there is a point to which these words were taken to absurdity. There are accounts of people having fallen down on the Sabbath and refused to get back up, lest they defile it. But in order to fall, they had to be up in the first place!

The Sabbath will be addressed and readdressed in the Old Testament, but it will be Jesus who truly defines what the giving of the Sabbath meant. In Mark 2, He says this -

"The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath. ²⁸ Therefore the Son of Man is also Lord of the Sabbath." Mark 2:27

In the completion of His work, fulfilling the law, He is now our rest. The Son of Man is the Lord of the Sabbath and we are in Him when we receive Him as Lord. Therefore, in Him, we enter our rest - a rest which truly was made for man.

This might be a bit complicated, but a picture is being made here that we shouldn't miss. The Lord created Adam on the sixth day and it says in Genesis 2:8 that He then placed him in the Garden of Eden. It implies that he was made outside the garden and then placed in it.

The word used to describe placing him in the garden is yanakh. It carries the idea of "being set" and means the same as the word nuakh which means "rest." It is then the same word used in verses 23 and 24 here for laying up the bread for the Sabbath.

Here we are being given a picture. God "rested" the man in the garden and this bread is being "rested" for the Sabbath, the day of rest. What we lost in the Garden of Eden, God's rest, is being pictured here in the weekly Sabbath observance for Israel and which finds its fulfillment in Christ.

Again, Hebrews 4:3 is the key to this lovely picture - "For we who have believed do enter that rest." It is a verse we should memorize and never forget. The picture was given for us to see and grasp today, while the instruction was finally obeyed by the people...

³⁰ So the people rested on the seventh day.

This verse uses the verb form of the word shabath which conveys the idea of ceasing or desisting. The people ceased from looking for Manna on the seventh day. Again, it is a prophetic picture of redemptive history. Man had searched for heaven's bread but it was out of our reach.

However, the Bread was provided in Christ. For those who have believed, we have received heaven's Bread and have ceased from looking any further for it. For those who haven't, they are still searching. But, in the millennium He will sit on His throne and the nations will stream to Him.

The six days of the week look forward to the seventh day of rest, just as the six thousand years of man under labor look forward to the last thousand years of rest under Christ. Verse 30 is given to show us Christ. It is offset to show us the marvelous picture of what He has done for us and what He will do for the world at large. Simply amazing!

Although they made no connection at all to Christ, Keil and Delitzsch say this about the gathering of the Manna -

"Through the commandments which the Israelites were to keep in relation to the manna, this gift assumed the character of a temptation, or test of their obedience and faith." Keil and Delitzsch

They are exactly right and it is just what we are expected to accept in relation to our spiritual lives as humans. We cannot seize heaven, nor can we work for it. We must be obedient to the word of God and demonstrate faith in Christ.

The bread and the rest are completely tied together in this account because they both picture Christ and His work. If we have the Bread, we also have the Rest. If we lack one, we lack both. It breaks my heart that Seventh Day Adventists like Ben Carson have missed this. They have missed Christ.

³¹ And the house of Israel called its name Manna.

I explained this in last week's sermon. The name is actually Man, not Manna. The name Manna comes from the Greek translation of the Old Testament. In Hebrew, man does not mean "what." The meaning of the name is not agreed upon, but the name is Man.

^{31 (con't)} And it was like white coriander seed, and the taste of it was like wafers made with honey.

The word for coriander seed is only used twice in the Bible and both times it is used to describe Manna. All translations agree that it is coriander, but some scholars don't. However, it still is sufficient to describe the size of it, which is small and round.

Later in Numbers it will also describe it as resembling bdellium, a whitish transparent wax-like resin. Along with the other images given, we can have a pretty good idea of what it looked like.

As coriander seed is small and unnoticeable, it forms a picture of Christ - small in the eyes of the world and yet the only Source of true nourishment for the world. The color white may be used to describe Him as well. In the Song of Solomon, a poem about Solomon and his bride, picturing Christ and the church, we read -

"My beloved is white and ruddy,
Chief among ten thousand." Song of Solomon 5:10

And interestingly, we've gone through over 2500 hundred years of human history so far, but the sense of taste in the verb form has never been mentioned until now. Meals have been cooked and consumed and fruits and grains have been eaten in the Bible's pages, but until now, the mentioning of the ability to taste has been left off.

Manna is described as having the taam, or taste, of wafers with honey. But if you think of it, if you didn't know what wafers and honey tasted like, you'd be kind of in the dark about the taste of Manna. However, honey is one of those foods that is found pretty much everywhere and throughout the entire world.

This is because honey bees have been domesticated in all places. Further, honey doesn't spoil and so it can be transported anywhere. This probably isn't coincidence. The taste of the very substance which is described as "bread from heaven," and which pictures Jesus Christ, is pretty much universally known.

And therefore, we have another revelation from God's word. The word is used to describe Jesus and it is said to be "sweeter than honey" to the mouth. Jesus is the subject of the word and is described in picture through the Manna as having the taste of honey. It is like a package which has been wrapped for the people of the world, even with a beautiful bow on top of it.

I will rest on the seventh day, in the presence of my love

Trusting in Him I will obey, I - His precious turtledove

He has given me bread to sustain me in His rest

I am filled with His goodness and have not a care

My tormented soul He has caressed

No more worries shall be found in there

*I will eat of the Manna, heaven's tasty bread
And sing praises in my rest to the Lord
I have not a trouble or a care, but instead
I am comforted as I sit and read His word*

*I have entered His rest; my soul has found a home
There at my Savior's breast; never again shall I roam*

III. An Omer for Your Generations (verses 32-35)

³² Then Moses said, "This is the thing which the LORD has commanded: 'Fill an omer with it, to be kept for your generations, that they may see the bread with which I fed you in the wilderness, when I brought you out of the land of Egypt.'"

The last five verses of this chapter were actually written by Moses, prior to his death and before the Israelites entered the Land of Promise. The Lord told him that they were to fill "the omer" with Manna. There is a definite article in front of the word "omer."

Although no commentary I read noted this, because of the article, and because of the words of verse 36 to come, I would suggest that "the omer" is referring to the exact measuring device that was used to establish what an omer is.

In other words, specific measuring devices for these amounts were maintained so that any deviations or cheaters could be challenged by comparing against the known standard maintained by the priests. "The omer" then is the standard by which all other omers were to be compared.

It was this particular omer which was used for measuring the Manna, and thus it is the perfect picture of Christ as the full and perfect measure of what sustains us from day to day. The omer for perfectly filling the hungry man equates to Christ for perfectly filling the hungry soul.

³³ And Moses said to Aaron, “Take a pot and put an omer of manna in it, and lay it up before the LORD, to be kept for your generations.”

From this verse, we also know that this omer of Manna was collected prior to Numbers 33:38 which is where Aaron's death and burial is recorded. That was in the 40th year after leaving Egypt and just before the recording of the book of Deuteronomy.

After his instruction from the Lord for the Manna to be collected, Moses in turn instructed Aaron to take the omer and put it in a pot. The reason for this might not seem evident, but it is explicitly stated in the verse - it was to be laid up before the Lord.

Only Aaron was allowed to enter the holy of holies in the tabernacle. It was a right that even Moses was not ordained for. Therefore, and for this reason, we are given the minute details of what has transpired. The Lord spoke to Moses and Moses instructed that the Manna be collected for this special purpose.

And then he instructed Aaron to take what was collected and place it in a pot because he was the one authorized to comply with the directive. This pot in which the omer was placed was made of pure gold, as we learn from Hebrews 9:4. The pot used by Aaron is called a tsintseneth, a word used only here in the whole Bible.

It comes from, tšen, which means "thorn." Thus the Manna was to be adorned in a pure gold pot resembling a thorn. This then is a picture of Christ, the Bread of life, adorned in a crown of thorns.

According to Hebrews 9, this special jar was placed inside of the Ark of the Covenant. It is implied here that the bread in this golden pot would never corrupt throughout all generations. Thus it is a picture of the incorruptible Bread of life, Christ Jesus.

And this is confirmed by Paul's words in 1 Corinthians 10:3 concerning what is called "the spiritual food" that the Israelites fed on which, like the spiritual drink they drank, was Christ.

³⁴ As the LORD commanded Moses, so Aaron laid it up before the Testimony, to be kept.

Again, specificity is given here. The Lord commanded Moses, and Aaron completed the task. As the high priest, he is the human mediator for the people and the one to minister in the Holy of holies. And here it says he laid it up before the Testimony.

The wording is precise and it pictures Christ perfectly. The word for "laid it up" is the same word used in verses 23 & 24, yanakh, "to rest." The Manna is "rested" before, or literally, in the face of the Testimony, meaning the Ten Commandments.

This is the first reference to them in the Bible. In Hebrew, they are called eduth. Thus the Ark is called aron ha'eduth, or the Ark of the Testimony. In other words, the Ark contains the Testimony. We're still some chapters away from this, but the Ark in every detail pictures the Person and work of Christ - His life; His death.

As the Testimony is inside the Ark, it is a picture of Christ embodying the law. Therefore, the Manna being "rested" in the Ark next to the Testimony is again a picture of our "resting" in Him and what He has done. When we eat of the Manna, the Bread of Life then, as Colossians 3 says, our status before God changes -

"For you died, and your life is hidden with Christ in God." Colossians 3:3

We are literally, in the face of Christ, beholding Him through the gospel. This is stated by Paul in 2 Corinthians 4 -

"For it is the God who commanded light to shine out of darkness, who has shone in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." 2 Corinthians 4:6

Again, everything we have seen in today's verses keeps bringing us back to the fact that in Christ we have our rest because of His work. His body, His crown of thorns, and His fulfilling the law. Memorize Hebrews 4:3, think on it, ponder it, revel in it, and be confident in it. We are in Christ and we have received our rest - a rest promised from the very foundation of the world itself.

³⁵ And the children of Israel ate manna forty years, until they came to an inhabited land; they ate manna until they came to the border of the land of Canaan.

This would probably have been one of the last things ever written by Moses. The words of Deuteronomy were spoken to the people in the fortieth year, in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month. Sometime after that, as the forty-year period of wilderness time was ending, Moses then wrote these verses about the Manna.

There is no need to assume that someone else penned this after his death. Instead, he simply acknowledges that for the entire forty years when Israel was without a home, they were tended to by the Lord who brought them out of Egypt. In Joshua 5, the details of the ending of the miracle of the Manna are recorded -

"Now the children of Israel camped in Gilgal, and kept the Passover on the fourteenth day of the month at twilight on the plains of Jericho. ¹¹ And they ate of the produce of the land on the day after the Passover, unleavened bread and parched grain, on the very same day. ¹² Then the manna ceased on the day after they had eaten the produce of the land; and the children of Israel no longer had manna, but they ate the food of the land of Canaan that year." Joshua 5:10-12

Any later writer would have included that the Manna ceased, but this verse simply says that the Manna continued until they came to an inhabited land and to the border of Canaan, meaning the last spot where Moses stayed with Israel before his death.

He faithfully recorded the account and placed it here in Exodus 16 where it most perfectly fits with the pictures of Christ it is intended to make. Christ sustained their living bodies every step of the way.

And if this isn't a perfect picture of us, receiving our spiritual nourishment until we pass over Jordan and into the true Land of Promise, I can't think of anything else that would suffice. Every spiritual need we have is provided for in the Bread of life, Jesus our Lord, who is sufficient to nourish us until He delivers us unto our heavenly home.

36 Now an omer is one-tenth of an ephah.

This seems like an unusual way to end a chapter which is so wonderfully used to picture Christ. Why on earth would the Lord simply add on a verse which seems so unnecessary? There are at least two reasons for this that I can think of.

The first is that Moses is explaining the word now, and yet retroactively from the end of the wilderness journeys so that when it is never used again, the people would know what an omer is by volume. The second is dependent on the first reason. It is that the word omer, as a measurement, is used only six times in the Bible and all six times are in this chapter.

After this chapter, the term "one-tenth of an ephah" will be used to describe this measurement. Why would the Lord do this instead of simply carrying on with the set measurement known as an omer? The answer is, of course, Christ. The number six in the Bible is the number of man. EW Bullinger describes the number

"Six is either 4 plus 2, i.e., man's world (4) with man's enmity to God (2) brought in: or it is 5 plus 1, the grace of God made of none effect by man's addition to it, or perversion, or corruption of it: or it is 7 minus 1, i.e., man's coming short of spiritual perfection. In any case, therefore, it has to do with man; it is the number of imperfection; the human number; the number of MAN as destitute of God, without God, without Christ." E W Bullinger

An omer is what sustains a man for a day. Hence there are six mentions of the omer in the passage. But that is insufficient to sustain a man, isn't it. There are actually seven days in a week. What about the seventh day?

It is there, tucked away for us. When the omer is mentioned in verse 22 it says "two omers." Thus there is a hidden omer in the text. The miracle of the Manna is that because of the Man, Christ Jesus, there is always a sufficient amount of Bread to sustain us.

And because of the Man, Christ Jesus, we have now entered into God's rest. The hidden omer is always enough to sustain the people of God, because the hidden omer is our rest in Christ the Lord - having entered into His rest as have we, entering into it through faith in Him.

Never underestimate the marvel of what God has concealed in His word. It is beyond imagination. I am sure for every picture and detail that the Lord has revealed for this sermon, I've missed 20 more. This wondrous treasure we call the Holy Bible is truly God's majestic and superior word.

Now think of it... if God has put such tender and minute care into His word for us to see His Son, and people keep missing such details, even thousands of years after they were penned, then how much more do you think that He wants You to see the open and revealed message about His Son. It is a message of love and reconciliation. It is a message of hope for the weary human soul.

If you have never simply reached out and grasped this hope and made it a reality, let me tell you how you can - even today! Let me tell you about Jesus Christ the Lord...

Closing Verse: "There remains therefore a rest for the people of God. ¹⁰ For he who has entered His rest has himself also ceased from his works as God did from His." Hebrews 4:9

Next Week: Exodus 17:1-7 (Water from the Rock) (48th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Entering God's Rest

And so it was, on the sixth day
That they gathered twice as much bread
Two omers for each one, by the way
And all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses instead
Then he said to them, at his behest
“This is what the Lord has said, His spoken word:
‘Tomorrow is a Sabbath rest
A holy Sabbath to the Lord

Bake what you will bake today
And boil what you will boil
And lay up for yourselves all that remains, I say
To be kept until morning, and it won't spoil
So they laid it up till morning
As Moses commanded; as he did submit
And it did not stink
Nor were there any worms in it

Then Moses said, "Eat that today
For today is a Sabbath to the Lord
Today you will not find it in the field, I say
So do according to my word
Six days you shall gather it, but on the seventh day
The Sabbath, there will be none, so to you I say

Now it happened
That some of the people, out they went
On the seventh day to gather
But they found none, no Manna had been sent
And the Lord said to Moses, with no hems or haws
"How long do you refuse
To keep My commandments and My laws?
What is this disobedient path you choose?
See! For the Lord has given you the Sabbath
Therefore He gives you for two days on the sixth day bread
Let every man remain in his place
Let no man go out of his place on the seventh day instead

So the people rested on the seventh day
Because the Lord wanted it this way
And the house of Israel called its name Manna
And it was like white coriander seed

And the taste of it was like wafers made with honey
Sweet and tasty it was indeed
Then Moses said, "This is the thing
Which the Lord has commanded to do
'Fill an omer with it, to be kept for your generations
That they may see the bread with which I fed you

It was there in the wilderness, from my open hand
When I brought you out of Egypt the land
And Moses said to Aaron
"Take a pot and put an omer of Manna in it
And lay it up before the Lord
To be kept for your generations, not just a minute

As the Lord commanded Moses, he did relay
So Aaron laid it up before the Testimony
To be kept just as the Lord did say
And the children of Israel ate Manna forty years
Until they came to an inhabited land
They ate Manna until they came, surely with cheers
To the border of the land of Canaan, a sight so grand

Now an omer is one-tenth of an ephah, we are told
And that omer of Manna was kept in a pot of gold

What a marvelous passage of the Lord's tender care
Of the people He redeemed, Israel
Out in the wilderness is the place where These marvelous events occurred as the story does tell

The Manna fed them throughout those years
And the true Bread of life feeds us as well
So let us have no frets, worries, or fears
As we walk in this fallen world for a spell

Christ will surely bring us to the Promised Land
And when He does, it will be marvelously grand

Until that glorious, marvelous day
We will praise our God through Jesus the Lord
And we daily look to see what it does say
In His wondrous, superior word

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 17:1-7 (WATER FROM THE ROCK)

These seven short verses actually tie together with hundreds and hundreds of verses in the Bible. They are intricately woven together to show us marvelous things which the Lord did for His people, is doing for His people, and will do for His people.

We can only get an overall picture of this marvelous tapestry in a single sermon, but I hope you will appreciate that overall picture enough so that when you read the Bible on your own, and you come to a verse which ties together with this account, you can better understand the connection.

That is, of course, if you are taking the time to read your Bible. Read your Bible!

Text Verse: "And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding from the throne of God and of the Lamb." Revelation 22:1

We can't live long without water, this is certain. And yet, water for our physical bodies often only pictures water for our spiritual lives. What makes us think that we need the less important, physical water, but that we can go without the more important of the two - the spiritual water?

Are we that dull to the things of God that we could ever assume this is the case? The Bible shows us of our great need for the true, living water. And it does so often. Let us think on this as we read accounts such as the one we are looking at today.

It's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Why do You Tempt the Lord (verses 1-3)

1 Then all the congregation of the children of Israel set out on their journey from the Wilderness of Sin,

The previous verses brought us the manna to sustain the lives of the people - their bread from heaven. This passage will now enter into a similar situation concerning water. As always, the names of the places are important to consider and certainly each was given based on what happened.

In other words, the names of the places are not necessarily names that existed already, but which are given based on circumstances that arose after their arrival. The Wilderness of Sin is mentioned here again. The name Sin means "thorn," as in a thorn bush, and is a shortened form of Sinai.

The name "Wilderness of Sin" hasn't been used since Exodus 16:1, where it was said to be between Elim and Sinai. From this point, it says that they set out on their journey. The word for "journey" here is different than the more common word.

It is massa. This is the second of twelve times it will be used; all of them are in the books of Moses - the first being in Genesis 13:3 and the last in Deuteronomy 10:1. It means "pulling up, breaking (camp), setting out, a journey." Instead of it indicating just going somewhere, it indicates a station to station move.

There is a difference between going on a journey from your house to North Carolina and then back to your house, than packing up your belongings, selling your house, and moving to North Carolina. The second is more of the idea of this word massa. The camp is being broken down and the people are moving on. They are as pilgrims awaiting their arrival in the Land of Promise.

1 (con't) according to the commandment of the LORD,

The Hebrew literally says, "according to the mouth of Yehovah." He opened His mouth in instruction and the people moved according to that. This doesn't mean that the pillar isn't with them, but that the directions to follow the pillar are according to His spoken word. We can reasonably assume the pillar is with them.

It needs to be considered that everything which will take place then is according to His intentions. He has instructed the people, He has led them, and He will take them, intentionally, to a place where there is no water. We can never derive from the account the notion that any of what happens does so apart from His specific intent.

And so everything that does happen is given to show us a picture of something else. There is no reason to think otherwise, and there is only the complete assurance that this is the case. This will be seen more exactly in the next words...

1 (con't) and camped in Rephidim;

It is accepted that Rephidim is today known as a place called Wady Feiran. The detailed record of the wilderness wanderings in Numbers 33 says this about the travels of the Israelites -

"They moved from the Red Sea and camped in the Wilderness of Sin.
¹² They journeyed from the Wilderness of Sin and camped at Dophkah.
¹³ They departed from Dophkah and camped at Alush. ¹⁴ They moved from Alush and camped at Rephidim, where there was no water for the people to drink." Numbers 33:11-13

Every scholar that I read who commented on why this record in Exodus leaves off Dophkah and Alush said basically the same thing. Their answer is that "probably because nothing of moment took place at either." Adam Clarke et al

That seems like a copout. Rather than taking a negative view, I would choose to take a positive one and say that each place where something is recorded is because the Lord selected it to show us the work of Christ.

This is the first of five times that Rephidim will be mentioned in the Bible, and all of them will be in Exodus and Numbers. Rephidim is a plural noun which comes from the verb raphad which means "to spread (a bed)." And so by implication it means "to refresh" or "comfort." The word is used in the Song of Solomon in just this way -

"Sustain me with cakes of raisins,
Refresh me with apples,
For I am lovesick." Song of Solomon 2:5

Raphad's sole derivative is a feminine noun, rephida, which indicates a rest or support structure. That is used only once in the Bible, in the Song of Solomon as well -

He made its pillars of silver,
Its support of gold,

Its seat of purple,
Its interior paved with love
By the daughters of Jerusalem. SS 3:10

Chapter 16 began in Elim which pictured the message of Christ which went out by the mouth of the 12 apostles and the 70 disciples. From there, it went to the Wilderness of Sin, the Wilderness of the Thorn, where the quail and the manna were received.

That pictured Christ's body being given as flesh to eat and bread to sustain. Now they leave that area and arrive in Rephidim. What picture is then being made? A clue is found in the finishing words of verse 1...

¹ (con't) but *there was no water for the people to drink.

Again, water is the issue, just as it was at Marah where the bitter waters were made sweet. However, the problem isn't that there is bitter water; it is that there is no water. One thing is for sure; in the dry wilderness life cannot endure long without water.

But let us not forget that it is the Lord who directed them here and He has done it for a reason.

² Therefore the people contended with Moses, and said, "Give us water, that we may drink."

Charles Ellicott notes -

"...we cannot be surprised at their "chiding." Nothing but a very lively faith, or an utter resignation to the will of God, could have made a people patient and submissive in such an extremity." Ellicott

It is hard to disagree with this. We are creatures which are tied to bodies which easily tire, quickly run dry, and are constantly in need of food. If we don't get sleep, water, or food, we can quickly change into a being that doesn't resemble our normal selves at all. Just ask my wife. The Israelites were no different.

Add into this a large multitude that tire at differing rates and you can see how some would wear out and start grumbling more quickly. Once a grumble starts, it rapidly spreads from one to all. In the case of walking among wadis, or dry river beds, there would be an even more pronounced feeling of misery.

Wadis imply that there was once water in abundance flowing right at their feet. Along the sides of the wadis, there would be plants which had gathered up the remaining waters after the torrents had subsided. In essence, there would be - "signs of water, water everywhere, yet not a drop to drink." (Pulpit)

However, there is also the truth that the Lord had already showed them amazing acts of His power and gracious kindness. Would the people remember these lessons longer than the strain of lacking basic needs? Unfortunately, "No." As Albert Barnes notes -

"It is a general characteristic of the Israelites that the miracles, which met each need as it arose, failed to produce a habit of faith." Albert Barnes

And this is exactly what the Lord had purposed for them. He was leading them to the extreme points of their physical existence in order to produce a habit of faith and complete reliance on Him. And time and time again, they failed to realize this.

As these physical examples are intended to reveal spiritual pictures of Christ, then we should obviously look at the practice of our faith and see if it is, in fact, sound. Do we trust the Lord with each step of our walk?

I've noticed several types of people who post their lives openly on Facebook for the whole world to see. There are those who post how excited they are about going to church on Sunday morning. They then come home and post about the great "portion" of the Holy Spirit they got and how super life is.

On Monday, they are posting photos of piles of money that say, "If you like this photo, comment 'Amen,' and share it in the next ten minutes. You will receive a large sum in your bank account." The expectation of the god Fortune has replaced reliance on the Lord.

By Tuesday morning, they are complaining about the ills of life, the things they lack, and the general drag that they feel as they trudge through the week. On Wednesday, they're angry because they didn't win the lottery. The pastor had told them that they would be blessed and they would reap a thousand-fold if they gave, and they were sure that it meant right now and in a big way.

They even bought the tube of miracle anointing oil at the church lobby for $25.00 and anointed the door posts of their house and their checkbook with oil. Why was the Lord neglecting them? The next Sunday, they start the cycle again.

And then, there are those who post about being excited that they are leaving for church. They come home and post about the great lessons from Scripture that they assimilated into who they are. They post on Monday about the excellent devotional they read.

They post on Tuesday about their brother who was just diagnosed with terminal cancer, but how thankful they are for having him in their life and about the honor of being there for him during the ordeal. On Wednesday, they post about the fantastic Bible study they went to and how relevant God's word is to their own situation.

On Friday, they post that their house burned down and the bank lost all their money, but how grateful they are that the Lord is with them through it all. They're thankful for their church and the people they attend with and in the outpouring of support and prayers they have received.

It is all a matter of perspective and the Lord is trying to get Israel to take the right perspective. And in His lessons to them, He is asking us to do the same. He has given us examples of what pleases Him and what angers Him.

² (con't) So Moses said to them, "Why do you contend with me? Why do you tempt the LORD?"

Moses responds that the people are acting inappropriately in two different ways. First he asks them "Why do you contend with me?" Here he uses the same word which was used at the beginning of verse 2 - riv. It means "to contend or quarrel." It is what the story says they did and this is what Moses confirms they are doing.

However, instead of stopping there, he elevates the severity of their complaints to the appropriate level of the offense. They may be quarreling with him, but they are "tempting" the Lord. Here he uses the word nasah. It means "to put to the test, prove, etc."

It is the same word that the Lord has used twice so far concerning His attempt to mold and shape the people into an obedient group who would be willing to simply trust Him -

"There He made a statute and an ordinance for them, and there He tested them, ²⁶ and said, 'If you diligently heed the voice of the LORD your God and do what is right in His sight, give ear to His commandments and keep all His statutes, I will put none of the diseases on you which I have brought on the Egyptians. For I am the LORD who heals you.'" Exodus 15:25-26

"Then the LORD said to Moses, 'Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you. And the people shall go out and gather a certain quota every day, that I may test them, whether they will walk in My law or not.'" Exodus 16:4

They had been explicitly told that He was testing them for obedience and trust, and yet Moses now shows them that they have instead put the Lord to the test. The words are valuable to evaluate because it shows us more clearly the situation at hand. John Gill rightly explains their situation -

"...they tried his power, whether he could give them water in a dry and desert land; and they tried his patience by chiding with his servants, and showing so much distrust of his power and providence, of his goodness and faithfulness; and by their wretched ingratitude and rebellion they tempted him to work a miracle for them." John Gill

Let us ask ourselves, "Are we receiving the tests of the Lord and using them to mold our faith, or are we testing the Lord by failing to see His hand of grace upon us, even in times of extreme trial?"

³ And the people thirsted there for water, and the people complained against Moses, and said, “Why is it you have brought us up out of Egypt, to kill us and our children and our livestock with thirst?”

The truth of the record of the Exodus can be implied from verses like this. Israel was in bondage in Egypt and eventually ended up in the Land of Canaan. This we know. Had they left Egypt, the natural thing to do would be to head straight for Canaan, they didn't. Instead, they went the opposite way.

When they left, it was apparently without enough water and food for even a few days, much less a long trek. Only a fool would do something like that. How much more foolish would be an entire congregation of people to do it. One may find something to sustain life, but two million could never.

And to exacerbate the situation, children and livestock came along too. The only reasonable explanation for the entire scenario is that the Lord led them, they followed, and they were completely dependent upon Him from the very start. If this isn't what happened, then the story is simply a fabrication about a most foolish group with an even more foolish leader.

But it is not. And yet, despite this, it is the exact kind of accusation that they now make. They had left Egypt unprepared as if the intent was to kill them. If it were only Moses there, the allegation would seem reasonable.

But Moses is not alone. If they would simply evaluate the situation, they would be willing to pray in faith instead of argue in the flesh. However, the lack of water which was not only destroying them, but also their children and the livestock, was too great an affliction for them to see beyond.

Surely, of all of the afflictions we can face, thirst is one of the worst. The Lord was beaten, ripped, and nailed to a tree, but the only agony that He called out as He hung there dying was, "I thirst." And like Him, the people are so suffering.

Were they justified in their anger? In the body, yes; in the spirit, no. They still lacked the faith needed as a group of people to understand that the Lord alone directs each moment's existence for each and every soul. It appears that as a group of people, they never really acquired this faith. The 78th Psalm speaks of their situation -

"He split the rocks in the wilderness,
And gave them drink in abundance like the depths.

¹⁶ He also brought streams out of the rock,
And caused waters to run down like rivers.

¹⁷ But they sinned even more against Him
By rebelling against the Most High in the wilderness.

¹⁸ And they tested God in their heart
By asking for the food of their fancy.

¹⁹ Yes, they spoke against God:
They said, 'Can God prepare a table in the wilderness?

²⁰ Behold, He struck the rock,
So that the waters gushed out,
And the streams overflowed.

Can He give bread also?
Can He provide meat for His people?'

²¹ Therefore the LORD heard this and was furious;
So a fire was kindled against Jacob,

And anger also came up against Israel,
²² Because they did not believe in God,

And did not trust in His salvation.

²³ Yet He had commanded the clouds above,
And opened the doors of heaven,

²⁴ Had rained down manna on them to eat,
And given them of the bread of heaven.
²⁵ Men ate angels' food;
He sent them food to the full." Psalm 78:15-25

*If we just had water, we could go on
But instead we are out here dying of thirst
Our lives are ebbing away and our strength it almost gone
Things are much worse now than when at first*

*When we were in Egypt we at least had life
Now only death seems to await us in this dry land
With Moses we have quarreled, between us is strife
But he says we are only tempting the Lord's gracious hand*

*Where are the Lord's grace and His gracious hand?
We see the pillar but our souls are dry and parched
Yes the pillar is there, but we cannot understand
Why to this barren place, He has led as we have marched*

II. You Shall Strike the Rock (verses 4-7)

⁴ So Moses cried out to the LORD, saying,

The notable thing about Moses is that he first defended the Lord in the eyes of the people and he then immediately elevated the people's request to the Lord.

There is no hint of him either speaking highly of himself, such as "You dare to resist me, the Lord's representative!" Nor does he have Aaron come to his rescue either, "You dare to resist Moses, the Lord's representative."

Instead, he defended the Lord's integrity and then went straight to the Lord in petition. And his petition refrains from any accusation against the Lord...

4 (con't) "What shall I do with this people?"

Moses doesn't ask, "What have You done to this people?" He doesn't ask, "What are You going to do for this people?" And, he doesn't say, "You have left this people in a bad situation." Instead, he says, "What shall I do with this people?" He never finds fault in the Lord. He instead asks for directions which he can carry out.

It is for such reasons as this that Numbers 12:3 will say, "Now the man Moses was very humble, more than all men who were on the face of the earth." His humility is beautifully evident whether he is addressing the people below him or the God who is above him.

4 (con't) They are almost ready to stone me!"

This is the first time in recorded history that stoning is mentioned as an individual punishment. The stoning of all of the people of Israel was mentioned in 8:26, but this verse shows that it was not just a way of harassing others. Instead, it is implied that it was a known form of execution.

His words to the Lord more accurately say, "Yet a little and they will stone me." He was on the verge of being stoned and even the slightest amount of time or a single misstep in his interactions with them would result in his death.

But even in these few words we can get a look into the human condition. How often we are aggressive at attacking others over wrongs, but slow in thanking them for their good deeds! How slowly will we respond positively to kindness, and how quickly we will respond negatively to adversity!

So far since the night of the Passover and the departure from Rameses, the only note of thanks or praise from the people is found in the Song of Moses in Exodus 15. It was a song penned by Moses and which the people then joined in.

But apart from that, there is no note of either thanks or praise for the many miracles thus far evinced by the Lord for the people. As the Geneva Bible comments on this verse -

"How ready the people are to slay the true prophets for their own purposes and how slow they are to take up God's cause against his enemies and false prophets." Geneva

⁵ And the LORD said to Moses, "Go on before the people, and take with you some of the elders of Israel.

In Numbers 20, Moses will again bring water from a rock for the people. However, at that time, he is told to gather the congregation together to see the miracle. Here, Moses is only told to take of the elders of Israel. There are various opinions on why only they were chosen.

One is that the congregation was ready to stone him and so he left only with the elders. That makes no sense at all. If he told them what he was going to do, they would have waited to see if he could do it. Another view is that the distance was too far for the weary people to travel and so they left them there to accomplish the feat.

But that doesn't fit either, because the same weary people would still have to travel to where the water came from. That is unless the water flowed all the way to where they are. But it says nothing of that. The elders are being singled out from the congregation for a reason. Only they are to witness the miracle.

⁵ (con't) Also take in your hand your rod with which you struck the river, and go.

Again, as has been seen in the past, Moses is specifically instructed about the rod, or matteh, which he is to take with him. It is the rod of God which he had with him at the burning bush. This time, however, it specifically identifies it as the "rod with which you struck the river."

One scholar says that this could mean either the Nile or the Red Sea, because the finger of the Red Sea could be called in Hebrew ha'yor, or "the river." But this is incorrect. Moses did not strike the waters of the Red Sea; he stretched the rod out over them. However, when in Egypt at the first plague of blood, we read this in chapter 7 -

"So he lifted up the rod and struck the waters that were in the river, in the sight of Pharaoh and in the sight of his servants. And all the waters that were in the river were turned to blood." Exodus 7:20

The same rod which brought death to the river when striking the waters will be used to bring forth a river of the water of life for the people when he strikes the rock.

⁶ Behold, I will stand before you there on the rock in Horeb;

The Lord has already selected the place and the miracle. The reason for the route, the reason for leaving out the interim stops from the narrative, and the reason for waiting until the people were almost completely parched - the reason for all of it belongs to the Lord. He has organized every detail to reveal Jesus.

He has promised now to "stand before" Moses. The pillar, which is the Lord, will stop and stand on the very rock chosen for the miracle. And it is a specific rock. In the Hebrew it says ha'tsur, "the rock" not "a rock."

This is the first of 77 times that this word tsur, or rock, will be used in the Old Testament. Numerous times, it is used to speak specifically of the Lord as the Rock. The last time it is used in the OT is in Habakkuk where it is used in just that manner -

"Are You not from everlasting,
O LORD my God, my Holy One?
We shall not die.
O LORD, You have appointed them for judgment;
O Rock, You have marked them for correction." Habakkuk 1:12

Even the coming Messiah is called by this term in Isaiah 8:14. That verse is then used to speak of Jesus in the New Testament in both Romans 9 and in 1 Peter 2:8. Thus the Rock is Christ. This rock is said by the Lord to be in Horeb. This is now the second time Horeb is mentioned in the Bible.

The first was when Moses came to Horeb, the mountain of "the" God in Exodus 3:1. Horeb means "Arid" or "Desert" and thus what we have is a marvelous miracle coming. The words are precise and they have been selected carefully to reveal the Lord's greatness.

6 (con't) and you shall strike the rock, and water will come out of it, that the people may drink."

Like the waters of the Nile, Moses is told to strike the rock. Instead of blood, water will come from "the rock" in the Arid place. And it won't just be a small amount, but enough so "that the people may drink." Two million people, plus innumerable animals are waiting anxiously for relief. There will be enough to satisfy all.

The Lord is the God of miracles, not just enough to tease, but to fully satisfy. If He can bring such volumes of water from a solid rock, imagine what He can do for you!

6 (con't) And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel.

The word for "sight" is ayin, literally "eyes." With their own eyes they beheld the marvelous sight of water gushing from solid rock. There was nothing hidden, there was no sleight of hand, and there was no magician's trick.

The hand of Moses is used as the principle cause of the action, the rod of God is used as the instrumental cause which brought it about, and the glory of God is the final cause - the end purpose of what has transpired.

Moses is thus again shown to be the Lord's representative, the rod is shown again to possess the ability to accomplish the Lord's miracles, and God is both pleased to care for His people and to receive their praise through His mighty act of power.

⁷ So he called the name of the place Massah and Meribah,

It is rare for a place to be given two distinct names in the Bible based on one occurrence. But the Lord determined that it would be so in this case. The name Massah means "testing" and it comes from the verb nasah which was used in verse 2 to describe the tempting or testing of the Lord by the people.

The name Meribah means "quarreling" and it comes from the verb riv which was also used in verse 2 to describe the quarreling of the people against Moses. The fact that two names are given for the one location is then intended to further elevate Moses' standing among the people.

Massah is named first as it was tempting against the Lord. Meribah is named second because it was in contention against Moses. Later, in Deuteronomy 6:16, this place will only be called Massah because it only refers to the people's tempting of the Lord -

"You shall not tempt the LORD your God as you tempted Him in Massah."
Deuteronomy 6:16

Both names are exactly explained in the final portion of verse 7 and the final words of the account -

7 (fin) because of the contention of the children of Israel, and because they tempted the LORD, saying, "Is the LORD among us or not?"

The passage seems to end on a sad note, but it doesn't really. It instead is looking back on the greatness of what God did despite the complaints of the people. They had questioned if the Lord was among them or not, and He confirmed that He was.

But only the elders saw it directly. The others didn't. Why was this the case? What is the Lord trying to tell us through this? Stay tuned for an explanation of the passage after a short poetic break...

*Take in your hand the rod and go
To a place I have chosen in a dry and barren land
I will show you the spot from where the water will flow
And from this marvel, future generations will understand*

*I will stand upon the Rock for you to see
A Rock hard and dry will come to life
You shall come to the place, even unto Me
And with the rod, you shall end this people's strife*

*They will drink of the water, to re-nourish their soul
All will be satisfied, to them life I will give
I will prove to them I have it all under control
By water from the Rock, their souls shall live*

III. A Wonderful Picture

The account of the water from the rock is memorable on its surface. If you tell it to a child, they will listen with wide-eyed wonder that such a thing could ever happen! But it is also an account which is intended to show us more than just the surface.

It is meant to show us the problem with man and how God fixed it. It follows naturally after the story of the quail and the Manna. Christ had to go to the cross in order for us to dine on His body - His flesh, the quail; His body, the bread which is the Manna.

The account is said to have happened at Rephidim. It seems the name was changed after the account to Massah and Meribah, but it was in fact named because of the account. They are different areas. The name Rephidim gives the idea of Rest and also Support.

The people received their rest and their support from the waters, even if it was contention and testing which occurred before the waters came. As the previous story pictured the death of the Lord in the giving of the Manna, this picture follows naturally from that same act.

The people thirsted in the wilderness for water, just as David thirsted for the truth of God in his own dry and thirsty land -

"O God, You are my God;
Early will I seek You;
My soul thirsts for You;
My flesh longs for You
In a dry and thirsty land
Where there is no water.
² So I have looked for You in the sanctuary,
To see Your power and Your glory." Psalm 63:1, 2

David lived in a fallen world and longed for the time when he would see the power and the glory of the Lord in His sanctuary. The people of Israel then picture us - the people of God - complaining of thirst in the same dry and parched existence.

But the Lord is always ready to provide for His people. And so He directs Moses and the elders to go to a particular rock where He will, in fact, provide for the people. There He says that He will stand before him on "the" rock. Paul explains what that Rock is in the New Testament -

"For they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ." 1 Corinthians 10:4

The Bible scholars Keil and Delitzsch note that the Lord, standing before Moses upon the rock "signified the assistance of God." They then say this about the words l'phani and amad which are used to describe the Lord standing before Moses. These words -

"...frequently denote the attitude of a servant when standing before his master, to receive and execute his commands. Thus Jehovah condescended to come to the help of Moses, and assist His people with His almighty power."

In this then we see an act of God, where he condescends in a way which will be for the benefit of His people. It is a picture of the incarnation, when Christ condescended to become a Man and live as one of us in order to restore us to spiritual life.

Knowing that the Rock is Christ, one must ask, "Why were only the elders taken to witness this?" The answer is in who they must then picture. As the Rock is Christ, then these elders are those who saw Christ's work and can witness to what they saw. They are our elders in the faith, the apostles.

When the people are told about the water and where it came from, it will be an act of faith, not sight, to believe what they have been told. This then corresponds with what the New Testament says -

"For we walk by faith, not by sight." 2 Corinthians 5:7

We are to trust the words of the Bible for what they are. They are an eyewitness account of what Jesus Christ did. The apostles saw, they testified, and now we must accept their words as they have been given.

And so Moses goes off with the elders and is told to strike the Rock with the rod of God. Moses, whose name means "He who draws out," is the principle cause of what will occur. He pictures Christ drawing out salvation for His people.

The rod is Christ, the power of God. It is the instrumental cause by which the water will come from the Rock. As Romans says -

"For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God to salvation for everyone who believes, for the Jew first and also for the Greek." Romans 1:16

The Rock is Christ, the material cause, by which salvation comes forth. The action of striking the Rock is the work of Christ, the efficient cause, by which the process is carried out. And the water is Christ, the final cause, by which salvation is accomplished and by which God is glorified. Every detail pictures Christ!

God sent his Son, the spiritual Rock to live among us. He was born without sin, and thus he was capable of drawing out salvation for His people, pictured by Moses - He who draws out. He lived under the law and died under the law - pictured by the Rod. His work in this is the process by which salvation was carried out.

He was smitten with the curse of the law, pictured by the striking of the rock with the rod by Moses. Not only was this pictured here, but it was later prophesied by Isaiah 700 years before Christ came. Using the same word, nakah, as when Moses struck the rock at Horeb, there in Isaiah 53 we read this -

"Surely He has borne our griefs
And carried our sorrows;
Yet we esteemed Him stricken,
Smitten by God, and afflicted." Isaiah 53:4

And from Him came the water by which we receive eternal life. As Jesus said to the people in John 7 -

"If anyone thirsts, let him come to Me and drink. ³⁸ He who believes in Me, as the Scripture has said, out of his heart will flow rivers of living water.'
³⁹ But this He spoke concerning the Spirit, whom those believing in Him would receive; for the Holy Spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified." John 7:37-39

This was the final cause. The water from the rock is the giving of the Spirit. It is the granting of eternal life, and it is the glory of God revealed in each of us. This is according to the words He spoke to the woman at the well in John 4 -

“Whoever drinks of this water will thirst again,¹⁴ but whoever drinks of the water that I shall give him will never thirst. But the water that I shall give him will become in him a fountain of water springing up into everlasting life.”

Out of the dry place, Horeb, came the living waters. Likewise, out of the Heavenly Mt. Zion, which also means "Dry Place" has come the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God. It is the Bible which testifies to the work of the Godhead - Father, Son, and Holy Spirit -in the great plan of redemption of fallen man.

It should be remembered though, that the Lord was very specific about calling the rod in Moses' hand, the "rod with which you struck the river." The same rod which brings forth life from the Rock can also bring forth death for those who reject the Rock. The law is either fulfilled in Christ or it goes unfulfilled in one without Christ. It is a lesson and a warning that we are to choose wisely.

In Isaiah 4, the same word, nakah, is used to describe what the Lord will do to those who reject Him -

"His delight is in the fear of the LORD,
And He shall not judge by the sight of His eyes,
Nor decide by the hearing of His ears;
⁴ But with righteousness He shall judge the poor,
And decide with equity for the meek of the earth;
He shall strike the earth with the rod of His mouth,
And with the breath of His lips He shall slay the wicked.
⁵ Righteousness shall be the belt of His loins,
And faithfulness the belt of His waist." Isaiah 11:3-5

In this passage we have a few simple verses about something that happened 3500 years ago, but which is actually an in-depth look into the very heart of God for those He loves. He sent His Son to be stricken so that we may live. Truly, what manner of love is this!

Let us never downplay the majesty of what He has done for us, and let us never cease to tell of His marvelous work to those still lost and thirsty in a dry and barren land. And maybe this is you. Maybe you have a thirst which just cannot be quenched. Let me then tell you about the water of life and how you too can drink of it freely.

Closing Verse: "And the Spirit and the bride say, 'Come!' And let him who hears say, 'Come!' And let him who thirsts come. Whoever desires, let him take the water of life freely." Revelation 1:16

Next Week: Exodus 17:8-16 (Yehovah Nissi - The Lord is My Banner) (49th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Water from the Rock

Then all the congregation

Of the children of Israel

Set out on their journey from the Wilderness of Sin

As the record of the story does tell
According to the commandment of the LORD
Yes, according to His spoken word
And camped in Rephidim where there would be rest, you'd think
But there was no water for the people to drink
Therefore the people contended with Moses, and said
“Give us water that we may drink or soon we will be dead
So Moses said to them this word
“Why do you contend with me?
Why do you tempt the LORD?”
This is utterly futile you see
And the people thirsted there for water
And the people complained against Moses, and said
“Why is it you have brought us up out of Egypt?
To kill us and our children and our livestock with thirst instead
So Moses cried out to the LORD, saying
“What with this people shall I do?
They are almost ready to stone me, I am relaying
And so for directions about this I am asking You
And the LORD said to Moses, so He did tell “Go on before the people, and take
With you some of the elders of Israel
A scene quite wonderful for them I will make
Also take in your hand your rod as I am telling you so

With which you struck the river, and go
Behold, I will stand before you there on the rock in Horeb
And you shall strike the rock, as I say
And water will come out of it
That the people may drink this very day
And Moses did so in the sight of the elders of Israel
The water is Christ, as the Bible does tell
So he called the name of the place Massah and Meribah
Because of the contention of the children of Israel
And because they tempted the LORD
Saying, "Is the LORD among us or not, this to us please tell
How faithless we are, giving in to our weakness
And complaining against You Lord
Help us in our times of distress
To remember the promises found in Your word
Help us to praise You through every trial
And to give you the glory You are justly due
Give us hearts though the trials to smile
And to continue always to sing praises to You

Yes Lord! Thank You for our sure hope because of Jesus
Thank You for the marvelous things that You have done for us

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 17:8-16 (YEHOVAH NISSI - THE LORD IS MY BANNER)

The 7th of September was a tough day for me. It was the day I spent typing this sermon. There are a lot of names and places in these few verses and none of them are without significance. What the account pictures was eluding me and I was more caught up in the mechanical aspects of the passage and less in what it pictured.

But, God is good and He is good all the time. I went to one commentary on the passage outside of my regular sources of study and the line of reasoning that they gave was sufficient to direct me to an overall picture of what was being presented. From there, the mechanical details fell into beautiful pictures of Christ.

How the Lord can pack so much into just 9 verses is beyond me. And I fear that I've just touched on the magnificence of them. There are surely patterns in the letters - numerical and pictorial patterns. There are surely patterns in the structure of the verses as well. But those are left to be discovered by another. I am just pleased to have made it through the 7th of September without a broken brain vessel.

Text Verse: Then those who feared the LORD spoke to one another,
And the LORD listened and heard them;
So a book of remembrance was written before Him
For those who fear the LORD
And who meditate on His name.

¹⁷ "They shall be Mine," says the LORD of hosts,
"On the day that I make them My jewels.
And I will spare them
As a man spares his own son who serves him."

¹⁸ Then you shall again discern
Between the righteous and the wicked,

Between one who serves God
And one who does not serve Him. Malachi 3:16-18

Malachi writes about a book of remembrance. The idea of writing something in a book is to accomplish exactly that - remembrance. God has given us a wondrous book of remembrance. We call it the Holy Bible. The very germ of that book is found in today's passage. Since then, it has become a book of history, of love, of doctrine, and of looking into the very heart and mind of God.

Let us ever cherish this marvelous book which He has blessed us with. So much wonder and so much beauty is to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. War with Amalek (verses 8-13)

⁸ Now Amalek came and fought with Israel in Rephidim.

During the last sermon which dealt with water from the Rock, the account began in Rephidim which was mentioned in verse 1. After that, it seemed that the name was changed by the end of the story to Massah and Meribah, but I noted that instead the name Rephidim was given because of the account, not changed during the account.

This first verse of this account confirms that. Massah and Meribah are where the water flowed from, not where Israel is encamped. The name Rephidim gives the idea of Rest and also Support. The people received their rest and their support from the waters, even if it was first contention and testing which occurred before they received the waters of Massah and Meribah.

Now, all of a sudden, another story is introduced in this same place, Rephidim. At Rephidim, their place of rest and support, Amalek has shown up and fought with Israel. This is actually explained later in Deuteronomy 25 -

"Remember what Amalek did to you on the way as you were coming out of Egypt, ¹⁸ how he met you on the way and attacked your rear ranks, all the stragglers at your rear, when you were tired and weary; and he did not fear God. ¹⁹ Therefore it shall be, when the LORD your God has given you rest from your enemies all around, in the land which the LORD your God is giving you to possess as an inheritance, that you will blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven. You shall not forget." Deuteronomy 25:17-19

This passage in Deuteronomy ties in "rest from your enemies" with the destruction of Amalek. In Exodus, the people were weary, implying they had no rest, and it is at this time that Amalek attacked the stragglers. And yet, this is in Rephidim, a name which is a plural noun coming from the verb raphad which means "to spread (a bed)." And so by implication it means the place of "rests" or "comforts."

We are being given marvelous hints of why the story is included and how to interpret what the word is showing us. Next, the name Amalek needs to be explained. Amalek's birth is recorded in Genesis 36:12 -

"Now Timna was the concubine of Eliphaz, Esau's son, and she bore Amalek to Eliphaz. These were the sons of Adah, Esau's wife."

Just a few verses later he is noted as one of the chiefs of the tribes of Esau. No mention of him has been made since then and now he is reintroduced into the story. The name Amalek is derived from the word am, or people, and from the word malaq which "means to nip or wring off the head of a bird with or without severing it from the body. It's used only in Leviticus 1:15 and 5:8." (Abarim)

Thus, they are the "The People Who Wring Off." They are those who are disconnected from the body and strive to disconnect the body. The name is introduced here along with the account as a picture of something else.

These brutal people would have noticed the Israelites traveling through Sinai and would have been heated up over the idea that Israel's flocks would eat up all the pasturage. In a cowardly way of handling the problem, they nipped away at the weakest of the people while not directly attacking the main body.

⁹ And Moses said to Joshua, "Choose us some men and go out, fight with Amalek.

Suddenly, and without any other explanation concerning who he is, Joshua is introduced into the Bible. His name is actually Yehoshua which comes from two separate words - the first is a shortened form of the Divine name Yehovah, and the second comes from the root-verb yasha which means "to save" or "to deliver."

It is the same root-verb from which the name of Jesus, or Yeshua, is derived. Thus the name should alert us that he is a type of Christ, the incarnate word of God. His name means "Yah is Salvation." Interestingly, in Hebrew his name is the precise reversal of the name of the prophet Isaiah - or Salvation of the Lord.

With no actual introduction other than the giving of his name, Joshua is instructed to choose men. Moses leaves it up to him to decide on who is best qualified to win the battle which is coming. It is up to him then who will defeat the foe Amalek.

Next Moses instructs him to "go out" to fight against Amalek. By instructing him to "go out" it implies that the battle will be conducted outside the camp of Israel. A picture is forming with the giving of four names in just two verses - Amalek, Rephidim, Moses, and Joshua.

It should be remembered from the passage of the parting of the Red Sea that Josephus says that the weapons of the Egyptians washed up on the shore for Israel to collect. Thus, they would have been prepared for the battle with the appropriate weapons of war.

Numbers 13:16 tells us that Joshua's name at this time is actually Hoshea. In that verse, which is about a year later, it says that Moses changed his name from Hoshea to Joshua. But the name Joshua is used retroactively now because he is given in type to picture Christ Jesus. As Adam Clarke notes about him now -

"Both in the Septuagint and Greek Testament he is called Jesus: the name signifies Savior; and he is allowed to have been a very expressive type of our blessed Lord. He fought with and conquered the enemies of his people, brought them into the promised land, and divided it to them by lot. The parallel between him and the Savior of the world is too evident to require pointing out." Adam Clarke

We also know that Joshua is about 39 years at this time old because of what he says to the people in Joshua 14 -

"I was forty years old when Moses the servant of the LORD sent me from Kadesh Barnea to spy out the land, and I brought back word to him as it was in my heart." Joshua 14:10

That was about a year after this account in Exodus 17 and so he is about 39 or turning 40 at this time.

⁹ (con't) Tomorrow I will stand on the top of the hill with the rod of God in my hand."

It is an interesting set of words for us to contemplate. "Tomorrow" is certainly chosen for the people to be rested in preparation for battle. At the place of rests, Rephidim, the people will be rested. On the next day, Moses says that he will stand on the top of the hill with the rod in his hand.

There is a definite article in front of "hill" and so a particular hill is meant, though not named. There he will stand as if he is a banner for the people to see. And in his hand will be the rod. However, the Hebrew does not say "the rod of God."

It is an unfortunate translation. It says u'matteh ha'elohim b'yadi, "and (with the) rod of the God in my hand." There is an article in front of God. This is the first time it has been called "the rod of the God" since Exodus 4:20, thirty-eight sermons ago, when Moses set out towards Egypt after receiving his commission.

The article is given here to highlight the naming of the altar in verse 15. And so now we have five principles to consider - Amalek, Rephidim, Moses, Joshua, and the rod of the God.

¹⁰ So Joshua did as Moses said to him, and fought with Amalek.

Without any note of timidity or reticence, the Bible records that Joshua faithfully executed his order from Moses and engaged Amalek in battle. It has to be remembered that just a short time earlier, he and the Israelites with him were slaves in Egypt.

The implication then is that they had never been in battle before and they had no time to train for battle. And yet, they went out in full confidence that they would be honorable representatives of Israel in fighting the Lord's battle.

¹⁰ (con't) And Moses, Aaron, and Hur went up to the top of the hill.

Now another person is introduced, Hur. He has never been mentioned before, and yet he is named as if he was a well-known figure. According to 1 Chronicles 2, he is the great-great-grandson of Judah. At this time, we know that Moses is 80 and Aaron is 83.

Hur is said to be the grandfather of Bezalel who will be the great artisan in the construction of the tabernacle. And so, it is certain that he is, like Moses and Aaron, an old man. Because they were not the right age to lead in battle, they instead will act as intercessors to the Lord while Joshua fights with the enemy.

Josephus says that Hur is the husband of Miriam and thus he would be the brother-in-law of Moses and Aaron. Later, in Exodus 24:14, Moses will leave him as the joint-ruler of the Israelites when he ascends Mt. Sinai to receive the law. His name comes from the word khur, which means "white."

¹¹ And so it was, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed; and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed.

It is a curious verse to consider. Was it because there is a link between the failing strength of Moses and that of Israel? Was it because Israel gained confidence at the sight of the raised staff just as a soldier gains confidence at the raising of a flag? Or was it that the Lord stopped helping the people because Moses allowed the rod of the God, which represented His power, to falter?

Each has to be considered because the verse is explicit about what has occurred. There is a direct link between Moses' body movements and the direction of the battle. Because there is, there must be a reason we are told this. The verb for "held up" is rum. It means to exalt, or to be high, or to lift up.

The verb for "let down" is nuakh. The word means simply "to rest." Matthew Poole seems to rightly evaluate what is happening here with these words -

"Amalek prevailed; God so dispensing his favour, that the honour of the day and victory might be wholly ascribed to the rod and power of God, not to Israel."
Matthew Poole

¹² But Moses' hands became heavy; so they took a stone and put it under him, and he sat on it.

Moses' strength simply failed him. Anyone who has tried to hold up a two-pound weight for a few minutes will tell you that it starts to get very heavy, and very quickly. It is unnatural to hold one's hands up for a long time. It is even more so when raising them while holding something.

Compounding that, Moses was standing. In his own strength, he could not endure for very long under these conditions. And so Aaron and Hur placed a stone under him on which he could sit. They had seen the connection between the body movements of Moses and the direction of the battle and they knew they needed to do something.

With Moses now relying on the stone and not on his own strength to stand, he would have more energy than by standing. It should be noted that Aaron and Hur didn't trade off with Moses. If each of them had taken turns holding the rod, they could have continued on all day, but only Moses held the rod.

It is implicit then that only Moses could hold the rod and come out with the proper results. And so in order to ensure that those results would be favorable, they took a different course of action...

^{12 (con't)} And Aaron and Hur supported his hands, one on one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun.

The responsibility for holding the rod of God belonged to Moses alone, but this didn't preclude Aaron and Hur from supporting Moses' arms throughout the day. And so they did. With their assistance, it says that "his hands were steady until the going down of the sun."

The word for "steady" is emunah. It means "faithfulness." This is the first time it is used in the Bible. Outside of this time, it is always used in a moral sense. It is such an important word that I want to read you its entire description from the HAW -

"There are at least ten distinct categories in which this noun is used in Scripture. In its first occurrence in Scripture it expresses the sense of steady, firm hands, a very basic idea (Ex 17:12). From this mundane sense, Scripture moves almost entirely to a use of the word in connection with God or those related to God. Basically, the term applies to God Himself (Deut 32:4) to express his total dependability. It is frequently listed among the attributes of God. It describes his works and his words. emuna is also used to refer to those whose lives God establishes. He expects to see faithfulness in them. Indeed such faithfulness or a life of faith is characteristic of those justified in God's sight (Hab 2.4). God's word of truth establishes man's way of truth or faithfulness. From this we can also see the concept of a duty entrusted to a believer which becomes his trust or office."
HAW

In the use of this special word, the holding of the rod by Moses and the supporting of Moses' hands by Aaron and Hur are being used to show us a moral lesson as much as anything else. To this, there can be no doubt.

All translations use the word "steady" here, but because of the use of emunah, we are certainly being told that his hand remained "faithfully steady" throughout the long day of battle. Thus the word here is being used in contrast to the previous word "heavy." Where his hands were at first weighted down and burdened, they now remain faithful.

¹³ So Joshua defeated Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword.

Joshua was commissioned to lead the battle as the commander of the Lord's people. Because of this, the verse gives the credit to Joshua for defeating Amalek. However, from the previous verses, there can be no other conclusion than that the victory belongs to the Lord. When the rod was lifted, Joshua prevailed, when it was rested, Amalek prevailed.

Therefore, though the physical battle was won in a physical sense by Joshua, the physical is tied directly to the power of God. Without His hand upon them, there could be no victory. As it was though, Amalek and his people were defeated.

As a fun squiggle for your brain, it says that they were defeated with the "edge of the sword." In Hebrew, it says I'pi kharev - "with the mouth of the sword." The imagery is beautiful. The sword is considered a devouring instrument. Its edge is a mouth which consumes its enemy's souls.

The enemies of the Lord's people come to harass and destroy

They come after the weak and the weary without a care

*But the Lord will defend them, great weapons He will employ
Don't have fear, good Christians, for you the Lord is there*

*He is the Rod lifted high, the power of God
He is the Stone of support as a place of rest
His gospel of peace is nigh, so have your feet shod
The enemy is around, so in your armor be dressed*

*By His power you can word off all foes
In His strength the devil stands no chance
Though he comes at you with mighty blows
Fix your feet firmly in the battle, a warrior's stance*

II. The Lord is My Banner (verses 14-16)

¹⁴ Then the LORD said to Moses, "Write this for a memorial in the book

It cannot go without note that this is the first time in Scripture that the Lord has directed anyone to write something down, and specifically in a book. This verse then is the true germ of what we now call "the Holy Bible."

It is not the first time that the word "book" has been used. That belongs to Genesis 5:1. But the concept of writing something at the direction of the Lord begins right here. Further, there is an article in front of the word "book." It is not

"a book" but "the book." Thus versions, such as the King James, which say "a book" are in error.

Specificity is given in order to demonstrate that this book has a precise purpose. In this case it is as a memorial. The book itself is for the memorial. What seems like hair splitting is not. It is precise wording so that we can learn the intent of what is being said.

¹⁴ (cont) and recount it in the hearing of Joshua,

These words presuppose the line of succession in Israel. To recount the record in the hearing of Joshua implies that Joshua will someday be Moses' successor. It would then be incumbent upon Joshua to continue to relay the account to his own successor. This tradition was carried on even as far as Samuel, the last Judge of Israel. In 1 Samuel 15, we read this -

"Samuel also said to Saul, 'The LORD sent me to anoint you king over His people, over Israel. Now therefore, heed the voice of the words of the LORD. ² Thus says the LORD of hosts: "I will punish Amalek for what he did to Israel, how he ambushed him on the way when he came up from Egypt. ³ Now go and attack Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and do not spare them. But kill both man and woman, infant and nursing child, ox and sheep, camel and donkey.'" 1 Samuel 15:1-3

¹⁴ (cont) that I will utterly blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven."

The word here for "blot" is makhah. So far it has only been used in the account of Noah concerning the blotting out of all life during the flood. It means to abolish.

The word for "remembrance" is zeker, which indicates memory. And so the basic intent is that the memory of Amalek would be completely erased.

However, because it is recorded in the Bible, the idea of the mental remembrance of who Amalek is and what he did still lives on. This isn't the intent of what is being said. Rather, it is speaking of the physical existence of Amalek. By blotting out his existence, there would be no memory of him in the sense of an inheritance.

As a way of making this understandable, the word for "blot" here will next be used in Exodus 32 along with the word "book" again in regards to the blotting out of sinners from the Lord's book. There will be no inheritance of the good things to come for those blotted out. Thus, blotting out the memory of Amalek is in essence to destroy any future of or for Amalek.

In looking back on why the Lord has determined this, a few reasons can be deduced. 1) They were the first to attack the redeemed of Lord after their deliverance from Egypt. 2) They attacked the Lord's people without showing any regard or fear of the Lord. 3) They attacked those who were already tired and weary. 4) Being descendents of Jacob's brother Esau, they are of the same general family and so they showed no fraternity to their own brothers.

However, the sternness of the words is showing us that there is a greater picture that we are to see. The blotting out of Amalek is intended to show us a greater cleansing in the spiritual world which surrounds us.

¹⁵ And Moses built an altar and called its name, The-LORD-Is-My-Banner;

In commemoration of the deliverance of Israel through the victory of the battle, Moses builds an altar. Although many scholars add in that Moses certainly sacrificed on the altar, there is no record of this. At other times, actions are taken in connection with the building of an altar, but in this account none is. And so there is no reason to add in that he made a sacrifice.

Instead, he merely names the altar, Yehovah-nissi. The name explains the passage. It means, "The Lord is My Banner." The altar is being used as a metonym. Just as Washington stands for the US Government, and just as Hollywood stands for the movie industry, the name Yehovah-nissi is intended to stand for the rallying of the people to the Lord.

The word nissi means an ensign or a standard. It is something which is lifted up to which one's attention is to be directed. Thus, the altar has been placed to commemorate the rod of the God which was elevated in the hands of Moses. This then explains why the definite article was used - u'matteh ha'elohim b'yadi, "and (with the) rod of the God in my hand."

16 for he said, "Because the LORD has sworn: the LORD will have war with Amalek from generation to generation."

ki yad al kes Yah milkhama Yehovah ba'amalek mid-dor dor

There are several possible translations for this verse. The word kes which is translated as "sworn" in the NKJV is only used this once in the Bible. Because of that, various ideas have been put forth. Rather than "sworn" it is probably better translated as "throne."

The reason why is that the word "throne" is kisse. In the Hebrew, the name Yehovah is shortened to Yah right after this word and so it is probably a poetic contraction of both words - throne and Yehovah. Therefore, this verse is also translated this way -

"'Because,' he said, 'a fist has been raised in defiance against the throne of the LORD, the LORD will wage war against Amalek from generation to generation.'" ISV

In other words, in attacking Israel, Amalek has attacked the throne of the Lord. In response, the Lord will be at war against Amalek from generation to generation. Based on the pictures this account is making, this makes much more sense.

And so, in evaluating these verses, we must consider what came before them. The first 7 verses of the chapter were about the water coming from the rock. At the end of that story, right in the sight of the elders, Moses brought water from the rock by striking it with the rod.

The last verse then said, "So he called the name of the place Massah and Meribah, because of the contention of the children of Israel, and because they tempted the LORD, saying, 'Is the LORD among us or not?'"

Immediately after that, came the connecting words v'yabo amaleq, or "and came Amalek." The two stories are being tied together. And so that we know this is certain, the naming of the altar Yehovah-nissi is actually tied to the naming of the place Massah, and both occurred at Rephidim. The two stories are not separate; they are connected.

Massah is derived from nasah, "to test." The people tested the Lord, nasah, and asked whether He was among them or not. And the Lord was shown to be their Banner - nissi; that He was in fact among them. nasah and nissi are etymologically connected and they in turn connect the stories. So what are these verses telling us?

*The book is written and sealed with the final word, "Amen."
God has a plan which will surely come about
Be sure to refer to it time and time again
And you will be strengthened for the battle no doubt*

*The Lord is my Banner, exalted is He!
He stands upon the high mountain watching over us
And He is the Victor over even the greatest enemy
He is the One who prevailed even over death; our Lord Jesus*

*Surely from generation to generation our foes are defeated
Because of the Lamb who to Calvary's tree was nailed
So marvelous is the story it needs to again be repeated
Until the end of time, our Lord, our Christ has prevailed!*

III. A Wonderful Picture

The picture that we are to see is, once again, that of Christ and His people. It is a war against the unregenerate, or "natural" man and those who are regenerated by Christ, or the "spiritual" man. The two are rivals and are at war with one another.

In the previous passage, the people questioned whether the Lord was among them or not. This passage is given to show them that He is. It is a sign then to the people - both the unbelievers to see and know, and to the believers for the strengthening of their faith.

Amalek, or the unregenerate man comes against Israel, but who do they attack? The weak and tired. As always, those who are not grounded in their faith are the easiest prey. They are confused about the nature of God, they are confused about proper doctrine, and they are confused even about their relationship with God.

Amalek comes to destroy them. His very name implies severing off the head from the body. They are those who are disconnected from the body and strive to disconnect others from it as well. There they are at Rephidim, or the place of rest and support, and yet they are trying to destroy the people of the Lord.

It is the constant battle which Paul writes about in his letters. There is Christ who has saved us and there is the enemy who wants to draw us away from Him. Think of the name Amalek - the people who sever the head from the body and listen to Paul's words –

"Let no one cheat you of your reward, taking delight in false humility and worship of angels, intruding into those things which he has not seen, vainly puffed up by his fleshly mind, ¹⁹ and not holding fast to the Head, from whom all the body, nourished and knit together by joints and ligaments, grows with the increase that is from God." Colossians 2:18, 19

Amalek represents false teachers, heretics, and other unregenerate people who are constantly attacking the weakest of the flock. He is the natural man that Paul writes about in 1 Corinthians 2 -

"These things we also speak, not in words which man's wisdom teaches but which the Holy Spirit teaches, comparing spiritual things with spiritual. ¹⁴ But the natural man does not receive the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him; nor can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." 1 Corinthians 2:13, 14

In order to counter this, Moses sends Joshua to engage Amalek in battle. Joshua is a type of Christ, the Captain of our Salvation and the Commander of the army. He is the one who leads His people into the spiritual battle in which we are engaged.

But the battle isn't fought in the camp. Rather, Moses told Joshua to "go out" to fight against Amalek. We don't get saved and then enclose ourselves behind walls with only believers. We are to GO OUT and engage the enemy where he is. We are to take the fight to the camp of the devil where, as Jesus says, "the gates of Hades shall not prevail."

Gates are used for defense, not for offense. Joshua went out to engage in battle and to overcome the foe. We are those who fight under the Lord and we are to fight where the devil is. Paul writes to us concerning the spiritual battle in which we are engaged in –

"Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might.

¹¹ Put on the whole armor of God, that you may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. ¹² For we do not wrestle against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this age, against spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places.

¹³ Therefore take up the whole armor of God, that you may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand.

¹⁷ And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God; ¹⁸ praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, being watchful to this end with all perseverance and supplication for all the saints— ¹⁹ and for me, that utterance may be given to me, that I may open my mouth boldly to make known the mystery of the gospel, ²⁰ for which I am an ambassador in chains; that in it I may speak boldly, as I ought to speak." Ephesians 6:10-20

The battle we face is no less real than the one that Joshua faced. However, it is a spiritual battle against the wiles of the devil as he constantly attacks from the rear, harming the weakest and destroying their faith. In the battle, Moses stands on the top of the hill with the rod of God in his hand. It is a picture again of Christ, the power of God - on top of the hill with Moses and Aaron and Hur. All of these principles are here to picture the work of Christ.

Moses, which means "He who draws out," pictures Christ the Prophet of God; Aaron, whose name means "Very high" pictures Christ our High Priest; and Hur, whose name is derived from "white," and who descends from Judah pictures Christ the King.

The rod of God, like in the previous passage, is the instrumental cause by which the battle will be won. In Christian theology, the instrumental cause of salvation is "faith alone in order to be justified." It is an entire dependence upon the work of Christ and nothing else.

Moses' hand is the efficient cause. It is that which causes a motion to start or stop. Hence, only Moses could hold the rod, not Aaron or Hur. The symbolism is that the hand of Moses belongs to the prophet, the one who receives God's word and relays it to His people. In other words, it is a picture of the recording of the Bible.

Christ's power is revealed in His Bible which came through the hand of His prophets. However, Aaron and Hur are needed to strengthen Moses. A word without content is not a word. The word tells of not only the prophets, but also of the work of the Priest and King. Their ministries support and uphold the word of the Prophet.

It is to the Bible that we look to see Christ and which we rely on for understanding our spiritual battle. Without that, the enemy gets the upper hand, just as Amalek, or the natural man, got the upper hand on Israel when the rod was rested. In essence, it is a picture which cries out, "DOCTRINE MATTERS!" We cannot engage in the battle without having proper doctrine.

And the stone placed under Moses, what does that represent? It is another confirmation of the importance of DOCTRINE in defeating the foes. Paul, citing Isaiah 28:16 says this in Romans 9 -

"What shall we say then? That Gentiles, who did not pursue righteousness, have attained to righteousness, even the righteousness of faith; ³¹ but Israel, pursuing the law of righteousness, has not attained to the law of righteousness. Why? Because they did not seek it by faith, but as it were, by the works of the law. For they stumbled at that stumbling stone. ³³ As it is written:

'Behold, I lay in Zion a stumbling stone and rock of offense,
And whoever believes on Him will not be put to shame.'" Romans 9:32, 33

The stone is the support to keep from being defeated. It is right doctrine which says that faith in Christ is our righteousness, it is that faith in Christ is our justification, and it is that faith in Christ will win the battle.

With the support in place, the words of the Bible which tell of the Prophet, Priest, and King and what He did are sufficient to win the battle. And according to the passage, Moses' hands were steady until the going down of the sun. If you remember, there was that special word translated as "steady" - emunah.

His hands remained "faithfully steady" throughout the long day of the battle, even to the end of the day. It is a picture of moral endurance. God establishes our lives in Christ and with the Bible, His faithfully steady word, which tells us of Jesus, we have a duty entrusted to us, to live by faith in that word.

The very verse from the Old Testament which Paul cites concerning justification by faith is from Habakkuk 2 and it uses the same word emunah -

"Behold the proud,
His soul is not upright in him;
But the just shall live by his faith." Habakkuk 2:4

Paul quotes it along with these words in Romans 1 -

"For in it the righteousness of God is revealed from faith to faith; as it is written, 'The just shall live by faith.'" Romans 1:17

With the rod held high, with Moses' hands in the air, and with Aaron and Hur supporting them, it then says, "So Joshua defeated Amalek with the edge of the sword." Jesus defeats the enemies with the sword of His mouth, which is the word of God.

The picture is so absolutely marvelous that it's actually hard to believe! Every word has been used to show little pieces of the work of Christ in defeating the enemy. And to show us that it is, in fact, the Bible that is being depicted here, we read the next words in the account - "Then the LORD said to Moses, "Write this for a memorial in the book."

All subsequent generations were to have this account, the very germ of the Bible itself, to understand how to defeat the foes of the people of the Lord, how to protect the weak, and how to rely on Yehovah-nissi, the Lord is my Banner.

The promise is made - the Lord will utterly blot out the remembrance of Amalek. Jesus will utterly blot out the memory of the wicked and those who harm His people. The question in the last passage asked, "Is the LORD among us or not?"

The answer in this passage is, "The-LORD-Is-My-Banner." He is with me and He is the One to whom I will look. He is the Ensign on the hill. He is the Rod in the hand. He is the Captain of the army, and the Destroyer of our foes. He is the Stone of help and support, and the Foundation on which our hope is based. He is our Prophet, our Priest, and our King. He is Jesus!

And with Him as our Head, we await our final deliverance from this war with Amalek which still goes on today. Christ is still warring with those who would wring off the Head from the body until the day when all things are finished. Until then, if you have any fear at all, just listen again to this final verse of the chapter and your fears will melt away -

Because his hand is against the throne of Yah, Yehovah (will wage) war against Amalek from generation to generation. (Charlie's rendering of this verse)

In essence, the Lord is fighting for us because the enemy has attacked us, His very throne. To Him, we are at His throne. And to make sure that we can make that claim, that we are in fact at the throne of the Lord, we can go to Revelation 3 as a confirmation -

"To him who overcomes I will grant to sit with Me on My throne, as I also overcame and sat down with My Father on His throne." Revelation 3:21

When we call on Jesus, we overcome by His blood. And when that happens, we are granted the right to sit with Christ on His very throne. Paul tells this truth in Ephesians 2 -

"But God, who is rich in mercy, because of His great love with which He loved us, ⁵ even when we were dead in trespasses, made us alive together with Christ (by grace you have been saved), ⁶ and raised us up together, and made us sit together in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus, ⁷ that in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us in Christ Jesus." Ephesians 2:4-7

Through the work of the Lord, we are already seated in the heavenly places in Christ. The deal is done and we have overcome! That is assuming, however, that you have actually called out to Christ. If you haven't, you are excluded from this promise. But by a simple act of faith, you too can be joined to Christ and seated at the very throne of God. Let me tell you how...

Closing Verse: "And in that day there shall be a Root of Jesse,
Who shall stand as a banner to the people;
For the Gentiles shall seek Him,
And His resting place shall be glorious." Isaiah 11:10

Next Week: Exodus 18:1-12 (Jethro, the Priest of Midian) (50th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Yehovah Nissi - The Lord is My Banner

Now Amalek came and fought in Rephidim with Israel

A war between good and evil as the Bible does tell

And Moses said to Joshua, as a sort of command
“Choose us some men and go out, with Amalek fight
Tomorrow on the top of the hill I will stand
With the rod of God in my hand in plain sight

So Joshua did as Moses said to him
And fought with Amalek, their enemy to kill
And Moses, Aaron, and Hur
Went up to the top of the hill

And so it was, when Moses held up his hand
That Israel prevailed
And when he let down his hand, we understand
Amalek prevailed, while Israel was assailed

But Moses’ hands became heavy
So they took and put under him a stone
And he sat on it
But he was not there all alone

And Aaron and Hur supported his hands
One on one side, and the other on the other one
And his hands were steady
Until the going down of the sun

So Joshua defeated Amalek as we know
And his people with the edge of the sword
The battle was an impressive show
Won by Joshua for the people of the Lord
Then the Lord said to Moses
“Write this for a memorial in the book
And recount it in the hearing of Joshua
For all future generations when they take a look

That I will utterly blot out the remembrance
Of Amalek from under heaven, so shall it be
And Moses built an altar and called its name
The-Lord-Is-My-Banner; Yes Yehovah Nissi is He!
For he said, “Because the Lord has sworn
The Lord will have war with Amalek always
From generation to generation, each that is born
Will fight against Amalek until the end of days

Surely the Lord is our Banner, so to Him let us look
Let us keep our eyes steadily fixed on Jesus
And let us discern right doctrine by attending to His book
It is the place where today He communicates with us

Let us not trust in the cunning wiles of man
Nor let us trust in any false word
Instead let us do our utmost, the best that we can
To constantly trust Jesus alone, He our saving Lord
Thank You, O God, for Jesus, the Captain of our salvation
And thank You, O God, for Your superior word
From it we find in our souls a joyous elation
Because in it we find Jesus, our glorious Lord!

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 18:1-12 (JETHRO, THE PRIEST OF MIDIAN)

The timing of this account in the chronology of the Bible is exceedingly important to understand. Though it is recorded just after the war with Amalek and just before the giving of the law, it does not belong here chronologically. We will spend quite a bit of time detailing where it belongs.

You don't need to worry about the notes or getting overloaded with information though. As always, the sermons are uploaded on the internet and follow in written form exactly as they are in how I speak them, except without all of my slurs and st st st stutters.

Jethro, the priest of Midian is the highlight of today's passage. He, a Gentile, came to know the true God simply by hearing about Him. A little faith goes a long way with God, so pay attention to His word and exercise faith in what it says to you.

Text Verse: "Rejoice, O Gentiles, with His people;
For He will avenge the blood of His servants,
And render vengeance to His adversaries;
He will provide atonement for His land and His people." Deuteronomy 32:43

Moses wrote that the Gentiles are actually a part of the Lord's plan even though it was he who received the law for the people of Israel. He understood that they are included in the Lord's provision probably as much because of the account of Jethro today as for any other reason.

Paul picked up on Moses' words concerning the Gentiles and cited those words in the New Testament. It's a big book, it's filled with many details and some of them are hard to understand, but in the end the message is simple. God has a plan and it centers on the giving of His Son to redeem fallen man.

If we can just remember that, all of the more difficult concepts will fall into their proper place. Don't get overloaded by His superior word, instead rejoice in it. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Jethro, the Priest of Midian (verses 1-6)

The beginning of chapter 18 will immediately bring in a question of timing. When does this occur? In Chapter 17 we read this -

"And the LORD said to Moses, 'Go on before the people, and take with you some of the elders of Israel. Also take in your hand your rod with which you struck the river, and go. ⁶Behold, I will stand before you there on the rock in Horeb; and you shall strike the rock, and water will come out of it, that the people may drink.'" Exodus 17:5, 6

However, Chapter 19 begins with this -

"In the third month after the children of Israel had gone out of the land of Egypt, on the same day, they came to the Wilderness of Sinai. ² For they had departed from Rephidim, had come to the Wilderness of Sinai, and camped in the wilderness. So Israel camped there before the mountain."

Mount Horeb of Chapter 17 and Mount Sinai of Chapter 19 are the same place. Therefore, as occurs from time to time, this account in Chapter 18 is an insert which is given to teach us a lesson, regardless of the timing of its actual occurrence. Right now, we just know it occurs after the arrival at the mountain of God.

A little later, I'll show you that it is even after the giving of the law and the building of the tabernacle. Therefore, this account is given here even though it won't occur for almost another year in Israel's history. To ensure that we know this is correct before going on, all we need to do is look at the listing of recorded stops for the wilderness journeys which is found in Numbers 33 -

"They moved from Alush and camped at Rephidim, where there was no water for the people to drink.

¹⁵ They departed from Rephidim and camped in the Wilderness of Sinai.

¹⁶ They moved from the Wilderness of Sinai and camped at Kibroth Hattaavah." Numbers 33:14-16

From Rephidim, they went to the Wilderness of Sinai. From that point, they will not move again for an extended period of time. The next move is to Kibroth Hattaavah in Numbers 11. But Rephidim is mentioned in both accounts in Chapter 17 - the water from the rock and the war with Amalek. And yet it is a different place than where they are now.

If you remember, the elders alone first went to Horeb with Moses. Only later would the congregation have come there. Therefore, even the war with Amalek was not actually in chronological order. Understanding this, we can see that these accounts are being placed side by side for a reason.

The question then should be, "Why has it been placed here at this particular location in the Bible?" In order to understand, the bracketing accounts have to be identified. The preceding account was the war with Amalek. The one to follow is preparation for the giving of the Law.

Jethro is noted as "the priest of Midian." Both Midian and Amalek descend from Abraham. However, though he is a priest of Midian, he is also called a descendant of the Kenites who are first recorded as living in Canaan in Genesis 15:19. These two accounts, being placed in this order then, must be at least in part concerning the different attitudes that are displayed towards Israel.

In picture, it would be the "two-fold attitude which the heathen world would assume towards the kingdom of God" (Keil) There are several analogous accounts to this in the Bible. There is the covenant between Abraham and Abimelech in Genesis. In the reigns of David and Solomon, there was a friendly partnership between them and Hiram, king of Tyre.

Solomon maintained a cordial relationship with the queen of Sheba as well. These records are given to show us that there is nothing wrong with associating with the world which is friendly towards God's people, but that those who are belligerent against them are actually at war with them and are ultimately to be warred against until they are destroyed.

In today's world, such foes are increasingly easy to identify. In the end, and particularly towards the nation of Israel in the end times, they will be known as the sheep and goat nations which Jesus speaks of in Matthew 25.

¹ And Jethro, the priest of Midian, Moses' father-in-law,

The name Jethro has to be explained. First, in Exodus 2, Moses was taken in by a man named Reuel. He was the father of Zipporah, who would become Moses' wife. He was also the priest of Midian. This is all explained in Exodus 2 -

"Now the priest of Midian had seven daughters. And they came and drew water, and they filled the troughs to water their father's flock. ¹⁷Then the shepherds came and drove them away; but Moses stood up and helped them, and watered their flock.

¹⁸ When they came to Reuel their father, he said, 'How is it that you have come so soon today?' Exodus 2:16-18

In Exodus 3, the name of the priest of Midian is changed to Jethro. Whether it was the same person or not is debatable because this was forty years later. Here is his introduction -

"Now Moses was tending the flock of Jethro his father-in-law, the priest of Midian." Exodus 3:1

Although he is described as Moses' father-in-law in this translation, the word used is khathan. It is a word which has a wide signification. It implies "the giving away in marriage," and so it can mean a father-in-law, mother-in-law, son-in-law, etc. And in the noun form, it is even used to describe a husband. It deals with contracting affinity by marriage.

If Jethro is different than Reuel, for example his son, then it means he would have replaced the position of his father as the sheikh of the tribe and therefore he would actually be Moses' brother-in-law, but still the khathan.

He is the same person who Moses left in Exodus 3 to go attend to his people Israel. That was no more than a year or two earlier and now he is returning to the area he left. Having identified him, the meaning of his name is needed.

Jethro comes from the word yatar which means "to remain over," or "to be at rest." The HAW says, "It refers to one portion of a quantity which has been divided. Generally it is the smaller part and sometimes it is the part of least quality."

Therefore, Abarim translates the name Jethro as "remnant." During our early Exodus sermons, Reuel was there to picture the time of the church age. Jethro in Chapter 2 was introduced at the ending of the church age as God was ready to restore Israel to its inherited place in redemptive history. His name is tied to that.

The name Midian means "Place of Judgment." Israel has been brought through the plagues on Egypt and has witnessed Pharaoh's destruction. That pictured the tribulation period, culminating in the destruction of the antichrist. After the tribulation, comes the millennial reign of Christ when He will rule among His people. In picture, this encounter with Jethro is given as a tie-in for that.

^{1 (con't)} heard of all that God had done for Moses and for Israel His people—that the LORD had brought Israel out of Egypt.

I should note now that the term "God" will be used 5 times in the next 12 verses, "gods" will be used once, and the term "LORD," meaning Yehovah will be used 6 times. However, twice there is an article before "God" which will be highlighted. Paying attention to such things will help us see more clearly what is going on.

At this time, He is merely called, elohim, or "God" in a general sense. Jethro has heard that elohim had done great things for Moses and for Israel. Then to show that Yehovah is elohim, it says that He had brought Israel out of Egypt.

Jethro had certainly heard of the miracles, the plagues, the parting of the Red Sea, and of the manna and quail. He may have been told of the pillar of cloud and fire and the water from the rock. He would have been told about the war with Amalek and the receiving of the law. Hearing these things was enough to excite him to action and to go out to see Moses.

² Then Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, took Zipporah, Moses' wife, after he had sent her back,

Moses' having sent Zipporah back to Jethro was never recorded before. The account picks up here and it simply assumes that we will understand that she was, in fact, sent back at some point while Moses continued on to Egypt alone.

The word for "sent her back," shillukhim, is a plural word and is used for the first time in Scripture. It will only be used three times in total. It implies a dismissal, or a sending away. This would have occurred sometime after the account in Exodus 4 where she circumcised her son on their journey towards Egypt.

In our earlier Exodus sermons, we saw that Zipporah pictures the church. She is reintroduced to show that in the millennium there will be Jews and Gentiles alike, exactly as the Bible will later confirm.

³ with her two sons, of whom the name of one was Gershom (for he said, "I have been a stranger in a foreign land")

It may seem curious, but until this point, only one son has been named. The plural word "sons" is mentioned in Exodus 4, but only the name of Gershom was given. He is now reintroduced into the Bible. The explanation for his name here is given verbatim from that of Exodus 2:22 "I have been a stranger in a foreign land."

The first half of his name, ger, means "stranger." The second half shom, comes from either sham, "there," or shem, "name." And so his name means "Stranger There" or "Stranger is His Name." However, Abrarim notes that the verse -

"... merely says that the boy was named such-and-such because his father was a so-and-so. There is no law that demands that the such-and-such should be etymologically akin the so-and-so. For all we know Moses might have been expressing his gladness for having finally settled, or grief for having been expelled from his familiar homeland. A verb that may have been on Moses' mind is גרש (garash), meaning to drive or cast out."

Thus his name may also mean "Exile." He then pictures the church during the exile of Israel. He is the called-out Gentile church.

⁴ and the name of the other was Eliezer (for he said, "The God of my father was my help, and delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh");

Eliezer is now introduced by name into the Bible. His name is explained by the words of Moses in this verse, "The God of my father was my help, and delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh." His name means something like God of Help or My God is Help.

It is supposed that this is the son whom Zipporah circumcised in Exodus 4. It should be noted that the reason for the giving of his name is that he "delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh." This is certainly referring to when Moses escaped from Pharaoh after he had killed the Egyptian in Exodus 2.

After that, Moses heard of the death of the Pharaoh who sought him. It was around this time that Eliezer was circumcised and he was probably named at that time because of it.

However, the giving of his name now for the first time in the Bible may be because Moses has actually twice been delivered from the sword of Pharaoh - once at the death of the Pharaoh who first sought to kill him, and then again at the death of the second Pharaoh at the Red Sea. God had been Moses' help through both accounts.

This son, Eliezer, pictures those Gentiles who missed the rapture and endured through the tribulation period, calling on Christ. This was explained in the Exodus 4 sermon which detailed his circumcision by Zipporah. In 1 Chronicles 23:16, 17, this will be recorded about Eliezer -

"Of the sons of Gershon, Shebuel was the first. ¹⁷ Of the descendants of Eliezer, Rehabiah was the first. And Eliezer had no other sons, but the sons of Rehabiah were very many." 1 Chronicles 23:16, 17

⁵ and Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, came with his sons and his wife to Moses in the wilderness,

Again, I just want to note that this probably is Moses' brother-in-law, so please remember that as we go along. Also, the sons are now mentioned first in this verse and the wife second - exactly the opposite of verse 2.

Another point is that Jethro is called by name here. In all, he will be called by name 7 times in the first 12 verses of this chapter and in 5 of them he will be called Moses' khatan, or in-law in conjunction with the name. However, in the last 15 verses, he won't be mentioned by name even once and yet he will be called his khatan five times. In total, he will be called his khatan thirteen times. Why does this matter?

Attention is being given to his name in the first half of the chapter, but attention to his relationship to Moses is given throughout the chapter. Thus, the chapter is logically divided based on the interaction with him. It is a most interesting thing to consider based on the details of the narrative between the two sections.

⁵ (con't) where he was encamped at the mountain of God.

This section of verse 5 shows with all certainty that Moses and all of Israel is already at the base of Horeb, also known as Sinai, even though their recorded arrival there doesn't come until chapter 19. It shows that God has intentionally placed this chapter here, with its details, for the reasons previously explained.

Further, not only is it after their arrival at Sinai, but it is a year later, even after the erection of the tabernacle at the time of the sending of the spies into Canaan to scope out the territory. This can be determined from Deuteronomy 1 -

⁵ On this side of the Jordan in the land of Moab, Moses began to explain this law, saying, ⁶ “The LORD our God spoke to us in Horeb, saying: ‘You have dwelt long enough at this mountain. ⁷ Turn and take your journey, and go to the mountains of the Amorites, to all the neighboring places in the plain, in the mountains and in the lowland, in the South and on the seacoast, to the land of the Canaanites and to Lebanon, as far as the great river, the River Euphrates. ⁸ See, I have set the land before you; go in and possess the land which the LORD swore to your fathers—to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob—to give to them and their descendants after them.’

⁹ “And I spoke to you at that time, saying: ‘I alone am not able to bear you. ¹⁰ The LORD your God has multiplied you, and here you are today, as the stars of heaven in multitude. ¹¹ May the LORD God of your fathers make you a thousand times more numerous than you are, and bless you as He has promised you! ¹² How can I alone bear your problems and your burdens and your complaints? ¹³ Choose wise, understanding, and knowledgeable men from among your tribes, and I will make them heads over you.’ ¹⁴ And you answered me and said, ‘The thing which you have told us to do is good.’ ¹⁵ So I took the heads of your tribes, wise and knowledgeable men, and made them heads over you, leaders of thousands, leaders of hundreds, leaders of fifties, leaders of tens, and officers for your tribes. Deuteronomy 1:5-15

That record in Deuteronomy encompasses the substance of what will be seen in verses 13-21 which is based on the advice of Jethro to Moses. Along with this, there are several other reasons to know that this occurs at the end of their time in Sinai:

1) Numbers 10 shows that the cloud was taken up in order for the Israelites to leave Sinai and head towards Canaan. At that time, Moses addressed Jethro, but his name is given as Hobab, and asked him to continue to travel with them as they journey, even to the land of promise itself.

As this is probable, the story we are looking at today actually belongs chronologically between Numbers 10:10 and 10:11.

2) Also, shortly after Israel departs from Sinai in Numbers 12, a dispute will take place between Miriam, Aaron, and Moses concerning Moses' wife. This would have probably occurred shortly after she came back to be with Moses, which is now.

3) Later in this chapter, in verse 16, it will say -

"When they have a difficulty, they come to me, and I judge between one and another; and I make known the statutes of God and His laws." Exodus 18:16

How could he explain the statutes and laws until after they have been given? That won't occur until the law is received.

4) Finally, in verse 12, Jethro is said to offer burnt offerings and sacrifices which are in accord with those commanded in the law. Those details won't be realized completely until the book of Leviticus is complete.

Because of these things, and maybe others, we can be certain that this account comes not in a chronological fashion, but in order to show something else, and that a separation is being made between Amalek and the Kenite people of whom Jethro is a part. This distinction will be seen particularly in 1 Samuel 15. If you remember in Exodus 17 it said -

“Because the LORD has sworn: the LORD will have war with Amalek from generation to generation.” Exodus 17:16

However, in 1 Samuel 15, we read this -

"Then Saul said to the Kenites, 'Go, depart, get down from among the Amalekites, lest I destroy you with them. For you showed kindness to all the children of Israel when they came up out of Egypt.' So the Kenites departed from among the Amalekites. ⁷ And Saul attacked the Amalekites, from Havilah all the way to Shur, which is east of Egypt." 1 Samuel 15:6, 7

And not only was this remembered by Israel at the time of Saul, but this same line was given an even greater promise directly from the Lord. To understand it, we have to see the genealogical record of 1 Chronicles 2. There it says -

"And the families of the scribes who dwelt at Jabez were the Tirathites, the Shimeathites, and the Suchathites. These were the Kenites who came from Hammath, the father of the house of Rechab." 1 Chronicles 2:55

This same house of Rechab, the descendants of the Kenites, continued to live in tents hundreds of years later, at the time of Jeremiah. In Jeremiah 35, an amazing promise is made to this line of people who had always lived among Israel and in the favor of the Lord God of Israel -

"And Jeremiah said to the house of the Rechabites, 'Thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: 'Because you have obeyed the commandment of Jonadab your father, and kept all his precepts and done according to all that he commanded you,¹⁹ therefore thus says the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel: "Jonadab the son of Rechab shall not lack a man to stand before Me forever.'"" Jeremiah 35:18, 19

These are just a couple of the amazing stories of the Kenites and the house of Rechab that are found in the Bible. Other important times they are mentioned are Judges 1:16; Judges 4 & 5; and 2 Kings 10:15. Their great history as a group tied to Israel really stems from this account of Jethro and his care for Moses and the Israelites in Exodus 18.

Though they started as a group of people set to be removed from the land when Israel was to move in, they instead became a permanent fixture there.

One more point about the verse we're looking at is that there is an article in front of God. It is not the mountain of God, but "the mountain of 'the' God. Attention is again being drawn to this fact. It was first called this in Exodus 3:1. It was also called it in Exodus 4:27 when Aaron came to meet him there. Now it is again being called "the mountain of 'the' God."

⁶ Now he had said to Moses, "I, your father-in-law Jethro, am coming to you with your wife and her two sons with her."

It's apparent from the next verse that Jethro sent word to Moses by a messenger that he was coming. Again, he identifies himself by name and this time the wife is placed first and then the sons are mentioned, reversing the order of the previous verse.

*A stranger in a foreign land I have been
But while there the Lord sustained me
And in that foreign land, a great thing was seen
A bush that burned but was not consumed, how could it be?*

*I realized that He was the God of Help to me
He had guided my life every step of the way
And marvelous things He intended for me to see
For me would dawn a marvelous new day*

*Now I have returned to that foreign land
And yet it seems more of a home to me
Egypt was never truly my home, something better was planned
Here at home with the Lord, such marvelous things I see*

II. The Rejoicing of Jethro (verse 7-9)

⁷ So Moses went out to meet his father-in-law, bowed down, and kissed him.

Upon receiving word that Jethro was coming, Moses went out instead of waiting for his arrival. This shows a respect towards Jethro which would seem most uncommon. Moses is now the leader of several million people and yet he defers to Jethro by going out to meet him instead of summoning him to where he is.

In Genesis 18, Abraham saw the Lord coming with two others and ran out to meet them instead of waiting on them to arrive at his tent. And in the same fashion, Abraham bowed himself to the ground before the Lord just as Moses does now.

It shows a mark of true humility because Moses could have waited for Jethro to come bow before him. And then after the formalities came, the true meeting of the two occurred when Moses kissed Jethro. This is one of only two recorded kisses in the life of Moses.

Although he lived 120 years, Aaron is noted as having kissed him in Exodus 4:27. Now, he is recorded as kissing Jethro. One kiss is from a Hebrew, one is to a Gentile, and both are to priests - the High Priest of Israel and the Priest of Midian, the Place of Judgment.

^{7 (con')} And they asked each other about their well-being, and they went into the tent.

These last words of the verse leave a bit of a debate open. It specifically mentions that they went into "the tent." As this is after the erection of the tabernacle, and because there is no obvious break in the conversation between this verse and verse 12, it implies that Moses took him into the tabernacle, not his own tent. As this is so, Moses is now showing him the very dwelling place of the Lord who is "the" God that he has been a priest to.

⁸ And Moses told his father-in-law all that the LORD had done to Pharaoh and to the Egyptians for Israel's sake, all the hardship that had come upon them on the way, and how the LORD had delivered them.

Here we see the concept of "recounting the works of the Lord." It says that Moses "told" his father in law all that happened, but the word used is saphar which means to tell in the sense of recounting. He probably went through a long, methodical, and excited recounting of everything that happened from his first appearance before Pharaoh all the way up until he watched him sinking below the waters of the Red Sea.

After that, there would have been the stories concerning the bitter waters made sweet, the lack of food and the giving of Manna and quail, the lack of water and the splitting of the rock, and then the war with Amalek.

Moses would have told him about the giving of the law and then the construction of the tabernacle and its dedication. Jethro would certainly have been amazed at all that happened and how the Lord continually delivered his people.

A rather uncommon word is used here which is translated as "sake" - "for Israel's sake." It is odoth which carries the idea of "because." It is always used in a plural form and it is always preceded by the Hebrew word we translate as "for."

It comes from the word ud which means a firebrand. The idea is that as a firebrand is turned in the coals in order to keep a fire burning, the Lord accomplished His turnings for Israel. It's an interesting mental picture which is given as Moses speaks to Jethro.

And one more word is used here which is significant. It is telaah, translated as "hardship." It's the first of four times it will be seen in the Bible and it gives the sense of weariness and distress. The things that had happened on the way had literally wearied the people as the trials kept coming. What a picture of Israel throughout the ages!

⁹Then Jethro rejoiced for all the good which the LORD had done for Israel, whom He had delivered out of the hand of the Egyptians.

In response to the deliverance of the people from their difficulties, Jethro is said to have rejoiced. It is the word khadah and this is its first of only three uses in the Bible. It is the type of rejoicing one would expect at the birth of a child. Psalm 21 gives a wonderful translation of the type of joy that Jethro experienced -

"For You meet him with the blessings of goodness;
You set a crown of pure gold upon his head.
⁴ He asked life from You, and You gave it to him—
Length of days forever and ever.
⁵ His glory is great in Your salvation;
Honor and majesty You have placed upon him.
⁶ For You have made him most blessed forever;
You have made him exceedingly glad with Your presence.
⁷ For the king trusts in the LORD,
And through the mercy of the Most High he shall not be moved."

*I will recount the works of the Lord
Of His great deeds I will continuously speak
Listen to me as I relay the word
He was my strength when I was weak*

*He rescued me from a horrible pit
And with kindness and love He delivered me
And even more, with Him on His throne I now sit Forevermore His glorious face I shall see*

*I will recount the works of the Lord
Great is He and greatly to be praised*

*Listen my children as I relay to you the word
And then to Him let our voices in joy be raised*

III. Blessed be the Lord (verses 10-12)

¹⁰ And Jethro said, "Blessed be the LORD, who has delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians and out of the hand of Pharaoh, and who has delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians.

This verse seems most perplexing. Jethro, speaking to Moses says "who has delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians." "You" is plural, so he is either speaking to several people who aren't yet mentioned, or he is speaking of the collective group of Israel.

The KJV incorrectly translates this as singular instead of plural. The reason why it is perplexing is because he nearly repeats himself - "out of the hand of the Egyptians" and then "from under the hand of the Egyptians." If he is speaking to a smaller group of elders about a larger group, this would make sense.

But it could be that through the use of "from out" and then "from under" he is referring to all Israel in both instances and showing the superlative nature of the deliverance. Not only were they separated from the hand of the Egyptians and Pharaoh, but they were also removed from the control of that hand. In what this pictures, this is certainly correct.

Because of the deliverance, Jethro blesses the Lord who could do such mighty things for these people. It is exactly what was promised to Moses by the Lord at the burning bush at this same mountain where they were now meeting -

"So I have come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up from that land to a good and large land, to a land flowing with milk and honey, to the place of the Canaanites and the Hittites and the Amorites and the Perizzites and the Hivites and the Jebusites." Exodus 3:8

The Lord had made this promise and the first half of that promise was now complete.

¹¹ Now I know that the LORD is greater than all the gods;

Jethro, without having to see with His eyes, but only by hearing, has come to a right knowledge of the Lord. Romans 10:17 says -

"So then faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."

Moses recounted the works of the Lord and by faith alone Jethro has received his conversion of mind, knowing a truth that will be spoken again prior to the construction of the temple in Jerusalem when Solomon writes to Hiram, king of Tyre these words from 2 Chronicles -

"And the temple which I build will be great, for our God is greater than all gods.⁶ But who is able to build Him a temple, since heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain Him? Who am I then, that I should build Him a temple, except to burn sacrifice before Him?" 2 Chronicles 2:5

This same God came and revealed Himself to Israel 2000 years ago in human flesh. He entered the world as a helpless little baby. It is a seeming paradox that the greatest of all gods could so humble Himself, but such is the marvel of Jesus Christ.

And even more humbling than His birth was the death He endured for us. The author of Hebrews calls the cross a "shame" which Christ simply scorned. In His life, He not only showed Himself greater than all gods, but He proved Himself completely unique from all other gods.

11 (con't) for in the very thing in which they behaved proudly, He was above them."

The word for "proudly" here is zud. It's used just 10 times and the last time it was used when speaking of the stew that Jacob cooked for Esau. The idea is that when one cooks stew, it will boil. The word comes from the sound - zud zud zud. From that comes the metaphor of acting proudly. Just as something boils, so does the pride of a man.

This whole phrase is shorter in the Hebrew and so in order for it to make sense, translators have to contemplate what it is actually trying to say. Newer translations make Israel the object of the false god's arrogance and then translate the last word as "the people." For example, the NIV says -

"Now I know that the LORD is greater than all gods, because in this affair they dealt arrogantly with the people." (NIV)

However, the older translations make their own pride the object and then translate the last word as "above" to indicate that the Lord is above what they prided in. This is probably the correct sense. Pharaoh and his magicians, relying on their false gods, thought they could outmatch Moses and they failed.

The gods which Pharaoh prided in were shown false one at a time. Pharaoh and his armies thought they would defeat Israel at the Red Sea, and instead they were defeated. And ultimately, each of these things simply looks forward to the larger works of the devil which have been defeated by Christ.

The devil behaved proudly in that he brought death to man, but through the death of a Man, death was defeated. It is certain that the words of Jethro are speaking of the greatness of the Lord over the false gods rather than the greatness of the Lord over the mere arrogance of the people.

¹² Then Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, took a burnt offering and other sacrifices to offer to God.

The burnt offering is the first type of offering described in Leviticus. In fact, the book of Leviticus starts with the burnt offering and it encompasses the entire chapter. It is a good indication in itself that the visit of Jethro occurs, as I said earlier, a year after the arrival of Israel at Mount Sinai.

The law had been received, the altar for burnt offering had been constructed, and the rituals for the offerings had been detailed. Jethro, wanting to participate in offering to God followed the procedures outlined for him to do so.

Though not of Israel, his priesthood was acknowledged as legitimate, just as Melchizedek's priesthood was also considered. Though he was outside of the covenant people, he was accepted by them and by the Lord who sanctified them. And this is without a doubt because of the final words of the passage today...

¹² (fin) And Aaron came with all the elders of Israel to eat bread with Moses' father-in-law before God.

Aaron is mentioned for the first time in the passage today, but his being noted now is not without significance. Because of the true timing of this account, he was the already commissioned as high priest. As he is the high priest and in attendance at the sacrificial meal, no other conclusion can be made than that Jethro's sacrifice was acceptable and his performance of the sacrifice was also.

And as a mark of favor among all of Israel, their representatives, meaning "all the elders" were brought in to dine with him as well. The term "eat bread" doesn't mean to just eat bread. It is inclusive of the entire meal but it probably would have included bread too, thus Jethro would have been a participant in the eating of Manna - the bread from heaven.

The burnt offering would have been completely burnt up as the Lord's portion, but the other sacrifices would have been consumed according to the law which had been given.

To finish up with the final words of the verse, it says that this meal was before God. It doesn't say, "before the Lord" as one might expect, especially because in just the previous verse Jethro said, "Now I know that the LORD is greater than all the gods." Why would it only say "God" and not "the Lord?"

There is a reason which is revealed right in the verse, but which is left out of our translations. There is an article in front of God. Aaron and all the elders came to eat with Jethro before "the" God, not "a" god. The entire purpose of this account is realized in this one definite article.

It is what defines the contrast between Amalek of the last passage and Jethro in this one. It is the difference between being at peace with God through faith and at enmity with God through pride - either in self, or in a false god, or in both. Amalek chose one path, Jethro chose another.

In picture, what has occurred here is showing us the calling of all people, Jew and Gentile. The Hebrews are already God's people as has been seen since Moses presented himself before them in Exodus 4 - all the way through until now.

But there is another group of people who belong to God as well - the Gentiles. Jethro pictures the spiritual leader of these people; Zipporah the overall church; Gershom the church before the rapture; and Eliezer, the Gentile tribulations saints. They come to the mountain of God.

Moses had "dismissed" Zipporah when he went back to Egypt. The unusual word shillukhim was used at that time. It is a picture that the Lord's focus was back on Israel, just as Revelation describes. Despite His focus being on Israel, he had not left the Gentiles completely, but cared for them in the process.

After the tribulation period, the Gentiles return to join Israel; all are accepted by God at His holy mountain. Moses, picturing Jesus, receives the Gentiles, pictured by Jethro, in the grandest way.

After that, Moses recounted the works of the Lord for Israel to Jethro, and Jethro uses two terms to describe what had occurred, "out of the hand of the Egyptians and out of the hand of Pharaoh" and "from under the hand of the Egyptians."

It is a picture of both their calling out as a people from the devil and the world - something which occurred in the Exodus, and it is also their calling from under the power of the world; something which only will occur after the tribulation.

In the recounting of the works of the Lord, Jethro realized through hearing the word that the Lord is the true God and so he offered his sacrifices to Him. What this pictures is exactly described by Paul in Ephesians 5 -

"Therefore be imitators of God as dear children. ² And walk in love, as Christ also has loved us and given Himself for us, an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling aroma." Ephesians 5:1, 2

The last thing noted in these verses is that "Aaron and the elders of Israel" came to eat bread with Moses' father-in-law before God. It is a picture of what occurs at the end of redemptive history when all will eat in the presence of the Lord, both Jew and Gentile, who have been saved by faith and faith alone.

Aaron, the high priest is specifically mentioned to show a picture of Christ, our true High Priest who has accepted our offerings. The reason this was placed out of chronological order is to show that it is by faith, and not by the law, that all people are saved. This account precedes the law in the Bible, even though it actually comes after the giving of the law in reality.

The entire account can be summed up in the single thought that not only Jews, but Gentiles as well, can have peace with God through faith and only through faith. While collective Israel will fall out of favor with God in their later history, individual Jews as well as individual Gentiles are shown to remain in His favor.

It is not about a mark on the body or a physical line of descent. Rather it is about faithfully approaching the One true God and acknowledging Him as such. If you have not yet called on this marvelous God who has shown us, in advance, how to be right with Him, please let me tell you how you can, even right now...

Closing Verse: "There shall be a root of Jesse;
And He who shall rise to reign over the Gentiles,
In Him the Gentiles shall hope." Romans 15:12

Next Week: Exodus 18:13-27 He is not a man of great demanding. He is (A Man of Wisdom and Understanding) (51st Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Jethro

And Jethro, the priest of Midian, Moses' father-in-law
Heard of all that God had done
For Moses and for Israel His people
That the Lord had brought Israel out of Egypt, as a favored son
Then Jethro, Moses' father-in-law
Took Zipporah, Moses' wife
After he had sent her back
During that most important time of his life
With her two sons
Of whom the name of one was Gershom
For he said, "I have been a stranger in a foreign land
I was foreigner in a land not my home

And the name of the other was Eliezer
For he said, "The God of my father was my help, its true
And delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh
Wonderful things for me He did do
And Jethro, Moses' father-in-law
Came with his sons and his wife, to him they did trod
To Moses in the wilderness

Where he was encamped at the mountain of God

Now he had said to Moses

“I, your father-in-law Jethro

Am coming to you with your wife

And her two sons with her, just so you know

So Moses went out to meet his father-in-law

Bowed down, and kissed him as well

And they asked each other about their well-being

And they went into the tent for a spell

And Moses told his father-in-law all that the Lord had done

To Pharaoh and to the Egyptians for Israel’s sake

All the hardship that had come upon them on the way

And how the Lord had delivered them, the rescue He did make

Then Jethro rejoiced for all the good

Which the Lord had done for Israel

Whom He had delivered out of the hand of the Egyptians

With mighty deeds that did excel

And Jethro said, “Blessed be the Lord

Who has delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, it is true

And out of the hand of Pharaoh, according to His word

And who has delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians too

Now I know than all the gods that the Lord is greater

For in the very thing in which they behaved proudly
He was above them - He Israel's vindicator
Then Jethro, Moses' father-in-law
Took a burnt offering and other sacrifices to offer to God also
And Aaron came with all the elders of Israel to eat bread
With Moses' father-in-law before God, "the" God as we know

The Lord has a plan which includes Gentiles too
When their heart is turned toward him rightly
Stand fast on what He alone can do for you
Hold on to Him and to His work ever so tightly
Don't trust in yourself; don't try to earn His favor
Instead, by faith reach out and Him receive
And in His gift of eternal life you can savor
Because in His work alone you did believe Faith... this is what God would ask from you Believe the gospel, that God has done it all
And the Lord who is ever faithful and true
Upon His glorious name, please do call

And for eternal years we will together sing His praise
And we shall walk in His glorious presence for eternal days

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 18:13-27 (A MAN OF WISDOM AND UNDERSTANDING)

In the previous sermon, we saw that the account here in Exodus 18 actually belongs in the middle of Numbers 10 chronologically. However, it is placed between the war with the Amelekites and the giving of the law for several reasons. The placement after the war with Amelek was explained.

However, the second half of the verses in this chapter is partly given prior to the giving of the law to teach us that even though the law is given, there needs to be structure in how it is dispensed to the people. God gave the law to Moses who then instructed the people in the execution of the law.

But this was cumbersome and tedious. Today Moses will be given instruction in how to better handle the things of God and the things of man. It is accounts like today's that convince me that God does not speak to individuals at this time, except through His word.

He spoke to Moses and then through the prophets. He spoke to the people of Israel through His Son, Jesus. And then He spoke through the apostles. When He finished speaking through the apostles, with that the final word of the Bible in Revelation 22:21, which is "Amen," He finished His speaking.

We have now been given the full and complete revelation of God in this manner, and so He expects us to read it, teach it, pass it on, assimilate it, be obedient to it, and not stray from it. And we are especially not to add to it, nor subtract from it. We neither need extra-biblical revelation, nor would it be productive to His people to provide it.

Text Verse: "Hold your peace, and I will teach you wisdom." Job 33:33

When you read the words of the Bible, you are receiving God's instruction to you. It is a large book and it can easily be mishandled, and so it takes thoughtful care and wise and prudent teachers to share it properly. Today we will see the best framework for how the word should be shared.

There are easy aspects of the word which can be taught and decided upon at the lowest levels, and there are more difficult issues which need to be handled at higher levels. A small group may need an issue resolved which the deacons can handle. The deacons may need to go to the elders. And the elders may need to go to the pastor.

If the pastor is competent and was selected according to biblical guidance, he should be well qualified to handle the matter at hand. In the end, God wants His word understood because it tells us of His love for us in the giving of His son. And his Son is found revealed throughout this precious, superior word.

And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Moses Sat to Judge the People (verses 13-16)

Moses has already pictured Christ as the human redeemer of his people. In today's account he will picture Christ as the lawgiver and judge of his people. However, he will also be seen to pass on those duties in part to subordinates below him. In this, he will picture Christ as the one to pass on the penning of His laws to His apostles and those below them in the church as well. And so we begin today with verse 13...

¹³ And so it was, on the next day, that Moses sat to judge the people;

The next day after Jethro's arrival and after the sacrifice and feast that was held, Moses went directly back to his duties as the judge of the people. What the coming words imply is that Moses actually left his duties on the day of Jethro's arrival rather than calling him to appear before him while he continued his duties.

It shows immense respect and honor was afforded to Jethro upon his arrival. What was seen in those verses where he went out to meet him, bowed down before him, and kissed him was really only a portion of the honor bestowed upon him. Even more is seen now, in that he was willing to leave the duties he held in being the judge of Israel in order to meet and fellowship with Jethro.

However, the next day finds him, once again, in his position as the judge of Israel. As is seen in the Bible, and in the history of extra-biblical nations as well, the ruler of a nation also often acted as the judge of the people.

This tradition carried on in Israel throughout their history. During the time of the judges, the people came to the judge, who was also Israel's leader. This continued on through Samuel, but it didn't end with him. The king also judged cases. An example is found in the account of the woman from Tekoa in 2 Samuel 14.

She appeared before David and petitioned him concerning a legal matter involving her son. It's a great story and today would be a good day to take a moment and read it. You'll be quizzed on it next week. In this great tradition, Moses didn't let even the visit of Jethro continue to keep him from his duties of judging Israel.

Let's remember from last week's passage, that this is occurring after the giving of the law. The account is not in chronological order. This would have occurred most probably between Numbers 10:10 and 10:11. Therefore, the tabernacle is already built.

Moses would probably be sitting at the entrance to the tabernacle. In the book of Judges, the tabernacle was located at Shiloh. It was to this place that the people would come. Like there, the tabernacle is the logical place for Moses to have sat and judged Israel.

¹³ (con't) and the people stood before Moses from morning until evening.

The number of people in the camp was probably between 2 and 3 million. This is the size of a rather large city and so the record of Moses sitting all day long judging cases is not only probable, it would be chaos if he didn't. He had received the law and therefore he had to make the law known and to judge cases as they arose.

As no directions for a governmental structure were given by the Lord during the giving of the law, there would only be the ruler and the priests designated to minister to the people at this point. Moses would have been as busy as a bee discharging these duties.

Many scholars tie in his judging of the people with the war of the Amelekites of the previous chapter, saying he was busy deciding about war booty and the like. This is not correct. This account was placed here out of chronological order. Even without a war, there would still be multitudes of cases to judge every day.

¹⁴ So when Moses' father-in-law saw all that he did for the people, he said, "What is this thing that you are doing for the people?"

As a reminder, the word khathan, or father-in-law, is probably better translated as brother-in-law, but it can't sure either way. Whatever he was in relation to Moses, he was in such a standing that he could openly question him over his practices.

The question he asks is intended to get Moses to first think through his position before he gives his advice. We do this all the time in order to prepare the person we're speaking to for the giving of advice that will follow. To Jethro, it's obvious what Moses is doing, but his words pierce into the problem he perceives with it. And so he continues...

14 (con't) Why do you alone sit, and all the people stand before you from morning until evening?"

Along with the probing questions to get Moses to consider the advice which is coming, he includes several nuances for his ears. First, he uses the terms "sit" and "stand" to contrast Moses' position as the judge and the people's position as those petitioning the judge.

Secondly, the word "alone," which in Hebrew is badad, is emphatic - l'badekha. "Why do you sit alone in this particular manner?" Jethro, in advance of his advice, is continuing to prepare Moses for conducting his duties in a better way.

And to fully set the tone for what is coming, he completes his thoughts with the mentally tiresome words min boqer ad arev, or "from morning until evening." Each word has been selected to prompt Moses to first think through and then to defend what should not be defended. When this is done, Jethro will then give advice that will literally change the world for many people throughout the ages.

And as a squiggle for your brain, the word alone, or badad, is used for the first time here in the Bible. In this noun form, it will be used just 12 times. It gives the idea of separation, like a shoot branching off from a plant, or something solitary and alone. When a person had leprosy, they were to dwell alone. This is the idea of this word. Moses was alone in his duties.

¹⁵ And Moses said to his father-in-law, "Because the people come to me to inquire of God.

Moses will supply Jethro with two reasons for his actions. The first is in this verse. It is a clear statement, "Because the people come to me to inquire of God." However, this needs to be explained. Moses didn't sit in his chair as an oracle and speak words as if the Lord was speaking through Him like charismatic preachers do.

Nor did he simply make up things as he went, speaking as if he were speaking words for God as cult leaders do. Instead, he had received the law, and he was interpreting that law according to how it was revealed to him, just as a sound preacher should do. If a matter arose which had not been delineated in the law, he would go to seek God's guidance instead of deciding on his own. We will see an example of this later.

In this, Moses is picturing Christ again who said these words to Israel in John 12 -

"And if anyone hears My words and does not believe, I do not judge him; for I did not come to judge the world but to save the world. ⁴⁸ He who rejects Me, and does not receive My words, has that which judges him—the word that I have spoken will judge him in the last day. ⁴⁹ For I have not spoken on My own authority; but the Father who sent Me gave Me a command, what I should say and what I should speak. ⁵⁰ And I know that His command is everlasting life. Therefore, whatever I speak, just as the Father has told Me, so I speak." John 12:47-50

Moses set the pattern in that he did not speak under his own authority, but under the authority of God and only those words he had received from God. When Jesus says in John 12 that He did not come to judge the world, it does not mean that He is not the judge of the world, but that as the judge, it is in accord with the word of God. This is the same as Moses.

Moses was the judge, but his judgments were based on the word of God which had been revealed to him. This is seen in his second reason which he now relays to Jethro...

¹⁶ When they have a difficulty, they come to me, and I judge between one and another;

Benson almost humorously notes that "if the people were as quarrelsome one with another as they were with God, he had many causes brought before him, and the more because their trials put them to no expense." Joseph Benson

In other words, the people had been constantly quarreling to Moses, among one another, and about God since the moment they left Egypt. If they did this towards their leader and their God who could hold them accountable, how much more between one another who really couldn't!

And further, one could bring suit against another and it wouldn't cost them a dime for the legal process. Think of how litigious our society is and then double that because there were no lawyer fees to worry about. Poor Moses! He would sit all day and hear their whining. But in the end, it was he who had their laws and he who needed to show them God's will as it was revealed to him...

¹⁶ (con't) and I make known the statutes of God and His laws."

There is an article in front of "God" in this verse. It says, "...and I make known the statutes of 'the' God and His laws. It is not a superfluous addition, but it is a necessary emphasis to show that when they inquire of him, it is not his own statutes and laws.

The word God in the previous verse simply said elohim. Elsewhere in the Bible, judges are called elohim. To ensure that it was understood that the laws came from God and not from Moses, the definite article is placed in front of elohim. It says ha'elohim or "the God." It is He alone who gives the law to Israel.

Unfortunately, not one Bible version, or one commentary highlights this. And yet it is a key and principle tenet of doctrine which is being displayed in this single definite article. Benson provides a wonderful thought on verses 15 and 16 -

"The people came to inquire of God — And happy was it for them that they had such an oracle to consult. Moses was faithful both to him that appointed him, and to them that consulted him, and made them know the statutes of God, and his laws — His business was not to make laws, but to make known God's laws: his place was but that of a servant." Joseph Benson

Who will tell us of the laws of God?

Who will reveal to us His will?

How can we live rightly in this world we trod?

Unless with His word our souls we fill

Where can we go to know His laws for us?

Who has spoken the things for us to do?

I have heard about the word of God, Jesus

And that it is what He speaks that we should pursue

*And so I will open up this marvelous book
I will search out the mysteries of this superior word
All of my life I will open it and look
And through it I will be pleasing to Jesus my Lord*

II. And God will be with You (verses 17-23)

¹⁷ So Moses' father-in-law said to him, "The thing that you do is not good.

I should remind you that the name "Jethro" was used 7 times in verses 1-12. However, it is never mentioned in verses 13-27. Instead, five times he is simply called Moses' khathan or relation through marriage - father-in-law, brother-in-law, whatever.

In this capacity, he is acting as a wise counselor and not a mere relative or friend. And so, with his ears filled with Moses' reply, he responds with an honest, direct, and poignant rebuke - lo tov ha'davar asher atah oteh, "Not good is the word you accomplish."

Moses' words have failed to convince him that the arrangement is a satisfactory one. There is a moral element to his logic here which needs to be addressed. It is not morally good to give one person such power. It is wrong because of where it could lead, either intentionally or unintentionally through abuse.

Jethro doesn't mention this, but it is a truth which permeates both Scripture and the history of human governments. And there is also another moral reason which he will address directly...

18 Both you and these people who are with you will surely wear yourselves out.

The verse in Hebrew begins with the words navol tibbol gam attah gam ha'am or something like "wearing away you will wear away also yourself and also the people." Jethro pulled out his Hebrew dictionary and introduced a new word into Scripture, repeating it twice for emphasis. It is the word nabel.

It gives the idea of "disgrace, dishonor, lightly esteem, come to nothing, make vile, or wither." In the context of his words, withering or wearing out is appropriate - as if Moses were a leaf which would wither and fall from a tree. His words imply that it is morally unacceptable to continue to pursue this path because it will lead to his inability to properly perform his duties.

At the same time it will lead to the inevitable dissatisfaction of the people having to wait extended periods of time to obtain justice. In this, they would eventually either rebel or take matters into their own hands. Either way, moral deficiency is the inevitable result.

18 (con't) For this thing is too much for you; you are not able to perform it by yourself.

This portion of verse 18 is the key to the entire passage. He informs Moses that the burden is too heavy (kaved) for him to carry it alone. It is a task which he is incapable of performing alone. Again he uses the same word with the same emphasis that he introduced into the Bible in verse 14 - l'badekha. "Moses alone you cannot accomplish this massive task!"

¹⁹ Listen now to my voice; I will give you counsel, and God will be with you:

Again, Jethro introduces a new word into the Bible, yaats - to advise, counsel. It is interesting that a Gentile is noted as the first counselor in this manner in the Bible, and he to the leader of God's people! The significance of this shouldn't be missed.

Enoch was a non-Hebrew and yet it was he who walked with God and was no more because God took him. Such interesting clues are given throughout Scripture to show that God looks on the heart, not at the externals.

In his counsel, he notes that God will be with Moses in his decision concerning his advice. In his first words he removes the thought of Moses sitting in judgment which was noted in verse 13 and which Jethro highlighted in verse 15. Instead, he tells him to "stand"...

^{19 (con't)} Stand before God for the people, so that you may bring the difficulties to God.

In this, the legislative function is reserved to God - He is the one who sits. Moses will perform the mediatorial function of receiving the law from God, as well as carrying the requests of the people to God for Him to hear and act upon. And again, another new word is introduced into Scripture from Jethro's mind - mul.

It means "front" or "in front of" and thus it gives the idea of being a representative before God. It is derived from the word mul which means "to circumcise." The idea is that just as circumcision stands in front of a person, and acts as a representative of their status, so Moses would stand as representative before God.

In this verse, God is mentioned three times. In the last two, there is an article placed before the word God. Here is how it would properly read -

"Listen now to my voice; I will give you counsel, and God will be with you: Stand before the God for the people, so that you may bring the difficulties to the God."

As you can see, the article is important in obtaining the correct sense of what is being relayed. Jethro knows that God is God and so he doesn't use the article in the first instance. However, to emphasize that Moses is ministering before the only God on behalf of the people and not just administering his own justice, he uses the article.

²⁰ And you shall teach them the statutes and the laws, and show them the way in which they must walk and the work they must do.

Again, Jethro introduces a new word for us to consider - zahar or "teach." This comes from a word which means to gleam, or figuratively, to illuminate. Even in English we get the sense of that when we speak of teaching and learning. When something is understood, it is said to illuminate our minds - "Aha! Now I see."

Here the word is in the emphatic form. Jethro is emphatically stating that Moses is to be the teacher in four specific areas. 1) The statutes (ha'khuqim), which are the specific enactments for the people to live by. 2) The laws (ha'torowt), which are those items which regulate and govern conduct and behavior. 3) The way (ha'derek), which is the proper path and course of duty in accord with the ordinances and laws. And 4) the work (ha'maaseh), which is the specific acts associated with the ordinances and laws.

In reality, this list which Jethro gives to Moses is now almost a mirror reflection of the duties of a preacher today. Paul sums up the same basic thought to his protégé Timothy -

"If you instruct the brethren in these things, you will be a good minister of Jesus Christ, nourished in the words of faith and of the good doctrine which you have carefully followed. ⁷ But reject profane and old wives' fables, and exercise yourself toward godliness. ⁸ For bodily exercise profits a little, but godliness is profitable for all things, having promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come. ⁹ This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptance. ¹⁰ For to this end we both labor and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is the Savior of all men, especially of those who believe. ¹¹ These things command and teach." 1 Timothy 4:6-11

²¹ Moreover you shall select from all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over them to be rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens.

Again, a new word is introduced for "shall select." It is khazah and it means to see or behold. It comes from a root which means to gaze at or contemplate. The advice isn't just that Moses should go point out people to be leaders, but that he should carefully evaluate those he is going to select.

They were first and foremost to be able men. The word is khayil or literally, "men of valor." It is the same word used to describe Boaz in the book of Ruth. To define what such a man is like, he first says they are to "fear God." Without this attribute, no other attribute will be unyielding in the face of trial.

Only after that does he say they should be men of truth and hating covetousness. If they don't fear God, then neither lesser attribute can be truly assured. Jethro's words here follow through, even into the New Testament.

Paul's words in 1 Timothy 3 use the same general sentiments for the selection of both elders and deacons as are given here. With these qualifications set, Jethro now divides the entire congregation according to the decimal system.

It is a bottom-heavy system which gradually works up according to the steps of a pyramid until finally reaching the highest point at the top. It is, in essence, the very foundation of the original idea of the American government which looked to the diffusing of power to the lowest level possible so that the top would only be necessary in the most difficult of cases.

²² And let them judge the people at all times.

The lowest level possible is given the authority to judge. In this, Jethro has pointed out that it is one thing for Moses to lay down the principles, but it is another thing entirely for them to be applied. The application belongs as close to the source of the matter as is possible and it is to be this way at all times.

Instead of scheduled times of judgment with a single judge where delays could occur, there could be an immediate resolution to each and every case, or it could be quickly passed up the line to the next level for decision. It is a concept which Solomon writes about in Ecclesiastes -

"Because the sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil."
Ecclesiastes 8:11

Whether there is a delay of judgment or a delay for judgment, only discontent and greater moral decay will result. Jethro's recommendations will alleviate both.

22 (con't) Then it will be that every great matter they shall bring to you, but every small matter they themselves shall judge.

In the church, God is the lawgiver through His prophets and apostles. From there different sized churches are organized to handle the problems at the lowest level possible for that denomination.

Greater problems are to be elevated to the point where they can be resolved without troubling each higher authority. It is also not at all unlike large corporations today. Jethro set a standard 3500 years ago which has proven the most effective model of all for the governing of man, be it in religion or in business.

22 (con't) So it will be easier for you, for they will bear the burden with you.

The word for "so it will be easier" is v'haqel. It means to make light. It is then in contrast to the kaved or "heaviness" of verse 18. That which was heavy and tiring would become light and manageable for Moses. Jethro's words are both calming and comforting to the certainly weary leader of Israel.

23 If you do this thing, and God so commands you,

Of the twenty versions I review for this, all of them but two give the sense of Moses going to God and receiving approval for these instructions - "If you do this thing and God so commands you..."

One that doesn't follow this is the Douay-Rheims which says, "thou shalt fulfil the commandment of God." This doesn't make sense as there is no specific commandment of God concerning it. However, the ESV says, "If you do this, God will direct you."

Of these versions, to me this one seems to carry the idea correctly. First, there is no record of Moses asking God whether this was right to do or not. Secondly, there is no article in front of God here. In line with his other words, it would be likely that if Moses were to receive instruction from God concerning this, he would have said, "if the God so commands you." However he didn't.

And finally, it is in line with his words of Deuteronomy 1 where he recounts the story we are looking at -

"And I spoke to you at that time, saying: 'I alone am not able to bear you. ¹⁰ The LORD your God has multiplied you, and here you are today, as the stars of heaven in multitude. ¹¹ May the LORD God of your fathers make you a thousand times more numerous than you are, and bless you as He has promised you! ¹² How can I alone bear your problems and your burdens and your complaints? ¹³ Choose wise, understanding, and knowledgeable men from among your tribes, and I will make them heads over you.' ¹⁴ And you answered me and said, 'The thing which you have told us to do is good.'
¹⁵ So I took the heads of your tribes, wise and knowledgeable men, and made them heads over you, leaders of thousands, leaders of hundreds, leaders of fifties, leaders of tens, and officers for your tribes.

¹⁶ "Then I commanded your judges at that time, saying, 'Hear the cases between your brethren, and judge righteously between a man and his brother or the stranger who is with him. ¹⁷ You shall not show partiality in judgment; you shall hear the small as well as the great; you shall not be afraid in any man's presence, for the judgment is God's. The case that is too hard for you, bring to me, and I will hear it.' ¹⁸ And I commanded you at that time all the things which you should do." Deuteronomy 1:9-18

Throughout these words in Deuteronomy, Moses never says that he was commanded by God. Instead, it shows that he took the initiative. It implies that God allowed Moses to determine how His law would be carried out. In other words, His concern is that they are carried out. Moses' concern was how to make that possible.

^{23 (con't)} then you will be able to endure, and all this people will also go to their place in peace.”

For the sake of Moses and the people he led, he gave the sound advice which was both followed by Moses and which eventually did lead them to their place, meaning Canaan, in peace. In Canaan, the format of government was modified for national living, but it maintained the same general concept found in Jethro's words here.

Keep the authority in the hands of those you can trust

But keep it at the lowest level too

You need to do this, it is a must

And if you do, it will go well with you

Don't let the government get too heavy at the top

If you do, there will be unhappiness in the land

People will lose heart and their anger will pop

And the breakdown in society will be sadly grand

Oh! If we only paid heed to the lesson of Jethro

And continued in this land with lower levels in control

*But those days have passed us and surely we know
We have dug ourselves into a heavy government hole*

III. Return to Midian (verses 24-27)

²⁴ So Moses heeded the voice of his father-in-law and did all that he had said.

This verse seems to confirm that Moses was given the authority to decide the structure of the government under him. There is no indication that he went to God and asked if this advice was ok. Instead, he simply implemented it. As Adam Clarke points out -

"As the counsel was doubtless inspired by the Divine Spirit, we find that it was sanctioned by the same, for Moses acted in every respect according to the advice he had received." Adam Clarke

It was already seen in the first 12 verses of the chapter that Jethro was accepted by God; therefore, his advice is likewise acceptable for the administration of God's people.

²⁵ And Moses chose able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people: rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens.

As recommended by Jethro, Moses followed through with the advice, appointing rulers in a bottom-heavy manner. However, there is one point which isn't evident here, but which was seen clearly in Moses' words of Deuteronomy 1.

Instead of selecting all of the rulers personally, it says he gave the right of choosing the capable men to the people and he then approved them. This is perfectly in line with Jethro's intent and his words. It is the same pattern that was later used by the apostles in Acts 6 when selecting deacons for the ministry -

"Therefore, brethren, seek out from among you seven men of good reputation, full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business; ⁴ but we will give ourselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the word.'

⁵ And the saying pleased the whole multitude. And they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and the Holy Spirit, and Philip, Prochorus, Nicanor, Timon, Parmenas, and Nicolas, a proselyte from Antioch, ⁶ whom they set before the apostles; and when they had prayed, they laid hands on them." Acts 6:3-6

Like the later apostles, this organizational structure kept the matters of less importance where they could most easily be handled. And this is exactly what resulted with Moses...

²⁶ So they judged the people at all times;

This is a confirmation of verse 22 which said, "And let them judge the people at all times." Just as Jethro had recommended, so they did. The lower levels of authority administered justice anytime it was needed and were there to do so at all times.

^{26 (con't)} the hard cases they brought to Moses, but they judged every small case themselves.

The words of this verse are actually confirmed in several stories which intersperse the years of Israel in the wilderness. In Numbers 15, they had just such a case -

"Now while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, they found a man gathering sticks on the Sabbath day. ³³ And those who found him gathering sticks brought him to Moses and Aaron, and to all the congregation. ³⁴ They put him under guard, because it had not been explained what should be done to him.

³⁵ Then the LORD said to Moses, 'The man must surely be put to death; all the congregation shall stone him with stones outside the camp.' ³⁶ So, as the LORD commanded Moses, all the congregation brought him outside the camp and stoned him with stones, and he died." Numbers 15:32-36

Another such case involved the five daughters of Zelophehad and concerned inheritance rights. The lower levels could not agree on how to handle the matter and so it was brought to Moses who then went to the Lord concerning it. Take time to read Numbers 27:1-11 today. It is a story that is so important, that parts of it are repeated in five different parts of the Old Testament, from Numbers to Chronicles.

One final note on the account of Jethro's advice before we look at our last verse of the day - we should note with care that the term "Lord" or Yehovah has not been used once in the verses we looked at. Though it was used 6 times in the previous 12 verses, it is excluded from these last 15 verses.

The reason is that even though Yehovah is God, just as Jesus is God, there are roles assigned within the Godhead. The issuing of the Word comes from God, even though the Word is God. This is perfectly in line with Jesus' words of John 12 that were cited toward the beginning of the sermon.

27 Then Moses let his father-in-law depart, and he went his way to his own land.

If you remember, I highlighted the fact that the name Jethro is never used in these last 15 verses. The reason for this now becomes evident. This same departure is given more detail in Numbers 10, where a different name is used for him, Hobab.

"Now Moses said to Hobab the son of Reuel the Midianite, Moses' father-in-law, 'We are setting out for the place of which the LORD said, "I will give it to you." Come with us, and we will treat you well; for the LORD has promised good things to Israel.'

³⁰ And he said to him, 'I will not go, but I will depart to my own land and to my relatives.'

³¹ So Moses said, 'Please do not leave, inasmuch as you know how we are to camp in the wilderness, and you can be our eyes. ³² And it shall be, if you go with us—indeed it shall be—that whatever good the LORD will do to us, the same we will do to you.'" Numbers 10:29-32

Jethro is Hobab - they are the same person, but the name Hobab comes from the verb khavav which means "loves." Thus Khovav means "Beloved" or "Cherished." It is obviously the name by which he was remembered after this wonderful account, probably having been renamed by Moses because of his more than gracious advice which brought ease to Moses and order to Israel.

In picture, Jethro... or Hobab, is a type of Christ as well. He introduced the Bible to the term yaats or "counsel" in verse 19 and it is the same word used to describe the coming Messiah in Isaiah 9 where He is called, pele yoets or Wonderful Counselor. Hobab, the Beloved of Moses certainly fulfilled that role for him just as Jesus, the Beloved of God fulfills it for us.

Throughout the Bible, there are many people who come in, fulfill a role and then depart from the scene. Each is selected to show us a small picture of the Lord - His power, His wisdom, His love, His grace. Hobab was such a person. Together with Moses, they instituted a framework for society, both in the church and out, which has produced the most marvelous of results.

The farther we get from the counsel found in the Bible, the further we get from what is right and appropriate for sound living. Like the prodigal son who decided he could do things better without God, we eventually end in very bad straits and we will ultimately find out that life without our Father just doesn't work.

Maybe today you need to return to your heavenly Father and be reconciled to Him. The Bible tells you how you can... it tells us that it is through Jesus, the One whom all Scripture points to. Please let me tell you how He can bring you back home to God...

Closing Verse: "The words of the wise are like goads, and the words of scholars are like well-driven nails, given by one Shepherd." Ecclesiastes 12:11

Next Week: Exodus 19:1-9 (If You Will...) (52nd Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Wonderful Counsel

And so it was, on the next day
That Moses sat the people to judge
And the people stood before Moses
From morning until evening, everyone with a grudge

So when Moses' father-in-law saw
All that he did for the people, he said
“What is this thing that you are doing for the people?
Keep it up and you will lose your head
Why do you alone sit
And all the people stand before you
From morning until evening?”
It's just not right, the thing you do

And Moses said to his father-in-law, when he did prod
“Because the people come to me to inquire of God

When they have a difficulty
They come to me
And I judge between one and another, you see
And I make known the statutes of God and His laws - quite plainly

So Moses' father-in-law said to him

"The thing that you do is not good

Both you and these people who are with you

Will surely wear yourselves out; this is understood

For this thing is too much for you; put this away on a shelf

You are not able to perform it by yourself

Listen now to my voice

I will give you counsel, and God will be with you

Stand before God for the people

So that you may bring the difficulties to God, this you should do

And you shall teach them the statutes and the laws

And show them the way in which they must walk

And the work they must do, avoiding life's flaws

Listen to me Moses, as I continue to talk...

Moreover you shall select from all the people able men

Such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness

And place such to be rulers of thousands over them

Rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens

Yes, do as I address

And let them judge the people at all times

Then it will be that every great matter, every weighty grudge

They shall bring to you

But every small matter they themselves shall judge

So it will be easier for you, it's true

For they will bear the burden with you

If you do this thing, and God so commands you

Then you will be able to endure and the difficulties will cease

And all this people will also go, it's true

To their place in peace

So Moses heeded the voice instead

Of his father-in-law and did all that he had said

And Moses chose able men out of all Israel

And made them over the people each a head

Rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds as well

Rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens; not just him instead

So they judged the people at all times

The hard cases to Moses they brought

But they judged every small case themselves

They did as Jethro to Moses had taught

Then Moses let his father-in-law depart

And he went his way to his own land

To administration of the law, this was a great start

Moses paid heed, to his elder, a man so wise
And the advice he took became a standard in Israel
The advice was acceptable in God's eyes
And so Moses and the people carried it out quite well
We can learn from this story a lesson
That keeping authority at the lowest level is best
We then won't need to be a guessin'
If our lives will be fully blessed

When we handle the small stuff in life
And only pass up the big things to those above us
We will avoid a lot of unnecessary strife
A model approved in the Old Testament by Jesus
And when we have real cares or woes
We can skip every level and go straight to the Lord
For He alone every difficult resolution knows
And most are already laid out in His word

Thank You for the lessons Your word shows us
And thank You above all, O God, for the wisdom of Jesus

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 19:1-9 (IF YOU WILL...)

Was anyone here at the giving of the law at Mount Sinai? No? I didn't think so. And yet, in today's passage, God speaks of His voice as something that is to be obeyed by the people at all times. How can His voice be obeyed if it was only that one time in history that He spoke to the people in this way? How is that possible?

It's because even though there is no audible voice issuing forth, there is still the written account of His voice - at Sinai, through the prophets, through the mouth of Christ Jesus, and through the hand of the apostles. The word is the voice, merely in written form.

And so it is incumbent on us to pay heed to that voice as it slowly reveals the plan of redemption found in the pages of the Bible. As we read it, we should tremble, knowing with all certainty that it is the voice of our Creator.

Text Verse: "Then everyone who trembled at the words of the God of Israel assembled to me, because of the transgression of those who had been carried away captive, and I sat astonished until the evening sacrifice." Ezra 9:4

In Ezra's time, there were those who had transgressed the law of the Lord. This distressed the people because they had already been punished once for having rejected the word of the Lord. They were hardly back in the land from that exile and the people had started down the wrong path once again.

Those who trembled at the words of God gathered together in hopes of withholding His wrath from coming upon them once again. It is people like this that are rewarded for their faithfulness before God. Do you tremble at the words of God? Do you feel fear and remorse when you sin against Him?

He is a loving Father, but He is also a just Judge. Let us tremble at the words of God and do our utmost to be obedient and faithful to them. This is what He will tell the people that He expects of them in today's passage. So let's look into this word and let us accept it for what it is, the very words of our Creator revealed to us. It's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Israel Camped before the Mountain (verses 1-3)

1 In the third month after the children of Israel had gone out of the land of Egypt,

The words ba'khodesh ha'shelishi or, "In (the) new moon the third..." indicate that this is the first day of the third month. The new moon sets the timing of the new month in the Hebrew calendar. It is commonly accepted that unless the day of the month is given, then the first day of the month is the default day to be considered. The Bible provides specificity, but it also requires study and understanding to grasp its nuances.

This then would be the month of Sivan. It corresponds with around the end of May to early June. It is now the 47th day after departing from Egypt. The Passover was on the 14th of the first month and Israel departed in the night on the 15th day of the first month.

Counting 15 to 30 equals a total of 16 days. Then the second month would be 30 days long. This then would equal day 46. Now it is the first day of the third month, or day 47. Why should we care about this? Stay tuned to this same channel and you will soon see.

1 (cont) on the same day, they came to the Wilderness of Sinai.

Three names are given in this first verse - Israel, Egypt, and Sinai. Israel means, "He strives with God." It is a double entendre. He strives with God - either on His behalf or against His will, but either way Israel strives with God. Egypt means "Double Distress." Sinai means "Bush of the Lord."

A picture is being formed already in verse 1 for us to think about and contemplate. If, as traditional scholars believe, Mount Sinai is in the Sinai Peninsula, then the Wilderness of Sinai is a spacious plain around it known as Er Rahah.

The mountain itself, there in Sinai, is actually a collection of three peaks which consist of Jebel Musa, Mount Catherine, and Ras Sufsafeh. This corresponds with the writings of Josephus and many other ancient witnesses.

Other scholars disagree and place Sinai in various other locations, but the trek so far, the meticulous recording of the trek, and the timing involved in that trek seems to lead to this area of the Sinai Peninsula. It is where St. Catherine's Monastery is. Ellicott eloquently describes the choice of Mount Sinai for the giving of the law -

"Mount Sinai was a place which nature, not art, had made conspicuous, for it was the highest in all that range of mountains. Thus God put contempt upon cities and palaces, setting up his pavilion on the top of a mountain, in a barren desert."
Charles Ellicott

2 For they had departed from Rephidim, had come to the Wilderness of Sinai, and camped in the wilderness.

The last time Rephidim was mentioned was in Exodus 17:8 in the war with Amalek. After that came the insert account of Jethro and his advice to Moses which was placed there prior to the giving of the law even though it chronologically came almost a year later. That encompassed all of chapter 18.

Now we are told they have departed Rephidim for the Wilderness of Sinai without any intervening stops. This then corresponds with Numbers 33:15. It agrees that there were no stops between the two. Rephidim today is accepted to be a place called Wady Feiran.

To get to the wilderness of Sinai, or Er Rahah required one of two treks. One would be about 18 miles and the other about 25 miles. Both distances are attainable in a single long day of walking and so the account of the past matches what is acknowledged today.

² (con't) So Israel camped there before the mountain.

This area of Er Rahah is described as a plain which is about two miles long and about a half-mile wide which is "enclosed between two precipitous mountain ranges of black and yellow granite, and having at its end the prodigious mountain block of Ras Sufsafeh" (Stanley, Sinai and Palestine, p. 74).

It is rather flat and stunted tamarisk bushes cover the ground. According to writings about it, of all of the places in the Sinai Peninsula, it has the most abundant supply of water to be found.

³ And Moses went up to God,

What is implicit, but unstated, is that the pillar of cloud and fire moved to the mountain and rested there. Moses having been to this spot before now returns to it and ascends the mountain in order to determine God's will for the people after their long, arduous trek.

Unfortunately, unless you are reading this in Hebrew, it is pretty certain your Bible doesn't translate these words properly. Again, as has occurred at important points throughout the Exodus account, there is a definite article in front of "God." It says u'mosheh alah el ha'elohim - "And Moses went up to the God."

What is happening here is what was spoken about in Exodus 3 when Moses first met the Lord in the burning bush. The term God was used many times in that chapter, but the term ha'elohim, or "the God," was used just five times at key points in the narrative.

In verse 3:12, using the definite article it said, "I will certainly be with you. And this shall be a sign to you that I have sent you: When you have brought the people out of Egypt, you shall serve the God on this mountain." The term "the God" or ha'elohim, will be used three times in this chapter.

^{3 (con't)} and the LORD called to him from the mountain,

Suddenly, after going up to "the God," it says that the Lord, meaning Yehovah, called to him from the mountain. This is the same idea, but in reverse, as what occurred in Exodus 3:4 -

"So when the LORD saw that he turned aside to look, God called to him from the midst of the bush and said, 'Moses, Moses!'" Exodus 3:4

The same Lord who called from the bush is the God who now calls to Moses from the mountain. The promise of Exodus 3:12 is now coming to its fulfillment. The God, who is the Lord, will be worshipped on this mountain. Moses has accomplished the mission he so reluctantly accepted and he has led Israel to their anticipated meeting with the God, who is Yehovah. The name Lord, or Yehovah will be used 18 times in this chapter.

As a side note, Stephen refers to this account in Acts 7:30 where he says Moses met an Angel of the Lord. What is implied there is that it is the Lord Jesus, the Messenger of God, with whom Moses met.

^{3 (con't)} saying, "Thus you shall say to the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel:

This is a unique and interesting set of words. The name Jacob has not been mentioned since Exodus 3:6 when we read this -

Moreover He said, "I am the God of your father—the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob." And Moses hid his face, for he was afraid to look upon God. Exodus 3:6

However, the name "Israel" or "Israelite" has been used 104 times. And further, the term "house of Jacob" is rare in Scripture. This is the second of only 18 times it is used. The book of Isaiah uses it the most, nine times. The first time it was used was in Genesis 46:27 during the record of those who went to Egypt with Jacob.

Here, both terms, the house of Jacob and the children of Israel, are named in the same verse. This group of people who once was lowly and humbled when they entered Egypt, just as Jacob was when he fled to Padan Aram, had increased to become great just as their father when he returned home.

Thus the term "the children of Israel" is the increase of Jacob. Both terms are used here to reflect their humble origins as well as their national status. The only time the term is used in the Psalms, the same general thought is recorded -

"When Israel went out of Egypt,
The house of Jacob from a people of strange language,
² Judah became His sanctuary,
And Israel His dominion." Psalm 114:1, 2

It is to this house of Jacob, who are the children of Israel, that he now very precisely and succinctly states three things which He has accomplished for them...

*I have borne you on eagle's wings, tenderly caring for you
Raising you out of the nest, you are ready for a new way
I will show you marvelous things, in all that I do
In obedience you I will test, and in you marvels I will display*

*How I love you O Israel
But do you love Me? Will you follow and pay heed?
In advance to you I will tell
That you will fall away, and do so with speed*

*But after My anger subsides, I will gather you again to Me
And once more I will place you high among the nations
My word is My oath and surely you will see
So believe My word and rejoice in those expectations*

II. If... (verses 4-6)

4 'You have seen

atem reitem - The words in this verse are plural. The Lord is speaking to all Israel when He says "you."

4 (con't) what I did to the Egyptians, asher asiti l'mitsraim - "What I did to Egypt." Most translations say "the Egyptians," but what occurred happened to people, animals, and land. The words are surely speaking in an all-inclusive manner concerning the great deeds of the Lord.

In only a few words, a recap is made concerning the marvelous miracles and wonders which He brought upon them, from the first plague of blood all the way until the waters of the Red Sea closed over Egypt's armies.

4 (con't) and how I bore you on eagles' wings

wa'essa etkem al kanpe nesharim. Secondly, He notes how He bore them on eagle's wings. The word translated as "eagle" is neshar and is used for the first of 26 times in the Bible. It doesn't necessarily mean an eagle though. The HAW notes that "...the Semitic languages actually tend to lump the large soaring birds into one family."

Therefore it can include the eagle, hawk, harrier, vulture, and so on. In the case of this verse, the eagle more naturally brings out the sense for our imagination. It is a powerful and beautiful bird of prey. The theme here concerning being borne on the eagle's wings is mentioned elsewhere in Scripture. It is highly refined in Deuteronomy 32 -

"As an eagle stirs up its nest,
Hovers over its young,
Spreading out its wings, taking them up,
Carrying them on its wings,
¹² So the LORD alone led him,
And there was no foreign god with him." Deuteronomy 32:11, 12

The eagle will hover over its young, protecting them from the sun, from the cold, and from other potentially harmful elements which arise. During the entire time of their growth in the nest, the mother feeds them and prepares them for the moment when they will first take to flight.

Eventually, when the young eagle has developed enough, the parent will stir up the nest in order to lure the now-ready fledgling for that precious moment. As they take to flight, the parent will hover around them, fluttering in an encouraging manner.

The idea of being lifted up on its wings comes from the parent flying beneath the young one, probably to provide lift for the tired bird and to ensure it wouldn't fall to the earth. However, there are no reliable reports of a bird actually flying on its parent's wings and thus this is speaking in a phenomenological sense. Probably the most famous of such passages in Scripture is that of Isaiah 40 -

"Why do you say, O Jacob,
And speak, O Israel:
'My way is hidden from the LORD,

And my just claim is passed over by my God'?

²⁸ Have you not known?

Have you not heard?

The everlasting God, the LORD,

The Creator of the ends of the earth,

Neither faints nor is weary.

His understanding is unsearchable.

²⁹ He gives power to the weak,

And to those who have no might He increases strength.

³⁰ Even the youths shall faint and be weary,

And the young men shall utterly fall,

³¹ But those who wait on the LORD

Shall renew their strength;

They shall mount up with wings like eagles,

They shall run and not be weary,

They shall walk and not faint." Isaiah 40:27-31

In looking at these passages, we can see that like the eagle developing in a nest, Israel developed as it were in Egypt. When the time was right and she was ready for her flight, the Lord aroused like the parent and fluttered in order to prompt Israel to depart the nest. The symbolism is both highly tender and exceedingly beautiful.

They went from embryo to fully developed, and at that time, the Lord carried them upon Himself, even to Himself...

⁴ (con't) and brought you to Myself.

va'avi etkem alai - This is the third thing which the Lord claims to have done thus far for Israel. He brought them to Himself. There are two major ways in which these words are viewed. The first is that He brought them to Himself at Sinai where they could fellowship with Him. This is the prominent view.

But this then neglects the fact that the Lord was there with them in Egypt as an eagle is there with the young, protecting them and watching over them until they are ready for flight. It also neglects the fact that the Lord has been with them throughout all of the plagues and throughout the past 47 days of wilderness wanderings.

Instead, He is certainly saying that "I have brought you out of where you were. You were in a land of corrupting influences, you were living in a manner contrary to My glory and My righteous standards, and You have been brought to the place where I will reveal these to You. I will show You what is right, proper, and acceptable concerning worship of Me, your Creator and now your Redeemer."

This is certainly what is intended by the words va'avi etkem alai. He is speaking in a manner as if the matter is accomplished because He is God and He will complete what He has begun.

⁵ Now therefore, if you will indeed obey My voice

v'attah im shamoa tishmeu - "and you, if listening you will listen." It is asking for obedience. The Hebrew word im, or if, is a conditional word. "If you hear the words, it doesn't mean that you will truly listen to them. But if you do, if you hear them when they are proclaimed and then act on them as intended, then there will be a relationship between us which is unique in all the world."

It needs to be noted that the word qoli or "My voice" is equated directly with the word of God. In other words, it is true that the people at Sinai will hear the word of God spoken, but those after this time will not. And yet, they are asked to continue to hearken to qoli, or "My voice."

Thus, the written word of God carries the same weight and authority as the spoken word of God, because it is, in fact, the spoken word of God. If this isn't a terrifying thought for those who would misuse Scripture, then that heart is hardened even to foolishness. The Lord is asking them to hear and to apply the words of His voice to their lives

⁵ (con't) and keep My covenant,

Adam Clarke very well sums up these words and their significance for us. These words mean that they were to...

"...not only copy in their lives the ten commandments, but they must receive and preserve the grand agreement made between God and man by sacrifice, in reference to the incarnation and death of Christ; for from the foundation of the world the covenant of God ratified by sacrifices referred to this, and now the sacrificial system was to be more fully opened by the giving of the law." Adam Clarke

Clarke is right in that the covenant which will be presented to Israel is in reference to the death of Christ. The sacrificial system which they will be introduced to is explicitly explained in the book of Hebrews, particularly chapters 9 and 10. At this time, the Lord is asking them to do these things. And if they do, there will be an honor bestowed upon the people which is unmatched and without parallel in all of human history...

⁵ (con't) then you shall be a special treasure to Me above all people;

The words here are about as important to understand as any to be found in Scripture. Israel is promised that if they are obedient to the word of the Lord and faithful to His covenant, they will be a "special treasure" to Him. The word for

"special treasure" is segullah. This is the first of eight times it will be used in Scripture. The last being Malachi 3:17.

What the Lord means by this term will be explained in the next verse, but to the people, it was a word that held meaning in and of itself, and so they would understand it immediately. It comes from an unused root meaning "to shut up."

The idea is that something precious like a jewel or a peculiar treasure would be shut up because it was special. This word, though only used a limited number of times, is filled with both spiritual and theological treasure. Solomon uses the term in Ecclesiastes 2 -

"I also gathered for myself silver and gold and the special treasures of kings and of the provinces. I acquired male and female singers, the delights of the sons of men, and musical instruments of all kinds." Ecclesiastes 2:8

However, after only a few more verses, Solomon will note that it, along with all of his other riches, were mere vanity. In Solomon's words, we can see that special treasure, apart from God, has no meaning at all. This is all implied in the Lord's words to the people here. The conditional word "if" was given to show them this.

And this word of warning, "if," can be summed up perfectly in the last use of the word segullah in the Old Testament. In Malachi 3, we read this -

"Then those who feared the LORD spoke to one another,
And the LORD listened and heard them;
So a book of remembrance was written before Him
For those who fear the LORD
And who meditate on His name.

¹⁷ 'They shall be Mine,' says the LORD of hosts,
'On the day that I make them My jewels.
And I will spare them
As a man spares his own son who serves him.'
¹⁸ Then you shall again discern
Between the righteous and the wicked,
Between one who serves God
And one who does not serve Him." Malachi 3:16-18

Those who feared the Lord are those included in the "if" of His promises. The grace of the promise to Israel is given in advance of the giving of the law, but it carries a very large and consequential word within it... "if."

Only those who hold the Lord in such high esteem as to hearken to His voice and be obedient to His covenant will likewise be esteemed by the Lord. How sad that so many missed this and how many still miss it today.

⁵ (con't) for all the earth is Mine.

The previous words said that they would be the Lord's special treasure above all people, not "out of" all people. These words now explain that - "for all the earth is Mine." The words, however, have to be taken in light of what is later said in Luke 4 -

"Then the devil, taking Him up on a high mountain, showed Him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time. ⁶ And the devil said to Him, 'All this authority I will give You, and their glory; for this has been delivered to me, and I give it to whomever I wish. ⁷ Therefore, if You will worship before me, all will be Yours.'" Luke 4:5-7

The earth is the Lord's but the control of it was delivered to the devil when Adam fell in the Garden of Eden. In order for Israel to be the Lord's special treasure, He redeemed them. In the act of redemption, they again belonged to Him. But does this mean that all of Israel is, by default, the Lord's? The answer is, "No." This is seen from Jesus' own words in John 8 -

"You are of your father the devil, and the desires of your father you want to do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and does not stand in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaks a lie, he speaks from his own resources, for he is a liar and the father of it. ⁴⁵ But because I tell the truth, you do not believe Me." John 8:44, 45

In this, we see that physical redemption does not automatically follow through to spiritual redemption. Man remains in sin and sin must be atoned for. The Lord will provide a means for the atonement of sin within the covenant which He will make with Israel. But even that only points to the true atonement which is found in Christ Jesus alone.

⁶And you shall be to Me a kingdom of priests

The word "kingdom" implies a king. Israel was intended to be a theocracy. It was a nation with the Lord as its King. In this position as a people, they were to be priests. The word "you" is emphatic and thus it is making a distinction between them and all the other nations. This should be taken in two ways. First, all Israelites were entitled to come near before God without an intermediary.

In 1 Samuel 1, Hannah came before the Lord and prayed to Him directly. The Lord heard her prayer and responded to it, giving her a son, Samuel. In 1 Chronicles 4, Jabez called out to the God of Israel and He heard and granted his request. These are just two of countless times the Bible records the prayers of the people, performing the priestly role of speaking directly to God.

The people also brought their offerings to Him directly, they paid Him their vows, and they communed intimately with Him at feasts and even in the common days of the year.

The second way they can be considered as a kingdom of priests is that they had priests, the sons of Levi and Aaron, to conduct specific priestly duties on behalf of the people before the Lord, their King. No other nation had such a system and no other nations had priests who were considered acceptable to conduct these priestly functions in connection with His law.

⁶ (con't) and a holy nation.'

The idea of "holy" is that it is set apart. Israel was to be a holy nation because they were to be set apart from the world, living in a manner acceptable to the Lord based on the laws He would give them. They were to be consecrated to His service and then conduct themselves according to that consecration.

This holiness wasn't something conferred and which then carried on all by itself. This is shown throughout the entire law. When someone did something wrong or had a certain type of defect, such as leprosy, they were to be cut off or kept separate from the congregation. Probably the most explicit example of something defiling that which is holy is found in the book of Haggai -

“Thus says the LORD of hosts: ‘Now, ask the priests concerning the law, saying,¹² “If one carries holy meat in the fold of his garment, and with the edge he touches bread or stew, wine or oil, or any food, will it become holy?””

Then the priests answered and said, “No.”

¹³ And Haggai said, “If one who is unclean because of a dead body touches any of these, will it be unclean?”

So the priests answered and said, “It shall be unclean.”

¹⁴ Then Haggai answered and said, “‘So is this people, and so is this nation before Me,’ says the LORD, ‘and so is every work of their hands; and what they offer there is unclean. Haggai 2:11, 12

Where holiness does not transfer to that which is defiled, that which is defiled does corrupt that which is holy. Being a holy nation implied first being purified and then being separate in order to maintain that holiness through adherence to the law of the Lord.

The holiness of Yehovah is the origination and cause of the holiness of the people. The giving of the law is how that holiness will come about. Without that, they would have remained defiled. Adherence to that law is how it is maintained. From this process they became acceptable to Him as a people to dwell among and receive their praise and worship.

^{6 (con't)} These are the words which you shall speak to the children of Israel.”

Out of curiosity, I counted the total number of words in the Hebrew which comprise the Lord's words to Moses for him to repeat to Israel. This is from verse 4 through the first part of verse 6. It is just 37 words. The conditions were laid down and the promises were made in a mere 37 words. As the Pulpit Commentary notes -

"The question was a very simple one. Would they accept the covenant or no, upon the conditions offered? It was not likely that they would reject such gracious proposals." Pulpit Commentary

The decision of the people, based on these 37 words, has carried them through much blessing and many, many curses for the last 3500 years. But through it all, Israel has survived. The Lord has remained faithful to His end of the deal, despite their chronic faithlessness.

A kingdom of priests, holy to the Lord

Those whose prayers and offerings are acceptable to Me

This is what you will be if you heed My word

I tell you this now, speaking plainly

I shall purify you and you shall be holy

And you shall continue to observe as I command you to do

If you continue in obedience it will go well, you see

I have a wonderful plan of the ages which includes you

And someday a New Covenant I will make

It will be between you and Me, yes between us

The covenant will be made for your sake

And it will come through the shed blood of My Son, Jesus

III. All that the Lord has Spoken We Will Do (verses 7-9)

⁷ So Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and laid before them all these words which the LORD commanded him.

In order to transmit the message to the congregation, Moses called for the elders and relayed the words to them. Several translations use the literal words of the Hebrew, translating them directly by saying that Moses "laid before their faces" all the words of the Lord. "Before their faces" is an idiomatic Hebraism that simply means "before," or "in the presence of."

After speaking to the elders of the tribes, the words would go from tribe to family to household to individual. Very quickly the message would have been distributed to the ears of the congregation.

⁸ Then all the people answered together and said, "All that the LORD has spoken we will do."

Without even hearing the words of the covenant, the people as a united whole agreed to its terms. The word for "together" is yachad. It signifies that they were as one, wholly united in their approval. The 37 words were agreed to, including its conditional nature concerning obedience, as well as the benefits which will stem from a positive discharge of those expectations.

^{8 (con't)} So Moses brought back the words of the people to the LORD.

Although not explicit, to communicate the message to the people and then to carry it back to the Lord would have made it the next day. Therefore, this is now the 48th day since the exodus.

Moses' carrying back the words of the Lord was not a necessary thing for His information. The Lord is fully aware of all things. Rather, it is necessary as a part of the people's instruction. Moses is shown to the people to be the messenger and the mediator of the coming covenant.

⁹ And the LORD said to Moses, "Behold, I come to you in the thick cloud, that the people may hear when I speak with you, and believe you forever."

In response to the affirmation of the people to accept the stipulations they had been presented, the Lord tells Moses what to expect. "I will come to you in the thick cloud." The word "thick" is av and is introduced into the Bible at this time. The Hebrew reads, "I will come to you in the thickness of a cloud."

This thickness will be explained in verse 18 as the smoke of a furnace. The cloud is not the glory of the Lord, but that which veils the glory of the Lord. God is Light and in Him there is no darkness. But in order to conceal His majesty and save the people from perishing, the cloud was given to obscure His radiance.

Even the shining countenance of Moses which merely reflected His glory had to be veiled from the people. In giving this marvelous manifestation of Himself, two purposes would be made known. The first is the absolute Divine majesty of the Lord which they were to remember and fear, understanding that He wasn't just a magician's trick conjured up by Moses.

Secondly, it was to validate that Moses had, in fact, been chosen as the Lord's representative before the people and the people's representative before the Lord. The "you" in "and believe you" is emphatic. They were expected to accept and believe Moses for all time. In part at least, this has been realized.

Moses is revered among the people and is considered their great lawgiver. Unfortunately, the actual significance of both who the Lord is and what was

Moses' role was for the people has been warped and twisted in a million ways over the centuries. But there is a germ of understanding at least in most Jewish people.

What the people will be prepared for is to be an eternal obligation on all men. Jesus, speaking of the very law that the people are about to receive, says this about it -

"For assuredly, I say to you, till heaven and earth pass away, one jot or one tittle will by no means pass from the law till all is fulfilled." Matthew 5:18

9 (fin) So Moses told the words of the people to the LORD.

Doesn't it seem odd that this is an almost identical repeat of the statement made in verse 8? It seems both out of place and unnecessary in the extreme, unless one considers the significance of the words. "So Moses told the words of the people to the Lord."

This isn't a repeat of information that transpired between the two parties, Moses and the Lord. Rather, it is a statement concerning the two parties, Israel and the Lord. The repetition is given to show that the words of Israel had been transmitted to the Lord.

In essence, it is the sealing of the agreement. Israel has obligated itself to its future with these words. The words of the Lord through Ezekiel sum up this statement which is given here in verse 9 -

"What you have in your mind shall never be, when you say, 'We will be like the Gentiles, like the families in other countries, serving wood and stone.'" Ezekiel 20:32

Israel as a people committed itself to the Lord and the Lord committed Himself to them. But we cannot forget that conditional word concerning this coming covenant - "if." Israel will be holy if they maintain holiness. Israel will be secure if they rest in the Lord, but when they fail to meet the conditions, it would be different.

Within the covenant are promised blessings for obedience and curses for disobedience. Israel could not claim to be the Lord's special treasure if they were disobedient to His word and to His covenant. Instead, they could only expect His wrath.

The rest of the Old Testament will reveal Israel's complete inability to either heed His word or keep His covenant. In the New Testament, Paul gives several reasons for the giving of the law. The first is to show us God's perfect standard.

The second is to show us the impossibility of any person meeting that standard. The third is to show us how utterly sinful sin is to God. And the fourth is to show us our desperate need for something else; it is to show us our need for Christ Jesus. The law was intended to lead Israel directly to their need for their Messiah. And so in Jeremiah 31 we read this -

“Behold, the days are coming, says the LORD, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah— ³² not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt, My covenant which they broke, though I was a husband to them, says the LORD. ³³ But this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the LORD: I will put My law in their minds, and write it on their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people. ³⁴ No more shall every man teach his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, ‘Know the LORD,’ for they all shall know Me, from the least of them to the greatest of them, says the LORD. For I will forgive their iniquity, and their sin I will remember no more." Jeremiah 31:31

The New Covenant was not given to the Gentile people of the world; it was given to the house of Israel and the house of Judah. However, as a nation, they rejected it and as Paul explains, took another path -

"For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and seeking to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted to the righteousness of God.
⁴ For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes." Romans 10:3, 4

Therefore, God set Israel aside and did something rather unexpected, He allowed Gentiles to partake of the commonwealth of Israel until Israel was ready to receive God's righteousness instead of their own futile attempts at doing so.

During Israel's time of being set aside, which Paul explains in detail in Romans, the terms of the New Covenant were offered even to Gentiles who heard and gladly received it. The kingdom of priests moved from Israel to the church, regardless of national heritage.

We are now His segullah, his special people. Paul, writing to Titus, the church planter of Gentile-led churches, writes this for us to see who we are because of our faith in Christ -

"For the grace of God that brings salvation has appeared to all men,
¹² teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in the present age, ¹³ looking for the blessed hope and glorious appearing of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ,
¹⁴ who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from every lawless deed and purify for Himself His own special people, zealous for good works." Titus 2:12-14

And we are now His nation of kings and priests, called out from the world - both Jew and Gentile. John informs us of this in the last book of the Bible when writing to the seven Gentile-led churches in Asia -

"To Him who loved us and washed us from our sins in His own blood, ⁶ and has made us kings and priests to His God and Father, to Him be glory and dominion forever and ever. Amen." Revelation 1:6

However, and to the shame of replacement theologians everywhere, God is not done with Israel. The structure of the Bible itself shows us the pattern of redemptive history. Paul's letters come after the book of Acts to indicate the time of the Gentile-led church age, but immediately following that come the books addressed once again to the Hebrew people; the nation of Israel.

Peter, whose letter is not addressed to Gentiles, but to Jews - and which is placed after the Gentile-led church-age epistles, says this to his audience -

"But you are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, His own special people, that you may proclaim the praises of Him who called you out of darkness into His marvelous light; ¹⁰ who once were not a people but are now the people of God, who had not obtained mercy but now have obtained mercy." 1 Peter 2:9, 10

In these verses, Peter quotes the same words from Hosea that Paul used in Romans 9 to show that the Gentiles who were once not a people had now become the people of God. Peter, using those same verses, now shows that the Jews, who were not a people, are once again the people of God.

It is the restoration of Israel which is based on the words of the Lord found in today's verse, specifically, that humongous word "if!" The New Covenant was given in place of the Old. The Old is obsolete, but the promise to Israel is not. The New Covenant was promised while the Old was in effect and therefore it pertains to those who are coming out of the Old Covenant.

This is the very purpose of the last 7 years of Daniel's 70 7s, a 490-year period given to Israel to do exactly this, receive their Messiah and be reconciled to God through His shed blood. Has God abandoned His people Israel? Perish the thought! They abandoned Him, but He not only will not... He cannot abandon them.

The God of the Bible is unswervingly faithful to His word. It is the most reliable word of all. If He says He will accept you, then believe it. Trust that all of your mistakes can and will be washed if you just believe what He has accomplished for you. If you would like to receive Jesus today, let me explain to you how you can...

Closing Verse: "Heaven is My throne,
And earth is My footstool.
Where is the house that you will build Me?
And where is the place of My rest?
² For all those things My hand has made,
And all those things exist,"
Says the LORD.
"But on this one will I look:
On him who is poor and of a contrite spirit,
And who trembles at My word. Isaiah 66:1, 2

Next Week: Exodus 19:10-25 (A Law of Death and Condemnation) (53rd Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

"If" is a Conditional Word

In the third month after the children of Israel
Had gone out of the land of Egypt, by and by
On the same day, as the record does tell
They came to the Wilderness of Sinai

For they had departed from Rephidim
Had come to the Wilderness of Sinai by God's care
And camped in the wilderness
So Israel before the mountain camped there
And Moses went up to God
And the Lord called to him from the mountain, He did tell
"Thus you shall say to the house of Jacob
And tell the children of Israel:

"You have seen what I did to the Egyptians
And how I bore you on eagles' wings
And brought you to Myself
I have done all of these things

Now therefore, if you will indeed
Obey My voice and keep My covenant so divine
Then you shall be a special treasure to Me
Above all people; for all the earth is Mine

And you shall be to Me a kingdom
Of priests and a holy nation
These are the words which you shall speak
To the children of Israel, the congregation
So Moses came and called
For the elders of the people as the Lord demanded
And laid before them all these words
Which to him the Lord commanded

Then all the people answered together and said
“We will do all that the Lord has spoken
So Moses brought back the words
Of the people to the Lord, as a humble token
And the Lord said to Moses
“Behold, I will in the thick cloud come to you
That when I speak with you the people may hear
And believe you forever: this they will do
So Moses told the words of the people to the Lord
He told them this, according to the holy word

O God, "if" is such a big and difficult word
When we face daily trials, we usually fail
But Hallelujah to Jesus our Lord
Who over the law did prevail

In Him we have a greater hope, one solid and sure
Because of Him we too can stand in victory
And praise You all with lips cleansed and pure
And praise You eternally there at the glassy sea

Thank You, O God for our Lord Jesus!
Thank You, O God for all You have done for us!

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 19:10-25 (A LAW OF DEATH AND CONDEMNATION)

A few months ago, a friend asked me to watch the Ancient Aliens series on the History Channel. He wanted to know specifically about the things which don't seem to match the biblical account. I watched all of them that were available on Netflix and gave him a few short reports, but haven't had time to completely go over them.

The thing about that show, or any like it, is that when you have a presupposition about something, it will immediately affect your perspective on everything which you view in the world you live in. In other words, our worldview will naturally lead us to make conclusions, whether they are sound or not.

For the "ancient alien theorists," everything they see is biased by a worldview that ancient man was less, not more developed, and that he could only accomplish the great feats of the past by external help. As far as ancient religions, they want to see aliens everywhere and so they do.

Today's passage was one they spoke of. They believe that aliens, not the Lord, descended on Mount Sinai. As with each time they quoted the Bible in their series, their analyses of it were flawed and they would insert things which are not recorded in the Bible.

If they did this with the most studied and plainly available text on earth, the Holy Bible, then they certainly did it with all the other ancient texts they cite which very few have ever looked at and which lack a large body of textual support.

Be advised today, aliens did not descend onto Mount Sinai. The account is plain, clear, and it is tied directly into the work of Jesus Christ, as is every account in Scripture.

Text Verse: "For I say, through the grace given to me, to everyone who is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think, but to think soberly, as God has dealt to each one a measure of faith." Romans 12:3

Paul asks us to not think more highly of ourselves than we ought to. That idea will come into play later in our sermon today, but it also comes into play when we evaluate the Bible. We shouldn't think of ourselves as knowing more than God. Rather, let us take His word at face value and respect it for what it is.

Israel didn't have a close encounter of the third kind. Rather they had a close encounter of the wondrous kind when they stood before the Lord of Creation and received His law. Today we will see the beginning of that marvelous event. It's all to be found in His superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. Be Ready for the Third Day (verses 10-13)

¹⁰ Then the LORD said to Moses, "Go to the people and consecrate them today and tomorrow,

In order to be an acceptable group of people, holy to the Lord, Moses is now given instructions concerning the people. He is told to "consecrate" them. This means to sanctify or purify them. What is coming in the manifestation of the Lord upon the mountain required this above all else.

This consecration is actually a two-fold process. The more important of the two, inward purity, was to be prompted on by the external acts of purification. The external cleansing for the people is given so that those who conduct the rites would understand that these externals necessitated internal cleansing to be meaningful.

During the time they purified themselves externally, they should be working on the internal purification through prayer, contemplation of who they were in relation to the Lord, and putting away thoughts of self. Instead, they should regard what was coming as sacred and holy. All this was to be spurred on by the external rites.

In calling on Christ, we are immediately sanctified by the sealing of the Holy Spirit. However, in our natural lives, we are still not pure. In this life, as we conduct the external rituals - for example giving up on wrongdoing and replacing it with what is proper - we are inwardly renewed and purified. The external should lead naturally to the internal.

However, this isn't always the case. Nothing external, even if commanded, can secure inward purity. Someone who is simply giving up being an alcoholic may replace that vice with something else. The idea for growing to be like Christ is to replace that which is unholy with that which is holy.

The sanctification of the people for various reasons will continue to be seen during the time of the law. In both Joshua 3 and 7 the people were instructed to sanctify themselves in preparation for certain events. In Joshua 7, when a man committed a major transgression against the Lord, all of the people were to sanctify themselves in preparation for meeting with Him for a time of inspection -

Get up, sanctify the people, and say, 'Sanctify yourselves for tomorrow, because thus says the LORD God of Israel: "There is an accursed thing in your midst, O Israel; you cannot stand before your enemies until you take away the accursed thing from among you."¹⁴ In the morning therefore you shall be brought according to your tribes. And it shall be that the tribe which the LORD takes shall come according to families; and the family which the LORD takes shall come by households; and the household which the LORD takes shall come man by man.

¹⁵ Then it shall be that he who is taken with the accursed thing shall be burned with fire, he and all that he has, because he has transgressed the covenant of the LORD, and because he has done a disgraceful thing in Israel.” Joshua 7:13-15

Of the external rites which they conducted, the washing of their clothes is explicitly mentioned and it is so first...

10 (con't) and let them wash their clothes.

The first ordinance is pronounced here. It is the rite of washing their clothes. In these words is the second use of the word kabas, or wash, in the Bible, but it is the first time used in the sense of sanctification. In total, it will be used 51 times and almost always it will be for consecration, or sanctification of the people.

In the law itself, there will be numerous references to the washing of clothes for purification. The word comes from a primitive root meaning to trample; hence, to wash specifically by stamping with the feet. The washing is then either literal which included the fuller process, or figurative such as in Psalm 51 -

"Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean;
Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow." Psalm 51:7

As alluded to already, and as David shows in the Psalm, it isn't that the Lord regards the clothes of a man, but the inward change of the heart. However, this preparation mandated to the people by the Lord is right. If a person washes their clothes, their hearts may still be filled with wickedness. However, with the washing there would be time to think why they were doing this and how there should also be an internal cleansing that goes along with it.

Benson wisely notes that, "It becomes us to appear in clean clothes when we wait upon great men; so clean hearts are required in our attendance on the great God." Even prior to this time of the law, the washing of clothes was already seen in the Bible. In Genesis 35, Jacob instructed his household as follows -

"And Jacob said to his household and to all who were with him, 'Put away the foreign gods that are among you, purify yourselves, and change your garments.'" Genesis 35:2

However, if you followed the details of Jacob's life, and that particular sermon, you would know that his words to them pictured not just external cleansing, but the internal as well. In the end, it was given as a picture of the dispensational model of history and the final cleansing of God's people. And so ultimately, these washings picture the work of Christ. One example of this is recorded in the book of Hebrews where it says -

"...let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience and our bodies washed with pure water. ²³ Let us hold fast the confession of our hope without wavering, for He who promised is faithful." Hebrews 10:22, 23

The book of Revelation gives three explicit examples of this for us to consider. Remember, that the external garments are only given as emblems of the internal conversion of a person to Christ -

"You have a few names even in Sardis who have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with Me in white, for they are worthy. ⁵ He who overcomes shall be clothed in white garments, and I will not blot out his name from the Book of Life; but I will confess his name before My Father and before His angels." Revelation 3:4, 5

The white garments in which the redeemed are clothed may be real garments, but they symbolize their sinless nature because of the work of Christ. On the last page of the Bible we read this -

"Blessed are those who wash their robes, that they may have the right to the tree of life and may go through the gates into the city." Revelation 22:14

This is inclusive of all of the redeemed throughout history. But before that final time comes, there are those who, after the church age, will have to go through the tribulation in order to be purified. This is seen in our final verse to consider on such purification which is first being pictured here today at the foot of Mount Sinai -

"Then one of the elders answered, saying to me, 'Who are these arrayed in white robes, and where did they come from?'

¹⁴ And I said to him, 'Sir, you know.'

So he said to me, "These are the ones who come out of the great tribulation, and washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Revelation 7:13, 14

In the end, the Geneva Bible sums up this concept rather well and quite succinctly -

"Teach them to be pure in heart, as they show themselves outwardly clean by washing." Geneva

¹¹ And let them be ready for the third day.

This requirement of being ready "for the third day" is to mark the extremely sacred nature of what was to occur. If it was just a matter of washing one's clothes, they could appear the following day. Two days of cleansing showed it as far more than just an external rite.

Concerning this "third day," it now becomes important to understand what was relayed in the last sermon concerning verse 1 in this chapter. At that time, I explained in detail that the first day of the 3rd month was the 47th day since their departure.

Understanding that, Moses came back down from the mountain and spoke to the people the words reviewed during the first nine verses of the chapter. What is not explicitly stated, but which is to be inferred, is that it is now the 48th day of the account.

The reason for this is that Moses had to go back down and get an answer from the people and then go back up the mountain the next day. This is assured because of the words of verse 10 which said "Go to the people and consecrate them today and tomorrow."

If all of the events of verse 1-9 are included on the same day as this, there would be no time to consecrate for that day. Therefore, verse 10 begins the 48th day after the exodus. The importance of this is found in the next words of verse 11...

11 (con't) For on the third day the LORD will come down upon Mount Sinai in the sight of all the people.

In the Bible, the Lord is noted as dwelling in heaven. This is seen, for example, in Psalm 123 -

"Unto You I lift up my eyes,
O You who dwell in the heavens." Psalm 123:1

However, He is seen to not exclusively dwell there, but especially there; it is His abode. Because of this, when He appears on earth, He is said to "come down." This is seen not just here, but numerous times in Scripture. If this is the 48th day and the Lord will come down "on the third day" then that means He will come down on the 50th day. They are to consecrate themselves on the 48th day and on the 49th day.

Thus the Lord will appear to them on the 50th day, which corresponds to the 4th day of the Hebrew month Sivan. The reason why this is important is two-fold. First it looks forward to the Feast of Weeks, or Shavuot, which is found in Leviticus 23. In the instructions for that feast we read this -

"And you shall count for yourselves from the day after the Sabbath, from the day that you brought the sheaf of the wave offering: seven Sabbaths shall be completed. ¹⁶ Count fifty days to the day after the seventh Sabbath; then you shall offer a new grain offering to the LORD." Leviticus 23:15, 16

There is a period of fifty days which is counted off from the Feast of Firstfruits until a particular event occurs, which is the Feast of Shavuot. In Greek it is known as Pentecost. This leads to the second reason for the detail. It then corresponds to the giving of the Holy Spirit in the New Testament which is recorded in Acts 2 -

"When the Day of Pentecost had fully come, they were all with one accord in one place. ² And suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled the whole house where they were sitting. ³ Then there appeared to them divided tongues, as of fire, and one sat upon each of them. ⁴ And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." Acts 2:1-4

In type then, the giving of the law prefigures the giving of the Holy Spirit on Pentecost because of the 50 recorded days in each. As there was no Feast of Firstfruits at the time of the exodus, the feast is counted from the first day after the Passover rather than from the set date in Leviticus 23.

However, both events are preceded by a fifty-day period of learning from the Lord and anticipating a meeting with Him. In the end, unless a number of days are not recorded at this camp before the receiving of the law, the time here only matches the period leading up to the events - the giving of the law and the giving of the Holy Spirit - but the events don't match by calendar day of the month. It is possible, but not explicitly stated.

It should be noted that the term Sinai is used instead of Horeb. This is the same place that the elders were brought to in Chapter 17, but then it was called Horeb. Why has the Lord used the name Sinai? It is because of what it pictures.

¹² You shall set bounds for the people all around, saying, 'Take heed to yourselves that you do not go up to the mountain or touch its base.

Explicit instructions are given here concerning the setting of bounds using a new word introduced into the Bible. It is gabal - a verb used just five times, and two of them are in this chapter. It is the verb form of the more common noun gebul.

Both come from a root which means "to twist as a rope." Thus it indicates to bind or make a border. This is the idea given here. Whether the border was to be a trench dug around the mountain or if it was to be a rope braided for the purpose, it was necessary because the mountain at points rises directly out of the earth.

Therefore, a person or an animal could simply walk up to it and touch it. Such specific limits then were to be set and adhered to or the most serious of consequences would result...

^{12 (con't)} Whoever touches the mountain shall surely be put to death.

The consequences for merely touching the mountain are set. The person who does so is to be executed. The Hebrew uses the term mowt yumat - "dying he shall die." However, it wouldn't be possible to seize that person without also transgressing the command and so provisions for his execution were given in advance so that this wouldn't occur. Ellicott notes that -

"Unless it had been forbidden, there might have seemed to be no reason why pious Israelites might not have ascended the height, to draw near to God in prayer. It is a praiseworthy feeling which breathes in the words, 'Nearer, my God, to thee;' but the nation was not fit for close approach."

In contemplating the strictness of coming near to God during this dispensation of time, we should truly feel blessed that we have, under the Dispensation of Grace, the honor of being indwelt with the Holy Spirit and the joy of being allowed to come to the very throne of God in prayer. That is recorded in Hebrews 10 -

"Let us therefore come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need." Hebrews 4:16

Unlike us today though, for one who tried to get "Nearer, my God, to thee" there was to be a penalty...

¹³ Not a hand shall touch him, but he shall surely be stoned or shot with an arrow;

The KJV completely botched this verse by saying, "There shall not a hand touch it." This is speaking not of the mountain, but of the person who has touched the mountain who was referred to in the previous verse. It is to signify that the sin of touching the mountain by that person would then transfer to the person who touched him.

Instead of this, that person was to be stoned or shot. Thus it implied that a distance was kept between the offender and the executioners. This is now the third time stoning is mentioned in the Bible, but it is the first time it is given as a penalty from the Lord for a transgression of His law. The Hebrew says, saqowl yisaqel - "stoning you shall stone him."

Or if someone had an arrow handy, they were to shoot him with that. The word for "shot" is yarah. It specifically means to teach because in shooting or throwing a demonstration is made. Thus one learns by example. In this case, the person would learn their lesson by being on the receiving end of the arrow.

^{13 (con't)} whether man or beast, he shall not live.'

Adding in that a beast was to be killed may sound unnecessary or even vindictive, but this is not the case. The holiness of God is something that is referred to throughout Scripture. The fallen nature of creation is also mentioned explicitly by Paul in Romans 8. Even animals with no sense of reason were to be killed if they violated this precept.

Secondly, if an animal were to be allowed to live after touching the mountain of the Lord, it could then be turned itself into an idol by the people who saw it. In essence, "Holy Cow! This is a holy cow because it was sanctified by the Lord atop the holy mountain." If you don't believe this is possible, take a peek at the millions of relics, or beasts, adored and worshipped by countless false religions.

¹³ (con't) When the trumpet sounds long, they shall come near the mountain."

This is the first mention of the yobel, or trumpet, in the Bible. It specifically refers to a ram's horn, but it also means "jubilee." It is used 27 times from Exodus through Joshua. There is no reason to assume that this isn't a literal trumpet as so many scholars do. Throughout the Bible, and even into the NT, trumpets are recorded both from an earthly and a heavenly perspective.

When this trumpet sounds, it says "they shall come near the mountain" using the same words as verse 12 which forbids the people from coming near the mountain. Why? The answer to this is that "they" or hemmah in Hebrew is emphatic. The "they" then is not given to speak of the congregation, but it is to explain those who will be allowed to go up in verses 20-24.

In all, verses 10-13 have been given to show the absolute holiness of the Lord and the penalties for violating His standards. It is an advance picture for us of the four purposes for the giving of the law to the people of the world -

- 1) To show us God's perfect standard.
- 2) To show us that no person could meet that standard; all are unqualified without God's grace and mercy being bestowed on them.
- 3) To show us how utterly sinful sin is to God. And,
- 4) To show us our need for something else - that grace which can only come by Someone fulfilling that law on our behalf. And as only God can do that, He sent His Son, Jesus Christ - fully God and fully Man - into the world to do so. It is the grace which we cannot do without.

*With the law there is death and condemnation
It is God's standard, which no one can meet
Who is there from any people group or nation?
Who can claim that through the law, sin they did defeat?*

*Where can we go? This law stands against us
When we heard its words, death came through our door
O God! Please send the Messiah - send us Jesus
And through Him we shall live again, yes live forever more*

*Only He can bring us to the Holy Mountain
Only He can bring us up to the very throne of God
From Him alone can come the cleansing fountain
So that for eternal days, in Your light can we tread*

II. Meeting with God (verses 14-17)

¹⁴ So Moses went down from the mountain to the people and sanctified the people, and they washed their clothes.

In obedience to the word of the Lord, Moses descends and sanctifies the people. They are being prepared for the meeting which was originally promised back in Exodus 3:12 where Moses was told that when he had brought the people out, they would serve Him on this mountain. That time has now come and the necessary preparations are being made.

¹⁵ And he said to the people, "Be ready for the third day;

This explanation is certainly given for the consecration, but it is also for the construction of whatever type of barrier would be made to keep the people from the mountain. Whether by ditch, mound, rope, or something else, the people needed to be ready for the day, just as directed by the Lord through Moses.

^{15 (con't)} do not come near your wives."

This prohibition is given for at least one and possibly two reasons. The first was to avoid ritual uncleanness. Though the law had not yet been given, it is a standard of the Lord's law which is found in Leviticus 15:18. This is seen explicitly in the life of David in 1 Samuel 21 when David was offered the holy bread of the priests -

"And the priest answered David and said, 'There is no common bread on hand; but there is holy bread, if the young men have at least kept themselves from women.'" 1 Samuel 21:4

The second reason can only be inferred. That would be so that the people's minds would be on the Lord and on what lie ahead of them when He would appear to them. Rather than thinking about the carnal, they could reflect on the spiritual. There is a New Testament parallel to this in 1 Corinthians 7 -

"Do not deprive one another except with consent for a time, that you may give yourselves to fasting and prayer; and come together again so that Satan does not tempt you because of your lack of self-control." 1 Corinthians 7:5

¹⁶ Then it came to pass on the third day, in the morning, that there were thunderings and lightnings, and a thick cloud on the mountain;

This verse, at least in part, is given as a parallel to the resurrection of Christ which occurred on the morning of the third day. Both events were predicted in advance to occur on that day, and though the displays are somewhat different, they were given for the people to believe -

"And behold, there was a great earthquake; for an angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat on it. ³ His countenance was like lightning, and his clothing as white as snow. ⁴ And the guards shook for fear of him, and became like dead men." Matthew 28:2-4

There in the morning on the third day, the Bible describes the scene as an amazing display of splendor. It first mentions qolot, or "voices" which are translated as "thunders." It is probably accurate because in Revelation 4 which describes the scene of the throne of God in heaven, it says that "from the throne proceeded lightnings, thunderings, and voices" (4:5).

Along with the voices or "thunderings" came "lightnings." This is the first time they are mentioned in the Bible. It is the noun baraq, which comes from a verb which means "to flash forth." Along with these two came anan kaved or "a dense cloud." The scene would have been marvelous to behold. In what was probably a perfectly clear day otherwise, the majesty of the Lord would be highlighted there atop the mountain.

^{16 (con't)} and the sound of the trumpet was very loud, so that all the people who were in the camp trembled.

As another amazing display of God's majesty, it says v'qol shophar khazaq meod - the voice of the trumpet was mighty, very. The word for trumpet here is not the same as in verse 13. There it was yobel, now a new word is introduced to the Bible, shophar.

Like the yobel, this shophar signifies a ram's horn. It is used 72 times in the Old Testament, an opposite of the 27 times yobel is used. They are used somewhat interchangeably at times. This trumpet would be the sound of the herald calling the people's attention to this most significant moment in redemptive history.

That same trumpet sound was blown throughout the land by the people of Israel on Yom Teruah, or the Feast of Trumpets, on the day when Christ Jesus was born. The people, while celebrating their feast day, unknowingly hailed their true King as He lay in a manger in Bethlehem.

The heavenly shophar will be blown again at the rapture of the church according to 1 Corinthians 15 and 1 Thessalonians 4. And heavenly trumpets will also sound during the tribulation period, marking out awesome events which will occur during that terrible time on earth.

¹⁷ And Moses brought the people out of the camp to meet with God, and they stood at the foot of the mountain.

From this, it's obvious that the camp was spread out in the area and not directly at the mountain's base. When the great and awesome display began, Moses personally led them out to the base of the mountain. Measurements of the base of Mt. Sinai prove that there was enough space for even such a large congregation to gather.

Here again is a poor rendering of the Hebrew. The word ha'elohim or "the God" is used. The Israelites were not being brought out to "a god." Instead they were being brought out to "the God." Elohim is mentioned three times in this chapter, and all three contain the definite article.

Throughout the chapter Yehovah or "the Lord" is mentioned 18 times and so the article is given to show that "the God" is the Lord, Yehovah. The wording is specific so that we won't miss what is being relayed.

*A trumpet blast is sounded, one that brings death to all
It warns that the law is about to be heard
And with thunderings and lightnings comes the deathly pall
Soon is coming that most terrifying word*

*There is smoke as judgment comes down in fire
Smoke like a furnace, God's wrath is on display
There at Calvary comes the heavenly pyre
And as the Savior dies, the sin is washed away*

*A trumpet blast is heard, one that brings life once more
The dead shall be raised not in condemnation, but in victory
It will raise the redeemed and carry them across to the other shore
Where we shall sing the praise of the Lord, there by the glassy sea*

III. The Blast of the Trumpet (verses 18-25)

¹⁸ Now Mount Sinai was completely in smoke, because the LORD descended upon it in fire.

The word "smoke" here is the word ashan. This is the first time it is used in the verb form in the Bible. The World English Bible gives the proper sense of what occurred - "Mount Sinai, all it, smoked." But it's important to understand the symbolism here. Smoke in the Bible is a metaphor for "wrath." For example, in Psalm 74 we read this -

"O God, why have You cast us off forever?
Why does Your anger smoke against the sheep of Your pasture?" Psalm
74:1

The smoke then is not just for a majestic display, but it is seen with the giving of the law to show that God is utterly wrathful at the sins of humanity. God's standard is revealed in this law which we continuously violated and as Paul says in the New Testament -

"For if those who are of the law are heirs, faith is made void and the promise made of no effect, ¹⁵ because the law brings about wrath; for where there is no law there is no transgression." Romans 4:14, 15

But there is also another aspect in the majestic display. It says the LORD descended upon it in fire. Fire is given for two main reasons. The first is for judgment and condemnation; the second is for purification. The law would bring judgment on any who violated its precepts or it would purify those who perfectly adhered to it. Unfortunately, as Paul noted, the law brings about wrath as none can perfectly adhere to it.

However, in Christ who fulfilled the law, there is purification. All of this is being seen in this marvelous display, recorded for us to participate in and to understand. And to ensure that we do understand that this is exactly what is being seen, we continue...

18 (con't) Its smoke ascended like the smoke of a furnace, and the whole mountain quaked greatly.

The word kibshan, or furnace, is used just four times in the Bible - once at the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, twice in Exodus 9 during the plague of boils, and now here. Each of these points to wrath and judgment.

And one more time, in Revelation 9, the same terminology will be used at the blowing of the fifth trumpet judgment. The picture we are seeing here at Sinai reflects the wrath of God at the sins of man. And yet, it also shows us a picture of the grace to come.

The Lord descends upon Sinai, the Bush of the Lord, in fire and smoke which ascends like that of a great furnace. It is a picture of the cross where Christ, adorned and capped with a crown of thorns, once and for all-time judged the sins of man through fulfillment of the very law that He gave to show us our desperate need for Him.

How people have missed this symbolism is simply beyond me. Not a commentary I read equated what occurs here with the work of the Lord on Calvary. And yet, it is as plain and obvious as it can be when looking at the particular words used.

19 And when the blast of the trumpet sounded long and became louder and louder, Moses spoke, and God answered him by voice.

The word for "sounded long" here is not the same as in verse 13. This word means "to go." Therefore, this is a series of blasts which increased in sound, probably to a frightening degree. Though it doesn't say what Moses spoke to God, it is probably the words of Hebrews 12:21 - "I am exceedingly afraid and trembling."

However, to reassure him, it says that ha'elohim or "the God" answered him by voice. If there was fear in the man, then there was tenderness from the Lord to calm him. The Lord displayed His awesome majesty to the people below while at the same time He revealed His benevolent grace to his servant through tender speech.

²⁰ Then the LORD came down upon Mount Sinai, on the top of the mountain.

If this occurred at the traditional location held to as Mount Sinai, then the Lord would have come down, not on the highest point of the mountain, but at the highest part visible from the plain of Er-Rahah. This would be on the peak known as Ras Sufsafeh.

^{20 (con't)} And the LORD called Moses to the top of the mountain, and Moses went up.

In order to demonstrate that Moses alone was qualified to mediate for the people, the Lord calls for him to come up. It will be a quick climb for a very specific purpose and then a quick descent which will follow.

²¹ And the LORD said to Moses, "Go down and warn the people, lest they break through to gaze at the LORD, and many of them perish.

No sooner had Moses come to the Lord than he was immediately given instructions to go back down and warn the people. What is happening here concerns personal feelings of self-worth. Instead of speaking to Moses from the mountaintop as He did in the previous verse so that the people could hear, He called Him up to show that they were not set apart in the way they thought they were.

His first words are that the people shouldn't break through and gaze at the Lord. First, to attempt to gaze at the Lord would inevitably result in leaving an impression in their minds of which they could then form an image. This in turn would lead to idolatry.

Secondly, it's apparent that even though they were already told not to break through, they had the inclination that because Moses could, then so could they. This same attitude will be seen after the giving of the law as well -

"They gathered together against Moses and Aaron, and said to them, 'You take too much upon yourselves, for all the congregation is holy, every one of them, and the LORD is among them. Why then do you exalt yourselves above the assembly of the LORD?'" Numbers 16:3

But they were mistaken. There was a penalty for gazing upon the perfection of the Lord which is that many of them would perish. This was warned to the priests in Numbers 4:20 and a magnificent example of it is seen in 1 Samuel 6:19. This idea of the people thinking more of themselves than they ought is confirmed by the next verse...

²² Also let the priests who come near the LORD consecrate themselves, lest the LORD break out against them."

Although the Levites have not yet been established as priests, this does not mean that the people didn't have priests who ministered to God for them. In Exodus 24:5, which is before the assignment of the priests under the law, certain men "offered burnt offerings and sacrificed peace offerings of oxen to the LORD."

Therefore, this verse is telling us that these priests thought they were already consecrated because of their duties and so they didn't bother purifying themselves as they were instructed. The Lord is telling them that, in fact, they had thought too highly of themselves and they were about to get rubbed out.

²³ But Moses said to the LORD, "The people cannot come up to Mount Sinai; for You warned us, saying, 'Set bounds around the mountain and consecrate it.'"

Moses, not fully comprehending either the gravity of the situation, nor yet the full holiness of the Lord, attempts to placate Him by telling him the people have already been instructed. It is as if he thinks the Lord is unaware of the circumstances around him.

The Lord is thinking on the terms of national transgression - the entire congregation breaking though, but Moses cannot comprehend this. The "You" is emphatic. "'You' warned us." He cannot believe that one would transgress because the penalty was death. And so he certainly couldn't comprehend that the whole nation would transgress.

He then mentions that bounds have been set around the mountain to consecrate it. Nothing has been said about the mountain being consecrated to this point although it is inferred in having separated the people from it. So far only the consecration of the people has been noted, but this explains what is going on.

The people were consecrated; the priests thought they were already consecrated; and the mountain is consecrated. If Moses can climb up it, then surely they could too. It is presumptuous thinking on the part of the entire nation and it is a pattern which will be seen throughout their history, even into the New Testament times and which is even seen in them in a great measure today.

Moses simply doesn't understand, but the Lord does and His next words are words of urgency...

24 Then the LORD said to him, "Away! Get down and then come up, you and Aaron with you.

There is a rebuke in the words. Moses thought He could change the unchanging mind of the Lord. Unlike us, He does not change like shifting shadows. He understands the nature of man better than any man. And so he simply says lek, red - "Away! Get down!"

And then he follows up with the basic instructions which are actually intended for the entire congregation to understand - "Come back, just you and Aaron." The people were ready to come up and they will learn that it isn't in the cards. Only Moses and Aaron will ascend the mountain to meet with the Lord.

24 (con't) But do not let the priests and the people break through to come up to the LORD, lest He break out against them."

For the second time, Moses is told that the Lord will break out against the people if they violate the pre-set standards. Neither priest nor common person would be allowed to come up.

What is rather unfortunate is that in verses 21 & 24, the word for the people breaking through is haras which gives the idea of break down or tear down something. But in verses 22 & 24, the word for the Lord breaking through is parats, which gives the idea of breaking through, maybe like a ram. It is a completely different word and yet translations use the word "break" for translating both.

The idea is that if the people break down that which has been established, the Lord will break through them in judgment. Again, it is a picture of the giving of the law itself. When we break down the precepts of the law, God will break out against us. Without understanding what the words are saying, the picture that is being made is lost. Adam Clarke poetically describes the need for Moses to communicate to the people -

"God knew that they were heedless, criminally curious, and stupidly obstinate; and therefore his mercy saw it right to give them line upon line, that they might not transgress to their own destruction." Adam Clarke

25 So Moses went down to the people and spoke to them.

These concluding words of Chapter 19 come directly before the giving of the Ten Commandments. The people had been, as it were, rebuked. They assumed that they could come forward and fellowship with this terrifying and holy God because they had been consecrated. Moses told them otherwise.

They were merely consecrated to hear the words of condemnation which would soon follow. They had not been consecrated to come near to Him in an intimate way. That would not come about for another 1500 years when those same commandments were fulfilled by the Lord when He came to dwell among us in human flesh.

The words they are about to hear will not make them holier. Instead they will only show them how utterly miserable they are in the presence of true holiness. They will show them how utterly sinful sin is to God and they will reveal the glory of the Lord alone who can meet those awesome words.

Let us never think more highly of ourselves than we ought. Instead, let us be infinitely grateful that God put us on the other side of the cross, where faith in Christ leads us not to condemnation, but to salvation. Matthew Henry understood this -

"...the Divine law is binding as a rule of life. The Son of God came down from heaven, and suffered poverty, shame, agony, and death, not only to redeem us from its curse, but to bind us more closely to keep its commands." Matthew Henry

The law which stood opposed to us is fulfilled and nailed to His cross. And our sins are nailed to it as well, covered by the blood which ran down and removed those frightening words of condemnation. Thank God for Jesus Christ. If you have never received God's forgiveness through His shed blood, let's get that fixed today - even right now...

Closing Verse: "For you have not come to the mountain that may be touched and that burned with fire, and to blackness and darkness and tempest, ¹⁹ and the sound of a trumpet and the voice of words, so that those who heard it begged that the word should not be spoken to them anymore. ²⁰ (For they could not endure what was commanded: 'And if so much as a beast touches the mountain, it shall be stoned or shot with an arrow.' ²¹ And so terrifying was the sight that Moses said, 'I am exceedingly afraid and trembling.')

²² But you have come to Mount Zion and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, to an innumerable company of angels, ²³ to the general assembly and church of the firstborn who are registered in heaven, to God the Judge of all, to the spirits of just men made perfect, ²⁴ to Jesus the Mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling that speaks better things than that of Abel." Hebrews 12:18-24

Next Week: Exodus 20:1-12 (Ten Not So Simple Commands, Part I) (54th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

The Lord Came Down

Then the Lord said to Moses

“Go to the people and them today and tomorrow consecrate

And let them wash their clothes

To be ready for the magnificent date

And let them be ready for the third day

For on the third day will come down the Lord

Upon Mount Sinai in the sight of all the people

This is according to My word

You shall set bounds for the people all around

Saying, ‘Take heed to yourselves that you do not Go up to the mountain or touch its base

Whoever touches the mountain shall be put to death on the spot

Not a hand shall touch him

But he shall surely be stoned or with an arrow shot

Whether man or beast, he shall not live

He shall die there on the spot

When the trumpet sounds long tell them not to fear

To the mountain they shall come near

So Moses went down from the mountain
To the people and he they sanctified
And they washed their clothes
This was done so that God would be glorified

And he said to the people, "Be ready for the third day
Do not come near your wives, this to you I do say
Then it came to pass on the third day
In the morning, that thunders and lightnings there were
And a thick cloud on the mountain
And the sound of the trumpet was very loud for sure
So that all the people who were in the camp trembled
The awesome sight had them all humbled

And Moses brought the people out
Of the camp to meet with God
And they stood at the foot of the mountain
Certainly trembling in the shoes with which they were shod
Now Mount Sinai was completely in smoke
Because the Lord descended upon it in fire
Its smoke ascended like the smoke of a furnace
As if there were an enormous, even heavenly pyre
And the whole mountain quaked greatly
And when the blast of the trumpet sounded long

And became louder and louder
Moses spoke, and God answered him by voice so strong
Then the Lord came down upon Mount Sinai
On the mountain at the top
And the Lord called Moses to the top of the mountain
And Moses went up

And the Lord said to Moses, heed my word
“Go down and the people warn
Lest they break through to gaze at the Lord
And many of them perish as I have sworn
Also let the priests who come near the Lord
Themselves consecrate
Lest the Lord break out against them
For them it would be a terrible fate

But Moses said to the Lord
“The people cannot come up to Mount Sinai, to wit:
For You warned us, saying
“Set bounds around the mountain and consecrate it
Then the Lord said to him, “Away!
Get down and then come up, you and Aaron with you
But do not let the priests
And the people break through

To come up to the Lord
Lest He break out against them
According to His word
So Moses went down to the people and to them he spoke
That the words of the Lord were not just a joke

Lord, with this awesome display of who You are
It makes knowing Jesus all the more glorious
Instead of fire and smoke, judgment and wrath
You have shown grace and mercy to unworthy us

Thank You for the cross of Calvary
Thank You for the judgment which in turn has set us free
Thank You for what He did on that marvelous tree
For Your goodness we shall praise You eternally

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 20:1-12 (TEN NOT SO SIMPLE COMMANDS, PART I)

Last week we saw the terrifying sight that Israel beheld as the Lord descended on Mount Sinai. The land quaked, the fire burned, and there was smoke like a furnace billowing to the heavens. All of it pictured not just glory, but also wrath. The Lord was about to give His law and with it came a demonstration of the greatest of wrath.

Today, we will begin to see why. Ten simple commands! Yes, seemingly so. But in reality, the truth is no, no, no! Who can look at this terrifying body of law and say, "I have lived these perfectly?" Only a fool would contemplate them carefully and then say, "Yep, I've done it. I deserve a seat next to God in heaven. He owes me... big time."

Text Verse: "You shall therefore keep My statutes and My judgments, which if a man does, he shall live by them: I am the LORD." Leviticus 18:5

How many of us have children here? Did any of you have to teach them to do wrong? Can anyone here say, honestly and with a straight face, "My son or daughter has never told a lie?" How about this, "My son or daughter has never done anything to upset me?" Anyone?

If you answered one or both questions in the positive, I question your truthfulness. And if you didn't, do you think your parents would have answered any differently? No, certainly not. The law has its purpose, but it isn't to show us how good we are. Let's get that straight.

We'll go over the reasons for the giving of the law again today which we looked at last week. It will be a good reminder for us as we try to grasp the magnitude of the laws we are to contemplate and reflect on. There is a lesson in the giving of the law and it is revealed slowly and methodically in the pages of God's superior word. And so let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The First Three Commandments (verses 1-7)

1 And God spoke all these words, saying:

Chapter 20 begins with a verse of preparation. As happens from time to time, the words are offset as a single verse and don't include anything of what is said. They simply tell us that something was said. The eager anticipation for our ears is, "What did God speak?"

It is of note that "God" was mentioned three times in chapter 19 and all three times a definite article was used - ha'elohim or "the God." However, chapter 20 begins with the assumption that the One speaking is the One and only God by leaving off the article. It simply says "elohim spoke." Later in verses 20 and 21, the article will again be included, but until then it will be left off each time.

The coming commandments are known to us as "the Ten Commandments." However, in Hebrew, they are called asheret ha'davarim, or "the Ten Words." Other names will be given for them when they are referred to in the Old Testament, such as "the tablets of the covenant," "the two tablets," and so on. In the New, they will be referred to simply as "the commandments."

In this chapter, we are told that it is Yehovah who speaks the words of the law. However, three times in the New Testament - in Acts, Galatians, and Hebrews - it speaks of the law being given through "angels," plural. There are two things to consider on this.

First, in Acts 7:38, Stephen says that the Angel spoke to them on Mount Sinai and the word is singular. Thus it refers to the Lord Jesus. Secondly, the word for "angel" does not necessarily mean a heavenly being. It simply means "messenger."

When they are referring to the law in those passages, it is speaking of the entire law, including the Ten Commandments. Verse 19 will explain the giving of the law. Moses will be the mediator between the people and the Lord as he receives it.

Further verse 24 of the previous chapter says Aaron was with him. Thus, they are both considered messengers of God for the giving of the law to Israel, even if Aaron wasn't with Moses at all times. This then explains the words of the New Testament where the law was administered through angels, or "messengers." It is speaking of Jesus, Moses, and Aaron.

² "I am the LORD

anokhi Yehovah - These words, are the first words of the Ten Commandments from the mouth of the Lord. In them, they identify that He is Yehovah, the self-existent Creator of all things. To more fully understand what the name Yehovah encompasses, you can go back and watch the sermon on Exodus 3:14. Suffice it to say that He is the One and only true God and yet despite that, he is not the only "god." This is evidenced quite clearly in the next words...

^{2 (con't)} your God, elohekha - Yehovah asserts the right to call Himself "your God" to the people of Israel. They had agreed with their own mouths to receive Him as such in the previous chapter -

"So Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and laid before them all these words which the LORD commanded him. ⁸ Then all the people answered together and said, 'All that the LORD has spoken we will do.' So Moses brought back the words of the people to the LORD." Exodus 19:7, 8

Though He is the Creator of all things and the Lord of all in reality, He does not push Himself upon either Israel or the people of the world. Even today there are many "gods" in the world. But there is only One true God. Based on the words of their agreement, He now establishes His right to exclusivity over Israel with the words anokhi Yehovah elohekha - I am Yehovah your God.

Note though that this is an individual address to each person. It is not an address to the nation collectively. The singular is intended for all individually. From this moment on He has claimed title and authority over each person of Israel. They now have a God and He now has a peculiar people reserved for Himself.

² (con't) who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

The Lord claims the right to be their God not because He created them, but because He had redeemed them. It was He who brought Israel out of Egypt. They were in bondage and He delivered them from that bondage. This is actually rather interesting because the Lord gave Adam a direct command in the Garden of Eden which was based on Him being the Creator –

"Then the LORD God took the man and put him in the garden of Eden to tend and keep it. ¹⁶ And the LORD God commanded the man, saying, 'Of every tree of the garden you may freely eat; ¹⁷ but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat, for in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die.'" Genesis 2:16, 17

In the garden He gave the law as the Creator, and so the question arises as to why He didn't do that again for Israel. The answer is that man is in bondage to another and he belongs to him. This is found all the way towards the end of the Bible in 1 John 3 -

"He who sins is of the devil, for the devil has sinned from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil." 1 John 3:8

All belong to the devil unless redeemed by God. He redeemed Israel out of Egypt and therefore He appeals to them as their Redeemer, not their Creator. His commands then are based on a hope of loving respect from His people and not out of fear. Adam's command was given out of fear - "in the day that you eat of it, you shall surely die."

However, in these 10 Commandments, there is no note of penalty for disobedience as if they were slaves. Instead they are given as an appeal to conscience as to free men. This does not mean that penalties won't be forthcoming from the law.

The wellbeing of the entire nation necessitated statutes and penalties for disobedience, but these were not to be the basis of obedience for the true Israelite. For such a person, it was based on love for his Redeemer. However, there is the truth which was seen in the last chapter. In verse 18, we read this –

"Now Mount Sinai was completely in smoke, because the LORD descended upon it in fire. Its smoke ascended like the smoke of a furnace, and the whole mountain quaked greatly." Exodus 19:18

The symbolism given was explained at that time as that of wrath and condemnation, not salvation. What was implied is that the law that was to be introduced could never bring salvation. Even the true Israelite who loved God's law could never fully meet the strict standards of the law. None could meet them perfectly.

Were it not for the provision within the law itself for an annual day of atonement, the law would only bring wrath and condemnation to any and all who attempted to live by it. Thus, the display was messianic in nature. The wrath of God would be poured out on the only One who could ever fulfill this law; the One who embodied it through keeping it. Paul explains this in Galatians 3 -

Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, having become a curse for us (for it is written, 'Cursed is everyone who hangs on a tree')."
Galatians 3:13

And this brings us to one more point before we look at these ten magnificent laws. As all men are bound under sin and are thus of the devil, and as only God can redeem them from their sin, then it follows logically that Jesus must be God.

Jesus' appeal to His people, like the appeal here in the giving of the Ten Commandments, is based on redemption, not creation. We are saved by a Savior and redeemed by a Redeemer. As this is so, then Jesus must be the One true God. How so many miss this and reinsert either the law, or defer back to Jehovah, or do both, into their theology is unimaginable. Paul says this in Galatians 4 -

"But when the fullness of the time had come, God sent forth His Son, born of a woman, born under the law, ⁵ to redeem those who were under the law, that we might receive the adoption as sons." Galatians 4:4, 5

If the law was given to Israel who had been redeemed from the house of bondage, and as they were given the law based on that redemption, then why would those who had been given this law still need to be redeemed from the law? The answer was given in the last sermon and which I will repeat now. There are four major reasons for giving this law -

- 1) To show us God's perfect standard.
- 2) To show us that no person could meet that standard; all are unqualified without God's grace and mercy being bestowed.
- 3) To show us how utterly sinful sin is to God. And,
- 4) To show us our need for something else - that grace which can only come by Someone fulfilling this law on our behalf. And as only God can do that, He sent His Son, Jesus Christ - fully God and fully Man - into the world to do so. It is the grace which we cannot do without.

And so we begin with the first of God's Ten Commandments...

³“You shall have no other gods before Me.

The first word. The command begins with an absolute negation - the word lo or "no." The majority of the commandments come in the negative form, stating the prohibition which they then explain. The reason for this is that "they presuppose the existence of sin and evil desires in the human heart" (Keil and Delitzsch).

In other words, the commands, like the one given to Adam, point to our limitations. Adam lacked the knowledge of good and evil; we lack the ability to properly exercise the knowledge of good and evil which we now possess. The laws then are given to us because of this. This is well explained by Paul in Romans 3 -

“There is none righteous, no, not one;
¹¹ There is none who understands;
There is none who seeks after God.
¹² They have all turned aside;
They have together become unprofitable;
There is none who does good, no, not one.” Romans 3:10-12

In its entirety, the first command reads lo yihyeh lekha elohim akherim al panaya - "No you shall have to you gods other, before my face." The verb is singular but the word "other" is plural. What this infers is that it isn't speaking of just other gods, meaning deity, but other gods of any kind such as idols in thoughts, words, or deeds.

If a person were to make an idol of work, it would be a violation of this command. If a person made an idol of their intelligence, it would be a violation of this command. If a person made an idol of his personal strength, it would be a violation of this command. Anything we place alongside the Lord would be a violation of this command. Adam Clarke defines the sense of this first word -

"This commandment prohibits every species of mental idolatry, and all inordinate attachment to earthly and sensible things. As God is the fountain of happiness, and no intelligent creature can be happy but through him, whoever seeks happiness in the creature is necessarily an idolater; as he puts the creature in the place of the Creator, expecting that from the gratification of his passions, in the use or abuse of earthly things, which is to be found in God alone. The very first commandment of the whole series is divinely calculated to prevent man's misery and promote his happiness, by taking him off from all false dependence, and leading him to God himself, the fountain of all good." Adam Clarke

However, although this may be the intent, if we were to stop with this first word and go no further, we can see how clearly it brings wrath. No person can say that they have fully kept this one precept without breaking it. Not only are we not good because of our inclinations, we are not good because of our actions.

Each of us has set up an idol in our heart in one form or another during our lives. We have failed by attempting to find another source of joy instead of seeking the Lord. This law can never bring salvation. It can only bring condemnation. And as James says towards the end of the Bible -

"For whoever shall keep the whole law, and yet stumble in one point, he is guilty of all." James 2:10

From the very first word, we are guilty of all of the law because we have broken this one point. How terrible is this law upon the hearts and souls of men! And yet, how many stubbornly cling to it and claim that they stand guiltless before God.

Each individual of Israel agreed to this command, and thus each person, as well as the nation as a whole, violated it when they strayed from it. The words of both personal and national violation are many, but Jeremiah 2 gives a good example of Israel's failure to meet this law -

"But where are your gods that you have made for yourselves?
Let them arise,
If they can save you in the time of your trouble;
For according to the number of your cities
Are your gods, O Judah." Jeremiah 2:28

Concerning this first command, something else was needed. The first word only condemns, it cannot save.

⁴ "You shall not make for yourself a carved image—any likeness *of anything

The second word. The first command asserted the unity of God in Israel's worship. This second command is intended to ensure that the first command is adhered to in a physical sense. Yehovah showed them no form of Himself and therefore no form was to be assigned to Him in worship.

Further, no form was to be worshipped as a god other than Him either. As He is the Creator, then all else is created. Therefore, to worship any physical part of the creation was to worship less than the Creator. This command then shows what is to be considered unlawful worship.

It also introduces two new words into Scripture. The first is pesel. It means an "idol" or "image" and it comes from pasal which means "to cut" or "to hew into shape." The second is temunah which means "likeness" or "form."

These words combined thus signify any physical idol or image. The command says lo taaseh lekha - "no make for yourself." There is an important point to consider here. The Bible does not forbid the making of shaped things such as cherubim for the Ark of the Covenant. It prohibits shaped things for personal use as an idol and it will go further to explain this in the next verse.

The reason I say this is because people who challenge the Bible will say that the making of the things for the tabernacle is a violation of this very commandment. This is not the case. Bible deniers get a demerit for miscalculating the command.

^{4 (con't)} that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth;

These words form a triple-division of the sphere of man's existence in the material universe. It is thus an all-encompassing statement concerning it, and it prohibits against making anything resembling whatever exists in it. This goes from the sun, moon, and stars, to the birds which fly in the sky.

It goes from the plant and animal life on earth to fish in the sea or to any other part of the created order. Nothing in creation is to be likened to God, nor is anything in creation to be likened as a god.

⁵ you shall not bow down to them nor serve them.

This further defines what was stated in the words, "You shall not make for yourself." If one makes an image for himself, the intent is that this image is then to be bowed down to and served. This is forbidden.

It needs to be noted that the Roman Catholic version of the Ten Commandments leaves this command out completely, and they do so without any Scriptural support at all. In order to maintain Ten Commandments, they then divide the tenth command into two separate commands. Adam Clarke rightly sums up this matter -

"This corruption of the word of God by the Roman Catholic Church stamps it, as a false and heretical Church, with the deepest brand of ever-during infamy!" Adam Clarke

Though the law is set aside in Christ, it is still a part of God's word. To manipulate it such as they have done is the most damnable of offenses. Israel, likewise was guilty of violating this command throughout their history. In fact, they openly sought to violate it, but the Lord told them that they would suffer because of it -

"What you have in your mind shall never be, when you say, 'We will be like the Gentiles, like the families in other countries, serving wood and stone.'" Ezekiel 20:32

⁵ (con't) For I, the LORD your God, am a jealous God,

Here the Lord claims that He is a jealous God. The word is qanna. This doesn't indicate jealousy of success in another; rather it speaks of a defense of His honor and glory. When one bows to another god, the Lord isn't jealous of that false god receiving worship. His jealousy is directed to the violation of depriving Him what He is justly due. His words in Isaiah show the thought well -

"I am the LORD, that is My name;
And My glory I will not give to another,
Nor My praise to carved images." Isaiah 42:8

This is the first use of the word qanna as an adjective in the Bible. It will only be used six times, always in connection with the Lord, and only in Exodus and Deuteronomy.

⁵ (con't) visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children to the third and fourth generations of those who hate Me,

This verse, although scorned by those who hate the God of the Bible as showing a vindictive nature, is intended to show us consequences which naturally result from misdeed. It shows nothing vindictive in the Lord. Rather it shows what is just.

Adam sinned and his sin continues to trouble us 6000 years later. When a person is punished for stealing, he may lose his estate and earnings. That certainly causes the next generation, and even many generations later, to receive the sentence of the offender.

The very person who dismisses God for being vindictive, may sue another person for wrongdoing against them. If they do, then they will actually visit the wrongdoing of the one they sue on the subsequent generations in exactly the manner described here.

To argue against God who is infinitely just and righteous concerning his judgments is an incredibly small-minded thing to do for a person who lacks any true wisdom or knowledge at all.

⁶ but showing mercy to thousands, to those who love Me and keep My commandments.

The "thousands" here is not speaking of the number of people, but the number of generations. It is explicitly defined that way in Deuteronomy 7:9. The length of this mercy, or loving-kindness, is for those individuals who love Him and keep His commandments. It doesn't mean the children who don't, but the individuals who do.

If a generation is conservatively said to be 40 years, then this would mean 40,000 years. As the Bible speaks of a 7000-year plan for the world we currently enjoy, then the term here is obviously meant to symbolize "forever" or "eternity." This is demonstrated in the words of the 103rd Psalm -

"But the mercy of the LORD is from everlasting to everlasting
On those who fear Him,
And His righteousness to children's children,

¹⁸To such as keep His covenant,
And to those who remember His commandments to do them." Psalm
103:17

However, as none are able to meet this standard perfectly, then none can be granted such eternal mercy apart from Christ who fulfilled the law on our behalf. All those who came before Christ and trusted in the Lord's provision are covered by His future mercy. Only those who trust in Christ after His advent will be covered by His present mercy.

It was this mercy of the Lord which called for Christ to fulfill the law for fallen man. Israel individually, and as a whole, is shown throughout the Old Testament to fall short of this second command. Even very quickly after the giving of this command, the entire congregation violated it -

"And Aaron said to them, 'Break off the golden earrings which are in the ears of your wives, your sons, and your daughters, and bring them to me.'
³So all the people broke off the golden earrings which were in their ears, and brought them to Aaron. ⁴And he received the gold from their hand, and he fashioned it with an engraving tool, and made a molded calf. Then they said, 'This is your god, O Israel, that brought you out of the land of Egypt!'" Exodus 32:2-4

Concerning this second command, something else was needed. The second word only condemns, it cannot save.

⁷"You shall not take the name of the LORD your God in vain,

The third word. The Hebrew here is ambiguous and can be taken to mean either forbidding false swearing only, or to include profane or vain swearing. If we look to the words of Jesus in Matthew 5, it appears that false swearing is what is being referred to here. He says -

"Again you have heard that it was said to those of old, 'You shall not swear falsely, but shall perform your oaths to the Lord.'" Matthew 5:33

The word for "vain" in Hebrew is shav and is used here for the first time in the Bible. It means falsely, lying, vain, etc. The intent of this command is that one should never invoke the name of the Lord in a false manner. And should they presume to do so...

^{7 (con't)} for the LORD will not hold him guiltless who takes His name in vain.

This doesn't mean that there will be immediate punishment on the offender. Rather, it is something that may come in this life as the perjured man is found out and punished, or it may be in the day of God's judgment in the future. Malachi shows us this -

"And I will come near you for judgment;
I will be a swift witness
Against sorcerers,
Against adulterers,
Against perjurers,
Against those who exploit wage earners and widows and orphans,
And against those who turn away an alien—
Because they do not fear Me,
Says the LORD of hosts." Malachi 3:5

Of the first three commandments, Lange wisely notes -

"The sin against the first commandment banishes the name of Jehovah by means of idol names; the sin against the second obscures and disfigures it; the sin against this third one abuses it." John Lange

Abusing God's name is something that is forbidden. A transgression of this command is a violation the entire law. And yet, the Bible demonstrates that Israel as a whole, individually and collectively, violated it -

“Run to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem;
See now and know;
And seek in her open places
If you can find a man,
If there is anyone who executes judgment,
Who seeks the truth,
And I will pardon her.
² Though they say, ‘As the LORD lives,’
Surely they swear falsely.” Jeremiah 5:1, 2

Concerning this third command, something else was needed. The third word only condemns, it cannot save.

*Just three commands so far and already no hope
Even from the first one I was done in for sure
I used to think I was pretty great, but I see I am just a dope
Compared to God's standard, I am certainly impure

I tremble to think of my guilt, how it weighs me down*

*I fear to face God on my own deeds for righteousness
I once thought God would at me smile, but no! It will be a frown
I bear such heavy guilt, My God! I am such a mess*

*Oh, but then I heard of Jesus, sweet Jesus
He lived the life that I could never ever live
And He gave it up for sinners like me! Yes, for all of us
In exchange for my life of sin, His perfect life He did give*

*Oh! What a Savior! What a friend He is to me!
Oh! My Lord Jesus, the Lamb of God who set me free!*

II. The Fourth and Fifth Commandments (verses 8-12)

⁸ "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy.

The forth word. This command differs from the others because it begins with the word zakhor, or "remember." They were given the Sabbath in Exodus 16 at the time of the giving of the Manna and they are now told to remember it forever, keeping it holy. This means that they were to separate the day from all others and observe it as a unique and special day, consecrated to the Lord.

The word shabbat implies rest and cessation from labor. This cessation of labor for Israel looked forward to a different type of rest. It was to be a foretaste of the blessed eternal rest which man lost. He was created outside of the Garden of Eden and was rested in the Garden to worship and serve His God. This was lost.

Everything from that point on has looked forward to the restoration of that day. And it finally arrived when Christ came. Through His work, the seventh day of rest is offered to all of God's people. This is why Hebrews 4, after the fulfillment of the law by Christ, says -

"For we who have believed do enter that rest." Hebrews 4:3

⁹ Six days you shall labor and do all your work,

This is actually an imperative. Therefore the week is divided into two sections, active work and active cessation from work. Man was not to be idle when he should be working and man was not to be working when he should be at rest.

Things that needed to be done were to be done before the Sabbath so that no work was to be done on the Sabbath. This is, however, not to be taken as a command that one must work every day. If so, for example, it would violate the mandated feasts of the Lord when Israel celebrated in Jerusalem. Rather, what should be done was to be done, but not on the Sabbath.

¹⁰ but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the LORD your God.

This translation, following the KJV, is confusing and should rather read, "...but the seventh day is a Sabbath to the Lord your God." Otherwise, it seems like the Lord is even now working six days and taking the seventh off. Rather, they were to work and then rest to the Lord, honoring Him on this special day dedicated to Him.

10 (con't) In it you shall do no work:

The commands are specific. The individual whom the Lord is speaking directly to is to not work on the Sabbath. The word "you" is singular.

10 (con't) you, nor your son, nor your daughter,

Nor were they to work their children, as if the lesser in the house were exempt from the requirement, or that the work of the stronger should now devolve to the weaker.

10 (con't) nor your male servant, nor your female servant,

Likewise, the servants - both male and female - who bore the majority of the burdens in the house during the week were to be given rest. The unattended labors of the owner were not to devolve to another, even in one's employ.

10 (con't) nor your cattle,

What is implied if an animal is put to work? Someone working the animal. Rest is to be rest. Even if someone were to hook up an animal to a grinding mill, he would have to work to do so and he would continue to be profiting from the labors of the animal.

The Sabbath was made for man as a day to the Lord God. If he was thinking about the profit he was making while the cow was grinding grain, then he wouldn't be thinking about the things of God. Also, these words show that the animal who is a servant of man, was to be given a break from its labors.

The Bible is replete with God's care for the creatures of the earth. In the sparing of Nineveh from destruction, the mention of "many cattle" along with the people is noted. After the flood, it says that "God remembered Noah, and every living thing, and all the animals that were with him in the ark." Time and again, care for animals is noted. Even the bird of the air that falls to the ground does not go unnoticed by God.

¹⁰ (con't) nor your stranger who is within your gates.

The stranger within the gates implies someone not of Israel who has taken up permanent residence within a town. This prohibition was certainly so that they wouldn't become a snare to Israel. If they saw strangers profiting and gaining advantage because they could work while others couldn't, it would become a problem for all. This exact scenario is found in Nehemiah 13 -

"Men of Tyre dwelt there also, who brought in fish and all kinds of goods, and sold them on the Sabbath to the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem.

¹⁷ Then I contended with the nobles of Judah, and said to them, 'What evil thing is this that you do, by which you profane the Sabbath day? ¹⁸ Did not your fathers do thus, and did not our God bring all this disaster on us and on this city? Yet you bring added wrath on Israel by profaning the Sabbath.'

¹⁹ So it was, at the gates of Jerusalem, as it began to be dark before the Sabbath, that I commanded the gates to be shut, and charged that they must not be opened till after the Sabbath. Then I posted some of my servants at the gates, so that no burdens would be brought in on the Sabbath day." Nehemiah 13:16-19

¹¹ For in six days the LORD made the heavens and the earth, the sea, and all that is in them, and rested the seventh day. Therefore the LORD blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it.

The creation of the heavens and the earth was done in a specific way for a specific reason. It was first to foreshadow the Sabbath day for man on the seventh day. God could have simply created all things at once, but he did it in a set way to picture something else.

And the six days of the week followed by a Sabbath was ordained in order to show the redemptive pattern of history itself. The six days of the week prefigure the six thousand years of man working towards the reign of Christ, followed by the final thousand years of the millennium where Christ reigns; a time of rest on earth.

The Bible assumes that its reader will accept, at face value, a literal six-day creation. Though many views of creation have arisen in the past 150 years, it has always been the assumption of the text itself that God really created in just six days, and he did it for the patterns which the creation only points to. Also, the reason for the giving of the Sabbath here in Exodus is not the same as that of the Ten Commandments in Deuteronomy –

"And remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt, and the LORD your God brought you out from there by a mighty hand and by an outstretched arm; therefore the LORD your God commanded you to keep the Sabbath day." Deuteronomy 5:15

The first is based on Creation, the second on Redemption. And yet, the two are tied together. Israel was already redeemed at the giving of the law at Sinai. Therefore, as a sign of God's rest following His creative efforts, which had subsequently been lost in the Garden of Eden, the redeemed of Israel were given the Sabbath.

Thus there is no contradiction between Exodus and Deuteronomy. One acts leads to another. The fallen world could not be redeemed unless it had first been created. Everything is looking forward to God's rest; a rest which can only be found in Christ. As the law could only bring a curse, then the Sabbath was only a shadow, looking forward to Christ's fulfillment of it.

Now, with His having fulfilled the law, we do enter God's rest. The words of Jesus, Paul, and the author of Hebrews all agree that our true rest is found in Christ and in Him alone. The Sabbath was only given as a picture of what was to come, however, it was given. Would Israel obey? The answer is, "No."

"Yet the house of Israel rebelled against Me in the wilderness; they did not walk in My statutes; they despised My judgments, 'which, if a man does, he shall live by them'; and they greatly defiled My Sabbaths. Then I said I would pour out My fury on them in the wilderness, to consume them."
Ezekiel 20:13

Concerning this fourth command, something else was needed. The fourth word only condemns, it cannot save.

¹² "Honor your father and your mother,

The fifth word. The Ten Commandments are divided up by scholars in several ways. Some see them as logically dividing between commands 1-4 and then 5-10. The first four showing love for God, the last six showing love for neighbor.

Others divide them 1-5 and 6-10. This would then show a distinction between filial and fraternal matters. The first five show obedience to the parent as children, the latter, respect for others. As parents are the image of God to the child until the child can reason out who God is, then this second division makes more sense.

It should be noted that the father is placed first here, but the mother is placed first in Leviticus 19:3 when also speaking of the mandated Sabbath. This shows that both are to be regarded with a like respect, even if there is a hierarchy within the home.

The honoring of the parents is reflective of the honoring of our true heavenly Father. If one is disobedient to their parents, it goes hand in hand that they will be disrespectful towards the Lord. And, as Paul notes in Ephesians 6, this is the first command with a promise attached to it...

12 (fin) that your days may be long upon the land which the LORD your God is giving you.

Some look at this as a national blessing for Israel. That if they were honoring of their parents, they would be nationally blessed with the land of Israel. This is incorrect. First, the word "land" here is not the usual term for the land of Israel, which is eretz. Instead, it is adamah. Adamah signifies the ground.

Whatever ground the people possessed, they would possess it more fully if they were honoring of their parents. Second, the command is spoken in the singular to the individual, not in plural to the collective whole. And third, both Deuteronomy 5:16 and Ephesians 6:2 explain this verse with words that indicate long life. In essence, "That it may be well with you and you may live long on the earth."

This is a general statement that one will prosper through the honoring of the parents. The world of man in which we live is governed by general laws of God, not by laws which are universal. This promised blessing is one that is therefore generally to be expected, but not necessarily universally received.

Despite being a simple command and one which is almost universally accepted as right, Israel failed to keep it. Both Old Testament and New shows their failure to honor their parents. From Ezekiel 22, we read this -

"In you they have made light of father and mother; in your midst they have oppressed the stranger; in you they have mistreated the fatherless and the widow." Ezekiel 22:7

Concerning this fifth command, something else was needed. The fifth word only condemns, it cannot save.

Today, we have looked at the first five commandments and each shows that something else was needed. Each word only condemns. Should we stop here, close the Bible, and await our destruction? Should we say, "Let us eat and drink for tomorrow we die?"

From trusting the law, the answer would be, "Yes." The law cannot save anything; it can only show us of our utter depravity before an infinitely holy God. But the giving of the law also shows us something else. It shows us a messianic picture.

It shows us that God loves us enough to pour out His wrath on His own Son who did fulfill this law in order to pay the sin-debt that you and I bear. Let this law, and those who lived and failed under it, be a tutor to you. Let it be a learning experience. In the law, there is condemnation; condemnation for you and me; for all.

And in the cross of Christ, there is also condemnation; condemnation of sin. Paul says that "what the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh, God did by sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, on account of sin: He condemned sin in the flesh." Thank God for Jesus.

If you have never received God's forgiveness through Christ, it's high time you do so. You don't know your last moment and the law is waiting to condemn you. Be freed from the law through the blood of Christ. Call on Him today to forgive you of the sins that you have heaped up so high. Let God cast them as far as the east is from the west. Do it today.

Closing Verse: "For Moses writes about the righteousness which is of the law, "The man who does those things shall live by them." ⁶ But the righteousness of faith speaks in this way, "Do not say in your heart, 'Who will ascend into heaven?'" (that is, to bring Christ down from above) ⁷ or, "'Who will descend into the abyss?'" (that is, to bring Christ up from the dead). ⁸ But what does it say? "The word is near you, in your mouth and in your heart" (that is, the word of faith which we preach): ⁹ that if you confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved. ¹⁰ For with the heart one believes unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Romans 10:5-10

Next Week: Exodus 20:13-17 (Ten Not So Simple Commands, Part II) (55th Exodus Sermon)

The Lord has you exactly where He wants you. He has a good plan and purpose for you. Even if a deep ocean lies ahead of You, He can part the waters and lead you through it on dry ground. So follow Him and trust Him and He will do marvelous things for you and through you.

Not So Simple Commands, Part I

And God spoke all these words, saying:

These are the words He was relaying

“I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

“You shall have no other gods before Me.

“You shall not make for yourself a carved image—any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth; you shall not bow down to them nor serve them. For I, the Lord your God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children to the third and fourth generations of those who hate Me, but showing mercy to thousands, to those who love Me and keep My commandments.

“You shall not take the name of the Lord your God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltless who takes His name in vain.

“Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days you shall labor and do all your work, but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord your God. In it you shall do no work: you, nor your son, nor your daughter, nor your male servant, nor your female servant, nor your cattle, nor your stranger who is within your gates. For in six days the Lord made the heavens and the earth, the sea, and all that is in them, and rested the seventh day. Therefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it.

“Honor your father and your mother, that your days may be long upon the land which the Lord your God is giving you.

Five of ten commands, so simple... and yet impossible to meet

They only bring us a greater consciousness of sin

With them as our hope, there is only defeat

Breaking even one is said to do us in

Oh impossible law, where can I go from you?
Who will from this body of death free me?
To Jesus Christ, I will go; it is what I will do
The law is a tutor to lead me to Him and in Him I am set free

By this law, I have a consciousness of sin
How utterly sinful sin is, by it I can clearly see
By this law, I am utterly defeated; I am done in
But by faith in Jesus, He has set me free

Thank You Lord God for the giving of Your Son
Thank You that You have broken off the yoke and set me free
By faith alone I am saved; through His cross it is done
Now I can live for You, but when I fail
You have already forgiven me

Thank You for the perfect life of my Lord
Who fulfilled every detail of Your perfect word

Hallelujah and Amen...

EXODUS 20:13-17 (TEN NOT SO SIMPLE COMMANDS, PART II)

Someday all people will stand before God and receive their judgment. I can't tell you how many people I've talked to over the years that think they will stand before Him, get a fist bump from Him, and then be given a giant pat on the back for being such a great person.

And I cannot tell you how many people have graded themselves on a bell curve when asked why God should allow them into His paradise. The standard answers, "I'm a good guy," or "I do good things for other people" are where they have placed their hope.

Paul tells us in Romans that the law is holy, and the commandment holy and just and good. There is nothing wrong with the law of God, the problem rests in us. If we truly measure ourselves against God's standard, we would not make the error in thinking that everything is AOK.

Instead, we would be utterly depressed at how miserably we failed in meeting His standard. Israel was given an out. It was called the Day of Atonement. Once a year, they could present themselves before the Lord, deny themselves through fasting, and admit that they had not been perfect in relation to His law.

When they did this, they received atonement for their sins for another year. But we don't have that. All we have is the knowledge that God has a standard and we have not met it. If He hadn't given the law, we might be able to brush off the idea of judgment, but in the giving of the law, we only see an increase in the sin-debt that we owe.

Text Verse: "Moreover the law entered that the offense might abound. But where sin abounded, grace abounded much more, ²¹ so that as sin reigned in death, even so grace might reign through righteousness to eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Romans 5:20, 21

I said that we don't have the Day of Atonement, but that's not really correct is it? We do have it. The law has gone out and along with the law has come a way for our sins to be atoned for. It is in fulfilling the law. If we can fulfill the law, then our sins will be covered.

And the Bible gives us two ways of fulfilling the law. The first one is to live it with absolute perfection, never stumbling on a single point. Today we will look at the last five of the Ten Commandments and you can decide if you want to give that avenue a shot. My hope is that you aren't that stupid.

The second option is to allow Christ Jesus to fulfill the law for You. He has already done it and all you need to do is receive what He has done. The law itself allows this. Which option suits your fancy best? Me, I'm all in for Jesus.

He is the One who is revealed in God's wondrous and superior word as doing everything we need in order to be saved. And so in order to see Jesus, and learn how He can do that for us, let's turn to that precious word once again and... May God speak to us through His word today and may His glorious name ever be praised.

I. The Sixth and Seventh Command (verses 13 & 14)

The first five commandments followed a basic pattern of filial obedience, as children to their parents. The first four were directed to God, but in them and in keeping them, they were as children honoring their heavenly Father. The fifth was specifically in honoring of one's parents.

Now the final five commandments take a different angle. They will deal with interpersonal relationships - between man and his fellow man. Thus the words of Jesus are understood through the structure of the Ten Commandments -

"Jesus said to him, 'You shall love the LORD your God with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all your mind.'³⁸ This is the first and great commandment.³⁹ And the second is like it: 'You shall love your neighbor as yourself.'⁴⁰ On these two commandments hang all the Law and the Prophets." Matthew 22:37-40

That "first and great commandment" cited by Jesus was a quote from Deuteronomy 6:5 - "You shall love the LORD your God with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all your strength." The second was a quote from Leviticus 19:18 - "You shall love your neighbor as yourself."

Jesus pulled those verses directly from the books of Moses as a summary of all of the commands of the Torah, including the Ten Commandments because they encompass every interaction that man has between himself, God, and his fellow man. In essence, they reflect the spirit and intent of the entire law.

Understanding this, it is necessary to remember that stumbling in any point of the law is a violation of the entire law. As James notes in his epistle -

"For whoever shall keep the whole law, and yet stumble in one point, he is guilty of all." James 2:10

In the previous sermon, it was pretty apparent that by the end of the first commandment, we were all guilty before the law. Israel failed, and we have failed. By the end of this sermon, we should all see the utter futility of trying to attain heaven merely through attempting to keep the commandments.

However, this doesn't mean that we are to ignore the commandments we are given, nor should we feel that there is no hope because we have broken any of them. Instead, let us be reminded of the reasons for the giving of the law -

- 1) To show us God's perfect standard.
- 2) To show us that no person could meet that standard; all are unqualified without God's grace and mercy being bestowed.
- 3) To show us how utterly sinful sin is to God. And,
- 4) To show us our need for something else - that grace which can only come by Someone fulfilling this law on our behalf. And as only God can do that, He sent His Son, Jesus Christ - fully God and fully Man - into the world to do so. It is the grace which we cannot do without.

Understanding this, let us continue with the sixth of God's Ten Commandments...

¹³ "You shall not murder.

The sixth word. lo tresakh - no do murder. Like the majority of the other commands, this one begins with an absolute negation, lo, or "no." What follows then is utterly forbidden.

In our interpersonal relationships, this command is given first because it respects the very life of the one we are to love as ourselves. I would suggest that although this deals with interpersonal relationships, it also deals with our duties to God directly as well.

Genesis 1:26 tells us that man is made in the image of God. As this is so, then an attack against God's image-bearer is also an attack against the One whose image they possess. And so murder is not something that can simply be dismissed as merely being on a human level. It is implicitly an attack against God. But this command is still rightly considered under the precept of loving one's neighbor.

The word for "murder" here is correctly translated as such. It is ratsakh and this is its first use in the Bible. Barnes notes that "This properly denotes taking the life of another with malice, or with an intention to murder him. The Jews understood it as meaning no more."

Thus translating this as "kill" as the KJV does, can only confuse the meaning. For example, the Bible mandates that capital offenders such as murderers are to be executed. However, the use of the word "kill" instead of "murder" in this verse has led to both a misunderstanding of the intent of the commandment and a misuse of it against what the law actually prescribes in the execution of offenders.

Because of the faulty translation, it has even been used by some in the nonsensical manner of claiming that the killing of animals is wrong. However, this is a complete misuse of the command. In Exodus 12:21, the people were told to "kill the Passover." But that verse uses an entirely different word than the one used here.

Using the word "kill" in this commandment also sets up other contradictions in the Bible as well because Israel is often instructed to destroy certain people groups in battle. These instances are not to be considered as "murder." The Pulpit Commentary, among others, adds in this note concerning this precept -

"The Israelites are told that to take life is a crime. God forbids it. As usual, no exceptions are made. Exceptions appear later on; but the first thing is to establish the principle." Pulpit

This is incorrect. Exceptions, which precede the giving of the law, already exist. In chapter 17, the Lord told Moses, "Choose us some men and go out, fight with Amalek." After that, it said, "So Joshua defeated Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword."

As the incident predates the law, then a distinction is being made between "killing" and "murder." The word "kill" is too broadly rendered and thus it is a most unfortunate translation. It ignores both previous precedent and later instruction and refinement.

It should be noted that all known codes of societal conduct include this precept, either implicitly or explicitly. It is also a precept which predates the law explicitly. In Genesis 9, after the flood of Noah, the Lord spoke these words to him -

"Whoever sheds man's blood,
By man his blood shall be shed;
For in the image of God
He made man." Genesis 9:6

The willful, intentional murder of another human is forbidden. Unfortunately, Israel failed in this command, both individually and collectively, throughout their history. The great king of Israel, King David, violated this precept when he had the husband of Bathsheba murdered.

Likewise, the people as a whole, on several occasions, are noted for their murders -

"Hear the word of the LORD, O children of Israel, for the LORD has a controversy with the inhabitants of the land.
There is no faithfulness or steadfast love,
and no knowledge of God in the land;

² there is swearing, lying, murder, stealing, and committing adultery;
they break all bounds, and bloodshed follows bloodshed."

Hosea 4:1, 2 (ESV)

The law was given to show us God's perfect standard and Israel failed in meeting that standard. Concerning this sixth command, something else was needed. The sixth word only condemns, it cannot save.

¹⁴ "You shall not commit adultery.
